UVM Cagers Get Off To Slow Start

Dave Strassburg, veteran basketball man, the captain of the new Vermont squad, will lead the Cats in this year's contests.

by H.S.

Saturday, the UVM basketball squad ferried across Lake Champlain to scrimmage Plattsburg State Teacher's College. The final score was 111-110 in favor of Plattsburg. Although simulating game conditions, the final score of a scrimmage may not be a true indicator of what occurred during the game. The starters play most of the scrimmage but the coaches also use their second teams in various portions of the game. Since three halves are played, the final score is higher than it normally would be. The extra playing time allows the offense to put more baskets through the hoop. Toward the end of the contest, the men lost some of their stamina and reserve energy and become very lax on the defensive half of the court.

The starting five which took the floor against Plattsburg consisted of three sophomores - Layne Higgs, Milt Goggins and 25 year old, 6'4" Dick "the stuffer" Shaw. The other two starters were Captain Dave Strassburg and junior Ralph D'Attila. The game started very erratically as neither side maintained their normal composure. Shots were wide by a large margin, passes were thrown away and the defensive play lacked finesse. The score remained 0-0 until Strassburg hit a short jump shot. Strassburg has been starting since his sophomore year, but his experience could not calm the young and inexperienced Vermont squad. The Catamounts could not maintain an effective offensive pattern in the early minutes.

In the first half both Plattsburg and UVM played man to man defenses. If it were not for Vermont's strong rebounding by Goggins, Shaw, and Strassburg, Plattsburg would have taken a commanding lead very early in the game. This half ended with Plattsburg leading by two points. In the second half both teams employed zone defenses. In this period, however, Plattsburg began to fast break and quicken their offensive plays. This increased rate found many Vermonters panting and incapable of keeping up with the running five from Plattsburg. This half ended with the New Yorkers ahead by ten points.

In the third part of the game both squads utilized zone presses. The Vermont's defense, however, was not as effective as Plattsburg's. The men from across the river scrambled and hustled, picked off passes, recovered loose balls and caused general ineptness on the part of the Vermonters. Plattsburg also found many holes in the porous Catamount defense. They drove in for many uncontested baskets, scored on short jump shots and outmanned Vermont on the boards. Utterly frustrated with the situation, Coach Evans pulled out his first stringers and put in his second five. These boys seemed to have the added spirit and reserve energy to counter Plattsburg's advances. Down by 14 points when they entered the game, they managed to close the gap to one point before time ran out.

Although Chuck Glick did not start, it seemed as though he was the man Evans should have had in the game. Glick played an excellent floor game and hit on 55% of his shots. He was the game's high scorer with 24 points. Milt Goggins played a strong game off both back boards and his short turn-around jump shots kept Vermont within striking distance.

"Fuzzy" Evans summed up Vermont's showing when he stated, "There is only one way to go and that is up." He said he'd rather start off looking poor in a scrimmage and build upward instead of beginning at a peak and slowly slipping down. He also remarked that Vermont's play was not a true indication of what they are capable of doing. He plans to use these next three weeks to iron out the flaws which were evident in this scrimmage.

7 Of 11 Make Vt All-State

WCAX has selected seven Catamounts to represent The Vermont All-State Football Team this week. Without saying, this is the greatest honor yet bestowed upon the Cliffordmen for their superb season.

Linemen George Oelze, Rusty Brink, Tom Mongeon, Ron Hertel and Paul Toussaint, and quarterback Scot Fitz and halfback Ken Burton were chosen as best performers in the state at their respective positions.

This has been the finest showing on the All-State in many years and is an indication of the great season that these boys had. Of the seven only two are graduates. Coach Clifford should be tremendously applauded by each student of the University for it was his guidance, understanding and ability that made this choice possible as well as the talent displayed by the awarded individuals.

New Diet For Basketball Team

Following the method of the successful football team, Coach Evans decided to give his players Dine Pak - a chocolate liquid drink and four oatmeal cookies - instead of the regular pre-game meal. The drink and cookies can be taken one and a half to two hours before game time while a full dinner meal should be eaten three to four hours prior to taking the floor. Dine Pak fills all the nutritional values of a regular meal and it is supposed to provide the athletes with the energy needed to keep them functioning at full capacity for the entire game. The players reaction to this innovation varied and added a touch of humor to the daily routines.

Some hoopsters felt this liquid meal gave them extra reserve stamina which they had never experienced before. Other ball-players still preferred to have the old-fashioned pre-game meal since they complained that this new food did not satisfy their appetites.

Mermen Start First Season

by Mel Ravitz

As the UVM football season came to an end with a rainy victory over Middlebury College, end coach Les Leggett resumed his coaching duties of the 1963-64 Swim Team.

This will be UVM's first formal intercollegiate competition. Last season the team has two meets with Norwich on an informal basis, but the schedule has been increased to include: U. of Mass., U. of Conn., McGill, Plattsburg, Norwich, and Dartmouth.

With the increase in the schedule, Coach Leggett has stepped up his training program. Indeed, many a swimmer has already dropped out due to the pace that he demands of his swimmers. Swimming, as any other sport, demands top physical condition and a strict adherence to the prescribed training program. The sport calls for self punishment so that victory can be gained. Coach Leggett's philosophy echoes that of Chet (the Jet) Jastremski, a former Ohio State ace. When asked to explain the secret of his record breaking efforts he replied: "I go until I hurt, and then I go until I am in pain. But I don't start setting records until I am in agony." At present 27 UVM students are working their way into the agony zone by swimming every night from 4:15 until 6:10. This means in many cases that they eat cold dinners or no dinner at all.

Actual condition consists of a number of exercises besides the time spent in the pool. Practice opens with isometric exercises on the pool deck as well as in the water. All the swimmers, regardless of their particular stroke, warm up together. This would include starts, turns, and sprints. Recently lead ankle, and wrist weights have been used so that each swimmer has to give his all even during warm-up. Coach Leggett believes that the fastest method to build up muscle, even for swimmers, is to work out in the weight-room at the gym. Special sets of chest weights, and also pulley weights were purchased so that the swimmers could work out right around the pool. The team also has a large pool side clock that permits those in the pool to time themselves and in the longer races, as the 500 yard freestyle, so that they can pace their efforts.

In closing it seems appropriate to mention the names of the 27 swimmers who will represent the University of Vermont this year. They are freshmen and upper-classmen, however, while there is a separate Varsity and Frosh team, they work together as one.

Women's Recreation News

Two members of the Women's Recreation Association attended the New York State Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women conference at the State University College in Plattsburgh, New York, on Saturday, November 15. Bety-Gene Corcoran, local vice-president and Vermont State A.R.F.C.W. president; Leslie Barasch, local treasurer; and Miss Barbara Cochran of the Women's Physical Education Department attended the conference with the purpose of getting ideas from other schools that will help enhance UVM's W.R.A. program.

Miss Barbara Sprayberry, Consultant for Girls' and Women's Sports Organizations and advisor to A.R.F.C.W. from the D.G.W.S. in Washington, D.C.,

spoke to the convention delegates about the challenge facing W.R.A.'s in the fields of competitive sports and in strengthening the organization of women's recreation associations.

Several discussion groups were held after the opening session. The UVM delegates attended these and received several new ideas which our W.R.A. will work on to add to the present diversified program offered.

In the afternoon, two panel discussions were heard, one on the Intercollegiate Sports Program for College Women; and the other, composed of six women from Denmark, England, South Africa, Finland, Israel and Holland, gave the delegates an insight into the sports programs available in other countries.

Cynic-al ONE-SIDED VT CONFERENCE

The popular consensus of opinion around the campus concerning the Vermont Conference was that it was very thought provoking and enlightening but too one-sided. This is true. But necessarily so because the Conference Committee headed by Ilene Hofbinder tried to arrange for speakers from the deep-South, segregationist school but all their efforts failed. It seems as though men like Gov. George Wallace of Alabama and Ross Barnett of Mississippi will not speak at the same podium as civil rights fighters, especially Negro leaders.

Gov. Wallace was asked to speak at Middlebury College recently and instead of him turning down the invitation, the Middlebury chaplain refused to have Mr. Wallace speak in his chapel. He maintained that by letting this anti-authoritarian segregationist speak in the house of God, this would desecrate the chapel.

Strassburg Rhodes Scholar Candidate

Scholar.Athlete First From UVM In 10 Years

On Wednesday, Nov. 4, David A. Strassburg, a Senior Pre-Med from Essex Junction, underwent a process of elimination for aspiring Rhodes scholarship seekers. For the first time in approximately 10 years the University of Vermont has nominated a student for a Rhodes Scholarship. Since the competition for the 32 scholarships which are awarded in the United States is keen, the nominated student undergoes rigorous eliminations on the state, regional and national levels. Any student who possesses outstanding qualities of leadership, and both physical and mental fitness applies first to his university which then proceeds to screen him and decide if he is worthy of its nomination. Then, if the student is nominated by his university he must be present at the first selection committee - the State Selection committee. This was the Nov. 4 elimination that David Strassburg attended. If the student is chosen by his state (each state nominates a maximum of 2 candidates) he will proceed along the ever-narrowing path to his Regional Selection Committee (this year the New England regional committee meeting is in Boston on Nov. 14). There are 8 regions in the U.S. and each contributes 4 "hand-picked" scholars. Those students who finally emerge are destined to be authentic Rhodes scholars.

The great honor of being selected to study in Oxford, England for either 2 or 3 years was bequeathed to us under the will of Cecil Rhodes, the famous Englishman who mined gold and diamonds in South Africa. The 32 American Rhodes Scholars and the 33 English Rhodes Scholars each receive 750 pounds to utilize for study, travel, and adventure during their stay at Oxford.

Many people think that the Rhodes Scholarships are awarded solely according to academic endeavors. But this is not necessarily the case. The Rhodes scholar is an all-round individual. David Strassburg, UVM's nominee has had an exceptional academic standing and in addition is presently a member of Boulder Society, (Senior's Honorary), is captain of the Basketball team, on the track team, treasurer of his fraternity Delta Psi, a member of Varsity Club and Student Court. He has been a member of sophomore and junior men's honoraries, Gold Key and Key and Serpent. David's father, Norman Strassburg, is Asst Professor of Physical Education here at UVM.

The many applicants from various universities and colleges possess similar lists of capabilities and accomplishments. Of the many hundreds of applicants and nominees only 32 are chosen by the State and Regional 7 men committees (each consisting of Rhodes Scholars except for the chairmen.)

It is quite an honor to be nominated by one's school and to participate in the Rhodes Scholarship eliminations. The competition is amazingly difficult for Vermont's students mainly because of the vast number of fine schools in the New England Region. This fact is emphasized when we realize that it has been an awfully long time since UVM could boast of a Rhodes scholar. Middlebury has had some in recent years. And there are only about eight or ten former Rhodes scholars living in the state of Vermont; one former Rhodes scholar is Dean Kidder, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The fact that this year David Strassburg is the first nominee in 2 years to join the group of the other 4 from the state of Vermont, may bring various questions to the minds of proud Vermonters "Are there and will there be more potential Rhodes Scholars who have not been able to enthusiastically make apparent to the University and faculty the extent of their capabilities? and Why haven't there been more nominees from UVM?"

Housemother Dies Suddenly

Mrs. Frances Finley, Head Resident at Coolidge Hall, died Friday, November 29, in Williamsburg Community Hospital, Williamsburg, Virginia. She was 63 years old. Mrs. Finley left for Virginia on Sunday, November 24, and was visiting the Dean of Women of William and Mary College the following Wednesday, when she fell ill. She suffered a cerebral hemorrhage.

Before coming to the University of Vermont in 1958, Mrs. Finley had been a House Mother at Smith College in Northhampton, Massachusetts for several years. She had been Head Resident at Coolidge for the past three years. Mrs. Finley was a member of the Canterbury Club, an organization affiliated with the Episcopal Church.

Surviving are a brother, Thornton H. McDougal, of Buffalo, New York, and a cousin, Mrs. Frederick Oatman, of Brandon, Vermont. Her husband and two daughters are deceased.

Memorial services were held in Buffalo, New York, on Monday, December 2, and at Ira Allen Chapel at the university, on Wednesday, December 4.

Evening Of Music - Tonight

Friday evening, December 6, the music department of the University of Vermont will present an evening of chamber music at the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30 P.M. Appearing on the program will be James and Mary Keene-violins, David Kinsey-piano, Flora Kinsey-Cello, and Virgilio Mori-violon.

The group will first present the string quartet Op. 77, No. 1, by Franz Joseph Haydn. This work represents one of the later works by this master and was composed following Haydn's famous trip to London. The quartet represents one of the composer's most ingenious and original masterpieces in this form.

The group will then play the C minor quintet by Ernst Von Dohnanyi. Dohnanyi was a Hungarian pianist, conductor, and teacher, as well as a composer. He was born in Pozsony and received his general education there. The quintet in C minor was first performed in Budapest in 1895 while the composer was only eighteen years old. The powerful influence of Brahms can be strongly perceived throughout the quintet.

The program will be presented without charge and is open to the public.

CHILDREN LAUGH, CONGREGATIONS CRY

Children laugh:

Congregations cry:
Cry and cry and cry
Until there are no tears left in you

Taken from us was a man
Make way for his spirit in you!

Congregations fall to your knees:
Clasp your rosaries so tightly
That your knuckles bleed

Congregations let your hearts bleed
Let the drops fall unto the snow
The new fallen snow that comes from the purest soul.

Congregations sing:
Voices and voices and voices
Beseech for forgiveness

You have shut out the one voice
Heard in this world of silence!

Congregations light your candles:
Let them shine in the gloom Again beseech for forgiveness and again and again

You have put out the one light
Shining in this world of darkness!

Congregations lift his body:
Higher and higher and higher Until you feel the heaviness upon your shoulders

You have taken the world from his shoulders
And you have placed it on your own!

Congregations hark:
Behold the tongues of fire
Behold the angels of freedom

You have killed the savior of us all

You now must save all nations!

The Jobs Exist If You Can Find Them

There is always a good market for good men. Such a statement is not only basic but is realistically true. Jobs exist for you. The question at hand is whether or not you have the qualifications required to fill them.

At no time in our history have there been as many opportunities for the young college graduate as there exists today with the prospects of an ever expanding future. Many corporations are manufacturing products that were undreamed of a few years ago, or that were considered impossible of achievement. New developments constantly provide new fields of enterprise and with these fields, jobs and the need for people to fill them.

American business is constantly changing and consequently its requirements are changing too. It is becoming more and more, in some areas, an era of specialization and it follows naturally enough, that more specialized training is required of employees. This in itself need not be a stumbling block, because the means of acquiring that training are at hand, available to any of you who have the enterprise and ambition to take advantage of it through either on-the-job or a formal training program.

Business has no place for the Jack-of-all-trades, or for the aimless person who is "willing to do anything". In the past fifty years great corporations have grown up which have altered the old picture. These organizations, utilizing vast numbers of employees, are highly competitive and specialized. They have to be. They require specific skills. The man who might be excellent in one department would be worthless in another.

The potential college graduate, therefore, who looks for "any job", trusting to blind luck that he will not land in one for which he is wholly unqualified, is making a good start towards failure. He is either relying on the personnel man to figure out for him, what his abilities are - and if he does not take the trouble to do it for himself, he should not blame the personnel man who fails to sum him up correctly - or he is simply indifferent. He is the man who talks about luck while the fellow who had a plan climbs up the ladder, leaving him far behind. "Suppose I ask for a specific job", the applicant thinks, "and there is no vacancy in that field? Then I will lose my chance. But if I am willing to do anything, they may find a place for me." It does not work that way. To be blunt about it, the senior who says, "I am willing to do anything", makes a poor impression. He or she is not aiming at a job, but simply scattering shot in the hope that it may hit something. An impression of vagueness is easily given, causing the prospective employer to do the applicants thinking, of weighing and assessing potentialities.

It is a common mistake for you to say, "there must be something I can do in a big organization like this". You have missed the whole point. The employer is not finding a place for you, he is buying the services you have to sell. If you apply for a job in this frame of mind, you are not attempting to sell yourself, but merely asking that you be given a job without advancing one reason for the employer giving it to you.

Every business constantly adds more new people, whether it is expanding or not. Employees are transferred, promoted, retired, or discharged, and there must be constant replacements. There is a great deal of competition for these jobs. "However", writes Mr. Paul W. Boynton in his book, "6 Ways To Get A Job," "ninety percent of the people who do not get a job, or who get one and lose it, or who remain in the same spot after they get one, owe their difficulties to personal traits, and only ten per cent to lack of ability".

The encouraging point in all this is the fact that almost anyone can overcome or correct the particular personal traits that are his own liabilities, if he will take the time and the trouble to look himself over honestly and discover what they are. The people who fail, for the most part, do not do so because of lack of ability, they do not do so because of bad luck. They fail because they are either too indifferent or too lazy to examine the cause of their failure and take steps to remove it. Not one person in a hundred, to make a conservative estimate, uses a quarter of his ability or makes more than a half-hearted effort to advance himself. And yet anyone can do it. It is a safe bet to say that everyone who has ever succeeded has done it.

Before plunging into the actual work of job hunting, there are some problems you will need to solve. The most vital of these is: What do you want to do? More people lose jobs because they have never thought of the answer to this question than for any other reason. Find the thing you want to do, and you have made the biggest step towards obtaining a job. Remember, no one can stop you in your own field. Make no mistake, you will get your own job. There is no occasion for a defeatist attitude in this venture. Positions are constantly being filled. It rests with you, whether you will succeed in getting one. For obtaining the very best job for you is like having one. You have to work at it.

Next week: "Starting From Scratch".

Players Present Shaw's "Major Barbara"

On December 12, 13, and 14, the University Players will present George Bernard Shaw's Major Barbara at the Arena Theater. Directed by Edward J. Feldner, this production shows the unique wit and sarcasm of GBS as well as his sensitivity to the social conditions of a time not far removed from the present day.

Major Barbara is a collection of slapstick comedy, class struggle and cynical essay approach to mankind. The title is the name of a ranking officer in the salvation army. This person and her institution are attacked by the Fabian Socialist Shaw as are religion, capitalism and human pretentiousness.

The lead roles are being played by some "English" speaking students, Ann Abbott as Major Barbara; Ernest Cabrera as Under-shaft; and Michael Goodwater as Adolphus Cusins. Cockney dialect parts will be performed by Robin Schore as Bill Walker, Barry Beckerman as Snobby Price, and Esther Sundell as Rummy Mitchems. Eight other parts will conclude this cast of forty. The play is divided into three "Shavian" acts on rather interesting sets.

The play is important for students of literature, economics, politics and lovers of the theater. If you fall into any of these groups, the play is a must; if you don't come anyway, you may find your niche in life. Tickets will be sold in Billings and Lower Waterman.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion-around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

Vermont's Winning Debaters

Group Trips To Europe

There will be two group rate flights to Europe offered to the students, faculty, and alumni of the University of Vermont for the summer of 1964. There are reserved seats on two TWA jets, one leaving June 8th and returning August 25th the other leaving June 15th and returning July 27th. The departure flights (TWA and 703) leave Idlewild Airport and arrive in London approximately 6 hours later. This is not an organized tour but a group organized merely for the purpose of reduced rates. Participants are under no obligation to remain with the group or to remain in any one country. You will be free to travel with whomever you wish and to go wherever you wish in Europe (possibly Russia). The only prerequisite for this program is that person's applying must have been associated with the university for at least 6 months prior to departure. Friends or relatives may fly on these flights at regular tourist fares. The reduced rate for these flights is $310 round trip. Regular tourist rate is substantially higher, $500. Each person must make a deposit of $31 as soon as possible to insure a seat. Full payment must be made 30 days prior to departure. If you are interested or wish to know more about the flight or about Europe,

UVM Receives NSF Grant

The University of Vermont has received a grant from the National Science Foundation to conduct a conference on electronic transitions during the summer of 1964.

Vermont is one of 23 colleges and universities to receive funds for conferences for college teachers of science, mathematics, and engineering.

The grant to Vermont was for $12,500 and will allow 30 participants. Directing the conference will be Dr. Cecil Criss of the department of chemistry.

Dr. Criss directed a similar NSF conference last summer on molecular spectroscopy. Vermont was one of two schools selected for that conference.

The Conferences program of the National Science Foundation was created in recognition of the important role of college teachers in developing scientific manpower. Conferences provide an opportunity to strengthen college teachers' mastery of newer developments in science, mathematics, and engineering, and increase their capacity as teachers. Conferences are less than four weeks duration.

Participants are chosen by the conference director at each college and university and inquiries and applications for the conference at Vermont may be made by contacting Dr. Criss.

Cynic-al Observations

PROCEED WITH "VIGAH"

Two weeks have past since that tragic November 22 afternoon when the United States and the world suffered the loss of its spirited and youthful leader of free men, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Though each of us received the news of his assassination under different circumstances, that moment will be long remembered.

Of the many millions of words printed and stated concerning our beloved president, none can sum up the surprise of the nation better than the two simple words uttered by the person closest to the president, Jacqueline Kennedy, when she said "Oh, No!" as her husband's bleeding head dropped onto her lap. No words can convey the finality of this outrageous killing more soberly than those of the Roman Catholic priest who had just administered the last rites to John F. Kennedy when he softly whispered "He's dead."

He's dead, but the mighty nation that he helped stay mighty lives on. Every citizen should be reassured of the stability of our government by the events of the past two weeks. The majestic array of world leaders either who came in person or who sent prominent representatives to honor him who gave his last measure of full devotion to his country, assure us of universal sympathy and understanding. Within our great land, the leaders of business and industry recovered from the shock and indicated their optimistic confidence in our new President Lyndon B. Johnson by the stock market rally. Within the hearts of every American there is a pang of regret for the unnecessary loss yet there is a spark which inspires us to proceed with great vigor, or, as J.F.K. pronounced it, "vigah."

WORDS FROM THE HEART

We must all marvel at the comprehensive coverage by all news media of this historical event. Within hours the whole world was aware of its great loss. The radio and television networks had the advantage of immediate coverage, and they must be congratulated for the fine job they did in such a short time. The tidal wave of newspapers that crossed the land verified the fatal event of Nov. 22 in bold black headlines and black-bordered editorials. Some devoted almost the whole paper to complexities of the assassination.

We feel it is fitting that the CYNIC honors the late President not with words from wire services or newspaper accounts but with words from the hearts of UVMers. We also offer the works of cartoonists who can perhaps convey a deeper kind of emotion with their cartoons than any writers with their words of eulogy. In life, the artists joked with him by depicting him as an impetuous and brash young football hero with a boyish shock of hair. In death, they drew a weeping, sorrowful world.

The Burlington Free Press just this past week ran a cartoon titled "The Day Must Dawn -" showing an ominous black cloud fading out of the picture and the sunlight of Christmas goodwill rising over the horizon. This is the spirit we must show as we face our future with courage, the courage exemplified by John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Letters To The Editor

Tree Of Knowledge

To the Editor,

Tuesday, Dec. 3, started like any other day. Then my attention was called to The Free Press photograph of the "obscene sculpture" entitled "Thermopylae" which is Princeton's answer to UVM's Tree of Knowledge. A bit later in the day I received a communique about registration procedures from Mr. Clarke, Registrar. The information was printed on an IBM card by The Idiot Box in Waterman. Staggered by this latest evidence of UVM's strong trend toward humanism, I found in my mailbox a publication from the head of UVM's mail service. This scholarly bit of research bore a shield on the cover with a bar sinister made up of the mysterious initials "CMS" and had the official Imprimatur of the Purchasing Department. It was a nine page document on how to mail letters.

Freely associating, my psyche came to the conclusion that colleges and universities are rated on the wrong bases. We should ignore faculty-student ratios, the number of books in the library, laboratory facilities, and other such obsolete evidences of learning. Instead, I offer the following ten criteria in questionnaire form for rating any college, anywhere. A "yes" answer indicates an up and coming institution of great prowess.

1. Does your institution have a "sculpture"?
2. Does your college have a parking problem?
3. Do you have a "cultural" series complete with a folk singer?
4. Do you have ten or more deans?
5. Are your records IBMized?
6. Has each student been assigned a number?
7. Do students find it difficult to communicate with the faculty?
8. Do faculty find it impossible to communicate with administration?
9. Are there plans to increase tuition regularly?
10. Has your institution originated at least 674 forms?

NYAC To Sponsor Cocktail Hour

Dear Editor,

Two years ago during the Christmas holidays, the UVM Basketball team played the New York Athletic Club, and drew one of the largest crowds that have ever witnessed a game at the N.Y.A.C. This year the team will play again at the Athletic Club in what has become the New York Athletic Club Christmas Tournament. There will be two games, one on Thursday, December 26th and one on Friday, December 27th.

The New York Alumni Club has made arrangements for a cocktail party before the game on Friday, and a reception to follow it at the Athletic Club. Those of you who came to the game two years ago will remember what a great turnout there was, and the good time everyone had before, during and after the game.

We hope that all undergraduates in the New York area during the holidays will make it a point to come support the team, and get together again with old friends who are now alumni.

See you on the 27th!

THE SCEPTIC

"This is no world for men to pity men."

-- "A Woman kill'd with Kindness."

All of you have seen "photographs" of the alleged "police brutality" in the South. Unless you are infected with the poison of the "liberal" left, you must have realized that something was phony. We all know that policemen in the USA are all trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean, and reverent, and that they all do their best to do their duty to God and country.

It will come as no surprise to you, therefore, to hear that these "photographs" have been unmasked as dirty Red smears. Documentary evidence has been found, in the form of a diary kept IN RUSSIAN by an agitator of the "liberal" left, proving that these "photographs" have been "doctored" by an unscrupulous retoucher (a union member, incidentally). In their original form they were pictures of savage rioting by South African Negroes against their benevolent white guardians. The pictures were altered, however; the Negroes were painted white and the faces of the helpless, outnumbered, unarmed whites were darkened.

Readers of UVM student letters to the Free Press and of that paper's editorials will not be surprised at this latest evidence of heinous communist perfidy. My reaction was to contact a friend in New York, a Mr. Hjalmar Ekdal, who works as a photo retoucher. He confirmed the news report, saying that it was common gossip among members of his craft, and he added some details of his own. Not all such photographs have been retouched, he pointed out. Rebellious Negroes in the South have been endangering life and, more important, property, necessitating the employment of kindly Southern policemen to shepherd the Negroes to their own part of town. Many pictures of this activity have been cleverly mis-captioned by the "liberal" left.

Ekdal called my attention to perhaps the most notorious of these pictures, which purports to show a savage police dog tearing the trousers of a helpless Negro. In fact, he said, this "savage" dog was making a gallant attempt to repair the trousers for their shiftless and immodest owner.

Dependents! Hazing is coming up-- at least for those sheepfolds that can get any new members -- and everyone is looking eagerly for a new stunt. I call to your attention a paperback (Signet D2171) by John Howard Griffin, entitled "Black Like Me." Mr. Griffin, a white reporter, darkened his skin and traveled through the South; his book tells the story. What a way to humiliate new dependents!

The freshmen have lately been studying with their characteristic fierce intensity a book called the Bible (a collection of songs and stories from the Near East). At one point in it some rather wittily perceptive comments are made on the subject of loving one's neighbor. "Why, what credit is it to you," asks a man called Joshua the Messiah, "if you love those who love you? Even sinners love those who love them. What credit is it to you, if you do good to those who do good to you? Even sinners do as much ... No, it is your enemies you must love, and do them good ..."

The freshmen point out that everyone loves them, and they ask for a list of enemies whom they might profitably love. I offer the beginnings of such a list, Merry Christmas!

The John Birch Society, The Communist Party, The employees of the Lynn, Mass., factory who were given Monday off for the funeral and were told that they would be paid for that day as well. They insisted on an hour's overtime, arguing that they were usually paid for nine hours work on Mondays.

The Texas school children who cheered when they heard that Kennedy had been shot.

Judge John P. Connarn, A Free Press reporter asked him if a psychiatrist should be hired to deal with the many adolescent law-breakers in the Barre-Montpelier area. He answered, "I do think a psychiatrist might be helpful but sometimes I think we put too much emphasis on psychiatric treatment these days." The Judge said it would be unfortunate if a child had no psychological problem, but felt he had a stigma placed on him by being sent to a psychiatrist." His answer was published four days after the assassination.

Thought for the Week: Mayor Manuel Canas Jr., when asked for his reaction to the assassination: "It certainly has been a slap in the face to the country as far as good will and prestige with the rest of the world is concerned."

The Kake Walk Committee is extending bids to anyone interested in light contractor for Kake Walk.

Lighting is a major portion of Kake Walk and requires a contractor with a knowledge of the installation and operation of lighting.

Anyone interested please come to the Kake Walk Office (Lower Billings) on Tuesday, December 10, at 4 p.m.

If any questions, please call Cal Walker at UN 2-2090.

UNFORGETTABLE FRIDAY, NOV. 22

His head bowed, his hands clasped, his body slumped, a UVMer simply yet poignantly manifests his grief experienced upon learning of the tragedy of the President's assassination. As sad testimony to the truth, which he and doubtless many others refused to accept, the American flag flies symbolically at half mast in the ominous grey skies. Profound bereavement, shock, despair, shame - emotions evident in his posture - were evident as well in the dazed, pale faces of other UVM students who only mechanically struggled through the remainder of that unforgettable Friday afternoon. On the following morning God's anger gave vent as the UVM campus, and the country, was soaked in a vengeful rainstorm.

FEDERAL OPPORTUNITY DAY, DECEMBER 11, 1963

Billings Center, North Lounge

by Bayness Andrews
Civil Service Commission

Of the Federal Government's seventy-plus departments and agencies, how many can you name? Most of us are doing well if we can recall the ten Cabinet agencies. How many of us could identify, much less explain, the Home Loan Bank Board, the National Science Foundation, the Bureau of Standards, the Re-negotiation Board? How many of us have heard of the General Services Administration? Yet this agency has subdivisions that do business on a larger scale than most of America's largest corporations.

Our governmental structure is complex and diverse. Government changes with the times; like a living thing, it reacts to alterations in the world around it. Most of us, unless we have a special interest, are not able to keep up with the intricacy and dynamic change of modern government. We tend to think of Government in terms of the few agencies with which we have had personal contact -- the Post Office, the Internal Revenue Service, perhaps the Veterans Administration or the Department of Defense -- without a thought to the many other activities carried on by Federal agencies.

By the same token, how many of us could name even three or four of the more than ninety classes of positions for which the Federal Government hires college graduates. The Federal

GSA TELLS STORY

The General Services Administration will be represented by Mr. Frederick J. Graham, Regional Placement Officer. Mr. Graham has degrees from Merrimack College, Andover, Massachusetts and Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts, based upon a major in Personnel Management and Industrial Relations. He has been continuously employed by GSA and its predecessor, FWA, since 1948, principally in personnel duties except for a two-year period when he was employed as Treasurer of the Merrimack Electrotyping Corporation in Concord, New Hampshire. In recent years, while employed by GSA, he has specialized in the placement field.

The General Services Administration is an organization of approximately 30,000 employees performing duties in all 50 states. Every agency of the Federal Government does business with GSA, as we are either "landlord", "buying agency", or "record keeper". To handle its wide range of work GSA is efficiently arranged into an organization best suited to the various tasks which come within the scope of its overall responsibilities. The major organizational units in GSA are referred to as "Services" or "Staff Offices" and is comprised of the Public Buildings Service, Federal Supply Service, Defense Materials Service, Transportation and Communications Service, National Archives and Records Service, Utilization and Disposal Service, Office of Finance and Administration, and the Office of General Counsel.

In the professional, technical and administrative fields there are career opportunities for those interested in accounting and budget, archives, buildings management, communications, digital computer analysis, engineering, legal, management analysis, personal property, personnel administration, public utilities, record management, real property, supply, and transportation.

Service is the largest single employer of college graduates; about 20,000 college-calibre positions are filled each year. The Government recruits top graduates in every field, to provide a continuing intake of talent and thus provide a steady supply of junior executives to replace the top managers who will be retiring five, ten or twenty years from now.

The purpose of the Career Day program is to educate, not to recruit. I think of it as an extension of the Guidance and Placement services provided by the University. We will have with us representatives of a dozen Federal organizations, a cross-section of the Government's activities. We hope that the students will talk to as many as they can manage. Such exploration can help assist the future worker to formulate his own ideas about his chosen vocation, and can also open to him an awareness of the rich possibilities open to him in the Public service.

A SERVICE TO THE PUBLIC

The mission of the Soil Conservation Service is to establish a sound soil and water conservation program throughout the State and Nation. We are interested in recruiting graduates of the Agricultural College with backgrounds in agronomy, biology, wildlife, forestry, economics, recreation and agricultural engineering. We also need civil and hydrolic engineers, geologists, soil scientists, business administration officers, etc.

Carl B. Kenton, Jr., Administrative Assistant; born November 22, 1930 in Winnsboro, Louisiana; U.S. Army October 13, 1951 to December 13, 1951; graduated Athens College, Athens, Alabama, with B.A. in Business Administration 1956; entered on duty with the Soil Conservation Service as trainee in Jackson, Mississippi, on October 20, 1958; transferred to Hawaii on October 4, 1959; transferred to Vermont on December 10, 1961; married and has four boys.

Roger T. Dunton, State Administrative Officer; born and raised in Vermont; received B.S. in 1952 and M.A. in 1956 from University of Vermont; served in World War II; taught VO-Ag in New York prior to joining the Soil Conservation Service; on June 25, 1956; married and has no children.

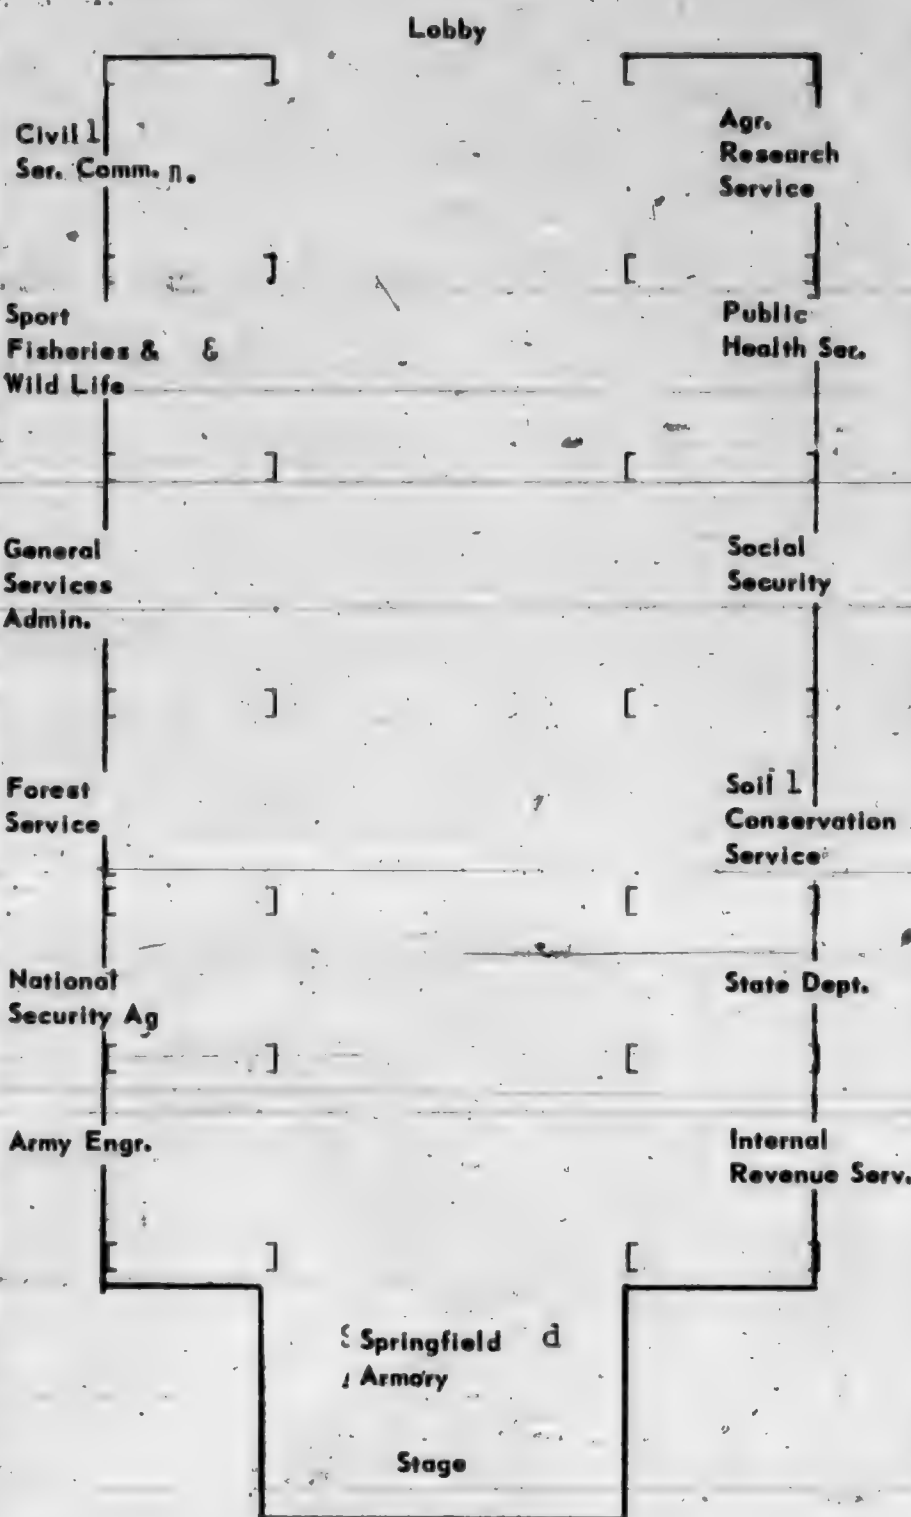

IRS SKETCH

Mission: The mission of the Internal Revenue Service is to encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance with the tax laws and regulations and to maintain the highest degree of public confidence in the integrity and efficiency of the service. This includes communicating the requirements of the law to the public, determining the extent of compliance and causes of non-compliance, and doing all things needful to a proper enforcement of the law.

Biography: Robert Lafayette, Personnel Officer, Mr. Lafayette has participated in all phases of recruiting for the Internal Revenue Service for approximately three years.

John Detore, Internal Revenue Agent, Graduated from the University of Vermont in 1960. In accordance with our team concept of recruiting, a technical person is generally made available for consultation by interested applicants.

FLOOR PLAN

NSA LOOKS AHEAD

The National Security Agency, located at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, is a major activity of the Department of Defense. Career positions are available in which scientific and liberal arts graduates may contribute satisfactorily to matters affecting the security of the United States.

Although the sensitive nature of the work prohibits a detailed description of NSA activities, the following paragraphs outline opportunities for scientific and liberal arts graduates:

Engineers and scientists will be concerned with advance concepts, techniques and componentry relative to a great variety of communications equipment; computers and data processing systems; complex recording devices; and a seldom seen array of instrumentation and laboratory facilities.

Career assignments for liberal arts graduates would involve individual and group research projects dealing with a study in analyses of written materials covering different subject matter fields relating to area studies. Many of these complex problems are of long range as well as current interest to NSA and provide a rare opportunity for the person interested in analytic research.

Initial salaries depend on degree, degree level, and experience. Employees also receive all Civil Service benefits such as Life and Health Insurance at minimal cost, liberal Sick Leave and Vacations, and the Federal Retirement Plan.

All new employees receive the necessary training to prepare them for their initial assignments, and opportunities for training are present throughout the employee's NSA career.

NSA conducts an annual college recruitment program and any person desiring additional information should contact the Placement Office or write to:

by Douglas O. Hanau
Director of Placement

If you were to ask me, what universal question do I constantly receive from students, my answer would have to be, "What can I do following graduation?"

For a number of years now, I have had a growing belief that the main reason so many of you are unable to select a career following graduation is simply due to the fact that you are basically unaware of the world of opportunity that is open. I contend that once you become acquainted with different fields, types of jobs, and in general the language of the world of work, armed with this information, you should be able to make a decision as to where you will start. To be sure you may change your outlook and job any number of times but at least you will have made a beginning and acquired some experience upon which to build a foundation.

To my knowledge, we have never held, on this campus, a Federal Opportunity Day. Thirteen agencies have been invited to participate in a one day program, scheduled for Wednesday, December 11, 1963 in the North Lounge of the Billings Student Center from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. The guests include: The State Department, Agriculture Research Service, The National Security Agency, Social Security, Internal Revenue, Forest Service, Army Engineers, Sport Fisheries and Wild Life, Public Health Service, Springfield Armory, General Services Administration, Soil Conservation, and the Civil Service Commission. Each agency will provide a display and personnel who will be more than willing to discuss various career opportunities with you. Furthermore, collectively the group represents career areas for all of our colleges here at the University.

I am not going to request you to visit Billings next Wednesday. Each of you must decide in his or her own way. Many of you, quite frankly are not ready for it. But for the few of you who are willing to try to tear down this curtain that separates you from learning of the world of opportunity, perhaps a half hour walking through the North Lounge might be the first pebble heard dropping into a very large and deep pool.

THE MISSION OF SPRINGFIELD ARMORY

Springfield Armory is the principal small arms research and development center for the U.S. Army. It is, today, essentially a research, development, and engineering laboratory for weapons and weapons systems.

We are interested in recruiting B.S. and M.S. candidates in mechanical, electrical, and electronic engineering for positions concerned with weapons design and development and electro-mechanical engineering, including servos, and the design and development of electronic computers and control systems for use in the weapons systems.

Mr. William J. Hayes, Chief, Employment Services Branch received a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration from Boston University, A Masters of Education from Westfield State. Presently Chief of the Employment Services Branch at Springfield Armory. This position includes responsibilities for recruitment, employment, and career development, among others.

ENGINEERS WANTED

The Mission of the U.S. Army Engineer Division, New England; The New England Division under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, is responsible for planning, directing and supervising an engineer, construction and real estate service for the Army and the Air Force (including Military engineering support), and for other government agencies as assigned; for planning, directing and supervising assigned Civil Defense Programs and related tasks, requested by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Civil Defense, and for the provision of general and specialized construction and engineering services for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The New England Division administers all matters relating to construction, operation and maintenance, and real estate necessary for the improvement of rivers, harbors, shore protection projects, and administers the laws for the protection and preservation of the navigable waters within its geographic limitations.

The Biography of Person Representing New England Division: Mr. Charles P. Tsaffaras, Chief, Employment and Services Branch, Personnel Office, will represent the New England Division at the Career Day Program. Mr. Tsaffaras has more than 20

U.S. FOREST SERVICE - Pride in Growth

MISSION OF U.S. FOREST SERVICE

The Forest Service has three distinctly different, though related, responsibilities: (1) The administration of 154 National Forests, involving 182 million acres and 19 National Grasslands with four million acres; (2) Cooperation with the states and private forest owners in bringing good forestry practices and protection to their lands; and (3) Forest research-- finding the best ways to manage, protect, and utilize the resource of our Nation's wild land, both public and private.

WILLIAM R. THOMAS

Bill Thomas is 29 years of age. He was born in Winchester, Kentucky, and graduated from the University of Kentucky with a BS in Civil Engineering in 1957. He started working with the Forest Service on September 9, 1957 as a Civil Engineer GS-7 on the Cumberland National Forest in Kentucky. In February 1959 Bill was promoted to GS-9 and transferred to the George Washington National Forest in Virginia, where he served as Assistant Forest Engineer. In July 1961, he was promoted to GS-11 and transferred to the Forest Engineer position on the Green Mountain National Forest, with headquarters at Rutland, Vermont. In June, 1963, he was promoted to GS-12 at the same location.

HAROLD A. WEAVER

Harold Weaver is 39 years of age, married, and the father of three children. He was born in West Warwick, Rhode Island, attended high school at Coventry, Rhode Island, and received his BS in Business Administration from Bryant College in 1949. At Bryant he majored in accounting. Mr. Weaver has had two tours of active military duty with the U.S. Army, from 1943 to 1946, and 1950 to 1952. On January 7, 1963 he was selected from the FSEE list to fill an administrative trainee position on our Green Mountain National Forest. At present he is nearing the end of a one-year training period, during which he was exposed to both formal and on-the-job training in the areas of financial management, administrative services, personnel management, and resource management. After completing his training in January 1964, it is expected that he will head up the Section of Budget and Finance within the Business Management organization of our Green Mountain National Forest. Prior to joining the Forest Service, Mr. Weaver worked for approximately ten years with the Commercial Credit Corporation in Providence, Rhode Island.

USDA AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

The Agricultural Research Service of USDA is responsible for most of the physical, biological, chemical and engineering research of the Department. This also includes utilization research on farm products, nutrition and consumer research and coordination of programs with the state agricultural experiment stations.

In addition ARS administers the regulatory and control programs of animal inspection and quarantine, animal disease eradication, meat inspection, plant quarantine, plant pest and pesticide control. Their objectives are first to prevent disease and undesirable species from entering our borders, control them when they do and then make every effort to prevent human consumption of contaminated foods.

Agricultural engineering research deals with efficient use of power, labor, materials and structures in farming. The animal disease and parasite research people study infestations in domestic animals, fur-bearing animals raised in captivity, and poultry. Animal husbandry researchers investigate many aspects of breeding, feeding, nutrition and management of dairy cattle, other farm animals and poultry. The overall research objective of the Crops Research Division is to develop varieties of crops with more efficient yields, better quality and resistance to diseases, nematodes, insects, heat and cold, and drought. Entomology research, on insects, aims to develop practical methods for destroying harmful insects and for promoting and spread of beneficial ones such as honeybees. In soil and water conservation research we study problems of soil, water, fertilizers, hydrology, sedimentation, runoff, design of hydraulic and conservation structures, and the effects on output of alternative systems of conservation farming.

The Pioneering Research labs are staffed by scientists whose main objective is to follow all possible leads in an effort to find new information of a basic and fundamental nature in areas in which knowledge is incomplete or lacking.

These statements in regard to our ARS functions are just a minute glimpse into the range and depth of interesting, stimulating, challenging, satisfying careers available in the USDA. We employ a wide range of college trained people for work in these programs -- both in research and regulation.

As would be expected ARS hires graduates from all agricultural curriculums for their research work in agricultural engineering, crops, entomology, nutrition and consumer use, animal disease, animal husbandry and the Regulatory Divisions. The Utilization Research labs at Wyndmoor, Pa., Peroria, Ill., New Orleans, La., and Albany, Calif., are presently requesting food technologists, chemists, physicists, mechanical and chemical engineers. The Regulatory Division also hires veterinarians, administrative specialists, and scientific trainees for inspection of meats, animals for plant pest control, plant quarantine, and pesticide regulation.

DECK THE HALLS

The time has come to think of Christmas shopping, for the Yuletide will be upon us quicker than you can say Jack Robinson. (Have you ever wondered, incidentally, about the origin of this interesting phrase "Quicker than you can say Jack Robinson"? Well sir, the original saying was French—"Plus vite que de dire Jacques Robespierre." Jack Robinson is, as everyone knows, an Anglicization of Jacques Robespierre who was, as everyone knows, the famous figure from the French Revolution who, as everyone knows, got murdered in his bath by Danton, Murat, Caligula, and Al Capone.

(The reason people started saying "Quicker than you can say Jacques Robespierre"—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries like England, the U.S., and Cleveland—is quite an interesting little story. It seems that Robespierre's wife, Georges Sand, got word of the plot to murder her husband in his bath. All she had to do to save his life was call his name and warn him. But, alas, quicker than she could say Jacques Robespierre, she received a telegram from her old friend Frederic Chopin who was down in Majorca setting lyrics

all she had to do was call his name to his immortal "Warsaw Concerto." Chopin said he needed Georges Sand's help desperately because he could not find a rhyme for "Warsaw." Naturally, Georges could not refuse such an urgent request.

(Well sir, off to Majorca went Georges, but before she left, she told her little daughter Walter that some bad men were coming to murder Daddy in his bath. She instructed Walter to shout Robespierre's name the moment the bad men arrived. But Walter, alas, had been sea-bathing that morning on the Riviera, and she had come home with a big bag of salt water taffy, and when the bad men arrived to murder Robespierre, Walter, alas, was chewing a wad of taffy and could not get her mouth unstuck in time to shout a warning. Robespierre, alas, was murdered quicker than you could say Jacques Robespierre—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries.

(There is, I am pleased to report, one small note of cheer in this grisly tale. When Georges Sand got to Majorca, she did succeed in helping Chopin find a rhyme for "Warsaw" as everyone knows who has heard those haunting lyrics:

*In the fair town of Warsaw,
Which Napoleon's horse saw,
Singing cockles and mussels, alive alive o')*

But I digress.

We were speaking of Christmas gifts. What we all try to find at Christmas is, of course, unusual and distinctive gifts for our friends. May I suggest then a carton of Marlboro Cigarettes?

What? You are astonished? You had not thought of Marlboros as unusual? You had regarded them as familiar, reliable smokes whose excellence varied not one jot nor tittle from year to year?

True. All true. But all the same, Marlboros are unusual because every time you try one, it's like the first time. The flavor never palls, the filter never gets hackneyed, the soft pack is ever a new delight, and so is the Flip Top box. Each Marlborop is a fresh and pristine pleasure, and if you want all your friends to clap their hands and cry, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!" you will see that their stockings are filled with Marlboros on Christmas morn.

The holiday season or any other season is the season to be jolly—if Marlboro is your brand. You'll find Marlboros wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states of the Union. You get a lot to like in Marlboro Country.

SOCIAL SECURITY TO VISIT

William E. Dorn, District Manager and Orville G. Keeler, Field Representative of the Social Security Administration, Burlington, Vermont will be present at the University of Vermont Federal Opportunity Day, December 11, 1963.

The Social Security Administration operates a national social insurance system designed to meet specific needs through three programs for income maintenance:

1. Old age retirement
2. Survivor's insurance
3. Disability insurance

The program is administered through a system of over 600 offices throughout the United States. The central office is in Baltimore, Maryland, where the activities of this large insurance program is directed and managed. Here also is the central location of the earnings records of all persons who have worked under social security. These records are kept current with the aid of the latest electronic data processing equipment.

The Social Security Administration has numerous openings for college graduates interested in interviewing people who are claiming benefits or seeking information about the social security program. More specialized jobs are found in the Payment Centers. The central office offers opportunities in policy formulation, research, procedure development, management, financial analysis or informational programs related to this nationwide system of insurance. A broad range of jobs are to be found within this organization.

Hertel Voted '64 Captain; Burton's No. 12 Retired

The President's Dinner held in honor of the victorious 1963 football team last Monday night was a shining success. Most of the sparkle came from the many trophies awarded to the outstanding performers of last season's 6-2 campaign. The highest honor, although no trophy went along with it, was the selection of Ronnie Hertel as next year's captain. Ken Burton harvested the most honors with the greatest plaudit coming without a trophy also. For the first time in UVM history, a number was retired in honor of the gridder who wore it. That number was Burton's ---12.

CASSIUS COONS

The poet laureate of the Catamounts, didactic Line Coach John Coons, recited a "poem" in heroic style. As he rambled through his poetic masterpiece, the emotions he evoked from the gathering of off-season gladiators and honored guests became audible by the sniffing sounds of men choked-up with feeling. When the so-called Cassius Coons rhymed the team manager's nickname, Buss, with the all purpose detergent Duz because Buzz "duz" everything, the squad let out its emotions in the form of a big laugh. Actually, the poem was well prepared to entertain and to praise the successful UVM team of '63.

AN ALARMING EVENT

The highlight of the evening's sidelights came when President Fey was giving the team an inspirational talk on the values of football. He told the boys that football, more than any sport, creates school spirit. He went further hinting that although football players tend not to be the best scholars, they do tend to be the well-rounded people who have leadership qualities. And in defining the difference between a democracy such as ours and a totalitarian state, he stressed the need for many leaders opposed to a select few.

The atmosphere in the dining hall was hushed and the mood was very contemplative during the talk. Dr. Fey had been speaking for about ten minutes and just as he was ready to climax his speech, an alarm clock went off. A look of disbelief registered on the faces of the listeners, then a wave of spontaneous laughter lead by President Fey ran through the room. The alarming noise came from a clock mounted on a trophy received by Harvey Bazarian. After the laughter subsided Dr. Fey commented, "This should be in the CYNIC."

The night ended with a highlight film of the Catamounts' season.

Other awards were:

Francis M. Taylor Award as the best defensive back, presented by Ralph D. Deslaurier to Deane Kent.

George H. Cook Award as the most valuable lineman, presented on behalf of Jack Goss by coach Clifford to Rusty Brink.

Wesley T. Abell Award as the most valuable lineman, presented by Sabe Abell Jr., to George Oelze.

William T. Riley Sr. Award presented by coach Clifford on behalf of William Riley Jr., to Ken Burton.

Lt. Col. George Brostsis Award to the non-letter winner who has contributed the most through attitude, spirit and co-operation, presented by Lou Mazel to Harvey Bazarian.

Texaco Award to Vermont's outstanding college football player, presented by George Cameron to Ken Burton.

Coach Clifford also presented three neckties to Paul Giardi, Jim Brennan and Brink for tackling an opposing player inside the 20-yard line on a kickoff. It happened in the Middlebury game for the first time this year.

UVM vs Maine To Open YC

Slate-Tonight

With the defending champion University of Connecticut Huskies established as slight favorites to capture their 14th title in 18 years, the red hot Yankee Conference basketball title race will open this weekend when the University of Maine's Black Bears invade Burlington for Friday and Saturday engagements with the University of Vermont Catamounts.

The UConn's under their new head coach Fred Shabel have a number of veterans back from a club that won 18 while losing seven last year. Toby Kimball, 6-7, and Ed Slomcenski, 6-11, both all-Conference choices a year ago head the field.

The University of Massachusetts Redmen, also under a new coach, Johnny Orr, and the University of Rhode Island Rams, both of whom are well stocked with returnees, appear to be the chief threats to the UConn's dynasty but Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire also have improved enough that this could be the most keenly contested race in the conference's history.

The Redmen, headed by Rodger Twitchell, 6-6, all-conference choice for two years, have both size and depth to cope with their schedule. Rhode Island, also with a veteran club, led by Steve Chubin, 6-3 sharpshooter, probably will have the best offensive club in the league with an impressive array of shooters but will be giving away height on most occasions.

Maine will be going mostly with sophomores while Vermont will be seeking a replacement for its star center, Benny Becton. Jim Rich heads what should be an improved New Hampshire quintet.

The 1963-64 Yankee Conference schedule follows:

- Dec. 6 Maine at Vermont
- Dec. 7 Maine at Vermont
- Dec. 10 Connecticut at Massachusetts
- Rhode Island at New Hampshire
- Dec. 14 Massachusetts at New Hampshire
- Jan. 7 Maine at New Hampshire
- Jan. 10 Massachusetts at Vermont
- Jan. 11 New Hampshire at Connecticut
- Maine at Rhode Island
- Jan. 13 Maine at Connecticut
- Jan. 18 Rhode Island at Connecticut
- Jan. 29 Vermont at Rhode Island
- Feb. 1 Connecticut at Vermont
- Maine at Massachusetts
- Feb. 6 Vermont at New Hampshire
- Feb. 7 Rhode Island at Massachusetts
- Feb. 8 Connecticut at Maine
- Rhode Island at Vermont
- Feb. 11 Massachusetts at Connecticut
- New Hampshire at Rhode Island
- Feb. 14 Vermont at Connecticut
- Feb. 15 Vermont at Massachusetts
- New Hampshire at Maine
- Feb. 18 Massachusetts at Rhode Island
- Feb. 22 Rhode Island at Maine
- New Hampshire at Massachusetts
- Feb. 25 Connecticut at New Hampshire
- Feb. 29 Connecticut at Rhode Island
- Massachusetts at Maine
- New Hampshire at Vermont

Strassburg, Higgs Star

With sophomores Lane Higgs and Milt Goggans supplying the spark and Captain Dave Strassburg the fire, the Catamounts defeated Dartmouth College 80-73. It took an overtime period to do it with the Cats outscoring the Indians 12 to 5 in that 5-minute span.

Strassburg, the only returning starter on Fuzzy Evans' squad, was red hot. He hit on 50 percent of his field goal attempts and only missed one free throw for a 25-point output.

Higgs scored 18 and passed-off for many other points as he lead the attack. Milt (Grappler) Goggans did a whale of a job under the boards. He out-positioned the taller Indians and pulled down 20 rebounds while scoring 14 points.

The regulation time gave the slow-starting Catamounts the opportunity to warm up sufficiently to carry them to the overtime win.

The big guns for Dartmouth were Chris Kanum with 19 and Mike Man with 15. This was only the fourth time UVM has silenced Dartmouth in 43 meetings.

The Cats meet Yankee Conference foe Maine in two games, tonight at 8 P.M. and Saturday at 3 P.M.

It was good to see Ralph Lapointe back from Africa. He was in his customary position beside Coach Evans on the bench yelling encouragement at the Cats.

In the preliminary, the little Indians beat the Kittens 82-50.

Hockey • X • Chatter

Amidst all the talk of our tremendous football team and with the successful opening of our Basketball team, not much, if any, has been said about the 1963-64 Edition of the UVM Hockey Team. Saturday night the University presents its first Varsity Hockey team in over a decade - when the Catamounts take on the M.I.T. Engineers.

In discussing the prospects of the pucksters with their coach Bill Ruffer, it is very obvious that the boys have been working diligently and will be ready for their first fray. Coach Ruffer is very pleased with the defensive ability of the club. He feels the defense has improved so much so over last year, that the best of last's would be but a spare on this squad. As for the offense, coach Ruffer feels the team has a lot of balance with three fairly equal lines. The strength of the team seems to lie in the nets. Ruffer has three excellent goalies to choose from. Senior Tony Russo will get the starting nod tomorrow night, but will be hard pressed to keep it by Bob Sausville a freshman from So. Orange, N.J. Another Freshman Goalie, Donnie Henson, from Kimball Union Academy, has also looked good, but was injured and will be out for 3 weeks with a fractured finger.

Coach Ruffer has special permission from the N.C.A.A. to use freshmen this year. Out of a squad of 24, eleven are Frogs, and most of them figure high in Ruffer's plans.

Henry Vihlein, a freshman from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is the center for Vermont's first line. Ruffer calls this skater a real hustler and expects a lot from him and his two sophomore wings, Marty Stevenson and "Cub" Barret. The second line consists of two freshmen wings Ozro Swett and Paul Dorsey. Swett played at Dixfield High (Maine) and Dorsey played at Belmont Hill (Mass.). Sophomore, "Laddie" Cook, centers this wave. Cook and Swett double as penalty-killers and do a very effective job. Paul Ryan and Orlin Svenson are Freshman wings on the third line, centered by Junior Artie Garvin. Kenny Sausville, a Junior from South Orange, N.J., is also expected to see a lot of action.

The Defensive Corps consists entirely of Freshman, Bill Dunn from Vermont Academy and Tim Twomey from New Prep, make up the first blue line wave, while Tony Rishe and Jimmy Brock will also see a lot of ice time. Eben Clark from Choate is the alternate.

The boys have been working diligently throughout Thanksgiving vacation and appear ready for their opening fray. M.I.T. is in the same category at UVM. They had a 5-8 record last year, and don't look too much stronger this year. If the team can be welcomed by a full house Saturday night, I am sure they will put on a good display of hockey. Look for the inexperienced Catamounts to defeat the Engineers 4-2!

Rappa's Roundup

By Richard Rappaport

With the conclusion of a very successful football season the UVM sports scene shifts from the gridiron of Centennial Field to the hardwoods of Patrick Gymnasium as the Cat basketball team opens its usual futile attempt for the Yankee Conference championship against Maine this Friday and Saturday.

The fast-breaking Catamounts have a considerable number of problems this season as Basketball Hall of Fame member, Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans, faces a major rebuilding job in an attempt to have a winning season for the first time in the last few years.

The most outstanding difficulty facing Vermont is the fact that four starters from last year's squad, including the second and the fourth highest scorers in UVM history, Benny Becton, and Jack Shabel have graduated. The individuals selected to replace the departed veterans are guards, senior 6-1 Chuck Glick and soph 6-2 Layne Higgs, junior forward 6-3 Ralph D'Amilia and a 6-4 soph center Milt Goggins. Thus these four newcomers will join the lone returnee 6-3 senior forward Dave Strassburg to comprise the new starting team.

The starting five is as always quite small, and thus will encounter constant rebounding difficulties throughout the season as they attempt to maintain control of the backboards which is essential in order to set up there patented fast-break offense. Another factor to be considered is the squad's lack of speed, which could be a serious drawback to the use of this running offense which is typical of "Fuzzy" Evans cage squads.

The schedule this year is probably the toughest UVM has played in a number of years, since in addition to last year's difficult opponents Vermont has substituted in the Winged Foot tourney at the New York Athletic Club, for the considerably weaker Blue Nose tourney in Nova Scotia. The other teams participating in this Winged Foot tourney are small college power Belmont Abbey, Farleigh Dickinson, and the host New York Athletic Club squad.

The presence of these difficulties facing UVM makes the overall picture appear to be much dimmer than is actually the case. The Cats do have some fine shooters on the squad, which along with the desire, hustle and teamwork displayed thus far in practice, should enable the Catamounts to partially overcome the considerable degree of inexperience until the newcomers become accustomed to their starting roles. Another bright note is the return of the talented assistant coach, Ralph Lapointe, who is back at Vermont after having completed a four month tour of duty for the Peace Corps during which he taught basketball to the natives in Africa.

NIC Meets, Examines Goals Of Fraternities Hears Address By Supreme Court Justice Clark

Nearly a thousand participants attended the 54th annual meeting of the National Interfraternity Conference at the Americana Hotel in New York City on December 5, 6 and 7. Highlight of the three day session was an address by Justice Tom Clark of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Attending the meeting were graduate delegates from the sixty member fraternities of the N.I.C. representing 3,500 undergraduate chapters at 365 colleges and universities. Several hundred undergraduate delegates represented interfraternity councils on campuses throughout the country. In addition, college deans, student advisers and prominent educators participated in many workshops, panels and training sessions.

The Interfraternity Council of University of Vermont was represented at the meeting by: Robert Collier, Alpha Epsilon Pi, President; Dick Dutton, Lambda Iota, Vice President; Steve Bloom, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Treasurer; Marty Hackel, Phi Sigma Delta, Secretary; and Roger Ames, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

The bulk of the conference was devoted to the examination of the ideals of college fraternities, their ability to adjust to the trends in higher education and their day to day operations. These included leadership and its development, scholarship and its improvement, business management and its economics and organizational matters.

Major legislative action taken during the meeting was a reorganization of the N.I.C. by creating a new office of president-elect and adding a second vice president. This relieves the work load of the Conference president making it possible for a volunteer worker to hold that office.

The Conference elected Bertram W. Bennett as its fiftieth president. He has been active in the N.I.C. having served as vice president and as a member of the executive committee. Mr. Bennett is a member and past president of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

A number of distinguished speakers brought their observations based on many experiences to the meeting. Delivering the keynote address at the principal banquet on December 6 was Tom Clark, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Justice Clark, a graduate of the University of Texas, is a vice president of Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

In his speech, Justice Clark emphasized the important contributions fraternities make as an adjunct to college education. He stated that the fraternity system has proved to be an effective testing ground for the practical application of theories taught in the classroom but not experienced as part of any organized curriculum.

Justice Clark also stressed the great need for a program to educate the public, college administrators and students in the values of fraternities, emphasizing the basic precepts upon which fraternities are founded: religion - brotherliness - tolerance - respect for country, law and constituted authority - morality and learning. A lack of all of these was displayed during the recent assassination of our president. Justice Clark stated that only a full appreciation of these precepts will help develop boys fit for the "fraternity of man, the greatest fraternity of all."

A similar plea to fraternity men was made by Irving Dilliard, a Chicago newspaper columnist and former editorial page editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He stated that the first duty of the fraternity member is to appreciate, to cherish, to protect and to practice the basic freedom guaranteed to the United States citizen by the Constitution. He urged fraternity members to make the Bill of Rights the guiding force in their lives pointing out that fraternity members are fortunate to have a college education and therefore better able to assume this responsibility.

Irving Dilliard, who is visiting senior fellow at Princeton University Council of the Humanities this year, is a senator-at-large for Phi Beta Kappa and a past national president of Alpha Kappa Lambda Fraternity.

The concluding session of the three-day meeting was addressed by Dr. Seth R. Brooks, Minister of the Universalist National Memorial Church in Washington, D.C. Having served as the General Secretary of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity, Dr. Brooks now is its president.

Robert W. Kelly of New York, past president of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, presided over this year's National Interfraternity Conference meeting. General chairman of the annual meeting was N.I.C. vice president Bertram W. Bennett of Chicago, a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity, who was elected to succeed Mr. Kelly as president of the National Interfraternity Conference.

1964 Kake Walk Committee Prepares For 67th Production

While the downtown merchants are busily counting the shopping days to Christmas, the Kake Walk Committee is busily counting the days until the big show goes on. At this time there are 72 days to go. During the ten weeks remaining, the multitude of planning and work begun in the spring semester by the three Directors will be consummated now that the committee is complete.

The Directors for the 67th presentation are Carl Eells, Dave Malchuk and Fred Weisberg. Carl, a member of Acacia, is this year's Finance Director. Dave is a Phi Delt and has the responsibilities of Publicity Director. Phi Sig's Fred Weisberg is the Production Director. Upon these three men lies the responsibility for the success of the weekend. Each has been involved in many extracurricular activities prior to their selection for directorships. Their success in previous undertakings and their leadership qualities are attested to by their membership in the Boulder Society.

To assist the Directors in fulfilling the many responsibilities of their positions are Steve Slack, Calvin Walker, Steve Watson and Ralph D'Altilla. Steve Slack as one of the two production assistants bears the responsibility for the royalty campaigns and organization of the walking. He is a member of Sigma Phi. Cal, the second of the production assistants in charge of skits and technical aspects of production, including lighting and sound, is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho. Steve Watson, a member of Lambda Iota, is the assistant finance director. Ralph is the assistant in charge of publicity. He is a member of SAE. The four assistants were selected on the basis of their past academic and extracurricular performance.

Adding the woman's touch to the committee is Judy Miller as secretary. A Tri-Delt, Judy is probably the most qualified secretary the committee has had for some time. A Business Education major with an extraordinary amount of secretarial experience, she is a true asset to the committee.

The time and effort each of the committee members contributes to Kake Walk is tremendous. For the three Directors the preparation for the weekend begins soon after the previous one has been completed. A complete evaluation of the previous production is made, from which many ideas are obtained which lead to an even better production the following year. From these ideas planning is begun from which the weekend materializes. Then the cycle begins again.

Parking Ban Now In Effect

Pressure of increasing traffic in and around the corner of Main and Prospect Streets has necessitated a parking ban on Prospect between College and Main Streets, the Burlington Traffic Commission has advised the University.

Signs indicating the "No Parking On This Side of Street" went up in the block just before the Thanksgiving recess, and Burlington Police - lenient the first week following the posting - have now begun to ticket violators.

Nat Lash, chairman of the City's Traffic Commission, said the City acted to ban parking in the block "reluctantly, and only after it became clear that increased traffic necessitated the ban."

He said the Commission realized the loss of parking space in the Main to College block of Prospect St., would make "that much tighter" the student parking situation, but he said he hoped the resultant easing of the Annual Christmas Concert To Be Presented Sunday

The Annual Christmas Choir Concert of the University of Vermont Department of Music will be presented in Ira Allen Chapel at 4:00 P.M. Sunday, December 15, 1963. A carillon and Organ recital will precede the concert at 3:30 P.M., and the concert will be followed by light refreshments and the traditional sing in the Waterman Building. The public is cordially invited to attend this free concert.

The newly-formed Women's Chorus directed by Prof. Francis Weinrich will make its initial appearance at this concert. The main feature of this concert will be a performance of Part I, the Christmas Portion of Handel's "Messiah" by the University Choir and Orchestra conducted by Prof. Frank Lidral. Seven student soloists will be featured in this work:

Sopranos -- Sharon Dunnell, Brattleboro and Caryl Perkins, South Burlington; Altos -- Brenda Erskine, Bradford, and Kathleen Scott, Storrs, Connecticut; Tenor -- William Bosworth, Saxtons River; and Basses -- David Bishop, St. Almont, Michigan and Timothy Finney, Arlington.
Professor Weinrich has coached all soloists.

SEE Voyeur, seel SEE the lovely young salvation lassie stripped on stage of her morality. SEE her cry, see her scream, see her passionately love the subversive Greek scholar. SEE the brute cockney savagely beat pretty maidens to the ground. See the dominating mother and her shocking treatment of her Oedipal son. See the man who left the woman he loved because he loved war better. See all this and more in the UVM stage spectacular "Major Barbara." You'll grimace in pain, sigh in ecstasy and laugh and cry with this blatant expose of life in England at the turn of the century.

Charlton Heston, being unable to leave God, gave his role as the destroyer of mankind to Ernest Cabrera. Paul Newman, busy fighting for Israeli independence, asked that Michael Goodwater take his part as the passionate Greek. Liz Taylor having some difficulty with the Romans, chose Ann Abbott to act the part of the defiled maiden. Steve Reeves, committed to a session of weight lifting, bowed out in favor of Robin Schore as the mighty Cockney woman-beater. Hermione Gingold asked Marion Moore to do her part as the evil mother, she and Maurice are discussing whether they remember it well. William Jones, subbing for Wally Cox, plays the crushed, young man. The rest of this cast of "Major Barbara," all back from long stands on off-Broadway, includes Barry Beckerman, Esther Sundell, Susan Wichterman, Susan Boudreau, Bert Tepfer, Linda Bates, Bob Colagiovanni, David Storti and Lawrence Roth.

This extravaganza, by George Bernard Shaw, will be presented in the Arena Theater in Fleming Museum on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, December 12, 13, 14. Edward J. Maritain Lecture Reviewed

by Ken Klonsky

On Thursday, December 5, Professor Staron of the Political Science Department at UVM lectured on the political philosophy of Jaques Maritain. From what I could hear over the noise of the juke box coming from downstairs in The Den, it was quite interesting.

Maritain, born in 1882, is presently the world's foremost Catholic philosopher. He was brought up as a Baptist, married a Jewish girl and embraced her religion, and finally converted to Catholicism. He made this final move because he found truth in the legacy of St. Thomas Aquinas. He has spent half a century as a teacher and author since then.

Professor Staron explained that a brief time-limited lecture is not nearly enough to express Maritain's entire philosophy. However he did try to explain the basic rudiments. In adopting St. Thomas to modern life Maritain attempts to synthesize Christianity with the old Aristotelian philosophy. He tries to describe the difference between the two realities, empirical and rational. Furthermore, he shows the distinction between natural law, divine positive law, and human positive law. He says that Christians are in a better position to understand natural law, or part of God's law that man can apprehend without the supernatural, because they have the benefits of revelation. I'd say that the most important point is Maritain's belief that man can have no double standards of morality. This is to say that no matter how important the end is it does not justify all the means. His feelings on equality are that man as a person is equal to any other man but as an individual he is unequal. Without inequality there would be no flowerings or revelations.

Professor Staron concluded his well-organized speech with the assertion that Maritain is a democratic philosopher. The lack of intellectualism of this reporter and of the audience in general, which was quite sparse, reflected in the lack of questions in the end.

CONFERENCE ON ELECTRONIC TRANSITIONS

The University of Vermont has received a grant from the National Science Foundation to conduct a conference on electronic transitions during the summer of 1964. The grant for $12,500 will allow 30 participants. Dr. Cecil Criss of the chemistry department will direct the conference.

Our world-recognized trademark—"the P&WA eagle"—has been identified with progress in flight propulsion for almost four decades, spanning the evolution of power from yesterday's reciprocating engines to today's rockets. Tomorrow will find that same Pratt & Whitney Aircraft eagle carrying men and equipment to the moon and to even more distant reaches of outer space.

Engineering achievement of this magnitude is directly traceable to our conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. Today's engineers at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft accept no limiting criteria. They are moving ahead in many directions to advance our programs in energy conversion for every environment.

Our progress on current programs is exciting, for it anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. We are working, for example, in such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells... nuclear power—all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The breadth of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft programs requires virtually every technical talent... requires ambitious young engineers and scientists who can contribute to our advances of the state of the art. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in:

MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

Career boundaries with us can be further extended through a corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. NIC Formal Discussions Beneficial To Undergraduate

by Marty Hackel

The National Interfraternity Conference was quite beneficial to the undergraduate representatives. Most undergraduates felt they derived most from the two formal discussion sessions (all undergrads were assigned to one of 20 discussion groups) and the many informal meetings with many I.F.C. officers who attended.

The first discussion session on Friday morning revolved around the subject of "Creativeness in Selection." This topic being a broad one, it enabled the members to discuss not only the "nuts and bolts" of their respective chapters, but also some of the more encompassing philosophies which will determine the road which fraternities will travel in the future. My discussion group was led by Owen Brown, President of the Interfraternity Council at Auburn University with Robert H. Ewalt, Assistant Dean of Men at the University of Illinois, serving as advisor. Much time was spent on the subject of planning. A distinction was made between getting rid of bad habit and good tradition. Stu Greenberg, President of Rutgers' I.F.C. explained their Greek Week, run by I.F.C. and similar to hell week; therefore quite different from our own here at UVM. It was generally agreed that in one week fraternities cannot alter a person's character too much and a good strong pledge period carried out faithfully will prove the best. Too many houses take the lazy way out with one week of hazing, etc. Most delegates felt physical hazing has no real place in the pledging program.

Dick Belger, University of Michigan's I.F.C. President, explained the change in the type of incoming Freshmen at Michigan. With standards increasing each year, he explained that a more intellectually inclined student was now at Ann Arbor. This led to a lengthy discussion on scholarship. Each fraternity, ideally should be above the University men's average. The deferred rush, it was felt, helped freshmen get their feet set academically, and many fraternities give sound tips to freshmen in study booklets. Other points covered were improvement of the physical plant and how it could be accomplished, lack of brotherhood and how it could be alleviated, competition between the atmosphere of fraternities and apartments, new rush procedures, Greek Week, pledging program and parents and their relation to the fraternities.

The second discussion group held Saturday morning centered on "Creativeness in Leadership." (How a chapter achieves its potential.) Here it was emphasized by Stu Greenberg of Rutgers that chapters should invite faculty members to their houses for parties and dinners. The members invited in the past were usually pro-fraternity. A good idea would be to invite faculty members that were not so pro-fraternity and show them what is going on in fraternities today. This also means inviting members to speak at I.F.C. meetings and answer questions concerning their views. The I.F.C. should have the courage to accept and value other persons' opinions, even though you differ with him. All too often fraternity members do not want to see currents of change. Dr. Glenn T. Nygreen, Eminent Supreme Archon of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, summed up this discussion most eloquently during a session which discussed "Earning a Good Reputation." He explained "The most important accolade a faculty member can give, is that a man which joins a fraternity has a better chance of graduating. Once again, many of the aspects covered the previous day were further delved with."

The I.F.C. this year experimented with a new format and it proved very beneficial. I.F.C. leaders left with many new ideas which will undoubtedly help the fraternity systems throughout the country move forward.

Art - Purest Form Of Human Expression

by Roberta Levy

On Thursday evening Nov. 5 Peter Heller, professor, artist, and thinker, expressed his personal thoughts about the much talked about subject -- Art. Professor Heller began his talk to an informal gathering of about 20 interested people by first stating what, according to, art was not. "Art is not what most people think. Art is not this characteristic 'dripping' of the revolutionist 'non-objective' modern artists whose school gave rise to our abstract expressionism of today. Professor Heller believes that art is the purest form of human expression.

The true artist translates feelings and thought into form. Through his strong desire to communicate he "makes something out of nothing" and "transforms Chaos into order." The artist uses human reactions, events and emotions in an egotistical manner and creates his own reality. To many, this self-expressionism appears nebulous and confused. We cannot view it as reality but to the modern artist the abstract is realistic.

At various moments during his talk Professor Heller stated that the students on this campus do not understand modern art. And, what is worse they do not try to understand. Upon viewing what Professor Heller considers one of the only worthwhile examples of modern art here on campus, Aschenbach's sculpture, UVMers do not take the time or effort to study it, talk about it, try to understand it in its own terms. We are committing a crime by not trying; for it is not necessary that we do understand or even enjoy it. We must try to understand it and only then can we intelligently reject it. Professor Heller said that a typical chain of reasoning involved would be something like this-- "I don't understand this so called work of art. Either I am dumb or it isn't worth anything. I am not dumb. Therefore it must be no good. If it were good I'd understand it." And so we have rejected something without trying to understand.

The modern artist does want to be understood. All he is doing, according to Mr. Heller, is expressing conceivable emotions, forms, things, reactions, actions and lives in new terms that are in accordance with his contemporary society.

The few students who did attend this fascinating and engrossing lecture have gained insight into the thoughts of one artist, Peter Heller. Many students who will be able to view Mr. Heller's new painting at the Flemming Museum will probably wish that they had had some intellectual curiosity and had listened to Mr. Heller Thursday night. Then, they could possess some added insight into the thoughts of the artist who created the work. They could have a real basis for intelligently rejecting or accepting it as a work of art.

Attitudes Revealed

CHICAGO (CPS) -- Almost all Americans (96%) think a college education is important and most of them think the most valuable part of it is getting a better job, according to a survey being made by the University of Michigan.

Dr. William Eckerman, a member of Michigan's Survey Research Center discussed the survey at a meeting of the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Those who see negative aspects in going to college -- less than half of those questioned -- meet often fear that the education "may create snobs." Others say the colleges give young people radical ideas or break down their morality.

1300 people were contacted in the survey which is being made for the U.S. Office of Education and the Joint Office of Institutional Research. It is to be completed by June, 1964.

Segments of the population tend to feel differently, the researchers found. For example, low education and low income groups view the education of a woman as less necessary and do high income -- high education groups.

The Association of State Universities and Loan-Grant Colleges has drawn over 1000 representatives for its four-day conference.

UVM DEBATE TEAMS PLACE HIGH IN RECENT COMPETITION

Two University of Vermont debate teams scored among the top competitors at two weekend tournaments.

At the Yankee Conference championship at the University of New Hampshire, UVM debaters tied for second place and were judged the top affirmative team of the tournament.

The top negative team was the University of Massachusetts, and the over-all winner was the University of Maine.

The affirmative team, defeating the universities of New Hampshire, Connecticut and Massachusetts, was Carmen Wessner of Manchester and Donna Kristiansen of York, Pa. The team was defeated by the University of Maine.

Miss Wessner received an award as the top affirmative speaker in the tournament.

The negative team, Cynthia Clark of Springfield and Craig Nelson of Greenville, Maine won one and lost three.

Dr. Robert Huber, Chairman of the speech department, was coach on the trip and spoke at the tournament banquet.

UVM was honored as the first Yankee Conference school to hold an intercollegiate debate -- on May 23, 1902.

A second team went to the University of Pittsburgh for a cross-examination tournament and compiled an 8-2 win record.

Negative team members, Carl Lisman of Burlington and David Waite of Springfield, went undefeated, with victories over Carnegie Institute of Technology and the universities of Dayton, Michigan, Pittsburgh and Alabama.

Affirmative team members, Lynn Baier of New Brunswick, N.J. and David Webster of Burlington, won three and lost two, defeating the University of Pittsburgh, Hiram College and Grove City College.

They lost to the University of Richmond and Southern Illinois University, the tournament winner.

Professor John Travis of the speech department was the coach.

Tom Huck sought scientific excitement

He's finding it at Western Electric

Ohio University conferred a B.S.E.E. degree on C. T. Huck in 1956. Tom knew of Western Electric's history of manufacturing development. He realized, too, that our personnel development program was expanding to meet tomorrow's demands.

After graduation, Tom immediately began to work on the development of electronic switching systems. Then, in 1958, Tom went to the Bell Telephone Laboratories on a temporary assignment to help in the advancement of our national military capabilities. At their Whippany, New Jersey, labs, Tom worked with the Western Electric development team on computer circuitry for the Nike Zeus guidance system. Tom then moved on to a new assignment at WE's Columbus, Ohio, Works. There, Tom is working on the development of testing circuitry for the memory phase of electronic switching systems.

This constant challenge of the totally new, combined with advanced training and education opportunities, make a Western Electric career enjoyable, stimulating and fruitful. Thousands of young men will realize this in the next few years. How about you?

If responsibility and the challenge of the future appeal to you, and you have the qualifications we seek, talk with us. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Cynic-al Observations

Please Help

With classes dismissed on the day following the death of President John F. Kennedy until December 2, the Red Cross blood drawing scheduled for November 25 had to be postponed until December 16. It is hoped that UVM students will turn out in large numbers at the Waterman Lounge that day from 9 A.M. to 2 P.M.

Many of us must have felt helpless, because there seemed to be so little we could do during these historic events. By the simple act of donating blood on December 16, we can show our sympathy for the family of the assassinated president and demonstrate our appreciation for the service he gave his country.

Blood transfusions could not save the life of John F. Kennedy. But blood will save other lives, if it is available when needed. Blood donations usually lag at this time of year, and this is understagable, since most of us are preoccupied with holiday plans. The need for blood never slackens, however, since sickness and injury do not take a holiday.

Your blood may help save another human being's life. This is the greatest Christmas gift of all. If you were scheduled to give blood at an inconvenient hour or have not been scheduled at all, please come anyway to the Student Lounge on first floor Waterman with a yellow permission slip.

A Look At The Takers

(He lurks in the Catamount Den, lounges in Billings and Bailey, and lives near you. Beware of him for he doesn't care for you. Yes, Vermont has its Takers but it also has its Givers, so don't give up hope in UVM's social world.)

There is a crisis in the morality of the college generation today; but it is a crisis far different from the "sex-boozie-parties" attack to which college students are always subject. The immorality of our generation is selfishness.

Our society has spawned the new breed of youngsters---the Taker. He is everywhere on campus, and his total devotion to himself extends to his "friends," his social life, his studies, and pervades his whole outlook. The world is his oyster and no one else's: it is simply discourteous to ask him to exert some effort and pry it open---he wants you to do it for him.

He can be seen all over campus. In the dorms he enters your room when he feels like it, interrupts you if it suits him, indignantly demands his own privacy.

He borrows your notes for class and returns them when he feels like it. He expects your favors as his right; he looks on your requests with the contempt they obviously deserve for asking him to give of himself.

He dates people who he can show off, and catalogues his amorous exploits (real or feigned) to anyone who will listen to them, because they increase his stature. The other person's feelings in the matter are irrelevant, because they do not deal with his own self-glorification.

His courses are to be avoided, not taken. His task is to get away with as much as possible, and still maintain a respectable grade. He looks upon any deadline as a challenge to skip; the professor's approach to subjects is to be ignored if it conflicts with his own interests.

Obligation is a word unknown to the Taker, because it means he may be bound to do something he may not feel like doing at the moment. Responsibility is a word meaning blame, and the taker always makes sure he's never blamed for anything.

His friends are contacts, or sources of advantage. His goal in life is to be free from the nagging sense of self-doubt which haunts him, and the feeling of loneliness which comes with a view of life that is bound by the limits of the self.

Fellow men are his enemies, for they may have what the Taker wants. Love, charity, kindness are alien to him; and so, inevitably, is the sense of communion with brothers on this earth.

It is this generation's tragedy that the philosophy of the Taker is prevailing. It will be this generation's doom if it is allowed to flourish.

Kake Walk

Poster Rules

The rules for the Poster Contest of the Sixty Seventh Annual Kake Walk are as follows:

Posters are to conform to the measurements of 14 inches wide and 22 inches long. They are to consist of no more than three colors, and in this case black and white are considered colors. They must be original and be constructed so as to leave adequate space for pertinent information such as where Kake Walk is held and at what time.

Posters must contain the words "67th (either written or in numerals) Kake Walk, University of Vermont."

Posters will not be accepted with personal or fraternity names or initials anywhere on the poster. The name and address of the artist should be attached on a separate piece of paper.

The poster contest is open to individuals representing fraternities or sororities as well as all members of the University. An individual may submit as many entries as desired. The posters will be judged on their artistic merit and ingenuity.

All entries are to be wrapped and submitted to the Kake Walk Office in Billings Center, and slid under the door. The deadline for submitting posters is January 6, 1964 at 5:00 P.M. No posters will be accepted after that time.

Date With Life

* Editor's Note: Permission to print this poem was granted by the author, Charlotte C. Marsh.

This was written by me Sept. 20, 1957, but is just as appropriate for blood drawing.

LIFE OR DEATH

I had a date with Life today--
I gave some good red blood away.
A feeling of joy is in my heart
That of myself I have given a part.

Many others were donating too,
Housewives, doctors, laborers-- quite a few,
All were treated with such fine care

By the Red Cross staff and nurses there.
After two months have sped away
I'll make another gift some day.

I could have had a date with Life
today--
But I gave no red blood away.
I was scared it might hurt a bit--
What of the lad by shrapnel hit?

I was just too busy and worn--
Will some mother be lost or a babe newborn?
I thought it didn't really matter much--

Will some child have to walk with a crutch?
All because I gave no blood away?
Perhaps I had a date with Death
today.

Christmas Party Dec. 14

All members of the student body, the faculty, and the administration are cordially invited to attend the first annual INTERNATIONAL CHRISTMAS PARTY, to be held on Saturday evening, December 14, 1963, in the North Lounge of the Billings Student Center, between the hours of 7-12 midnight. International refreshments, entertainment, and conversation will highlight the evening's festivities.

Participate in the Christmas traditions of the many nations which are represented on campus. Bring your songs, dances, traditions, and spirit.

Come broaden your horizons-- Join in the fun--Guest old friends and make new ones!

THE SCEPTIC

Over two months ago, a letter by kindly Professor Chaplin raised an awkward question: what's cynical about the CYNIC? Any teacher at UVM quickly learns not to expect immediate answers; the students must be given time to paw aimlessly through their books or to stare sullenly at the dirty words they were carving in their desks when interrupted. But even mild-mannered, loveable old Prof. C shouldn't be kept waiting this long.

It must be admitted that UVM is an unlikely place for a cynical paper, since the students display a bovine complacency about the status quo--unexcelled even in California. Such an attitude breeds cynicism in certain unbalanced minds, however, and it must be admitted that the campus shelters at least its share of malcontent cynics. One of the wittiest and least appreciated is Dean Patzer. Two examples will prove it. A member of one of the frat clubs got out of hand recently, and Dean Patzer punished him by forcing him to live in his frat house. Too subtle for you? How about this, which is almost slapstick: on what date does Kappa Sig become eligible for re-acceptance as a frat club?

April first.

The CYNIC can't match the Dean, I fear, but it does its best. I call your attention to its Greek Week issues. Last year's issue spelled out Greek Week in Greek letters. The implication, of course, was that the phrase made no sense in Greek or English. The cover picture showed a Greek ruin. This year's issue was subtler. The cover showed a statue of a dependent playing frisbee. On the other side of the page, with his back to the dependent, was a non-Greek (independent) statue, the Thinker. The combination is witty enough, but for the initiated the satire is still more biting. In the first place, the statue of the Frisbee Thrower is not really Greek; it's just an imitation. In the second place, it was headless when found. After leading sculptors of the day refused to repair it, the man who agreed to do the job worked for years, finally put a head on it, and then committed suicide. For malicious subtlety, the juxtaposition of the Thinker and the Headless Imitation Greek could hardly be topped even by that other great Dean, Jonathan Swift.

For the most part, however, the CYNIC has gone beyond these old-fashioned forms of cynicism. Any student of painting knows that the aesthetic theory of sympathy has only limited application. An artist seldom succeeds in making his audience sad by showing them a sad person; instead, he must show them the scene that saddened that person. The CYNIC, naturally, wishes to evoke cynicism in its readers; it does so by giving them occasion to be cynical. Mixes & Matches, for instance, satirizes with a straight face the mercenary marriage marts called sororities; the news articles and editorials satirized student ignorance and illiteracy by imitating them. The editors "solemnly" claim that the CYNIC concerns itself only with matters that interest the students; so far this year, there has been one editorial on a subject of national interest (the assassination); some seven editorials dealt with frat clubs. The proportion is enough to make any CYNIC reader a cynic. We must conclude that the paper deserves its name.

Hark, the hired angels sing
From every corner of the street,
"Won't you buy just one more thing?"

Rosy-nosed shopkeepers greet
Each baggy bundled passerby
Hobbling past on frozen feet;

Shades of night are drawing nigh
As the weary wayfarer
Hears their quaint financial cry:

"Have you purchased this year's myrrh?
Frankincense is back in style!
Or perhaps you might prefer

Something from the jewelry aisle?
Gold is thought acceptable . . ."
Golden gleams enrich their smile.

Swaddled in thick furs and wool,
Shoppers' baby faces stare
Fatly in the windows full

Of things to eat and things to wear
And things simply to have. Each thing
Attracts. The shoppers shove and sweat and swear, While, high above, the hired angels sing.

Students Forum

As a fraternity man, I have been disturbed by the frequent attacks upon the Fraternity system, both locally and nationally. Although, I do not consider much of this criticism to be justified, I cannot help but feel that the Greek system, as a whole and on a local basis, could do a great deal more than it does to help dispel the tarnished image of the system. In this light, I would like to make a proposal that I could prove not a solution, but as a starting point toward positive action.

I believe that, on the whole, the problems the fraternities face are not in the system itself, but in the attitude taken by the members of the system. There seems to be a lack of initiative to work on any projects together. The fraternities seem to be pulling in fifteen different directions, as if they were in fifteen separate bomb shelters, waiting for the bomb to fall. The fruits of this behavior can only spell disaster.

More specifically, I think this attitude is evident in the manner which the fraternities are facing a changing Kake Walk Weekend. The blackface is gone, and the diehards will say that Kake Walk spirit went with it. The Independents threaten to break the hold that fraternities have on the festivities. Yet the attitude the Greeks have taken is to sit on their nest egg as long as possible. Why not move forward?

In another area, the fraternity system saw fit to go away with, or at least postpone the Interfraternity Sing. With this act, I believe the fraternities drove a fat nail into their own coffin. Only two of sixteen fraternities saw fit to vote for the Sing. This seemed to be the one constructive thing, with the exception of Kake Walk, that the University Community, and the Community at large, could look to the fraternities for. Singing itself seems to be looked at with some kind of scorn at UVM. At the beginning of the semester, the Music Department tried to organize a Men's Choir. Nine men showed up for try-outs. The project was cancelled.

With this situation at hand, there appears to be an opening which the Fraternity System might very capably fill. Would it be possible to form an IFC Choir consisting of two or three men from each fraternity to perform during the Kake Walk Weekend? The selections presented could include songs depicting the spirit of Kake Walk. I am confident that the Music Department would aid in this endeavour.

The Chorus could perform between skits and walking, or at the expense of a skit. Choir members could be selected by their chapter, with attendance and participation counting toward the Lechnyr Trophy. From among the Choir members, a leader could be chosen, giving his chapter added points toward the Trophy.

If this proposal were enacted, I believe it would show the public that fraternities can do something constructive, working together as a system. We live in changing times, and we must move ahead with the times. Old traditions pass, new ones should be developed. The Fraternity System has the opportunity to do so.

Thank you,

UNDERGRADS, CLIP AND SAVE

Pseudo Event

by Roger Ebert
Editor, The Daily Illini

We live in the age of the pseudo-event.

It no longer matters whether anyone heard the tree fall in the forest. What matters is whether or not the fall of the tree was documented on television.

The vast majority of Americans are no longer capable of believing something on their own authority. Indoctrinated since childhood by boxtop offers of a "guaranteed genuine official" world, they seek desperately for Authority -- and find it everywhere but in themselves.

A commonplace example: Find me, if you will, a can of baked beans that does not carry the instruction, "Heat and Serve." Why do the American consumers require this instruction? Because a good many of them do not have the nerve to heat and serve those baked beans without official approval. Common sense is no longer a guide.

Thus it is that things no longer happen of themselves. They happen only after a sufficient portion of the public has been told they happened. And then only if the public senses that it was "officially" all right that they happened.

I would suggest, for example, that the Goldwater "boom" of today is not a particle stronger than the same boom a year ago. What is significant is that people have now been told that it exists. Likewise, the civil rights revolution did not exist for middle class white Americans until they had been told about it. Never mind that they could see it all about them, everywhere, every day. They had to be told. And I believe that, in the minds of these same people, the same revolution could again cease to exist if the establishment were to tell them so. The facts seen by the self are nothing compared to the facts reported in Time magazine, a notable spokesman for officialdom.

Another example. The use of news photographs, long a means to document a fact, has been discontinued on the Huntley-Brinkley program. An artist, has been employed, instead, to do sketches of events. By almost the same token, the news itself on this program has been replaced by the employment of Huntley and Brinkley, who appear to bring the news into being, full-blown from their brows, simply by deigning to acknowledge it.

Placement Barometer

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

"Starting From Scratch"

Whether you are willing to recognize the truth or not, your first job has to do with knowing yourself. Taking an inventory of yourself, checking up on your assets and your liabilities. How do you do it? You do it as you will have to do most of the hard things of your life, alone.

Go off by yourself, where you will not be distracted by a roommate, the radio or interruptions from friends. Take a pencil and paper so that you can set down your facts in an orderly way. This not only tends to help you evaluate your ideas and to arrange your thinking in a clear-cut fashion, but it also impresses things more clearly upon your mind. To do a thorough job of this should take you many hours; it is not a casual chore to be romped through in a few minutes before going out. It is worth all the time you give it. In those hours you should become better acquainted with yourself, and you will begin to chart the course of your future life. Better fifteen hours now than fifteen years in the wrong job.

Begin with your assets. This is fairly easy, as a rule, you have a clear idea of the things you can do well, of your strong points in general. It is only when you get over on the other side of the ledger that it will take time and concentrated effort. You will not find it easy to estimate your liabilities, yet on one in the world is likely to know them as well as you do. "Know thyself" is as good advice today as when it was first spoken. Curiously enough, your assets and liabilities tend in the same direction, and after you have given the matter some thought you often discover that what you believe to be liabilities can actually be assets. As a matter of fact, nearly every quality you possess can be an asset if you learn to use it in the right place.

No more important decision than the choice of a lifework is likely to confront you, and therefore you must proceed cautiously in deciding what vocation offers the most promising future, and in trying to gauge the extent to which your liabilities would hinder and your assets would help in the field that most appeals to you. Looking back over your years in high school and here at UVM, you should be able to recall the subjects in which you excelled and those in which you did not do well. That should be a helpful guide. College students frequently do not know what they want to do, but nearly everyone knows what he does not want to do. To take a job in a field in which you know that you cannot do good work is to give yourself a serious handicap. In time you discover that you have made a false start and a good chance exists that you will have to go back and begin all over again. This is not only bad for your morale but is unnecessary. Time spent in forethought is far better employed than time wasted in the wrong field.

It is a safe rule to follow your natural bent. Stop to consider the things you enjoy most. You will devote more energy and more enthusiasm to the field that is most congenial to you and consequently achieve more in it. To take a job blindly is not only the first step towards failure; it is the beginning of an unhappy life. The senior who says airily, "Oh, I'll just try one thing after another until I find out for myself which suits me best," is being mentally lazy and is well on the way towards establishing a reputation as a floater -- a man who drifts because he does not know what he wants. We take it for granted that business will select carefully the employees it needs, but too few people take it equally for granted that the employee should select carefully the business he enters. And yet, the right choice is obviously more important to him than it is to the business. Business is set-up to take losses as well as profits, but the loss of years spent on the wrong job can never be recouped.

This analysis of your personality requires some detached and orderly thinking, but try not to follow the example of too many college students who become completely bogged down in introspection and brood mistily about the state of their souls instead of taking a clear, steady look at their personalities. Perhaps the word "personality" is the troublemaker. At this point I am speaking of your personality as you reveal it in your actions. That is the only

Thistlewait, Oscar O., Class of 1994, assigned IVM processing number M-8764, arrived with his parents at 0800 at the UVM Adjustment and Personality Dynamics Facility on Spear Street. A Preliminary Day Adjustor was immediately assigned to the family. He was a Plausible Youth - a Psychology Major who explained that his function was to make certain that Oscar's parents understood and emotionally accepted what was going to happen to their son during his college career. Similarly, Oscar was encouraged to understand what modifications his leaving home would make in the lives of his parents and to accept these changes both intellectually and emotionally. In Oscar's case this was a matter of considerable importance, since his Pennsylvania Personality Predictive Test (PPPT) results, as scored and analyzed by the 1820 data processor, indicated that his success in college depended upon his willingness to modify certain adjustmental deviations in his attitude toward his parents. Coordinator Doctor Kaspar Kildare of Adjustment and Personality Dynamics had already structured ten interviews for Oscar, the first of which he was to attend with his parents on Preliminary Day. In the warm, permissive atmosphere of Personality Dynamics, Oscar and his parents could reflect each other's feelings and discuss preliminary interpretations made by Doctor Kildare. A tape of the interview would be made for a subsequent analysis which would become part of Oscar's Permanent Record.

During the interview, Oscar had an insight. He discovered that his basic deviation was the result of a deficiency in his ability to communicate. He had not yet learned that psychologists had found out that all problems and all controversies in modern life were failures of the communication process. He must, he realized, submerge his tendency toward individual ego-oriented values and in their place put people-oriented values. He must be willing to discuss his problems with room, floor, building and college counselors until he understood and accepted the objectives of UVM and discovered techniques that would enable him to make appropriate modifications in his behavior so as to help others achieve those objectives.

Oscar was one of the fortunate ones. Preliminary analyses of his deviation indicated that his personality structure had not yet rigidified and was therefore amenable to corrective therapy. As a result, Oscar progressed to Phase Two of his Preliminary Processing within an hour. After a mildly nostalgic farewell in which Oscar tried to understand his parent's distressed feelings from their point of view, he lightly walked to Curriculum Planning Center Number 2 on Prospect and College where years before a medieval building called Waterman used to stand. There, after entering through a turnstile, he found himself directed to an Audio Visual Information Room. He sat in the dim light with other students in the 764 group whose preparatory school work, Pennsylvania Predictive Aptitude Potential Tests (PPAPT) and Personality Predictive Analysis indicated they were to register for Curriculum Four in the All University College Which had taken the place of the old separatist undergraduate colleges that encouraged excessive individuality. When the room was full, a screen at the front similar to a home television screen lighted and an image of a middle-aged man with a warm face and permissive voice appeared. He announced himself as the Dean of the College and explained that all the facts necessary for the Level I Degree had already been programmed into tapes which they would be assigned. The tapes were to be taken to RIU's (Reinforcement-Information Units) according to a schedule which would be given to them when they arrived at Data Processing and Coding. At the R-I Units each student would study a Programmed course in Reinforcing Teaching Machines and take multiple-choice tests on their knowledge. In the rare event that a student failed to understand something, a file of cards containing all possible questions was available in each unit. If the student so desired, he could stamp his number on the appropriate card, drop it into a slot and the answer would be back the following class period by Data Card Tele-transmission. Competent professors were always available, the Dean emphasized, to answer questions by Teleard. However, the student should realize he was interrupting their Government Grant and Contract Research and should strive to keep his questions to a minimum. If the student wished to consult a Professor about an Evaluation (grade), this could be arranged through his Room Counselor at the dormitory. The reasons would be explored as to why he wanted this information. Then, if it seemed desirable to permit him a personal conference with the Professor, the latter's Research and Grant Application Schedule would be consulted and the student fitted in at the first opportunity.

Once every two weeks all students working in a Program would assemble in a special room for a Motivational Lecture to be delivered by the Professor in charge of the program. The lecture would be given over a closed Telelecture System and graduate student Telelecture Monitors would be present for workshop-type panel discussion of how the Programmer's talk had stimulated the students' desire to learn. Students were not expected to take part in these discussions. The Dean then wished the students well in their college careers, and Oscar joined a line of 14,000 students waiting in front of Data Processing and Coding, an old fashioned flat-topped building with a sculpture resembling an iron tree in front of it. There they received their programs and schedules for the R-I Units and Oscar filled out 647 forms which would be encoded on punched tapes and used by Social Organizations, the Information and Automobile Registration Office, and by Public Relations, Alumni Relations, Fraternity Relations, Saga Relations, Family Relations and seventeen other offices.

Oscar's next stop found him at the Recreational and Cultural Center. He was assigned to membership in the Twice-a-year Ira Allen Religious Discussion Group, made a Second Alternate in the UVM Sugar Tree Ski Team, and given a Chartreuse Lane Series IVM card. These assignments were made on the basis of his test results; and he did not quarrel with them, although he was somewhat disappointed not to get the Orchid Series since Lieberforce and his Electronic Violins were to be on that series along with the Nairobi Pan-American Philharmonic.

Oscar's last schedule appointed that day was at the Fees and Scholarship Facility which was next to the Williams Science Museum where laboratories of Physics, Chemistry and Biology were preserved just as they used to be in the middle of the century before Reinforcement Psychology had been applied to Higher Education. At Fees and Scholarships Oscar turned in his check for $10,000 to cover the first installment of tuition and 86 different fees. He was given a metal identification stamp which he was to use thereafter on all cards, checks, tele-questions, and the like, instead of his name.

That night Oscar had trouble going to sleep. He had attended the Freshmen Listen and Social Mix at which recordings of school songs were played and their significance explained by counselors while the students experienced appropriate emotions through brain stimulators attached to their scalps. At the Mix he was assigned Helen Long-sleeves F-8765, a rather vivacious girl, for a companion. They were introduced by a member of the Sculpture Society, an honorary senior organization that acted as sponsors of Preliminary Day Social Events. Helen and Oscar found much in common since their serial numbers differed only in the final digit, but somehow Oscar felt that the evening with Helen lacked challenge.

Indeed, the entire day had been vaguely disappointing. Perhaps that test had been correct. He needed to discover himself. He would have to discuss that problem with his counselor at this next interview. He knew they could help him. College, he decided, was going to be fun.

NEW CHEVELLE!

BY CHEVROLET

The kind of go—t or V8—you'd expect from one of Chevy's great highway performers. Come on down and drive it.

The kind of comfort you'd expect in a large interior. Come on down and sit in it.

The kind of fresh styling—inside and out—that makes it the year's smartest surprise. Come down and stare at it.

New Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Now—Chevy spirit in a new kind of car!

We built this one to do more than just stand around looking beautiful. Held its weight down in the 3,000-pound range. Then built four lusty engines—two sixes and two V8's—with output all the way up to 220 horses*!

And if that makes you think this is one frisky car, you've got the right idea.

You've also got a roomy car here. Yet its 115-inch wheelbase keeps it highly maneuverable in traffic and very easy to park.

With its Full Coil suspension, it's got a ride that reminds you of the Jet-smooth kind the way it muffles noise and cushions bumps.

And the fine hand of Body by Fisher craftsmen shows up beneath this one's suave good looks, too.

Sound good? There's more. Like the fact that Chevelle comes in three series with eleven models—convertibles, sport coupes, sedans, wagons, even Super Sport models with front bucket seats. Like the fact that (and see if this isn't one of the nicest surprises of all) the new Chevelle comes at an easy-to-take price!

Like to hear more? The listening's wonderful at your Chevrolet dealer's—and so's the driving.

French Film To Be Shown

For the benefit of those students of 19th century French literature who found the 500 pages of "Le Rouge et le Noir" by Stendhal somewhat tiresome, the French department offered the film on December 5 as a convenient but not intended expedient;

I found in this case, however, that expediency is not always the best policy. The many nuances that Stendhal gives in his analytical approach to "Le Rouge et le Noir", that are so important to a thorough understanding of the characterization are impossible to convey in any film of reasonable length. Thus, at the onset, we are already at a disadvantage.

"Le Rouge et le Noir" is the story of Julien Sorel, an ambitious young man who intensely admires Napoleon, and had he been born fifteen years earlier he would have been a soldier with the ambition to rise to general - hence "le rouge - the Red." But with defeat of Napoleon, Julien's chance for success was much better in the clergy where one could now rise to bishop and have even kings at one's feet - thus "le noir - the blacks". Julien is not calculating but when opportunity arises (as when women in high places fall in love with him) he takes advantage of the situation and lets it carry him where it will - he is not cruel in this - he falls in love - or so he thinks. However, like the romantic heroes before him, he is primarily concerned with himself and cannot really love. Many of his romantic dreams do, mostly by chance, turn into reality, but in the end they defeat him. However, Julien, faced with a death sentence, lives up to his romantic ideals and dies bravely and almost willingly.

This is only the barest outline but sadly even the movie did not give even this much. Produced in France, it was pseudo Hollywood even to the point of casting the main character with Gerard Philippe, an excellent actor, but still, a French movie matinee idol, alas, no longer whinnying with us. A person seeing the movie for the first time would think that the extremely complex novel was nothing more than a love story. Not only did the producers emphasize the love aspect to a ridiculous degree, but they even added their own tidbits of what romantic love was supposed to be like, and eliminated the more important aspects. Another obvious fault, though it added somewhat to the enjoyment of the film, was the novel's conversion into a comedy. Formerly poignant and revealing scenes were characterized by a humor not entirely subtle. We laughed when we were supposed to think!

However, for those romantic hearts in the audience, and I'm sure we were quite numerous, "Le Rouge et le Noir" lived up to our ideals and its faults were only realized after a second thought.

criterion by which the world - your future employer - can judge you. The purpose of this voyage of self-discovery is to provide facts for your guidance. Whatever you do, you will be wise to recall that any shortcomings you discover in this way can be rectified. They are not final. When you find where you fall short you must correct the situation. No one is inferior at everything. There is something each of you can do well. It does not make sense for you to think only in terms of your weakness rather than in terms of your strength. But it does make sense to know what is weakness and what is strength in setting out to get a job. Certainly, you cannot expect other people to accept you until you first accept yourself.

Suppose you take a sheet of paper and draw four columns. Head the first column PERSONALITY TRAITS; the second, GOOD; the third, AVERAGE; and the fourth, POOR. After each trait check the proper column. Probably no two people would list these traits in the same order or agree completely. However, in my opinion, the following partial list is a good start: 1) Ability to get along with people; 2) Dependability; 3) Initiative; 4) Capacity for hard work; 5) Resourcefulness; 6) Enthusiasm; 7) Facility at expression; 8) Ability to take criticism; 9) Co-operativeness; 10) Self-confidence; 11) Honesty; 12) Stick-to-it-ness; 13) Responsibility; 14) Creativity; 15) Empathy; 16) Competitiveness; 17) Attractive personal appearance; 18) Friendliness.

The matter of personal appearance is frequently misunderstood. It means neatness, cleanliness, appropriateness of clothing. It means good manners. It means a voice that is neither a mumble nor a roar, that speaks clearly without shouting, that is pleasant to listen to - but not all the time. An someone once said, "Best remain silent and be thought a fool, than open your mouth and remove all doubt". The most fascinating conversationalist is still the one who is the best listener.

You may wonder where to begin in making an analysis of your general qualities. The following questions might shed some light on the matter: 1) Do you prefer to work with people or things? 2) Do you enjoy handling tools, working things with your hands? 3) As a youngster, did you make trades with others - and so forth? Did you get the best of the bargain? 4) Which of your abilities receives the most praise? 5) For which characteristics or habits do people criticize you? 6) Have you ever been chosen for positions of leadership? 7) Have you sought or avoided positions of leadership? 8) Which courses have you enjoyed most? Disliked most? 9) Do you like working with figures or doing detail work? 10) Do you find it easier to express yourself in writing or in speech? 11) What kind of work experiences have you had and what have you learned from these experiences? 12) Where do you see yourself at this point in your life? With these questions as a starting point, you should be able to learn something about your general tendencies. After you have made a careful analysis of yourself, you had better check it against the observation of the people who know you best. Above all, do not try to gloss over your shortcomings while you are trying to arrive at a truthful estimate of yourself. It is like cheating at solitaire.

In conclusion, I would like to pass on this observation that one of our chief problems today is not a lack of the right men; it is that the right men are often in the wrong places of that - as is most probable - their best capacities have never been tapped and are not being used at all. That is the history of too many men and women. The chief trouble lies in the whole haphazard approach to job hunting. People are prone to say to themselves, "This isn't just what I want, but it will do until I can find something else". They overlook the fact that the longer they wait the more difficult it is to get into their chosen field. The time to find a suitable job is when you start. If you begin by drifting, you may continue to drift.

Being in an uncongenial job leads to incompetence, and that leads to being fired. Few young people have the courage to do the thing they want to do. A great deal of snobbery is displayed by people in regard to selecting an occupation. "It is all right to have a profession," according to many parents, "but it is not suitable to have a trade". A lifework, too often, is selected entirely on the social acceptability of the occupation instead of on the ground of the individual's aptitudes for the occupation. Then too, parents and friends attempt to influence the final decision. "Your father was a doctor", they say. "Therefore, you must be a doctor." They do not stop to consider that the son may not have his father's aptitudes or that he has no interest in medicine. That, they think, does not matter as long as "he gets ahead".

But it does matter. Perhaps in the long run, it matters more than any other factor in his life.

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY

If you have been reading this column - and I hope you have; I mean I genuinely hope so; I mean it does not profit me one penny whether you read this column or not; I mean I am paid every week by the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes and my emolument is not affected in any way by the number of people who read or fail to read this column - an act of generosity perfectly characteristic of the makers of Marlboro, you would say if you knew them as I do; I mean here are tobaccoists gray at the temples and full of honors who approach their art as eagerly, as dewy-eyed as the youngest of practitioners; I mean the purpose of the Marlboro makers is simply to put the best of all possible filters behind the best of all possible tobaccos and then go, heads high, into the market place with their wares, confident that the inborn sense of right and wrong, of good and bad, of worthy and unworthy, which is the natural instinct of every American, will result in a modest return to themselves for their long hours and dedicated labors - not, let me hasten to add, that money is of first importance to the makers of Marlboro; all these simple men require is plain, wholesome food, plenty of Marlboros, and the knowledge that they have scattered a bit of sunshine into the lives of smokers everywhere; if, I say, you have been reading this column, you may remember that last week we started to discuss Christmas gifts.

Do you know someone who is interested in American history?

We agreed, of course, to give cartons of Marlboro to all our friends and also to as many total strangers as possible. Today let us look into some other welcome gifts.

Do you know someone who is interested in American history? If so, he will surely appreciate a statuette of Millard Fillmore with a clock in the stomach. (Mr. Fillmore, incidentally, was the only American president with a clock in the stomach. James K. Polk had a stem-winder in his head, and William Henry Harrison chimed the quarter-hour, but only Mr. Fillmore, of all our chief executives, had a clock in the stomach. Franklin Pierce had a sweep second hand and Zachary Taylor had seventeen jewels, but, I repeat, Mr. Fillmore and Mr. Fillmore alone had a clock in the stomach. Some say that Mr. Fillmore was also the first president with power steering, but most historians assign this distinction to Chester A. Arthur. However, it has been established beyond doubt that Mr. Fillmore was the first president with a thermostat. Small wonder they called him Old Hickory!)

But I digress. To get back to welcome and unusual Christmas gifts, here's one that's sure to please - a gift certificate from the American Chiropractic Society. Accompanying each certificate is this winsome little poem:

Merry Christmas, Happy New Year,
Joyous sacro-iliac!
May your spine forever shine,
Blessings on your aching back.
May your lumbar ne'er grow number,
May your backbone ne'er dislodge,
May your caudal never dawdle,
Joyeux Noel! Heureux massage!

Cats Take Two From Maine 60-59, 75-51

Ralph D'Altilla, veteran Vermont cager, goes up for a quick two points against Dartmouth. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

The UVM Catamounts swept a pair of ball games from the Black Bears of the University of Maine last week. Placed as the Yankee Conference underdog, the Vermonters showed unbeatable teamwork that was missing from last year's squad.

The first game on Friday night was a real thriller. Sharp-shooting on the part of sophomores Layne Higgs and Milt Goggans kept the Cats within winning distance. Higgs, from Barre, Vt., the team playmaker and defensive star, was not only high scorer but had innumerable assists. Goggans tore the backboards apart with 20 rebounds.

In the final period, the Cats were down by a few points. Then, coach Fuzzy Evans put veteran Chuck Click into action. The dead-eyed senior put six quick points thru the hoop. These points proved to be the deciding factor in the victory.

Saturday afternoon, the cagers completely outclassed the Bears, romping by 24 points. Once again, Higgs was top scorer with 17 points; Goggans had 16; Captain Dave Strassburg and Ralph D'Altilla hit for 12 points. The defensive prowess of the Cats proved to be too much for the usually sharp-shooting Bears.

Vermont now sports a 3-0 record, with a 2-0 record in Yankee Conference Standings.

Rappa's Roundup

By Richard Rappaport

The number one sports story on the UVM campus thus far this year is the early success of the basketball team. UVM has surprisingly captured its first three contests, defeating Dartmouth and Maine twice. In addition to the Cats fine all-around play, the Cats have been steadily improving, as indicated by their decisive triumph over Maine, Saturday afternoon, 75-51, after narrowly winning their initial two contests.

This successful beginning can be attributed to a number of factors including teamwork, hustle, and the rapid development of the two sophomore starters, Layne Higgs and Milt Goggins.

Thus the situation this season is quite different from that which prevailed last season. When that team graduated there was a great deal of pessimism in many quarters concerning the actual ability of this year's team, and its prospects for the current 1963-64 campaign, but thus far many of these doubts have been quelled. While the squad's natural ability is not great, the members have compensated for this by teamwork and fine shooting. Much of the credit for success must go to the steady play of seniors Dave Strassburg and Chuck Glick, and to junior Ralph D'Altilla whose hustle, especially underneath the backboards has been of considerable help. However, the majority of praise must be given to sophomores Layne Higgs and Milt Goggans for their outstanding play.

Higgs has already demonstrated that he is probably one of the best guards ever to play at Vermont, having displayed his ability as an all-around ball-player with few noticeable weaknesses.

While Higgs has been exhibiting his all-around ability at his guard position, Goggins has been a tiger off the backboards at center, snaring a considerable number of rebounds including an amazing 20 in the opening contest against Dartmouth.

While the outlook for this year's basketball season is now definitely brighter than was anticipated before the Cats opening game, it must be remembered that UVM has played the weakest part of its Yankee Conference schedule thus far, and will be engaging much tougher opponents in the near future. Thus it will be impossible to ascertain a true indication of the Cats ability until they have met such powerful teams as small college power, Belmont Abbey, state series rival St. Michael's College, and Yankee Conference opponents Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Dartmouth Tops UVM Swimmers

Saturday, Dec. 7, Vermont's first formal swim team traveled to Dartmouth to meet the Dartmouth Frosh. The team arrived in time to see the Dartmouth Varsity beat Williams (Last year's New England Champs) and so it seemed that the stage was set.

Dartmouth won the meet against Vermont by a score of 62 to 33. However this does not mean that they ran away with the meet. The Vermont squad consistently took second and third places.

The 200 yd. Medley Relay was won by Dartmouth in 1:52.7.

The 200 yd. Freestyle: 1. Van Orden (D), 2. Pigozzi (D), 3. Davis, (V), 4. Kendell (V) 2:08.7.

50 yd. Freestyle: 1. Hayes (D), 2. Buss (V), 3. Dalrymple (D), 4. Mills (V) 24.0.

200 yd. Individual Medley: 1. Gross (V), 2. Stevens (D), 3. Hall (D), 4. Bicknell (V) 2:26.4.

Diving: 1. Lamb (D), 2. Anderson (V), 3. Gredick (V), 4. Horsford (D) 46.03 pts.

100 yd. Butterfly: 1. Stewart (D), 2. Gross (V), 3. Chambers (D), 4. Kendell (V) 58.9.

100 yd. Freestyle: 1. Hayes (D), 2. Buss (V), 3. Erickson (D), 4. Mills (V) 53.8.

100 yd. Breaststroke: 1. Lewis (D), 2. Nixon (V), 3. Miller (D), 4. Morgan (V) 1:13.8.

200 yd. Freestyle Relay: was won by Pietsch, Fromer, Mills, and Glotzner of Vermont, 1:42.4.

Six pool records were set in the New Dartmouth Pool during this meet. The defeat did not dampen the team's spirit. Sunday morning and Sunday night they practiced for next Wednesday's meet with Norwich. Both Varsity Captain, Chuck Kendell, and Frosh Captain, Pete Gross, are fine leaders and with their help and that of Coach Less Leggett Vermont will sink Norwich on Wednesday.

First Indoor Track Turnout Poor

by Frank Gullotti

The University of Vermont launches its second varsity indoor track team against Bowdoin on Feb. 15, but the prospects of having an outstanding season are slim. The main reason for this is the extremely poor turnout of qualified athletes. Out of 140 freshmen men who claim previous track experience only 15 have reported for practice. The varsity turnout is not much better.

Archie Post will be relying primarily on hard work and a few returning vetrans. The strong point of the UVM trackmen is the sprints. Deane Kent and Al Brown are the top sprinters on the squad and Larry Perlmutter is a promising sophomore. Bill Mullhern, captain of the trackmen, is a strong quarter miler and is expected to have his finest season. After the quarter mile race, UVM is in bad shape, for we don't have an outstanding distance man. Hope lies in Mike Morrell, sophomore Dick Bass, Henry Pitaniello, and Walter Stowell who could prove to be the big distance man. Pete Weiss is the number one hurdler, but will be unable to compete in the season opens, due to his participation in Kake Walk. Don Mayland, an all around performer as a freshman last year, will run both the high and low hurdles.

He is the squads outstanding pole vaulter. Mr. Post feels that the Cats can have a successful mile relay team if the boys really work hard. He'd like to form a squad of runners for that event, but as yet his plan has not materialized.

The field events are centered around the extremely strong discus event and the pole vaulting of Mayland. In the Discus there is Ken Burton who plans to break the state record in both the discus and the javelin. Backing up Ken are Nolan Induni, Bob Murray, Pete Stickney, and Bill Thurber. Nolan Induni is the number one shot putter on the squad and George Oelzy is taking over the chore of flinging the 35 lb. Hammer. Tom Whittier joins Oelze in the hammer throw. The high jump again is left to Nolan Induni with Don Mayland, Larry Tuxbury and Charles Grutman also working at the jump. Carl Frattini is the number one broad jumper, but is currently representing the Cats on the hardwood. He is joined by Grutman and Perlmutter.

The outlook is not to bright for a successful season, but hard work and determination could prove to be an equalizer for the poor turnout.

Hockey

Chatter

by STINKY

I guess that twelve years really wasn't too long to wait after all. This was the consensus of opinion of approximately 3,000 spectators who filed out of Gutterson Field House last Saturday night. With all due respect to the brilliant minds of the engineers of M.I.T. - their skating ability left much to be desired. This, however, failed to dampen the spirits of the very anxious hockey fans - they came to see a Catamount victory and they weren't denied.

The 8-0 score doesn't really indicate the over-all power of the Cats in this fray. They had a complete territorial edge in play throughout the contest, as they outshot the visitors 51-20. If it wasn't for the brilliant Goal-tending of M.I.T. capt. Joe Kirk, the score could easily have been in double figures. Our Offense was so domineering that the puck was hardly in our defensive zone, and the majority of the Engineer's 20 shots on the UVM goalies, Capt. Tony Russo and Bobby Sausville, were from outside the blueline.

The eight goals that the Cats whipped into the net were fairly equally distributed. The first line of Stevenson, Uihlein, and Barrett were responsible for two goals. Second line center "Laddie" Cook banged one in, while the third wave registered one a piece from Paul Ryan and Kenny Sausville. The goal by Sausville at 9:29 of the third period was the prettiest of the night. Kenny was perched right in front of the M.I.T. net when he received a perfect centering pass from hard-working Artie Garvin, and he easily deflected it past the prone M.I.T. netminder.

had two goals while Bill Dunn had one score and two assists. Both of these freshmen were outstanding, as were the other members of the blue-line squad. Tim Twomey was exceptionally brilliant - exciting the crowd frequently with his rink-length rushes. Twomey has since been moved up to center by Coach Ruffer to take advantage of his speed. Ozzie Swett was another brilliant performer for the Cats, although he had no goals to show for it.

There was, however, a major problem that confronted the Cats throughout the game, and that was their frequent trips to the penalty box. Eleven Catamounts were banished, and at two minutes a piece this meant that UVM was short-handed for more than one full period of hockey. If this happens against some of the better teams on the schedule, I am sure that we won't be so lucky in keeping the opposition scoreless.

Coach Ruffer's pucksters are on the road this week-end with games at M.I.T. (Friday night) and U.N.H. on Saturday afternoon. The team should have little trouble disposing of the Engineers once again - and if they keep their sticks and elbows down they should hit double figures. New Hampshire will be another story completely. This is definitely the toughest team the Cats will have to face this year. The Wildcats are by far the best in the Yankee Conference, and play a very good schedule which includes some of the top teams in the East. This is a very large obstacle for the young and inexperienced catamounts to overcome so early in the season, and it could prove disastrous. I will be making the trip to Durham, N.H., with the hope of being incorrect.

Votey Hall Will Open Late In Feb.

KEEP OUT!

Votey Hall, the newest addition to our growing campus, was supposed to open its doors Monday. But instead there were signs on them simply saying, "KEEP OUT, employees only."

So, instead of experiencing the thrill of attending classes in modern classrooms, engineering and math students endured the dingy surrounding of East Hall, the "old" Engineering Building, the not-as-dingy Waterman Building, the Allen Chapel and other buildings.

We have been assured by a reliable source that this ultra-modern building will open its doors by the end of February.

East Hall To Go

Votey Hall, UVM's new engineering building, will not be opened for classes until late February because of delays on the part of the contractor. The final inspection date, the day on which the contractor and architect check a list of essentials which the building must have, has been postponed until February 13.

Although most of the heavier equipment is already in the building, there is still a great deal of lighter equipment that the grounds department must move in. The building is completely air-conditioned and contains many ultra-modern facilities.

With classes located in Votey Hall, East Hall will be demolished at the conclusion of this semester's classes. The proposal to replace the campus eyesore with trees and a reflecting pool will provide quite an improvement to the area if it is carried through.

Kake Walk Tickets Go On Sale Feb. 11

STUDENT AND GRADUATE SCHOOL SALE

The student and graduate school ticket sale will be held Tuesday, February 11, in the Waterman Cafeteria beginning at 7:30 p.m. Admission to the sale will be by student identification cards only. In order to make the drawing as fair as possible the committee has prepared a list of all students attending the university and has deleted the names of all ineligible students. The name drawing will begin precisely at 7:30 and student identification cards must be presented in order to obtain tickets. Only two tickets may be purchased by a student at the drawing. Enough tickets are available so that each eligible student will be able to obtain tickets. The purpose of the drawing is for preference of night and choice of seats.

FACULTY AND MEDICAL SCHOOL SALE

The faculty and medical school sale will be held Monday, February 10, from noon until 5:00 p.m. in Room 211 Waterman Building. Faculty members desiring tickets must present the ticket request confirmation slips sent to them by the committee.

JAZZ CONCERT AND BALL TICKETS

Jazz concert and ball tickets may be purchased at the University Book Store and Val Carter's Record Store beginning Monday, February 17. Tickets may also be purchased at the door for these two events.

POPS NIGHT AND PENNY CARNIVAL

The 1964 Pops Night and Penny Carnival, the preliminary event to the 67th Kake Walk, gets under way at 6:30 on Saturday, February 15, at Burlington's Memorial Auditorium. The Penny Carnival, a fund raising event sponsored by the Women's Recreation Association, features many games of skill, chance and fun. Later in the evening, the Pops Night program will get under way as the first of several skits introducing this year's candidates for the King and Queen of Kake Walk is presented. This year four fraternities and four sororities will present their choices for the weekend's royalty during the Pops Night festivities.

All bids for the Kake Walk coat check and program concessions must be submitted no later 4:00 p.m. Friday, February 7, 1964. Bids received after the deadline will not be considered.

The nightmare of the traffic situation is one thing which plagues the majority of the events taking place at the Patrick Gymnasium. With a capacity crowd at both nights the difficulties of getting to and from the Gymnasium are extreme. For this reason the Kake Walk directors strongly urge the students to take advantage of the other parking areas in the immediate vicinity of the gym. The Redstone parking facilities are especially convenient since there is only a short walk from the dorms to the gym.

Moms For Frats

The University of Vermont's administration has just announced another edict directed towards the fraternities on campus. It seems that from now on it will be university policy that every fraternity have a house-mother living and eating in the fraternity. The instituting of house-mothers on campus, the university feels, will instill in the fraternity man a sense of values and an appreciation of cleanliness.

All that can be said now is that The CYNIC hopes that we have clean fraternities in every definition of the word, and that we would welcome any comment on this extraordinary ruling by the university's administration.

Scope Presents Foreign Film

"Ikiru," a widely-acclaimed Japanese film classic, will be presented on Friday, Feb. 7 at 8:00 in Patrick Gymnasium. General admission will be 50¢ (25¢ for students). Sponsored by S.A.'s Scope, the film has been lauded as "a masterpiece" (Time Magazine) and as "one of the world's great pictures" (New York Post).

"Ikiru" relates the story of man's search for the meaning in life as illustrated by the adventures of a man given a short time to live. The talents of Japan's Akira Kurosawa (director) and Takashi Shimura (leading actor) combine to produce a meaningful cinema message.

"The Hole," an animated cartoon film short, will be featured on the same program. A satirical take-off on U.S. nuclear policy, the short deals wittily with the possible complications of a "massive retaliations" program.

Seniors Receive ROTC Rank; Jzyk Becomes Brigade Com.

The ROTC Senior Banquet was held last Tuesday night at the Lincoln Inn, for the distribution of permanent rank to the Seniors. Col Robinson presented rank to the following cadets:

Cadet Col. Ted Jzyk, Brigade Commander;
Cadet Lt. Col. Fred Weisberg, Brigade Executive Officer;
Cadet Lt. Col. Paul Toussaint, 1st Battalion Commander;
Cadet Lt. Col. Roger Kline, 2nd Battalion Commander;
Cadet Lt. Col. George Fraser, 3rd Battalion Commander;

Cadet Maj. Robert Carley
Cadet Maj. Richard Dutton
Cadet Maj. John Ouesnel
Cadet Maj. Martin Dlugatz

The following men were made company commanders:

Cadet Capt. Abbott Brayton
Cadet Capt. Gerard Commier Jr.
Cadet Capt. Bob Davidson
Cadet Capt. Bill Davidson
Cadet Capt. David Keller
Cadet Capt. Richard Perkins

Lane Series Date Changes

Folksinger Theodore Bikel will appear in The University of Vermont's Lane Series on March 23.

He was originally scheduled to appear in November but the concert was postponed because of the death of President Kennedy.

Jack Travithick, executive secretary of the Lane Series, announced two other program changes. "Man for All Seasons," scheduled for Feb. 25 has been rescheduled for Feb. 26. Also, The Vienna Symphony Orchestra will appear on March 6. This concert is listed correctly on the tickets but not in the Lane brochure.

Cadet Capt. Jim Richardson
Cadet Capt. Tom Rowland
Cadet Capt. David Strassburg
Cadet Capt. Douglas Barrett
Cadet Capt. Bill Bedford
Cadet Capt. Steve Cohen
Cadet Capt. Charles Glick
Cadet Capt. Charles Masick
Cadet Capt. Bob Opaleski
Cadet Capt. Bob Russo
Cadet Capt. Chris Schönwalder

The Guest Speaker was Col. John T. Bankus, who retired after 25 years active service in the U.S. Army.

International Club Formed

A new organization has been added to the list of clubs on campus. It is the UVM International Club. It was formed and had its initial meeting last December.

According to its president, Renzo Nylander, the purpose of the club is to "provide a structure for a wide range of academic, cultural and social activities." The membership is open to all students and faculty interested in foreign affairs.

At the initial meeting club officers were chosen and it was decided that the International Club would be an on-campus organization.

The officers elected were:

President - Renzo Nylander (Sierra Leone); Vice President - Martha Caldwell (of the UVM Home Economics Department); Secretary - Mary Gonyer (Vermont); Asst. Secretary - Diana Aranda (Chile); Treasurer - Ashwin Mehta (India); and Asst. Treasurer - Betsy Juels (New York).

Lane Series Advisory Committee Named

Members of the Advisory Committee of the University of Vermont's Lane Series have been named for 1963-64.

The committee is composed of 15 members, five from the faculty, five from the student body, and five townspeople. The President and Dean of Administration are ex-officio members. Nominations for membership are made by the Working Committee of the Lane Series and are for one-year terms. Members are appointed by the president of the University.

The Advisory Committee

meets with the Working Committee at least twice each year with an informal agenda aimed at providing an opportunity for the Advisory Committee to suggest ideas, offer criticisms, evaluate the current series, and to make recommendations.

Newly appointed members for 1963-64 are:

Townspeople — Frank Balch, Edwin H. Blakely, Frank Goldstein, Prof. Dorothy Hunt, and Gordon T. Mills.

Faculty — Paul Aschenbach, department of art; Miss Betty Bandel, department of English; Jack E. Little, director of resident instruction, College of Agriculture and Home Economics; Milton J. Nadworny, department of commerce and economics; and Morris Simon, department of political science.

Students — Cathy C. Craig, Ridgewood, N.J.; John Dancos, White River Junction; Robert J. Kelmowitz, Middletown, N.Y.; Laurence K. Koff, Burlington; and Carol F. Lange, West Caldwell, N.J.

Ex officio members are Dr. John T. Fey and Dean Lyman S. Rowell.

UVM Cynic Joins Proposed VCNA

Vermont may soon have a college newspaper association, announced Associate Editor Jeffrey Alderman, of the Middlebury "Campus."

The association would be called The Vermont College Newspaper Association (VCNA) and would be comprised of all colleges in Vermont who care to join.

So far the University of Vermont (Burlington), Green Mountain Junior College (Poultney), Vermont College (Montpelier) and St. Michael's College (Winoski) have indicated their interest in such an association. Alderman says he expects to hear from Norwich University (Northfield) soon.

Editor of the Burlington Free Press Gordon Mills will serve as advisor to the association, according to Jeffrey J. Joseph, Editor-in-Chief of The Campus.

"The purpose of the association is simple," commented Alderman, "it is to promote a better understanding of current college issues and ideas. A secondary function is to create a vehicle for airing the various theories on how a college newspaper should be run."

The idea for the creation of the VCNA came last year when The Campus noticed that news from other colleges in Vermont was infrequent and inadequate.

In the fall of this year Alderman sent out letters to all the colleges in the state inquiring about the possibilities of setting up an association to facilitate better communications between the schools.

Support for the idea was "strong" according to Alderman who indicated that plans for the first constitutional assembly of the VCNA "are in the workings." The assembly is expected to be held at Middlebury sometime in March, though a definite date cannot be announced until the founding members agree upon a date.

The Campus has formulated a basic outline of the association's purposes, but "it's a general outline and needs to be talked over and expanded by the association members," said Alderman.

So far the immediate purposes of the association will be to provide a better system of exchanging news, and set up a forum for discussion of college newspaper techniques and goals.

"The simple exchange of papers is not enough to broadcast the ideas and activities of one college to another," noted Alderman.

Some of the long range plans for the VCNA are the creation of a combined annual publication by all members that would include the best editorials, features, columns, cartoons and photographs published during the year.

The VCNA may sponsor in future years an annual newspaper conference for all schools who wish to attend. Such a conference would include a guest speaker, panel discussions and a newspaper workshop.

"These latter ideas are ideas for the future," said Alderman. "Our main aim is to get the VCNA organized and functioning."

Orchestra Plans Concert

The University of Vermont Orchestra will begin rehearsals next week for its spring concert in April.

James Keene of the music department, conductor of the orchestra, has scheduled the first rehearsal for Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The April program will include Brahms' Academic Festival Overture, the C Major Symphony by Bizet, and Beethoven's First Piano Concerto. Mrs. Norma Holmes Auchter will be featured in the last work.

It's June And January At The Alumni House

It was June in January—at least around the UVM Alumni office last month. With Commencement—and class reunion time on the horizon the typewriters were pounding out letters to the grads, the mimeographing machine was producing voluminous class messages, and the addressograph machines and postage meters were speeding the mail to the 18,000 alumni all over the world.

Each class is cordially invited to return to campus during those reunion days in early June each year. But special emphasis is placed upon the 5-year classes and in particular upon those celebrating the 1st, 10th, 25th, and 50th anniversaries of their graduation from UVM. This year's spotlight will be on the Classes of 1963, 1954, 1939, and 1914. (Some of these classes get started two and three years ahead of time, with class agents contacting everyone and a gift fund being started for eventual presentation on their big day.)

Already, letters are being received from members of these classes and the Omnibus Class (those who have been graduated for over 50 years) telling of their plans to attend the reunion, health permitting. The spirit and loyalty of these grads of so long ago is always a source of pleasure to those who work at the Alumni office. When a member of '05

(pronounced "ought five"—NEVER "oh five" or "hundred five") sees a familiar face from "ought three", the embracing and joy of old friends is something to see!

It's always most encouraging, too, to see those return to reunions who've been out of college but a short while. It's a good indicator of an active, loyal alumni over the coming years.

And so, as the Alumni office typewriter looks out over the cold UVM campus and watches the fur-clad, face-masked, Cossack-hatted students rushing to those early morning classes, it snugly spells out words like June and moon and croon and soon!!

Mixes & Matches

(Mixes and Matches will return next week as a regular feature. Please submit all bits of interest to the CYNIC office. Fraternities and sororities please submit all info at one time. The deadline is Monday morning.)

THE INNER MAN

College is fun and frolic and fulfillment—except for one melancholy omission: we don't get to enjoy Mom's home cooking. (In my own undergraduate days, curiously enough, I did not undergo this deprivation; my mother, a noted cross-country runner, was never home long enough to cook a meal until her legs gave out last Arbor Day.)

But most of us arrive at college with fond gastric memories of Mom's nourishing delicacies, and we are inclined now and then to heave great racking sighs as we contemplate the steam tables in the campus cafeteria. Take, for an extreme example, the case of Finster Sigafos.

Finster, a freshman at one of our great Eastern universities (Oregon State) came to college accustomed to home cooking of a kind and quantity enjoyed by very few. Until entering college, Finster had lived all his life in Europe, where his father was an eminent fugitive from justice. Finster's mother, a natural born cook, was mistress of the haute cuisine of a dozen countries, and Finster grew up living and eating in the Continental manner.

He arose each morning at ten and breakfasted lightly on figs,

My mother was a noted cross country runner hot chocolate, and brioche. (It is interesting to note, incidentally, that brioche was named after its inventor, perhaps the greatest of all French bakers, Jean-Claude Brioche (1834-1921). M. Brioche, as we all know, also invented croissants, French toast, and—in a curious departure—the electric razor. Other immortal names in the history of breadstuffs are the German, Otto Pumpernickel (1500-1848) who invented pumpernickel and thus became known to posterity as The Iron Chancellor; the two Americans, William Cullen Raisin (1066-1812) and Walter Rye (1931-1932) who collaborated on the invention of raisin rye; and, of course, Hans Christian Andersen (1805-1875) who invented Danish pastry.)

But I digress. Finster, I say, breakfasted lightly at ten a.m. At eleven a.m. his Mom brought him his elevenses. At twelve she brought him his twelveses. At 1:30 she served his lunch: first a clear broth; then a fish course (porgy and bass); then an omelette; then the main course—either a saddle of lamb, an eye of sirloin, or a glass of chicken fat; then a salad of escarole; and finally a lemon soufflé.

At three p.m. Mom served Finster low tea, at five p.m. high tea, and at ten p.m. dinner—first a bowl of petite marmite (she trapped the marmites herself); then a fish course (wounded trout); then an omelette of turtle eggs; then the main course—either duck with orange or a basin of farina; then a salad of unborn chicory; and finally a caramel mousse.

And then Finster went off to college, which reminds me of Marlboro Cigarettes. (Actually it doesn't remind me of Marlboro Cigarettes at all, but the makers of Marlboro pay me to write this column and they are inclined to get surly if I fail to mention their product. Mind you, I don't object to mentioning their product—no sir, not one bit. Marlboro's flavor is flavorful, the filter filters, the soft pack is soft, the Flip-Top box flips, and the tattoo is optional. Marlboros are available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states of the Union. Next time you're in the U.S.A., try a pack.)

But I digress. We were speaking of Finster Sigafos who went from Continental dining to dormitory feeding. So whenever you feel sorry for yourself, think of Finster, for it always lifts the heart to know somebody is worse off than you are.

© 1964 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro, can't say whether European food beats ours, but this we believe: America's cigarettes lead the whole world. And this we further believe: among America's cigarettes, Marlboros are the finest.

LINCOLN ROCKWELL AT UVM?

The CYNIC has received a letter from Lincoln Rockwell, Commander of the American Nazi party, requesting a chance to speak at UVM. He is willing to come free of charge, if we will allow him to speak. To quote him, "I am much too grateful for the opportunity to present our views in the free market place of ideas, to ask for a fee from students."

He is planning to tour New England during February and perhaps the first part of March. In his letter he states, "Should your school be interested in a presentation of our philosophical and political positions, I should be most happy to oblige and can assure you that the propaganda that we preach unjustified 'hate', 'bigotry', and gratuitously insult innocent persons is not true." And then he closes his letter, "In the dedication to our White Christian Constitutional Republic."

We have learned that various organizations on campus would be willing to sponsor Mr. Rockwell. We are, however, interested in student reaction to inviting this controversial man to Vermont. With this in mind, we urge the students to let their feelings be known.

KEEP AN OPEN MIND

We also urge students to keep an open mind and to disregard any personal prejudice they may have toward this man or what he stands for. This is not any easy thing to do when so many of us have preconceived ideas on matters of racial discrimination and bigotry, but it must be done if one wants to validly formulate an opinion on the simple point of his coming or not.

By no means do we support this man or his fanatic philosophies, but we do maintain that he should be given a chance to speak if there is interest among the University community. In all probability, there will be a great furor (no pun intended) among the various groups and the coffee shop set on campus if he comes. But if he comes he might arouse a person who really never thought about the racial problem, or stimulate the apathetic student who is by choice unopinionated to open his eyes to the racial facts of life. This alone is reason enough for his appearance. Plus he puts on quite a colorful show, Nazi uniforms, swastikas, and the whole bit.

A GIRL IN R.O.T.C.!

It finally happened. A girl was enrolled for the Military Science course offered as part of the R.O.T.C. program at UVM.

Freshman co-ed, Alexa Rose from Forest Hills, New York, received her enrollment card last week with an added course on it--M.S. 2. She attended the first class and was told that there must be some mistake. There was.

Just last September, the CYNIC praised the efficiency of the new IBMized enrollment procedure. We now have to laugh a little at the electronic box with its flashing little lights and countless punch cards that speeds up enrollment.

It seems that this sexless Wizard of Oz can't tell the difference between male and female. Numbers have no sex and that's all students are to a computer. Any human enrolling officer, no matter how old he was, would never have assigned Alexa to the R.O.T.C. course.

TUITION TAX BILL LOSES, 48-45

The proposed special income tax reduction to parents whose children are in college was defeated by a 48-45 roll call vote Tuesday.

This bill was not only opposed by the Johnson administration, but more important to UVMers, by the Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges. The main objection was that all savings would be nullified by tuition increases to compensate for tax credit.

After all the fine print was read, your parents would only have been able to deduct $485. of the $1500. tuition next year.

Letters To The Editor Old Grad Speaks

To the Editor:

In a recent visit to the University campus, I have for the first time viewed the so-called sculpture in front of the Library and donated by the Class of 1962.

As an old alumnus, I would be false to the history and traditions, as well as the spirit of the institution, and unmindful of what it means to its many graduates, if I did not express my utter opposition to such a travesty in the name of Art. The series of figures leading up to the final composition leaves one cold.

The final comparison with a tree is an offense to Nature. Such a fantastic structure might be suitable in a museum devoted to unusual and bizarre productions, but as an approach to a beautiful and dignified Library building, it is the height of presumption.

The University of Vermont Library deserves something more in keeping with Vermont environment and traditions. I request that this comment be published in the University paper.

Morals At MSU

-(I.P.) -- Controversy over the role of universities as "guardians of student morals" has elicited the following comment from Dean of Students John A. Fuzak of Michigan State University:

"Regardless of any questions of morality, any type of community has to have ground rules to operate in order that it can carry on its activities. At Michigan State, it is obvious we have residence halls to house many of our students, and that rules are necessary if we are to exist in any kind of order.

"However, the philosophy at MSU is that there is a responsibility to the student which extends beyond the classroom. Many times I believe the abandonment of all regulations results simply from a lack of gumption, of courage to take a stand on what is right and what isn't right."

Dean Fuzak emphasized that he believes some rules do become outmoded and need constant re-examination. "At this University, we are engaged in this. We are examining the appropriateness and effectiveness of rules in areas like drinking and off-campus housing. This re-examination process is a continuous one.

"However, there are some standards which do not change, some things which cannot be rationalized away. We have no right to abdicate our responsibility by saying that because rules are violated by some people, there should be no attempt to enforce them. Moral standards are a broad area covering far more than sex. For example, the ethical code of honesty is violated in many areas of our society. Does that make it right?"

Commenting on the Harvard situation, Dean Fuzak said: "We might as well be honest. There are plenty of places at this university for couples to enjoy a certain amount of privacy on dates. However, entertaining in bedrooms generally is not sanctioned in the rest of society. I do not believe it is the function of a university to provide students with a situation which they would not find anywhere else in society. Students must know this type of privilege would be abused, as it apparently has been at Harvard."

THE SCEPTIC

Sownynge in moral moral vertu was his speche,
And gladly wolde he lerne and gladly teche.

--- Geoffrey Chaucer

This is the first issue of The CYNIC in about two months, and somehow the university has managed to survive. So much for the editor's argument that he has to print UVM notices and news releases. Far from being an indispensable organ of information, The CYNIC is scarcely noticed by most students. In fact, the best way to keep a secret is to print it in The CYNIC. Down with The CYNIC.

The announcement that the frat clubs would have to provide themselves with resident daddies or mommies next year was expected to add to the remarkably small number of sheep currently making the rounds of the local sheepfolds. Unfortunately, the requirement seems to have backfired. The kiddies can't decide what frat to join until they see what the substitute mommy looks like. Some want placid, chubby, loveable old dears up to their wrists in cake flour (oops -- kake flour); others hold out for thin, tight-lipped, be-spectacled American Gothic types. There is also a persistent rumor (denied by the administration) that these mothers make their boys take Saturday baths.

One of the suggestions for public service on the part of The CYNIC is that it make a survey of the major courses offered by the university and publish the results, as the Trinity College (Hartford, Conn.) paper did a few years ago when it rated all the professors. Naturally The CYNIC won't do this, because it's so much easier to print UVM news releases and copy material from other school papers. (The funniest example of this was the editorial indignantly denouncing "Takers": the editorial itself was taken from another newspaper.) Anyhow, here am I, throwing myself into the breach, announcing the easiest course in A & S.

It's a sociology course. Surprised? The ghoulish affair started with several classes during which the teacher read to the class from a book wittily named Work. Then he played records for about 3 classes, tried lecturing, gave it up, and devoted 7 more days to the records. At this point my informant's notes, not surprisingly, get rather foggy: for November all they record is that on one day the teacher read to the class from Playboy. After Thanksgiving vacation the teacher apparently pulled up his socks and got to work; for 2 days he asked questions. The answers were unsatisfactory, so for several days the students read aloud in class -- a paragraph apiece. Then the teacher tried lecturing again; the first sentence of his lecture plagiarized the first sentence in the introduction to the textbook. The last 2 classes were devoted to slides of a Greek village -- sometimes right side up. The final exam consisted of 9 multiple choice questions followed by 91 true-false. It had been prepared for the other section of the course, however, so it was no cinch.

Hearing about this final roused my interest in final exams at UVM. I put an ad on the bulletin board in Billings, but some righteous soul removed it; about the only exam I got comes from Public Speaking. It's certainly not difficult; it's strikingly ignorant. One question announces that "the ten most persuasive words in the English language . . . Are, You, Easy, Money, Save, Love, New, Discovery, Proven, and Guarantee." Surely anybody with both hands free could spot the defect in this one. All the questions suffer from the built-in incoherence that results when illiterate people try to talk importantly. Here's the first: "How will you go about becoming acquainted with the basic wants and motives of the audience toward a particular subject which you have chosen to present?" Well, my basic want

THE INTERVIEW

Practically no one is hired without first talking with the employer's personnel representative. All your devices in seeking a job - your letter of application, use of personal contacts, canvassing of business firms - simply lead you to the interview during which the personnel man will pass judgment on your claims to employment.

At this time in the Placement Office and lasting until spring vacation, some 125 employers will be on campus to talk with you seniors. For those who have registered, this Recruiting Period represents a unique opportunity, in that the employer is coming to seek you here. After graduation, if you are still unemployed, you will then be put in the position of having to seek out the employer at a considerable cost in time and money to yourself.

I feel it is important that you understand that these campus interviews are merely considered to be preliminary or screening interviews. Each interview is normally of thirty minutes duration. The personnel representative usually known as a College Recruiter will decide on the basis of what he sees and hears whether or not to invite you, with all expenses paid to his home office for further consideration and possible employment. Thus, these interviews should not be taken lightly.

In an article such as this or even in a book, it is impossible to discuss or impart advice on interview taking that will cover every aspect of the subject. Each of your interviews will be different. Each must be approached with a seriousness of purpose. In essence you are very much the seller and he is the buyer.

Jobs are won or lost in those few precious moments from the time you enter the interviewer's office until you leave it again. Dress and manners are exceedingly important. Always remember that the interviewer's opinion of you must crystallize in a few moments time. You will have little opportunity to correct your mistakes. To spoil your chances by thoughtless things which may be offensive is the height of stupidity. For example, do not smoke unless you are asked to. Do not attempt to be familiar; the recruiter may consider it as impertinent. You can be easy, well poised, and pleasant without impairing your dignity. A good rule to follow is to always take your cue from the interviewer. You will avoid more pitfalls in this way than any other.

Sooner or later during the course of your interview you will be asked two important questions. They may come directly or indirectly. Some recruiters prefer to be pretty blunt; others would rather have you do your own talking and draw their conclusions. But these two questions they must have answered to their own satisfaction: First: What prompted you to take this particular interview? Second: What can you offer? Pass these two and you will be off to an excellent beginning.

In order to answer the first question, you must know something about the type of business and the potential employer in particular. It is not to be expected that you are applying for a job as an authority on the business. It does not seem too much to expect, however, that you have read the Company Recruiting Literature or discussed job opportunities with people in the industry. To simply say that because you are obtaining your degree in electrical engineering and therefore want to work in electrical engineering is not enough. If you do not know anything about the Company, obviously you cannot talk convincingly about it. The more you know in advance, the more likely you will be to discover what you have that the Company can use. And that, remember, is your best selling point.

Above all, do not try to bluff. You are talking to someone who knows the business. The lie is an unpardonable sin in business. It may be about a trivial thing, but it undermines faith in a man or woman's reliability and trustworthiness in more important matters. Speak sincerely and stick to the truth.

As to the second question - what can you offer the Company - this involves the whole problem of experience, special training, and aptitudes. Because for the majority of you this will be your first full time job, it is best to realize that, as a rule, you can offer little. But employers know this as well as you do. About all you have to offer them is health, intelligence, education - anything, of course, that you can list in the way of former employment.

If you have worked summers, sold a product, held part-time jobs, or paid part or all of your way through the University, do not forget that such an experience is an asset. It tells your prospective employer that at least you know what work is. The fact that you have proved self-reliant and enterprising is in your favor. The way in which you have supported yourself through college may indicate the qualities of ingenuity and enterprise for which business is always looking.

The usual interview falls pretty much into a straight question-and-answer pattern. Here your ability to answer quickly and intelligently is of tremendous importance. If your answers are vague and confused and contradict each other, you will lose out. If your confusion is due merely to nervousness, the professional recruiter will recognize and allow for the fact. Some of the best candidates are extremely nervous. On the other hand, if you have prepared yourself for the interview and have the answers to questions at the tip of your tongue, you will be able to overcome your nervousness far better than if you find yourself tongue-tied.

In conclusion, I feel you must enter each interview with a determination that you are going to get that particular job. It may be that you have other irons in the fire. It may be too bad if you don't. It may be, also, that you are about equally torn between graduate school, employment, and the military. But do not let the interviewer suspect it. Above all things, do not say that you have come in to look over the possibilities of the job, that really you are undecided as to what you want to do, and you strongly suspect that you would like to work in some other line, that you are looking around. This is the world's worst approach. Convince yourself, at least to the point where you can present a good story, that this particular job is the one you want. Then go after it.

Patzer Made NIC Advisor

Roland D. Patzer, Dean of Men at the University of Vermont, has been elected educational advisor of the National Interfraternity Conference.

Patzer became Dean of Men at Vermont in the fall of 1961 after having served at Kent State for nearly 10 years, the final two as the Assistant Dean of Men, Director of Student Activities, and advisor to fraternities.

A native of Ohio, Patzer is a graduate of Kent State. He is chairman of the Legislative and Public Relations Committee of the Vermont Personnel and Guidance Association, is chairman of the Vermont Student Personnel Association, and is chairman of the Committee on Fraternity Relations of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

UVM Offers Radio-TV Workshop

The University of Vermont offers a variety of radio programs through the cooperative effort of its Public Relations Office and the student operated Radio-Television Workshop, and the fare is carried by more than a dozen radio stations throughout Vermont.

Oldest and most popular is probably "Spotlight UVM," a 15-minute weekly program which records the varying sights and sounds of the life, events and personalities of the Vermont campus. The program is produced entirely by students, and is carried by 14 radio stations. Students also do a daily campus news program which has been featured on Burlington Radio Station WJOY for the past several years.

New this college year are two additional programs, one called "Campus Conversation," which is carried by nine radio stations, and which features general discussion by University faculty of topics of current or general interest. Host is Larry Van Benthuisen, director of Public Relations. A weekly program of UVM sports news carried by 10 radio stations, is a second new program. It is hosted by Larry Kimball, assistant director of Public Relations.

Also new this year is a half-hour musical program called "Sunday Showtime," hosted by Dr. Frank Lidral, chairman of the department of music, and carried by Burlington radio station WVMT.

The programs and their schedules follow:

SPOTLIGHT UVM is carried by WSNO, Barre, Saturdays at 2:30 p.m.; by WTSA, Brattleboro, Sundays, 4:45 p.m.; by Burlington Radio Stations WDOT, 6 p.m. Sundays; WJOY, 6:30 p.m. Saturdays; and WVMT, 6:45 p.m. Saturdays; WSKI, Montpelier, 6:45 p.m. Wednesdays; etc.

CAMPUS CONVERSATION is carried by WVTN, Bennington, 11 a.m., Mondays; etc.

CAMPUS NEWS is carried by WJOY daily at 9 p.m.

SUNDAY SHOWTIME is carried by WVMT Sundays at 12:30 p.m.

UVM SPORTS NEWS is carried weekly at varying times by the following stations: WDOT and WJOY in Wurlington; WSKI, Montpelier; etc.

Prof. William I. Lewis is in charge of radio-television programming for the Public Relations Office, and serves as advisor to the Radio Television Workshop. He is also host for the "Living and Learning" program seen the first, second and fourth Monday of every month at 5:45 on WCAX-TV, Channel 3.

In addition to the above radio and TV programming offered by the Public Relations Office, the University's Agricultural Extension Service provides a variety of radio programming and the Monday through Friday program, "Across the Fence," which is seen on WCAX-TV at 1 p.m.

The University also offers an Evening Division course, through the program, TV University, Saturdays at 1 p.m. on WCAX-TV.

Note Bene

Enrollment in the Reading Center, for Spring Semester is now open. Applications for enrollment are available in 46 Waterman, or in Office of the Dean of the College of Education and Nursing, 143 Waterman.

The classes are limited to fifteen participants, and every attempt will be made to fit the classes to the schedule of the individual student.

Deadline for application is Feb. 13. Applications will be processed on a first-come-first-served basis.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (CPS) — No student at the University of Illinois will be required to take Reserve Officers Training (ROTC) beginning Sept. 1, 1964. The announcement was made by Illinois Board of Trustees President Howard W. Clement last month.

The board acted on the recommendation of Champaign-Urbana that the university replace compulsory military training for male freshmen and sophomores with voluntary basic programs in Air Force and Army ROTC. The Navy program is already on such a basis.

Judy Miller-KW Secretary

A young lady from Winooski is handling the secretarial chores for the 67th annual Kake Walk at The University of Vermont.

Judith Miller, a senior at UVM, is being kept busy these days as preparations are finalized for the oldest winter carnival in the United States. Kake Walk this year falls on Feb. 21-22.

Judy is majoring in business education in the College of Education and Nursing and plans on teaching following graduation.

She is a young woman who believes in keeping herself busy at all times. In addition to being Kake Walk secretary, Judy is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority where she is song leader, is a member of the Ariel (yearbook) typing staff, is a Town Girl Panhellenic representative, and has served on the freshman orientation committee.

Judy is a dean's list student and received the scholarship pin from her sorority last spring for having the highest scholastic average.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armand E. Miller of 48 Lapoint St.

toward Public Speaking should be clear, anyhow. It's not surprising that the test has this heading:

Do not ask any questions about this exam. If the questions are not clear, everybody is in the same boat. If the answers are not clear, we will find out from your paper.

Sounds fierce (and apologetic), doesn't it? You'll be happy to hear that their bark is worse than their bite. For the fall of '62, the mark spread for such courses averaged as follows: A 5.9%, B 24.3%, C 37.1%, D 23%, and F 9.7%. For Public Speaking, however: A 6.8%, B 33.5%, C 52.9%, D 6.3% and F 0.5%.

Still, it's not surprising that this exam -- and many others -- ends with the stern command, "Turn in this exam with your exam booklet." It would be embarrassing if anyone found out. Many schools, including the best ones, keep (in the library, not the frat clubs) files of examinations for all courses, sometimes going back ten years or more. Why doesn't UVM? Is there any reason except those involving laziness or incompetence?

Casual readers will assume that this column is a blast at Sociology and Public Speaking. Not really, I assure them. Stop and think for a minute. In this world you get what you pay for. Teachers in Arts & Sciences are the lowest paid of all teachers at the University, which means that they're paid very little indeed, even compared with other state universities. Nor are they rewarded for improvement. I know teachers who have been here for five years, during which they taught full time and well and also completed their theses, were awarded their Ph.D.s, and were promoted to asst. prof. As a result of a new degree, a promotion, and five years' service, they now make $500 more than instructors without Ph.D.s hired this year. Don't be dismayed, therefore, when you get perfunctory lectures and machine-scored finals. The university isn't. (In fact, a sophomore English course and English I were given their finals on the last day of exams; the administration never guessed that the teachers couldn't get the tests into machines and out within 24 hours.)

UVM Grad Cited In Viet Nam

Word has been received at the University of Vermont that a 1960 graduate was recently decorated for gallantry in action in Viet Nam.

First Lieutenant Richard T. Miller, who was released from active duty on Christmas day, was awarded the first Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal during ceremonies in Viet Nam earlier in December. It was his second medal. The cluster is given for each additional award of the medal after the initial presentation.

Miller was cited for "meritorious achievement while engaged in aerial combat support of ground forces of the Republic of Viet Nam."

He received his A.B. degree in botany and his ROTC commission in June of 1960 and reported for active duty in January of 1961 with the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas. He was assigned to Viet Nam in January of 1963.

At Vermont, he was a member of Sigma Phi fraternity. His wife, Gail Marlene Steele, was also a member of the Class of 1960. The Millers have two children, Elizabeth Ann, 5, and Richard II, 2 1/2. He and his family are visiting his parents in Nashua, N.H.

WSGA Scholarship Chairmen Named

The Women's Student Government Association council at the University of Vermont has named 15 women to serve as scholarship chairmen of their respective living units for 1963-64.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: STANTON PEEL

With Southern New England Telephone in New Haven, Stanton Peel (B.S., 1962) handles important engineering assignments for the Current Plans Office.

His projects have been as short as a matter of minutes, as long as several weeks. They have ranged from studies such as he made on the telephone facilities layout around Saybrook and Middlesex Junction, Connecticut, to the very comprehensive package he put together on Weather Announcement Service. Even though he's been with Southern New England Telephone less than a year, Stanton Peel has already established an enviable reputation for his thoroughness and keen analytical ability.

Stanton Peel, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

HOCKEY REVIEW

The UVM Hockey Team posted a 9-7 overtime victory over Boston State College on Jan. 11. Coach Ruffer's team outskated the Boston State players during the decisive overtime before a capacity crowd at the Gutterson Field House. In their last game with U. Mass., they also went into overtime only to tie 5-5.

Marshal Stevenson scored 3 goals, for a "hat trick". Another star, Frosh Ozro Swett, scored 8 points in the last three games. Coach Ruffer feels that the scores would have been better if the games had not been so close to exams.

SPORTS BULLETIN BOARD

Ski Film

On Tuesday, February 11, instead of presenting the Annual John Jay Ski Movie, which will be coming next November, the UVM Outing Club is sponsoring "The Mount Everest Story - 1963." The account of the Mount Everest expedition will be narrated by Dr. Maynard Malcolm Miller, the scientist in charge of the Geological Program on this outstanding expedition.

Dr. Miller, assisted by color slides, will present an account of the expedition beginning with its departure from San Francisco in January, 1963 and carrying through the long march across Nepal from Kathmandu to the upper reaches of the Khumbu Glacier and Everest's summit by the South Col and West Ridge routes. In this recounting of the adventure, he tells the story of the expedition's unusual scientific program carried out between 16,000-25,000 feet. Comments are also made on the human side of the expedition relating to the psychological and physical stresses as its members climbed glaciers and rock ridges into the rarified air of the world's highest mountains.

Tickets ($1.25 for adults, $.75 for children under 12) for "The Mount Everest Story" may be purchased at the University Store, Wood's sports store and at the door of the Patrick Gymnasium where the movie will be shown.

Post Honored

Archie Post, the University of Vermont's dean of coaches, has been named to the board of directors of Sigma Delta Psi, the national honorary athletic fraternity.

Post is rounding out his 35th year as track and cross country coach at his alma mater. Last June he was elected to membership in the Helms Athletic Foundation Hall of Fame in Los Angeles.

A 1927 graduate of Vermont, Post lettered in track and basketball as an undergraduate and was captain of the hoop squad his senior year.

His cross country teams have twice won or shared Yankee Conference crowns and his 1958 team won the New England title. Since World War II, his track squads have captured all but two State championships.

Dance Workshop

Tryouts for new membership in the Dance Workshop will be held on Feb. 18 and 25 at Southwick ballroom from 7:00 P.M. - 9:00 P.M.

Membership is open to men or women, faculty, staff or students of UVM with some background in dance.

Dance Workshop meets every Tues. evening from 7-9 P.M. at Southwick under the direction of Miss Norma Albert, Dance Instructor, Women's Department of Physical Education.

Swimmers Split

by Mel Ravitz

The University of Vermont Swimming Team triumphed over Norwich on December 11, and lost a close one to Plattsburgh State on January 11.

In the meet with Norwich, Vermont swimmers captured firsts in: the 400 yds. medley relay, the 50 and 100 yds. freestyle, the 200 individual medley, the 200 breast and the 200 back stroke. Frosh stars - Gross, Mills both had dual wins. These firsts along with the seconds and thirds lead to the 54 to 41 victory. Norwich will try to avenge this defeat on Friday of Kake Walk.

On Jan. 11, Vermont traveled to Plattsburgh State to meet their first varsity swim team. Due to the low number of men enrolled there, Plattsburgh is permitted to use their frosh. The meet resulted in a heart-breaking defeat by a score of 49 to 45. Has UVM been permitted to use its fine frosh talent the meet would have ended in victory.

At present the team is hard at work training for this Saturday's meet with McGill in Montreal.

Cats Reigned For 57 Days

The short but glorious reign of Vermont's basketball team as leader of the Yankee Conference has finally come to an end. The Cats remained on top of the league standings for 57 days, following their initial success against Maine on December 6, finally relinquishing this position to Connecticut. The Huskies gained possession of first place "breaking the Vermont bubble;" by defeating Vermont 79-46 last Saturday night at Patrick Gymnasium.

While occupying first place, the Cats defeated Maine twice and Massachusetts once in Conference play, recording a 3-0 slate. The overwhelming loss to Connecticut, although it did drop Vermont into second place in the league standings, did not mathematically eliminate the Catamounts from a chance of capturing the Conference title. However, it did provide a notice that the Cats have a rough road ahead of them, with their prospects of ultimate success growing quite dim.

In order to win the Yankee Conference crown and thus receive the automatic bid to the NCAA regional playoffs, Vermont must regain its winning touch by defeating New Hampshire on Thursday and Rhode Island on Saturday. A loss to either team would give Vermont its second loss and would remove the Cats from serious contention for the Conference title.

Thursday's contest appears to be a toss-up as the Cats face the finest New Hampshire squad in many years. The Wildcats, led by Jim Rich, have demonstrated their strength by their solid victory over Massachusetts and their narrow one point loss to Rhode Island.

After Thursday's away contest, the Cats return home to face the hot-shooting Rhode Island Rams and their outstanding All-New England ballplayer, junior Steve Chubin, who scored 33 points against Vermont in a game at Patrick Gymnasium last season. On their way to another fine season, the Rams have defeated such renowned teams as Memphis State and St. John's.

The prospects for these two games are not very bright. The Cats, led by their fine pair of sophomores, should be able to defeat the Wildcats in a closely fought game. Their 6'4" center Milt Goggins averages 16.5 rebounds and 14.9 points per game, and 6'2" guard Layne Higgs is right behind him with 14.8 points a contest.

The outlook for Saturday night is quite different. The Rhode Rams appear to be much too strong for the Cats, but if the cats play the type of game they did against U. Mass., the Rams might be upset.

Basketball Review

Catamounts Play Best Game And Upset UMass 98-85

by H.S.

With a capacity crowd at Patrick Gymnasium, the UVM basketball squad took the floor against the "Redmen" from the University of Massachusetts last month. When the fans saw the size of these Mass. "boys" - 6'7", 6'6", 6'4" - they wondered how long it would be before the game would become a runaway. U-Mass took the opening tap and drove in for an uncontested lay-up. People sat back to wait for the slaughter. But the scrappy, fighting Vermonters never gave up. They battled and hustled and when things got rough, they fought harder, hustled even more and at the final buzzer the score read UVM 98 - U-Mass, -85.

This was the best game of the season for Vermont and possibly the best game any UVM team has played in the last few years. It was a complete team effort. 6-4 Milt Goggins and 6-2 Ralph D'Altilia fought the big men from Mass. off both boards, coming down with crucial rebounds. Both contributed offensively with fine close-range shooting and tip-ins. Goggins ended up with 17 points and D'Altilia had 20.

Sophomore Layne Higgs played a tremendous game. He led the fast breaks with his adept dribbling and precision passes. He poured in 23 points through the hoop and many of them were his typical long-range jump shots from beyond the key. Captain Dave Strassburg played a fine all around game, helping pull down rebounds and scoring clutch baskets. It was his 18 points in the second half which enabled UVM to take a substantial lead in the closing minutes. Charles Glick, a senior from Far Rockaway, utilized his experience, good court knowledge, and even temperament to keep the varsity from committing various fundamental errors common to a young and easily excitable club.

In the first half, Vermont shot 57% from the floor. Their hot hand plus their rebounding enabled them to take a 47-45 half-time lead. In the second half the Cats shot an amazing 65 percent. UVM's shifting man to man defense battled up U-Mass' big men and forced their guards to make erratic passes. On offense UVM broke through U-Mass' zone defense by moving the ball and cutting toward the hoop. Their patience payed off as evidenced by the swish of the nets as the ball soared through the basket.

The following night saw the Catamounts tussle with a fine St. Lawrence squad. UVM still showed signs of the previous night's superb performance. Midway in the first half they took an 18-17 lead and from this point on they never trailed. The final score ended up in Vermont's favor 85-75. Milt Goggins once again was outstanding, scoring 23 points and coralling 17 rebounds. Layne Higgs has 19 points and many fine assists. Sharp shooting reserve Ken Spalter from Brooklyn hit on 5 of 7 shots and wound up with 12 points.

After this game the Cats were inactive for three weeks as the ballplayers took their final exams. They ended this moratorium on Feb. 1, when they met a massive University of Connecticut team. UConn's huge height advantage and Vermont's extended layoff caused them to suffer a resounding defeat 79-46. In this game UVM looked rusty and sluggish and did not resemble at all the fine unit that had taken U-Mass. Nothing, however, can be taken away from the Huskies from Conn. They have an excellent team with fine outside shooting and strong rebounders.

UConn, now leads the Yankee Conference with a 4-1 record with Vermont at 3-1 and the University of Rhode Island at 2-1 in second and third place respectively. Vermont travels to Durham, New Hampshire on Feb. 6 to meet the University of New Hampshire in a Yankee Conference game.

Count Basie To Play At Ball

Highwaymen - Dizzy Gillespie - The Grandisons
To Be Featured At Kake Walk Jazz Concert

BALL COUNT BASIE

Kake Walk will be officially inaugurated with the Kake Walk Ball that will take place Thursday night. The students on campus will dance to the style-setting Count Basie and his orchestra. Basie has excelled in his ability to develop a unique style that is definitely all of his own. The improvisation of the group is especially renowned, but there always remains that "togetherness" that is essential for a good band. Basie accounts for his success when he explained in his own words:

Now--and this is the point I want understood most, if you don't mind--I wanted my fifteen piece band to work together just like those nine pieces did. I wanted fifteen men to think and play the same way. I wanted those four trumpets and trombones to bite with real guts. But I wanted that bite to be just as tasty and subtle as if it were the three brass I used to use. I, of course, wanted to play real jazz. When we played pop tunes, I wanted those pops to kick! Not loud and fast, understand, but smoothly and with a definite punch.

What more can one say except come and enjoy the music of a fine musician. The tickets are only $3.75. We were informed from a reliable source that there will be a jam session, the likes of which have never been heard before on this campus around 11:00 that night at the Ball. Lastly, of course, the high point of the night will be the crowning of the King and Queen of Kake Walk. At this time, the time and effort of some houses will be rewarded when their pride and joy ascends the throne.

JAZZ CONCERT THE HIGHWAYMEN

The Jazz Concert this year promises to be an excellent one. It might be incorrect to label the concert a jazz concert, for only one-third would actually fulfill such a category. Nevertheless, the performers are of the highest calibre. The first group to be presented will be The Highwaymen. This group of five young men were catapulted to fame with their recording of "Michael". Since then, they have recorded other best sellers including "Cotton Fields", "Well, Well, Well," and "Praetoria". They also have several albums. The Highwaymen have traveled all over the U.S. appearing in nightclubs, on University and College campuses, as well as on T.V. programs.

They began their career when they were honor students at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., Class of 1962, where they began singing folk music at their fraternity. They offer a fresh approach to the folk singing medium, and this is further enhanced by a large variety of instrumental accompaniment. Their vocal interpretations are varied, including several languages and dialects. We are sure that you will enjoy listening to them as much as The Highwaymen will enjoy performing for you.

DIZZY GILLESPIE

The second featured artist is Dizzy Gillespie. His unparalleled artistry on the trumpet, his genius for arranging, and his amazing showmanship have placed Gillespie's name with the timeless greats of jazz. Gillespie's style has evolved from the simple "bop" into a significant means of musical expression. But, Gillespie is still not satisfied. Probably he never will be. As a perfectionist, Gillespie is constantly seeking new ways to express his genius. And every time he experiments anew, another chapter in the history of contemporary jazz is written. If the concert is not really a true jazz concert, Dizzy will truly more than make up for it.

THE GRANDISONS

Our third group further broadens the scope of the jazz concert. The Grandisons are a young foursome who have spearheaded the influx of gospel singing. Only until recently had the public been able to hear religious expression as entertainment. The Grandisons have still managed to keep their singing "pure" without becoming commercialized. This group has traveled over a great deal of the country and has appeared in many campuses, night clubs, as well as T.V. shows. The effect of the Grandisons' exciting renditions on audiences

Directors Prepare For 1964 Kake Walk

The little pad of paper with descending numbers in the Kake Walk office is slowly approaching the end of its countdown. As of today, there are only 5 more planning days before Kake Walk descends on our electrified campus. The little white pad slowly, but surely ticked off the days as more and more people were caught up in the spirit of Kake Walk. School work ground to a halt, and a listlessness set in that resembles the calm before the storm. Well, fellow students, you will not be disappointed when that tempest does strike.

A TINGLING SENSATION

For those of you who have never seen Kake Walk before, it is an experience that you will never forget. For those of us who have seen it, the experience still causes a tingling sensation when that handkerchief is dropped and Cotton Babes booms out. But all of this would be impossible unless we had the dedicated people that we have to direct this great production. Very few people realize the tremendous amount of time that these people spend trying to coordinate this massive task. Who will we get to play for the Ball and the Jazz Concert? Who will cover our weekend in their magazine? What shall we do about the ticket situation? Where is this house going to practice their skit when another house was scheduled to be in the same place. Some jobs were trivial, some were almost impossible. Who will place what poster on what tree? How many trees are there on the main campus?

Does this person really belong to a fraternity? Who knows how to run the ditto machine? Who will write out all of the personal invitations? Who is chasing the secretary around the room? When can we get the pictures taken? The list goes on and on. The work seemed insurmountable, but our able directors, assistants, secretary, and advisors have come up with what promises to be another smashing success.

A NEW SYSTEM

This year's group of director's is especially a fine one. They have adopted a new system of selling tickets that has involved a great deal of time. Now will never know how many times the school directory was gone through compiling a master list of names of those students who are not associated with a fraternity or sorority. This was a painstaking job, but nevertheless, it was done, and the students will have benefited from this. Skit rules were revised and modified so that this aspect of Kake Walk would be improved. The thing that impresses me the most, however, is the cohesiveness and readiness to work on everyone's part. If there is a job to be done, it is done. It does not matter who does the job, as long as it is done. This fact shows indeed the fine spirit of this group of people. They are a dying breed on this campus. My hat is off to Fred, Dave, Carl, Steve, Carl, Ralph, Steve, Judy, Doc, and everyone else who is associated with this fine group that will give us so much pleasure next week.

Skits Introduce 1964 KW Royalty

An air of expectancy shrouds the campus in anticipation of this year's gala Kake Walk. Tonight is just the preliminary warm-up before the festivities proper begin. As is the case of each Pops Night, it is the tradition to introduce the candidates for the Queen and King of Kake Walk. This year, four sororities and four fraternities will present their candidates in their respective skits.

MARY LOUISE HOSKIEWICZ

Alpha Delta Pi Sorority this year will present Miss Mary Louise Hoskiewicz. Mary Lou is a junior from Springfield, Vt., and is a Spanish major in the College of Education. She hopes to become an airline stewardess before pursuing her teaching career. Her campus activities include Sophomore Aides, recording secretary of her sorority, and an office in a W.S.G.A. living unit.

LINDA SHARFSTEIN

Alpha Epsilon Phi proudly presents Linda Sharfstein as their candidate for Kake Walk Queen. Linda hails from Staten Island, N.Y., and is a junior in the College of Education and Nursing. She plans to be a speech therapist for children. Linda's activities include Freshman Orientation, Vermont Conference, social chairman of her sorority, as well as various other organizations.

SUSAN BENTON

year old senior whose major is Business Education. She plans to teach high school upon graduation in June. Susan's campus activities include the Ariel staff, membership in WRA, as well as being the sponsor of the Pershing Rifles and on the Court of the Military Ball.

PATRICIA RUSSELL

Pi Beta Phi's "Breath of Spring" is Miss Patricia Russell, a junior from Springfield, Vt., majoring in both French and English. Patty's activities include membership in Staff and Sandal, the junior women's honorary, W.S.G.A. House President, Pledge Supervisor of Pi Beta Phi, and co-chairman of the Homecoming Ball.

STEVE ABBOTT

Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity presents to you Steve Abbott of White River Jct., Vt., for your Kake Walk King. Steve is a transfer from Duke University and is now a junior majoring in Agriculture Economics. Steve's activities include Alpha Zeta, agriculture honor society. He is presently his fraternity's Rushing Chairman.

THOMAS CLARK

Delta Psi Fraternity presents Thomas Clark as its candidate for Kake Walk King. Tom, who comes from Readfield Depot, Me., is a senior majoring in Political Science. He is a two-year letterman of the ski team, captaining that squad in 1963. Tom was the recipient of the Outing Club Trophy for "Outstanding Leadership and Sportsmanship". Tom also holds the office of Senior Prudence at Delta Psi.

BOB MORSE

Sigma Nu is proud to present their candidate for Kake Walk King, Bob Morse. Bob is a senior from Burlington, Vt., majoring in Economics in the College of Arts and Sciences. Bob has been active in his fraternity's rushing program and has served as rushing chairman. On campus, Bob has served on the Freshman Orientation Committee. He is married to the former Stephanie Delfausse of Livingston, N. I.

HANK BURTON

The brothers of Sigma Phi royally present Hank Burton for your Kake Walk King. Hank, who hails from Springfield, Vt., is enrolled in the College of Technology, majoring in Mechanical Engineering. Hank's campus activities include being Sigma Phi's representative to the IFC and was editor of this year's I.F.C. rushing booklet. Hank is now the President-elect of Sigma Phi.

This concludes the presentation of the candidates for the royalty. We hope that you enjoy the skits, and what is more important, we hope that you will vote for your choice on Saturday, in the Billings Center. With Pops Night already set down in annals of our social calendar, we can now wait with great expectation for the actual walking accompanied with the strains of Cotton Babes. Yes, Kake Walk is here again.

TRANSISTORS CONQUER MAN'S LAST REMAINING OUTPOST OF ISOLATION

by Jeff Greenfield

(Editor's Note: Mr. Greenfield, editor of the Wisconsin Daily Cardinal, is currently in Southeast Asia as one of eleven members of the Asian Delegation of the United States National Student Association and the Institute for International Education.)

The transistor radio represents the final solution to man's inability to be with himself. Our society has managed to insulate man from the contemplation of his own dreary existence at home through television sets, tranquilizers, stereophonic phonographs, and other soporifics. His neuroses are coated with Muzak at his office. It remained for the transistor radio, however, to conquer the last gap separating man from total self-isolation.

My first contact with the New Breed, completely secure from the agony of self-awareness, came in high school. I was perusing some book or another in our library, when a steady tapping diverted me. Across the table a youth was staring into space, slapping the table and shaking his head. A hearing aid was plugged into his ear.

"Obviously a mental defect," I observed.

"Yeah, yeah," he confirmed, still tapping. "Crazy."

"That's the first step," I said encouragingly. "Recognition of your problem."

"What the hell ya tawkin about?" he asked (the high school was in New York City). He removed the ear plug, and I heard the earthy sounds of Fats Domino.

"How can you possibly listen to that stuff in the library?" I asked. "You're supposed to be learning something."

"Sure I'm learnin'," he said angrily and slipped the plug back in. "The noos is comin' on!"

The ultimate idiosyncrasy in portable tranquilization is the sports event. A goodly number of people have become so accustomed to being told what is going on in this world that their own facilities have atrophied. At football games, despite prohibitions on radios, scores of college-level adults are seen eagerly listening to someone tell them what's going on in front of them.

Transistors have another advantage, of course; they make it easier to annoy those who possess the requisite intelligence to think by themselves, or to converse with their friends.

The Student Union Terrace, surely one of the most delightful relaxation spots in the Midwest, is defiled daily by oafs who insist on showering others with their own mental pabulum.

(Transistors, by the way, are scientifically built to receive only rock and roll music — any time a classical composition is about to be broadcast the radio explodes.)

Someday a new Hitler or Stalin or McCarthy will gain control of a powerful radio station and begin broadcasting hypnotic programs to the transistorites. Within two weeks these dolts will be so brainwashed that the Republic will be doomed.

On the other hand, we may be doomed already. If we can't spend at least a few minutes a day with our own thoughts, the collective intelligence of the American people is at a dangerous level.

Peace Corps Test-Feb 24

The Peace Corps Placement Test will be administered on the University of Vermont campus for those who are interested in entering the Peace Corps. There are over 7,000 Peace Corps Volunteers now at work in 46 countries in Latin America, Africa, and Asia. About 5,000 more will go into training this summer. Among them will be teachers, liberal arts graduates, engineers, nurses, doctors, sociologists, and recreation workers. In all, Volunteers come from some 300 skill backgrounds.

Married couples are eligible if both can serve and have no dependent children. A college degree is not necessary in all projects. Volunteers receive valuable training and experience as they help the peoples of emerging nations fight poverty, disease, ignorance and hunger. If anyone is interested in sharing his skills in villages and cities, classrooms and hospitals and on farms all over the world, he can begin by taking the special On-Campus administration of the Peace Corps Placement Test. The test will be given at 4:00 p.m. February 18, Room 216 Waterman Building, University of Vermont.

For an application and further information, contact Testing Service, 234 Waterman Building, University of Vermont.

LIBERALISM IS BLOWING IN THE WIND

There seems to be an atmosphere of liberal thinking blowing in the wind around our fair campus lately. Nobody has yet voiced a strong protest to inviting the commander of the American Nazi Party, Lincoln Rockwell, to speak at UVM.

This is a credit to our institution and its students. How are we to discern good from bad if we are sheltered from the evils of the world? We are mature enough to not be contaminated by hate and fanaticism.

We all tasted the bitterness of racial unrest last semester. Our seemingly harmless Kake Walk holiday was the target for a minority seeking to right a wrong, a wrong that was not thought of as wrong by most. Yet, they had a right and were right. Most of us realized the moral issue at hand and the proper action was taken.

Again this is a credit to UVM. But let's not be naive. Racial prejudice, discrimination and hate exists at UVM, in Burlington, in Vermont, in the U.S. and in the world.

There is only one way to escape it. Never grow up; stay innocent as a child. But this is physically impossible, so we must face reality, not avoid it. Again we say, "let him come".

FROM HATE TO LOVE

Our thoughts now turn to love and the pursuit thereof in the up coming week. We are on the brink of the social high spot of the year - Kake Walk, a time when thoughts turn from academic rigors to a good time.

It's so easy to hate, and oh so difficult to love. We inevitably seem to get hurt, condemned or perplexed when we try to manifest our love. And what do most collegians love? Being red-blooded American males and females, we love sex, among other worthwhile pursuits.

The CYNIC has no right to invade any individual's sex life. There are enough social, religious, and parental pressures acting on this all important aspect of existence. We would, however, like to offer some friendly, yet cynical advice. Don't mistake sex for love.

Every year some impetuous young "lovers" get themselves "in trouble". This "trouble" then must be reckoned with. In most cases, everything turns out well, but in a few, lives are ruined.

Another, and more prevalent way of ruining lives will be in evidence. The mixing of alcohol and gasoline makes a deadly cocktail, and needless to say there will be a lot of mixing next weekend. Again we remind all UVMers to be careful.

Letters To The Editor

Students Speak On Rockwell

Know Who And What Your Enemies Are Visit Worthwhile

To the Editor:

In the Realist (See O'Hara, the CYNIC, Nov. 19) several months ago, there appeared an interview with George Lincoln Rockwell. Several subscribers cancelled their subscriptions, saying that by printing the interview the Realist, despite repeated disclaimers, tacitly endorsed Rockwell's line, and lent support to him by giving him a public forum (despite the fact that circulation was under 20,000 at the time, mostly among people who had no love for Rockwell).

In fact, however, the interview showed Rockwell to be the demagogue and fool that he is. The interviewer (editor Paul Krassner) asked obviously leading questions, and Rockwell stepped right into them. It would have taken a fool as big as Rockwell to believe him to be anything but sick after that interview.

Now that Rockwell wants to speak at UVM, the students here can get an unequalled opportunity to see this man in action. He is a rabble-rouser, to be sure, but hopefully the students at UVM will not be aroused, as his pet target, rabble, would be.

The arguments that are bound to be raised against his speaking here are themselves extremely narrow. To say that, while Rockwell didn't kill six million Jews, supporting the murders is just as bad, has some truth to it. But to say that he should not be allowed to speak here for that reason is not a valid argument. To deny a man his right to free speech because of his political or sociological views, perverted as they may be, is as undemocratic as many of Rockwell's own ideas.

Another argument is that, as intelligent as an audience is supposed to be, a rabble-rouser like Rockwell can still have a bad effect on them, is an insult to the intelligence of every UVM student. This man must be brought before the public as often as possible and be showed up for what he is: a sick man and a demagogue of the worst sort. If the people in the audience fall for this vicious material of his, then it shows a predisposition on their part for that kind of thinking, and keeping Rockwell away won't change their natural inclinations one bit. If he can persuade any decent number of people — more than the inevitable few who are sick enough to sympathize with him anyway — then I have vastly overestimated the intelligence of UVM's students, and we might just as well close shop, since a university should combat this type of inclination and gullibility. If, over the population as a whole, he gains any kind of following through his rabble-rousing, then the whole United States might just as well turn the government over to Rockwell right now, for our Constitution and the spirit behind it will be meaningless.

However, I have enough faith in the student body here, and in the United States, to believe that continued public exposure and debate with other speakers or with the audiences will spell Rockwell's undoing. (Even without the debate his line should be so repulsive as to make debate unnecessary.) For this reason I urge the students here to support an invitation to George Lincoln Rockwell to speak at UVM. And if that invitation is extended — as I hope it will be — I further urge the students to fight any and every attempt — and attempts will be made — to have the invitation withdrawn, either by those who extended it, or by some higher authority.

Only if you know what kind of fool Rockwell is can you effectively fight him and his kind, and only by exposure can you begin to know what he is like. One cannot combat an evil if he does not know what the nature of the evil is, even if he has an army to help him fight.

One final word. In the editorial on Rockwell it said, "Plus he puts on quite a colorful show. Nazi uniforms, swastikas, and the whole bit." A word of caution about this is necessary: that is no show. If a Rockwell should ever get powerful enough those same bodyguards who put on the show would be another Gestapo. For all the nonsense he preaches, Rockwell is dead serious, and his bodyguards are not for show. Those uniforms and those swastikas mean something vicious, and to think they don't is almost as bad as falling for Rockwell's perverted line.

In the interest of knowing who and what your enemies are and of self-preservation, let Rockwell speak!

Very truly yours,
Kim A. Boriskin

Non-Supporter

To the Editor:

I am not a supporter of the Nazi party by any means, but would be interested in hearing Lincoln Rockwell speak.

Sincerely,
Melissa Rich, '66

To the CYNIC:

It seems that the appearance of Lincoln Rockwell on our campus would be worthwhile for a number of reasons. It has been some time now since we were blessed with such controversial subjects as those presented in our Vermont Conference. An appearance of Rockwell would at least renew our university with contact from the outer world, even though this contact and his subject are considered radical.

Naturally, we have a number of students (only a few though) who would like to hear Rockwell, who would like to praise or voice opposition to his policies. Such an appearance would be good if for no other reason than to present "the other views toward life," for if life is not a mixture of contradicting views, our world would be quiet and subdued under its ashes of progress.

Perhaps most important, Rockwell's appearance could show the administration that we as students and future leaders of our country, are quite capable of listening to and questioning such fanatic views. Fear of violence or destruction to our virgin ears should not be feared in an institution such as ours.

C.L. Pride

Opinions Invited

To the Editor:

The Student Association and the CYNIC were the two organizations contacted by Mr. George Rockwell early this month with a request to speak here.

Ever since his letter arrived in my office I have been attempting to determine how students feel about having the controversial Mr. Rockwell speak here at UVM. Not one student has expressed emphatic opposition to his speaking here.

I personally favor George Rockwell's visiting UVM. Mr. Rockwell is an American citizen and the constitution guarantees his freedom to express himself as clearly as it guarantees yours and mine. As students we should be able and willing to hear every side of an issue. The more controversial the issue or the more controversial the individual presenting his views, the more we should listen.

I urge any members of the faculty or student body to make their opinions known to me as soon as possible so that when Student Association makes a decision either way, we may do so in a well informed manner.

Very truly yours,

THE SCEPTIC

Call me Fat-head; in last week's column, I objected to a certain type of course. This objection was intended to be a general one; unhappily, it has been understood as a direct slap at a particular course and teacher. More unhappily, it appears that many of the "facts" upon which my opinions were based are not true. Reaction to the column has made it clear that the course, used as an example, was properly conducted and that the teacher is, if anything, better rather than worse than the average. I can only ask that you consider me more fool than knave.

The foot that I placed in my mouth over Dean Patzer has now been joined by one labeled "sociology." The resulting position is quaint and conducive to meditation, but it makes typing difficult. Won't someone take over the column?

And that's not all, now that I come to think of it, in the fatal

And that's not all, now that I come to think of it, in that fatal column I also said that the frat clubs were suffering from a shortage of sheep. I have, since been visited by several highly irritable dependents who claim that this is simply not true. The frat clubs, they said, have all the sheep they need. I stand corrected.

S. Well, now what? Can you think of a topic for me? Something safe?

A. I think you ought to keep after the faculty. I know the students are glad to have you off their back for a while.

B. And there's lost more to say about the teachers, believe me. I heard about one in the English department, for example. He's so scary that half of the students who get put into his classes change their courses, run to the dean, or cry on their advisor's shoulder just to get out of taking him. They say he's...

S. You heard, they say. That's what trapped me last time. No, thanks—one more department head in this room and my head'll be decorating that fountain in the park. Besides, all that kind of stuff is your business, not mine. No matter how much I try to express the students' viewpoint, no matter how much I try to be individual and unofficial, it doesn't work. People still assume that I'm speaking officially, significantly, importantly—the Voice of the Faculty, you know.

B. Yeah, I suppose so. Well, I'd do it, of course, but I can't write. You know that. Besides, it'd get me in hot water with all my teachers.

S. As for the hot water, that's easy to avoid—just don't sign your name. It's a CYNIC tradition. Look at what-is-it, Phantom Phlashes? Phantom Strikes Again? Whatever it is, he never signs his name and nobody objects.

A. But he never says anything objectionable. Look how sore everyone got when you didn't sign yours.

S. Yes, but that's because my grammar was good—as good as the speech test's, anyhow. Apparently everyone said to himself, hey, this guy writes good, therefore this guy must be a teacher, therefore this guy shouldn't be criticizing us students.

B. Yeah, that's just about what they thought.

S. Okay, then, you've got it made. You say you can't write. If you haven't improved since freshman year, you're right. So you're all set. Just express yourself naturally and send the results to the CYNIC. All the readers will recognize that a student's talking to them and they won't get sore. And you can talk about lots of things that I can't.

B. Frankly, I don't trust your judgment very far. Look where it got you.

S. True. All right, then, don't talk about teachers—at least don't talk about specific teachers. Still, I do think you'd get away with it. You know, down at Yale they tell a booklet that rates every teacher in the school. So far as I know no one's ever gotten into trouble over it. But there must be lots of other topics. What do students talk about now? Politics? Foreign affairs? Religion?

A. Fanny Hill.

S. Well then, talk about Fanny Hill.

A. Are you kidding? In the CYNIC?

S. Why not? Remember the first issue last semester? There was some sort of inflammatory piece about modern sex morals "borrowed" from some magazine. No one made a fuss about it -- or even noticed it, so far as I know. Besides, Fanny Hill's respectable. It's even assigned in a course this sem...

B. In a course? Which one? The teacher must be crazy. Oh no, don't tell me you assigned it!

S. You recognized my death wish? No, it's not me... and I'll be at least hooked up to wild horses, if not actually pulled, before I'll tell who. As a matter of fact, I think it's a pretty good idea.

A. At least the students will do the assignment.

S. Maybe not. They're not just supposed to read it—they're supposed to think.

B. You're really down on students, aren't you?

S. You know, I'm really not. I think that kind of comment is just a reflex on my part. The bad ones—I mean the lazy ones, not the dumb ones—get under my skin, but the good ones please me and make me sad at the same time, because they get so little encouragement. But that's another subject—a topic for one of your columns.

B. After Fanny Hill, you mean?

S. Or before—Kake Walk's coming, and Fanny'd be an appropriate topic.

B. Not for me. I'm no columnist.

A. Me neither.

S. Well (turning to the audience), someone ought to do it, now that the job's open.

4. Refreshments

This meeting is open to all students.

From Smiles To Sneers

To the Editor:

Every CYNIC brings another dose of the glib style and acid commentaries of Mr. O'Hara, the Skeptic. His tongue-in-check hyperbole sometimes brings a smile to my lips, and though his column never tells the whole story or sets forth a balanced judgment, I recognize the art of the satirist and the seeker of controversy, and benignly permit him his license. But with his latest effort, the curl on my lips has turned from humor to contempt. And, I am sure, like many others, I feel it necessary to protest against the flagrant injustice he has committed and to attempt to undo at least a portion of the harm he has done.

When one turns from attacking problems in general terms and instead disparages the sincerity and competence of an identified individual, albeit identified in a sly manner, the sources of information and standards of proof employed ought to be strictly scrutinized.

Mr. O'Hara's evidence, according to his own statement, was (1) entirely second hand from (2) a single informant and (3) that informant's admittedly "fuzzy" notes. On that questionable authority Mr. O'Hara insinuated that when the instructor read from a book or played a recording in class, it was done from laziness and incompetence, and not as a legitimate presentation of examples for sociological analysis. Perhaps, unlike the Skeptic, the instructor in question felt it fairer and more effective to present his audience with evidence upon which to form independent judgments, rather than simply to summarize the position or phenomenon he was subsequently going to discuss, analyze, or criticize. In addition to this attack, the columnist also felt free to make derogatory insinuations about the quality of the instructor's teaching style. Certainly a matter as open to conflicting evaluations as that required a more convincing basis of criticism than the Skeptic's bit of hearsay evidence.

In both these criticisms, as well as in others which I shall not detail, Mr. O'Hara, by not making further inquiry, clearly flaunted the dictates both of logic and of decency in printing his innuendoes. I trust that the university community will take the charges of the Skeptic for what they really were, far more a reflection upon the character of the columnist than on the competence or honor of the instructor he maligned.

To the Editor:

The Sports Car Club of Vermont wishes to invite University personnel, faculty and students who are interested in sports cars, to attend its meetings, to participate in its events; also to become members of the Club.

It is not generally known that the objectives of the S.C.C.V. are - 1. to encourage the development of competition between owners of sports cars; to foster competitive events.

2. To educate and inspire public opinion in relation to sports cars.

3. To promote safe-driving habits in relation to sports car operation.

4. To provide the common ground upon which sports car enthusiasts may find social and mutual enjoyment.

ARF!

Benjamin Franklin (or The Louisville Slugger, as he is better known as) said, "A penny saved is a penny earned," and we, the college population of America, have taken to heart this sage advice. We spend prudently; we budget diligently. Yet, despite our wise precautions, we are always running short. Why? Because there is one item of expense that we consistently underestimate—the cost of travelling home for weekends.

Let us take the typical case of Basil Metabolism, a sophomore at UCLA majoring in avocados. Basil, a resident of Bangor, Maine, loved to go home each weekend to play with his faithful dog, Spot. What joy, what wretched smiles, when Basil and Spot were re-united! Basil would leap into his dogcart, and Spot, a genuine Alaskan husky, would pull Basil all over Bangor, Maine—Basil calling cheery halloos to the townfolk, Spot wagging his curly tail.

The results were not all Basil had hoped

But the cost, alas, of travelling from UCLA to Bangor, Maine, ran to $400 a week, and Basil's father, alas, earned only a meagre salary as a meter-reader for the Bangor water department. So, alas, after six months Basil's father told Basil he could raise no more money; he had already sold everything he owned, including the flashlight he used to read meters.

Basil returned to California to ponder his dilemma. One solution occurred to him—to ship Spot to UCLA and keep him in his room—but Basil had to abandon the notion because of his roommate, G. Fred Sigafos, who was, alas, allergic to dog hair.

Then another idea came to Basil—a stroke of genius, you might call it. He would buy a Mexican hairless chihuahua! Thus he would have a dog to pull him around, and G. Fred's allergy would be undisturbed.

The results, alas, were not all Basil had hoped. The chihuahua, alas, was unable to pull Basil in the dogcart, no matter how energetically he beat the animal.

Defeated again, Basil sat down with G. Fred, his roommate, to smoke a Marlboro Cigarette and seek a new answer to the problem. Together they smoked and thought and—Eureka!—an answer quickly appeared. (I do not suggest, mark you, that Marlboro Cigarettes are an aid to celebration. All I say about Marlboros is that they taste good and are made of fine tobaccos and pure white filters and come in soft pack or Flip Top box.)

Well, sir, Basil and G. Fred got a great idea. Actually, the idea was G. Fred's, who happened to be majoring in genetics. Why not, said G. Fred, cross-breed the chihuahua with a Great Dane and thus produce an animal sturdy enough to pull a dogcart?

It was, alas, another plan doomed to failure. The cross-breeding was done, but the result (this is very difficult to explain) was a raccoon.

But there is, I am pleased to report, a happy ending to this heart-rending tale. It seems that Basil's mother (this is also very difficult to explain) is a glamorous blond aged 19 years. One day she was spotted by a talent scout in Bangor, Maine, and was signed to a fabulous movie contract, and the entire family moved to California and bought Bel Air, and today one of the most endearing sights to be seen on the entire Pacific Coast is Spot pulling Basil down Sunset Boulevard—Basil cheering and Spot wagging. Basil's mother is also happy, making glamorous movies all day long, and Basil's father is likewise content, sitting at home and reading the water meter.

Events, such as rallies and gymkhanas, are also held once a month, usually on the third Sunday - one of the most interesting being next Sunday, the 16th - the "Ice Trials" at Shelburne Pond.

One car at a time runs a course marked out by tires on the ice, the first car starting at 11:00 A.M. Cars compete in classes with winter or summer tires; drivers must be 16 years of age; and seat belts are mandatory.

Pre-Meds

I wish to call attention of all students who hope to enter a medical school in the fall of 1965 to the fact that they should plan to take the Medical College Admission Test this April. Application blanks are available at my office (311 Science Hall) and should be obtained soon. It might be well to mention that any students expecting rapid action on his application will have to take the examination this spring.

Pershing Rifles Seek Recruits

Company L-12, Pershing Rifles at the University of Vermont is now initiating its drive for new members to increase the Company's strength for the purpose of enabling all members to better benefit from the events planned for this semester. All freshmen enrolled in MS I who feel themselves qualified and who are willing to give the time necessary for the moulding of a crack drill unit should contact the P/R office in the Old Gym as soon as possible.

The activities planned for this semester include such events as: co-sponsorship of the Military Ball on the 22nd of March; acting as the "Aggressor Force" for the annual MS III maneuver at Camp Johnson in April; electing an Honorary Sponsor to represent Company L-12 and the University of Vermont in New England Regimental Queen competition (this year's Sponsor, Sally Ann Tauchert, was chosen Regimental Queen for New England P/R units and entered the national contest); participating in a Trick Drill Competition in Boston (last year, L-12 won Third Place in overall competition); and the highlight to the year-participating in a national trick drill competition to be held at Flushing Meadows, New York for the 1964 World's Fair!

In past years, Company L-12 has commanded much respect and just recently was accorded the honor of acting as Honor Guard for the then Vice President of the United States, Lyndon B. Johnson, on his October visit to Burlington. Thus membership in Pershing Rifles will prove to be a worthwhile experience for the interested freshman cadet.

Area Student Association Join In Burlington Council

The UVM Student Association has recently joined with St. Michael's College, Trinity College, and Champlain College to form a Burlington area intercollegiate council.

The purpose of the council is to enable the four Burlington-area schools to undertake social, cultural, and community-service projects, which would be impossible for one school to attempt alone.

According to Dick Page, Student Association president, "The other students in the area are anxious just to know what is happening here at UVM. The intercollegiate council represents an excellent opportunity for UVM to become a center for some student activities on an area-wide basis. Through the council we can also become more aware of the fact that we work and study in a community environment and we have certain responsibilities to the community of which we are all a part."

The first meeting of the council was held February 6th, at St. Michael's. Dick Page, Dick Bodger, Helen Keith, and Betty Gloria represented UVM. Frank Guyer, a junior at St. Mike's from Albany, N.Y., was elected the first council president.

Among initial objectives of the council are: (1) having some of the national political figures who are currently active in New Hampshire come to Burlington to speak; (2) cooperating on community service projects, such as charity drives and blood drawings which were formerly undertaken by small groups at individual schools; (3) social activities, such as concerts, which are too large or expensive for one school; (4) attracting "big name" entertainment to the Burlington area.

Applications for the Corse Fellowship of $1200 will be accepted by Dean W. H. Macmillan, Graduate College, through April 15.

This fellowship, established through the bequest of Frederick M. Corse, '88, is awarded annually to a graduate of UVM holding the Bachelor of Arts degree, to a senior or to a recent graduate with the proper qualifications.

Applicants, either young men or young women, must have majored in English, or a classical language, or two of the European languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching. Exceptional ability, character, and capability for independent thought are considerations.

Application blanks may be obtained from Dean Macmillan's office, 107 Waterman Building.

UVM Students Smarten-up

University of Vermont students have bettered their own odds against academic failure for the third straight year.

In 1962, the first year in which UVM Director of Admissions Harold C. Collins compiled the figure, academic failure claimed 4.8 percent of the University's undergraduate students following the first semester. The mortality was higher for freshmen that year - 6.2 percent.

Last year, Vermont undergraduates pared the percentage back to 4.2 percent for all four classes, and to 4.5 for freshmen.

This year - while freshmen held at the 4.5 figure - upperclassmen brought the over-all percentage down to 3.4 percent for the University.

Collins notes that the University's enrollment has been increasing in the same period, but adds that the number dropped for academic reasons has declined together with the percentage, from 153 (4.8 percent) in 1962, to 136 (4.2 percent) in 1963, to 116 and the 3.4 percent figure this year.

Collins says there are no statistics to compare the University's performance to - since few colleges report their academic losses following the first semester; but he believes the University's performance is "very, very creditable."

CATS STAY IN RACE FOR STATE CROWN

Catamount Ski Report

by Chris Quimby
(Ski Team Captain)

Last week we went to Dartmouth. When the snow finally cleared late Saturday afternoon, UVM was holding down fifth place. Not too encouraging. That this performance is hardly in keeping with either last year's creditable third place in the Eastern Collegiate or the training efforts made this fall is only too obvious. Yet the reasons for our showing last weekend are fairly simple. First, we are still a little weak in the nordic combined; the consistent and competent efforts in these two events of last year's Co-Captain Rick Hubbard are sorely missed. Secondly, a disastrous error in our choice of cross-country wax and a couple of bad falls on the slalom event sealed, as it were, our fate. However, I think that within these two unlucky setbacks, there is reason for optimism about the remaining meets. Firstly, waxed as badly as we were in the cross-country race, we still were not that far out of the running, so to speak; a decent waxing would have put us ahead of a lot of people who beat us. Secondly, Lamb and Dwinell, our first two alpine men, were skiing very well despite their falls. Dwinell was in a solid third place after the first run, but fell his second one. Lamb fell his first run, and was still only ten seconds off the mark. I saw his fall and it certainly looked to me like he lost all of ten seconds in getting back on the course.

So we hope, as was the case last year, that we got the falls etc., out of our system with this first meet. Generally speaking, we are skiing better than we were last year, and I think that we are in better shape -- perhaps with better luck we'll be right back where we should be in these next two meets, and who knows we might even qualify for the NCAA's in March.

Swimmers Lose To McGill

by Mel Ravitz

The University of Vermont Swimming Team traveled to Montreal last Saturday, to meet the best team in Canada. The result was a 75 to 20 defeat before an enthused McGill crowd. Frosh Captain Pete Gross won the 200 yd. butterfly, the only event that UVM won. While the Vermont swimmers did not win any other first places, their times were still very good in second and third places.

This Saturday the mermen host the U. of Mass. at the F.D. Norbush Pool. On Feb. 21 the swim team of Norwich University will be hosted by the University of Vermont in a Lake Walk swim meet. At 4:30 p.m. the starting gun will be fired starting the first event before a capacity crowd. Come and support your first collegiate swimming team!

Evansmen Nip Norwich 81-76; Look To Saints After KW

Last Wednesday evening at Patrick Gymnasium the University of Vermont defeated Norwich 81-78 in an extremely close contest.

The Cadets jumped off to an early 24-8 lead over the slow starting Cats, who were completely outplayed in every department by the smaller visitors from Northfield, Vermont, was not only out-shot but they were also out-hustled and rebounded by their state rivals in the early stages of this contest.

Vermont, however, slowly but surely regained their scoring touch and finally emerged with a 39-35 halftime lead. In the second half the sloppily played game was close all the way as the lead changed hands back and forth until the Cats gained control with 2:44 left to go as they built a 73-70 lead. They were able to increase this lead to five points at the final buzzer due to the fine play of Ralph D'Altilia, who had 24 points and did a good all-around job. He was given some good support by Layne Higgs with 20 points and Kenny Spalter in a substitute role.

This game, overall, was not one of Vermont's best, as the team's play lacked its usual cohesiveness and spark. An unusually large number of personal fouls were called on the two teams as both Norwich and Vermont (Milt Goggans and Joe Gannon) had two star players leave the game by the foul route.

This triumph over Norwich raised the Cats' overall season record to 8-5 and made them 2-1 in state series play. This record places them in second position in the Green Mountain Conference behind St. Michael's, whom Vermont must face twice after Lake Walk, to determine the state champion. The Catamounts see action again in the Green Mountain Conference when they face Middlebury Wednesday evening at Patrick Gymnasium.

VERMONT'S DYNAMIC SOPHS IN ACTION

Hockey Chatter

The UVM Hockey team went down to defeat at the hands of the University of New Hampshire by a score of 4 to 1, last Saturday afternoon at the Gutterson Field House. The Cats were hurt badly by penalties as New Hampshire scored 3 of their 4 goals with Vermont a man shy.

The game remained a scoreless deadlock until New Hampshire broke into the scoring column with only 1:44 left in the first period. Thirty seconds later, they struck again for their second goal to end the initial stanza.

In the second period, New Hampshire continued to outskate the Catamounts, pushing past their third tally of the afternoon. The Cats were again unable to score.

Vermont came back strongly in the final period, scoring their first and only goal on a shot by Tony Rishe assisted by Paul Dorsey at 14:21. With only 49 seconds left in the game, New Hampshire scored their final goal to give them a 4 to 1 Yankee Conference win.

Vermont freshman goalie, Bob Sausville, turned in a brilliant performance, registering a total of 38 saves.

UVM will again be at home this Saturday night, opposing the forces of A.I.C. Game time is scheduled for 7:30.

Leaping for the ball against U. Conn.'s giants is sophomore center Milt Goggans. Goggans is currently one of the top rebounders in the nation.

Rappa's Roundup

by Richard Rappaport

The Vermont Catamount's three successive losses to Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island have, within the short span of only one week, dropped the Cats from sole possession of first place to the position of also-rans in the Yankee Conference basketball race.

It is quite evident that with the Catamounts 3-3 season record and difficult contests remaining with all of the league's teams with the exception of Maine, Vermont will be quite fortunate to finish the current campaign in fourth place.

In their loss to New Hampshire, UVM again displayed their inability to work effectively against the full court press which was employed by the Wildcats with great success. This type of defense would have been even more effective were it not for the work of guard Layne Higgs who is the only starter able to consistently cope with this bothersome defense. However, it is true that the Wildcats did shoot over 60 percent in the second half of this contest which was the other important factor in their victory.

Last Saturday night, Vermont faced the Rhode Island Rams and the contest was a close one until mid-way in the second half when the Rams opened up a considerable lead and put the contest out of Vermont's reach. There were many significant factors in the contest but the most important was the Rams decided edge in the rebounding department of both the offensive and defensive backboards. The Cats shot well, but their lack of a good bench was quite evident as they ran out of gas when it appeared that they might come from behind and pull out the victory. Also the time outs could have been used to greater advantage and more frequently especially when the iron-men squad needed a rest during the hectic moments in the second half when Vermont was still in contention.

Even though it did win the contest, Rhody was definitely below their peak playing ability due to the injury to Frank Nightingale, and to Steve Chubin's severe cold which was originally to have prevented him from participating in this contest. It is quite unfortunate that Vermont did not take greater advantage of Nightingale's immobility to run more and to pass more frequently inside for the easy shot.

The outlook for the remainder of the season is fairly good. The Cats should be able to have a .500 season by gaining victories over Norwich, Middlebury, Brandeis and New Hampshire, and possibly split with St. Michael's. However, it is actually quite hard to predict Vermont games due to the Cats erratic play and their weak bench which can, and has hurt them in the close ball games.

The Agony

AN EDITORIAL OPINION

Rockwell Can't Lose

It seems as though the University of Vermont and its student newspaper, THE CYNIC, have fallen into a carefully planned trap set by a very cunning man. We received a letter from George Lincoln Rockwell, self-styled "fuhrer of the American Nazi Party, requesting a chance to speak at our institution, and we invited him on the principle of freedom of speech and partly out of curiosity. Frankly, we wanted to see if this man, who is against as many things as he's supposed to be, is "for real".

We now must "disinvite" him, just as the University of Massachusetts had to do last year. The reason he can't come to our "nice, peaceful city" is because the allocation of funds (a maximum of $600) for the added security needed for his visit was voted down, 34-15, at a meeting of the UVM Student Association Assembly last Wednesday.

It seems that Rockwell can't lose. If he speaks there is a great hub-bub of controversy. If he is banned there is just as great a stir. In our case he apparently has caused many people in our community to do some deep thinking. There is an ethical issue of freedom of speech to be reckoned with along with person prejudice.

Almost all UVM students are war babies or post-war babies, so we are too young to know what bitter feeling that existed during the war. We are also supposedly well versed in history and the horrors of Nazism. But still, what we learn from reading can never replace living through that era of the world's history. We are not offering this fact as an excuse, but as a fact that makes us innocent to the strong emotional stand most older people take. And because of this, we "innocently" invited him out of principle and curiosity.

This was the stand we took before we asked for opinions from those who know more about this infamous man and what he stands for through personal contact. Well, now we know and we feel a bit awed. But there still remained the ethical consideration of denying him the right to speak, regardless of whatever socio-political philosophy he believes in.

Quoting from a periodical called "FACTS", "It's a long-standing tradition of the American people--and its press--not to ignore that which they despise, but rather to expose and discuss, and in the process find firmer ground than instinct for rejection and repudiation."

In the process of exposing Rockwell to local public opinion, we feel we have learned from experience and made our American way of life more evident to those who doubted our methods of handling such a controversial issue.

Kake Walk has arrived once more, but changes have been made; the traditional blackface and the kinky-haired wigs are gone. How will people react to the change after they've seen the "New Kake Walk"?

For 364 days this weekend has been anticipated. The anticipation was heightened by the announcement that blackface was a Thing of the Past. But now the last three weeks of sitting on the edges of your chairs is over.

The holiday was kicked off on Thursday evening, February 21, by the swinging sounds of Count Basie and his band. The high point of the evening came when the Count crowned the King and Queen who will reign over the weekend.

Friday afternoon hundreds of blanket and bleacher sitters crowded into Patrick Gymnasium for the Jazz-Folk Concert. In this less formal atmosphere they heard such artists as long-time great Dizzy Gillespie, the newer but nonetheless great Highwaymen, and the gospel singing group, the Grandisons.

But the enjoyment of the Jazz Concert was only a lead-in to the Big Night, when, as the white hanky is dropped, fifteen pairs of walkers (sans blackface) strut and kick their way across the floor to the tune of "Cotton Babes." Two months and more of strenuous daily exercise has been leading up to these two minutes before the crowd and the judges. When it is over the judges will have decided the winners and the cakes will be awarded.

Not as long-standing a tradition as the "Walkin' fo' de Kake," but just as much a part of Kake Walk, are the skits. Competing for the cakes this year in twelve-minute skits of fun and entertainment are three fraternities. Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi, who split the skit honors last year, will be joined in the competition by Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

What was supposed to be the start of a new KW tradition last year, the Saturday afternoon hockey game, has been short lived. This year basketball is back, with UVM taking on Brandeis in the gym.

For those who missed Friday's excitement, or who didn't get the cake, the skits and walking go on again Saturday evening, when hopefuls will again go after the prizes.

And that, except for the parties and other activities afterwards, is that. Kake Walk is over for another year, and we have another year to anticipate and recover.

And The Ecstasy

Babcock's Hat Is Almost In The Gubernatorial Ring

An unofficial draft movement is underway to promote University of Vermont's Professor Robert S. Babcock as a gubernatorial candidate on the Republican ticket in the next Vermont election. Although Babcock, has not actually thrown his cap into the ring, he has said, "I am pleased and flattered by this draft movement... I am further pleased that it gives a chance to learn whether Republicans and Independents think I may be right on some major issues."

Some of these major issues which Babcock supports are a limited sales tax and a "complete overhaul of Vermont's tax structure." One of Prof. Babcock's friends and a probable GOP candidate, Lt. Gov. Ralph A. Foote, does not at the present time support a sales tax at all. Prof. Babcock believes that this tax is of extreme importance to the progress of Vermont, and has hinted that if Foote backs this program, he will not run at all. However, the campaigns have not yet begun.

Professor Babcock and his wife have five children: Bob, aged 21; Ann, 20; Julie, 17; Peter, 13; and Martha, 10. Their pets include two dogs named Missie and Bill.

This was the cover of a leaflet supporting Prof. Robert Babcock in the Republican gubernatorial primary in 1960.

Catholic Students Pledge $10,000 For Construction Of Chapel And Center

Architect's sketch of proposed new Catholic Chapel and center.

The Catholic students at the University of Vermont have pledged $10,000 to the Building Fund for the new Catholic Chapel and Center. A personal solicitation campaign among the students will begin soon after Kake Walk, to secure pledges from individual students. Chairman of the drive will be Robert Russo, '64. Each Catholic student will be contacted and asked to make a pledge, payable over a period of years. In a brief campaign during May, 1963 more than $3,500 was pledged by the students.

Construction will begin on at least the first phase of the new Catholic Chapel and Center in the late spring. The Chapel will be located adjacent to the new chapel for Episcopal students, just north of the Patrick Gymnasium. It is anticipated that the new chapel will be ready for occupancy early in October.

The chapel is an interesting blend of modern architecture. Its structure is principally "A" frame, with two frames crossing to make a cruciform. The altar will be located in the east end of the chapel, with provision for the priest to offer Mass facing the congregation. The interior of the nave will be dominated by massive laminated beams in the roof structure.

At the west end of the chapel building, classroom facilities will be provided by means of sliding partitions under the large balcony. These can be opened onto the chapel to provide overflow space.

The Center will be connected to the chapel by an entrance foyer which will serve as a restful lounge. At the east end of the Center will be a spacious library. An apartment for a housemother will occupy part of the first floor. Office space and refreshment area will be provided on the remainder of the first floor. The second floor of the Center will contain living quarters for the chaplains.

Estimated construction cost is $250,000. It is estimated that another $50,000 will be used for furnishings and equipment.

A fund drive is being conducted among Catholic alumni, parents, students and friends. Nearly $70,000 has been raised thus far. The total goal for the drive is $500,000. It is hoped that the additional $200,000 can be used as an endowment fund to help defray future operating costs.

The New Catholic chapel and center will help serve the religious and cultural needs of the ever increasing population on campus. It is being designed in such a manner that cultural as well as religious functions can be presented. The library is seen as an adjunct to the Bailey Library. It will feature material representing the Christian and Roman Catholic tradition.

There are, currently, more than one thousand Catholic students on campus. Of these, more than six hundred are Vermonters. The new chapel and center will better serve the needs of these students, because of its location, and because of the better facilities.

Most Rev. Robert F. Joyce, Bishop of Burlington, himself an alumnus in the class of 1917, and former Chaplain, calls the work among the students, "one of the most important areas for the Church."

The fund-raising drive, and the functioning of the new Chapel and Center will be under the direction of a board of Trustees. The Trustees, headed by Dr. John C. Cunningham, M.D., '35, is made up of alumni, faculty members, and students.

The Way To A Winning Walk

by Geri Sharff

As the band strikes up the first few notes of "Cotton Babes" on Friday, February 21, and Saturday, February 22, the climatic Kake Walking will take place in the Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium. To the fraternity men who have practiced for so long, the two minutes of the walk will be the peak of the timeless hours spent in perfecting each motion.

Way back in September, each fraternity selected two members to represent them at Kake Walk. Naturally, each house assumes that its walkers are the best. The members of the team are usually about the same height and weight. Due to their agility, the tall, thin boys do the best jobs.

Once the team is chosen, the walkers have all they can do to devote hour upon hour on workouts. These consist of exercises of all sorts, running and jumping, and a general toning of all the muscles. From Thanksgiving until Kake Walk, the boys selflessly give up smoking, drinking, and excess dating in order to give their all to the performance.

Another important element in walking is exact timing. If so much as one step is taken at the wrong second, the whole routine is ruined. It is a necessity that the boys start at the same time and on the same foot.

At the Kake Walk presentation, the spectators see only the two walkers from each house. However, the coach, a behind-the-scenes man, is another important member of the team. Without him, the boys would not have sufficient coordination for a successful walk. Frequently, the coach himself is a former walker. Besides spurring the team on when things look grim, the coach also instills a winning spirit in each participant.

Thanks to the cooperation of every Kake Walker and every coach, each two minute walk is a thrilling experience. The air is tingling not only in the fraternity houses prior to the presentation, but also in the audience when the walkers appear. Good luck to all "them cotton babes" when, at our famous Kake Walk, they will do all they can to win a piece of Kake.

KW's Responsible Men

by Mal

Kake Walk is here again with all of its festivities and reminiscing. One goes about his way merrily with little thought for the people who are operating behind the scenes. The end of one Kake Walk marks the beginning of another for the Kake Walk Directors. A director's work is never done, and his perseverance and patience to do all of the trivial tasks is testimony to the fine performance that they put on. Last minute rushes, publicity releases and deadlines are met with a sigh of relief only to have to go through the whole routine again. When the lights go on and those three men are standing out there, you can be sure that they are the proudest ones in the gym, for they know that they have planned a bigger and better Kake Walk than the ones before. We, too, should recognize this fact and give them the thunderous applause that they truly deserve.

The Kake Walk Committee is composed of three separate phases. Carl E. Eells is this year's Finance Director. Carl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell R. Eells of Rochester, Vt., is a senior majoring in electrical engineering. Carl is a brother in Acacia Fraternity where he has held the positions of treasurer and president. Carl's other activities include Gold Key, Boulder Society, and Finance Director of Freshman Orientation. Carl intends to work in the field of electrical engineering with graduate school as a possibility in the not-so-distant future. Carl had the job of selling and distribution of tickets, which was made even more difficult by the institution of a new system for the distribution of tickets to students, and the important task of the KW budget.

The Production Director is Fredric H. Weisberg. Fred is the son of Judge and Mrs. Benjamin R. Weisberg of Stamford, Conn. Fred, a brother in Phi Sigma Delta, is a senior majoring in Political Science. Fred's activities on campus include Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and Boulder. He held the position of President of the latter two honoraries. Fred is the chief justice of the Student Court. He also is an advanced ROTC student and was selected as a member of Ethan Allen Rifles (Military Honorary). Fred has also received the Phillip Good man Award (National Fraternity) for extracurricular activities. Fred's immediate future is Graduate work at Law School. Fred had the task of selecting the entertainment, and served as the overall chairman of the Kake Walk Committee.

The final directorship is held by David T. Malchuk who is the Publicity Director. Dave, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Malchuk, is a native of Rockville, Connecticut. Dave, a brother in Phi Delta Theta, is a senior majoring in Chemistry. He has served as treasurer and steward of his fraternity as well as representing his fraternity in the IFC. Dave has also served on the Student Association. He has been elected to membership in Key and Serpent and Boulder Society. He is currently serving as Secretary-Treasurer of the latter. Dave was responsible for all of the press releases that are sent from the office. He also tried to seek publicity in many of the better known magazines. Dave's immediate future will be occupied with graduate work in Chemistry.

The assistant director working in coordination with the Finance Director is Stephen I. Watson. Steve, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Watson of Lyndonville, is a brother of Lambda Iota Fraternity. He is a junior majoring in Chemistry. Steve has served as Assistant Treasurer and Asst. House Manager of his house as well as representing it in the IFC. He has also been on the Dean's List for the past five semesters. Steve is in charge of cakes, concessions, and distribution of tickets. Steve's future will be occupied with graduate work in Chemistry.

A tense, exciting and fun-filled atmosphere pervaded Southwick Gymnasium on February 16th when the eight sororities and fraternities who are running candidates for King and Queen presented brief coffee shop skits.

Alpha Epsilon Phi entertained with their version of "Princerebella and the Since." Although Prinderella seemed doomed to being a spinster after the "glass slipper" "fidn't dit", it "fidit" and she and her "Since" lived "happily" ever after. And so claimed it will at UVM when Linda Sharfstein, "The fairest of them all" reigns as Kake Walk Queen of 1964.

Delta Psi captured the spirit of Kake Walk in their skit, "This is the Week That Will Be". "Men are men and women are scared was their cry. The cry heard on Saturday morning when snow sculptures are about to be examined." Let's start at the base" was the truth. Memories that will be cherished forever will be found in a wonderful Kake Walk Holiday and their King Tommy Clarke embodied the carnival's glamour and excitement.

Sigma Phi's skit, "Scholarship Fund" featured the Beatles applying to UVM and a definition of sex - "the number after five;". Quite willingly the Beatles sang to win a singing contract and to introduce their Kake Walk candidate for King - Hank Burton. "Tug Along" with Alpha Delta Pi was a long and anxious search for the "Queen Mary" and they found their own Queen Mary Louise Hoskiewicz to the delight of the student audience.

Sigma Nu presented a flashback of their Pop's Night Skit in "The Further Adventures of Rocky and Bullwater." The highlight of the skit was six pledgers transformed to Naval Whistlers, their version of the Beatles, and their whistling for their Kake Walk King Candidate, Bob Morris. But, the greatest hit of all time was Pi Beta Phi's Pat Russell, who was a charming culmination to a host of teenage rock and roll singers on the Dick Clark TV show. Elvis set many hearts' pounding and the actress' arms and legs flying!

Alpha Gamma Rho preferred to leave the choice of Kake Walk King to the audience without further entertaining, and presented the handsome and smiling Steve Abbott. And the sky really almost did fall down, when Kappa Alpha Theta presented their lovely Sue Benton, and a host of Theta girls arriving at the exciting "Queen City" of Burlington!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES FOR ENGINEERING GRADUATES

FROM KAKE WALK TO KAKE WALK

Kake Walk marks the end of the CYNIC-AL year at UVM. It's a time when old senile editors bow out gracefully with their Kake Walk editorials. It's also a time when returning alumni and friends reminisce about the things they did when they were undergraduates. And it's a time for undergrads to forget their books for one weekend and do the things they will reminisce about when they become alums.

Because Kake Walk establishes a new year, it is only proper that the CYNIC follow the example of its big brother, papers and review the past year. To begin with, the early part of last year was spent in a concerted effort by most UVMers to catch up on the work they let slide till after Kake Walk. We suspect the same condition prevails this year.

Last March, a possible tuition increase was announced. Out-of-state tuition would soar to $1500, while in-state costs would rise to $500. This possibility became a reality last October.

After March went out like a Catamount, the remainder of the spring was fairly uneventful. Students studied for exams. Seniors prepared themselves to go out into the world after graduation. And Ralph Lapointe's baseball team had another winning season, although it wasn't as successful as the previous Yankee Conference Championship season (see p. 18).

Summer came and departed too soon. Sober September ushered in the new academic year, and 1100 new freshmen. Coach Bob Clifford's rejuvenated Catamounts worked hard all season and earned themselves a respectable 6-2 record (see p. 20).

Then in October, at the height of the Negro revolution down South, UVM fraternities voted to do away with blackface make-up and kinky-haired wigs from the costume of the walkers.

This unprecedented move set off a wave of letters from all over the state. The reaction was mixed.

Then on November 12, 13, and 14, the Vermont Conference was held. We had four civil rights leaders speak on the Negro fight for equality.

In December and January, Coach Evans' boys bounced to an early lead in the Yankee Conference. But they were soon subdued by our taller and more talented New England rivals. We are still in the running for State honors, however. And as usual, the big games of the season will be with crosstown foe, St. Michael's, after Kake Walk (see p. 20).

So as the fun and festival of Kake Walk fade into memories and the campus resumes its normal activities, the new CYNIC-AL year begins.

There are only 366 days remaining till it's, Kake Walk time again.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

In times of great hardship, the American people have fought for what they believe is rightfully theirs. We have stood up against the usurpers of communism, fascism, and nazism. Now we are faced with a new crisis -- the women of Redstone Campus have been deprived of their ironing boards.

This century has been witness to the scenes of bread lines; where thousands of people have stood and waited, with insufficient ration coupons to feed their families. Now at UVM, 75 women must wait in line to share one lousy ironing board.

Men -- how would you like to see your fair-haired damsel, forced to appear in un-ironed attire because she did not have 3 hours to wait on the ironing line?

Defend femininity and help us to raise the dress standards of UVM.

Reflections Of An Ex-Editor

By Bob Bernard

Old CYNIC editors quickly fade from sight and soon become decrepit. From year to year, to many readers, this probably brings a sigh of relief; to others the reflection that at least the editor was innocuous, but what will a change of administration bring? Whatever the sentiments of the readers, editors come and go and for some strange (?) reason are never heard from again. There are exceptions to the rule. And to prove that the Administration doesn't grab the old editor, diploma in hand, and write him a forceful letter or recommendation to the Foreign Legion, this one has decided to air his views on a subject endeared to all: Blackface.

It seems to me that somewhere along the line, someone should have gone to the trouble of researching some old CYNICS to see if this whole furor is not really a rehash of a rehash of a rehash which, indeed, it is.

In 1950, William S. Carlson, then president of UVM, received a letter from Constance B. Motley, Assistant Special Counsel of the NAACP. A few lines from this letter will suffice to illustrate the views of the NAACP at that time:

"We should like to call to your attention, . . . to the Kake Walk ceremony as a 'blackface' show. Needless to say, we are indeed shocked and surprised to find the extra-curricular activity of college students today on such a level. It is difficult for us to conceive of any group of enlightened Americans in this day and age sponsoring and presenting such shows, and it is particularly difficult for us to conceive that such activity would be allowed, condoned, or passively acquiesced in by modern educators.

"We are fully aware that the common denominator of thinking about the Negro in America - if we may call it thinking - is done in stereotypes.

"We are writing to you confident that you, as an enlightened educator and college president, will know how to best deal with this problem, and particularly to convince the student body that the Kake Walk celebration is not in keeping with the fundamental democratic philosophy of which our country is dedicated."

1954 was quite a year in the evolution of the anti-blackface campaign. The CYNIC, under the editorship of Don Forst, had an all-out campaign to abolish blackface. A rival newspaper, the Skeptic, (which lasted for about two issues), held a dissenting opinion. The effectiveness of this embryonic newspaper is dubious, but blackface remained. Apparently during this same year (the records are not clear) the Religious Activities Committee distributed a questionnaire to the student body in an attempt to appraise more accurately its feelings regarding blackface. In answer to this questionnaire, one student wrote: "I cannot bring myself to sympathize with any part of the makeup no matter how hard I try. Even though it isn't done maliciously my feelings are still the same. The reason that I'm against this form of entertainment is not because it is a grave problem on this campus but because it seems to contradict the ethics of social advancement and social feeling among groups. If it is eliminated, that would mean another small step toward improving situations for a minority group that has been a scapegoat for over a hundred years." The few other replies still in the files agree in fact with these sentiments.

Mr. Herbert Wright, Yough and College Director of the NAACP requested permission to visit UVM in 1955 to discuss the make-up used in the University's Kake Walk festival. For reasons now unclear he never came.

A Negro student, who did not wish his name printed, wrote in 1954 or 1955:

"I have been asked to give my opinion as to the Blackface make-up worn by the Walkers at our Kake Walk. As this very question has raised so much controversy, I, as well as many other UVM students, have given this question much thought. And, because I do not feel that I can answer it by any other method, I have given my views on the whole idea of the use of the make-up.

As a Negro, I would be apt to dislike Blackface make-up because of its exaggeration. But in all fairness, if anyone thinks about it; in portraying any type of personality or nationality to an audience, particular characteristics are always over-emphasized. One could say that anyone of French, English or Russian heritage has as much cause for complaint as the American Negro in this respect. We are a very sensitive people because of prejudices which have long existed, which have stemmed from no other characteristic than the one Blackface exaggerates; therefore the controversy has arisen.

As to the make-up worn by the Walkers, I do not find it offensive. If you think this contradictory to all that I have said, please consider this particular usage of the make-up. The walking was taken from a dance done by Negroes many years ago. It may still exist as such but if it does I am not aware of it. Kake Walking at UVM has come to mean a marvelous feat of rhythmic acrobatics. The keen competition and strenuous practicing necessary for preparation are all a part of the thrill that everyone feels when the band strikes up "Cotton Bales".

To me, the make up is one of the least noticeable parts of the whole presentation. It is merely a part of the costuming, along with the flashy tails, the hightop hats, the canes and the gloves. To remove the make-up would be to infer offense to something that was never intended to offend."

There are smatterings of the controversy through the remaining years, but they are repetitious and superfluous. Blackface is no more, this fact remains, and 1964 is the year in which "The Change" occurred.

Was the blackface really objectionable? Obviously it was, at least to some. Two points should be made clear. First, it is an inevitable consequence of a social revolution (and we are indeed in the midst of one) that some good is stripped away with the bad. Secondly, it seems that the original objection was not so much the blackface as it was the unnecessary accentuation of the eyes and lips. The former is perhaps a representation, the latter is a truly ludicrous stereotype. This fact seems to have become beclouded in the general uproar.

Message From Pres. Fey State Of The University

It is always a pleasure and a privilege to be invited by THE CYNIC to send greetings to the University family and its friends through the CYNIC's special Kake Walk issue.

Kake Walk has always taken place against a background of imposing national and international problems, though there always are those present who would tell us that our own time is fraught with more peril or in greater need of salvation than any other.

Though I am disinclined to think that is so, I am certain that our own time presents us with worthy challenges; and I know we are justified in thinking that those challenges are increasingly complex.

One thing is certain: the time is our own, and there is compelling evidence to show that each of us can influence that time for better or worse.

If individuals control their time and have power to change it, so do institutions.

I suspect that The University of Vermont has not experienced a Kake Walk when it was not aware of financial problems, educational concerns and assorted obstacles.

This most modern of Kake Walk brings no exception. The University, in company with its sister colleges and universities, faces some of the most critical problems higher education has ever faced.

Society calls upon us to provide a better education to greater numbers of students at a time when it is becoming more difficult for higher education to find the financial support it must have to meet its responsibilities.

We have slowly and painstakingly over the post war years found the means--through private philanthropy and public support--to bring our physical plant up to the point where it is more adequate to meet the needs of our post war enrollment (which tripled following World War II). Yet there are major needs or dreams which confront us even while some critics suggest we have built too much or too lavishly.

We have had to enrich our teaching resources at a time when competition nationally has become increasingly intense.

We are well on the way to doubling faculty salaries in ten years, yet one can find statistics to show that this remarkable progress has done no more than enable our University to maintain a merely "average" position nationally.

Our state and federal governments call increasingly upon us for essential services which only our best colleges and universities can provide; while they pose problems for us, at least they also provide new resources.

But if we have a diversity of problems, it is our diversity of resources as a modern small university which has provided for us a position of special strength. We face the future as we have always done throughout our history--with affection for and dedication to perfection.

Our University must be--and is--willing to change to meet the new challenges of our time.

It is the responsibility of the University's leadership to provide the climate which will permit wise and productive change and yet protect that which should or must remain unchanged. I pledge to you that that leadership will strive to make it possible for the University to pursue excellence, but achievement of excellence will depend ultimately on the extent to which individual students and faculty who are the real University dedicate themselves to that pursuit.

The events of the world today demonstrate that individual and collective destiny are personally relative. What happens in Birmingham or South Viet Nam or Cyress or Boston, New York, or Burlington, Vermont, affects each of us and may be affected by each of us.

It is by individual and eventually mutual design that we gather together on this campus, and each of us has a direct responsibility to make the most of that association.

This is the state of the University of Vermont at Kake Walk, 1964.

Statements On Blackface

by M. Alfred Haynes

The decision to retain the Kake Walk while removing certain objectionable features was one of the most educational events of the academic year. It permits the University to retain an exciting and joyous tradition. It acknowledges a valuable contribution of Negro culture and it indicates that it is not necessary for the students of a great university to resort to racial insult (though unintentional) in order to achieve these ends.

The educational significance lies in the fact that education has missed its mark if the student accumulates facts but is insensitive to people, if he cannot distinguish the shadow from the substance, or if he pretends to be cultured when in fact his actions are merely traditional.

The wisdom of the administration in allowing this to be a student decision was matched by the good judgment of responsible students.

In 1963 it was almost the decision to be expected. It would have been more significant only if it had been made before.

by Thor Krogh, '29

May I congratulate the alumni and especially the officials of the University for helping erase Vermont-antiquarian days of blackface and stereotype.

by Philip J. Branon

During the past several months we have witnessed the "Negro Revolution" throughout our nation. It is because of this situation, particularly, that it seems necessary to eliminate Blackface at Kake Walk. Negroes have told us that Blackface is offensive to them. We who are white cannot fully comprehend its effect on the Negro. We must respect their feelings. Furthermore, we who are white, and live in the north verbally express our sympathy for the plight of the Negro in other parts of the country. Eliminating Blackface on our campus is a tangible way of demonstrating that sympathy.

by Prof. Donald C. Gregg

The decision made by I.F.C. at UVM to use "clown-face" instead of "blackface" for the 1964 Kake Walk is, I believe, a commendable resolution. However, I also believe that the demise of such an unusually venerable UVM tradition cannot occur without some lamentation. During my introduction to "live" Kake Walkers in 1932, neither my friends nor I had the faintest notion that the current decision would ever have to be made. In fact, I lived nearly thirty years without realizing that "blackface" was so offensive to so many people. Current events prompt a change in my viewpoint.

Many public events, displays, and works of art are either all or in part potentially offensive to somebody. I hope that UVM students realize that complete avoidance of alleged offense and unfavorable criticism is nearly impossible. If students become too dismayed, creativity and maintenance of reverent traditions may be seriously stifled. Of course, discretion, temperance and tolerance are in order for the observed as well as for the observer.

Blackface...Dixie Answers

The letter reprinted below appeared in the October 25, 1963 CYNIC. It was sent to Robert Collier, President of the Interfraternity Council (I.F.C.) postmarked Tallahassee, Florida. It was signed by J.S. Johnston, the voice of Dixie.

Dear Robert:

We never cease to get laughs out of you Yankees on this African business. What has us puzzled is, where is your heaviest concentration of negroes? The United States' Census of 1962 shows Vermont to have had "519" negroes. "Now 'ain't" that sumptin' 519 negroes in a state. We have 880,000 of these Africans in Florida, 1,121,000 in Georgia . . . 519 negroes in Vermont. If it were not for Ed Sullivan, those Vermont syrup people would never see a negro.

As for the black faces, aren't they black? Have you ever felt a negro's hair? It's like steel wool -- go feel a little negro's hair, because a big negro resents his hair and he might cut out your guts if you tamper with his hair -- think I'm kidding you? Try it and see.

There is a segregated restaurant in Atlanta -- one of thousands in Dixie. Why not get a few of your 519 Vermont negroes and try to integrate this restaurant -- be certain to pick up steel helmets, because the chances are good that Maddox will crack somebody over the head with a baseball bat. We have to have segregated restaurants in Dixie, so that these ersatz integrationists from Yankee-land will have a place in which to eat when they come down to get out of the snow and ice.

Robert, can we transfer all 3,000 of these negro students to the University of Vermont -- we have 3,000 negro students at Florida A & M University over on the hill -- you can have them, along with the 215 teachers and 25 janitors. As you will note, we have some white trash at Florida State University -- the whites dug up the D150 rather than stay in our pokey -- they thought they would get pheasant under glass etc., but it turned out blackeyed peas, cabbage, corn bread and water.

Why don't you invite Meredith up to the University of Vermont? . . . These whites are lucky that these negroes didn't amputate their heads with switch blades -- Glad to see you have integrated parties in N.Y. 100 years ago there were not many parties (integrated) in N.Y.C. -- with just 14,000 negroes living there. They can have plenty of parties now, because there are 1,120,000 negroes in N.Y.C. in 1963. We are just watching the N.Y. Pot Boil and it's boiling -- between 1950 and 1960, 994,000 whites (N.Y.C.) got Negrophobia and moved to the suburban areas. Let these Yankees run.

J.S. Johnston

On October 9, 1963 the Inter-Fraternity Council issued the following statement:

"After extended deliberation and discussion, the Inter-Fraternity Council and its constituent fraternities have decided that there are certain aspects of Kake Walk which could be construed as being offensive to some members of our community. Although these aspects were never intended to be, in any sense, derogatory, the Inter-Fraternity Council, in its meeting of October 8, 1963, has voted to eliminate the use of blackface make-up and kinky-haired wigs from the costume of the walkers, who represent the sixteen UVM fraternities."

To meet members of the UVM community this decision of the IFC appeared to put an end to a controversy that had been going on for some fourteen years. A great deal of the arguments expressed appeared in the letters column of the CYNIC. Some students were strongly opposed to this move by the IFC. Their letters claimed that there was nothing offensive in Kake Walk, that Negroes on campus and in the community were being "over sensitive," and that to eliminate blackface from Kake Walk would be to destroy an almost sacrosanct tradition.

In its editorial columns of October 4, 1963, the CYNIC stated, as clearly as possible, its position on this issue. We said, in part:

In the opinion of the CYNIC, the blackface, kinky hair, and speech used in Kake Walk act to perpetuate an incorrect image of the American Negro which is insulting and materially and psychologically detrimental to him. Accepting this to be fact rather than opinion, we see no other alternative than the abolition of the use of these objectionable items as part of Kake Walk."

Reaction to the IFC decision was almost as intense and varied as the arguments which preceded it. Again these opinions saw expression in the letters column of the CYNIC as well as that of the Burlington Free Press. Although, with the sixty-seventh Kake Walk approaching, these foregoing events have faded into the background, the CYNIC invited various religious leaders, faculty members, and members of the community to comment on them. On this page appear a few of these comments.

Russian People

From February 19 to February 26, Scope is sponsoring a display of photographs of Russian People in The North Lounge, Billings Center, taken by the American Photographer, E. Demarest Peterson. An interest in Russian Literature prompted Mr. Peterson to make four different trips to Russia to photograph not the parades of tanks and rockets, but the children at play in the streets, the people at the beach, the couple in Gorky Park. The photographs represent true art, for they transcend all ideologies, and permit the observer to view the Russian people as they are, dancing and playing, working and meditating. Mr. Peterson feels that the American people should differentiate between the Russian people and the government, and for this reason, the visitor to Kake Walk, and the students should make every effort to see this exhibition.

Being one of the top college weekends in the country, the University of Vermont's Kake Walk must have something to offer. Although the jazz concert, the ball, and the skits are all an important part, nothing has been able to match the excitement of "Walkin' Fo De Kake". The competition of the fraternities for the coveted Kake, denoting excellence in performing the intricate and precise routines of Walking, is a tradition that no other college can boast of. Kake Walk number 67 will be no different from the other 66 except for the elimination of the controversial "Blackface". Otherwise the drama, action, and costumes are all the same. The walkers all wear silks and satins of different colors to identify them with their respective fraternities. The following list should be of great help to you both Friday and Saturday nights in determining who is who.

- Acacia - black vests with gold lapels, black trousers with gold stripe down side.
- Alpha Epsilon Pi - gold pants with blue stripes, gold vest and tails with blue trimming.
- Alpha Gamma Rho - they will wear green and gold.
- Alpha Tau Omega - blue costume with gold trim and gold buttons.
- Delta Psi - black and white vertical stripes.
- Lambda Iota - white pants, red vest, red and white stripe vest.
- Phi Delta Theta - blue costume with silver trim.
- Phi Mu Delta - orange and black.
- Phi Sigma Delta - violet costume with white lapels and white stripe down side.
- Sigma Alpha Epsilon - kelly green costume with silver sequins.
- Sigma Nu - pink and white costume without tails.
- Sigma Phi - blue and white.
- Sigma Phi Epsilon - red and purple.
- Tau Epsilon Phi - blue tails, white trousers with blue stripes down sides.
- Theta Chi - red and white.

FRATERNITY SKITS VIE FOR BORGMAN TROPHY

Although hotly contested, the skits have usually been able to be considered the lighter side of Kake Walk. The short comedy sketches hit at some aspect of university life. This year the fraternities will be trying to break the domination of Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi who have captured the Borgman Trophy for four straight years.

Cake Awards-Symbol Of Colorful KW Tradition

by Eileen Giller

The colorful cake awards of Kake Walk, like all traditions, have deep and historic origins. The symbol of "de cake" has, for the UVMer a significant meaning, although he may be unaware of the origin of the cake's symbol.

It started in the deep South in the days of the gentleman farmer when plantation workers would celebrate the completion of the year's work with festivities similar to that of our own Kake Walk. The younger laborers would step and kick lively to the music of fiddles. Couples were judged, in the meantime, according to the precision of the grace and agility of their partners. One by one, pairs were eliminated until the winning couple was chosen. This last and final pair of precision dancers was awarded a grant and highly decorated cake. Thus the origin of the presentation of the cake each Kake Walk has evolved.

Sixty-three years ago, the entire tradition of the plantation workers was imitated by the Northern Yankee; it has stayed at UVM ever since. With the development of the Kake Walk tradition, there has been a corresponding increase of competition in various campus activities. Now candidates campaign for King and Queen of the Kake Walk Ball; fraternities and sororities compete for snow sculpture, and there is a Kake Walk poster award. Skits with a common theme have also become an integral part of the Kake Walk weekend. Here the symbolic meaning of the cake appears once again. Cakes of different sizes are awarded to the winners in each of the above categories of competition. When one realizes the work that is involved in trying to win one of the Cakes, no matter what size it may be, the winner's ecstasy should be apparent to everyone present at Kake Walk Night.

KW History Never Changes

We dug deep into our photo morgue to find this picture of a snow sculpture. The caption on it was, "Immortal", but it should have been "Immortal?"

by Betty Fuchs

Kake Walk 1964 will soon be only a memory. As the first Kake Walk to eliminate blackface, this 67th version of the oldest winter carnival in the country will be unique.

Many other Kake Walks stand out in UVM's history. Take, for example, that of 1894, the second annual Kake Walk held in the "Loft" of the Old Mill. A keg of beer, furnished for the occasion, was the cause of some embarrassment the next morning when some of the beer trickled down into the old chapel below. The incident sealed the doom of Kake Walks '95 and '96 when the faculty lowered the ban.

Kake Walk proved itself versatile in 1918 when all proceeds from the weekend's activities were turned over to the Red Cross. There were some patriotic innovations in the walking, too. One pair of walkers carried knitting and worked for the soldiers as they walked. Another pair was rolled into the gym in a watermelon. To complete the picture of Kake Walk in wartime, a collapsible dirigible was floated from one end of the gym to the other.

The year 1921 saw the birth of a new cinema star - Kake Walk took to the silver screen. Movie photographers from the studios of Pathe, Universal, and Underwood photographed the walkers and the skits put on by Phi Mu Delta, Sigma Nu, and Delta Psi. Kake Walk 1952 ran a close second prestigewise, gaining coverage in Life magazine.

One of the best stunts on record was put on in 1912 by Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural society. A gong struck! Through the utter blackness of the hall appeared miscellaneous arms, legs, a head and dismembered bodies of a phosphorescent character, all of which kept disappearing and appearing here and there in remote parts of the hall. Suddenly a comet with a fiery tail shot through the air. Instantly all the dissected bodies vanished and in the middle of the hall there arose a huge, glowing devil which danced through the darkness with wierd, fantastic steps and then gradually faded away into invisibility. The lights flashed on. Not a sign of apparatus or of human life was to be seen on the floor!

Kake Walk today, a guaranteed success almost before it is begun, makes it difficult to imagine a time when enthusiasm for the annual event could have been lacking. But the year 1900 came close to marking the end of Kake Walk. Initiated as a project to raise money for athletics, the majority of UVM students in 1900 felt that Kake Walk had outlived its usefulness. A group of supporters, led by the Vermont CYNIC, campaigned so vigorously that Kake Walk was reinstated. During another lag in spirit in 1912, the following appeared in the CYNIC:

"Any man who does not take enough interest in his college to enter - and do that back-bending, knee-bending, glorious old Vermont walk - is unworthy to be a son of Vermont and should have his diploma denied to him at the end of his four year sojourn here." Apparently it was Kake Walk or else!

And so Kake Walk survived, and grew, and changed. At various times Kake Walk has included a sugar-on-snow party, a masquerade ball, and a winter sports competition. There were Kake Walks that lasted only one night, Kake Walks that saw women doing the walking, and even one Kake Walk where curfew was extended to allow for a sunrise dance after the walking, where refreshments were served in the wee small hours of the morning and breakfast served at sunrise. Unlikely to appear again is the photograph snapped of Ira Allen in 1958. That dignified gentleman was photographed on his pedestal, his right arm clasping a whiskey bottle, while across his chest he bore a sign saying "No Dry Kake Walk."

Yes, Kake Walk has changed and will go on changing. While you listen to "Cotton Babes" and watch the walkers doing the same routines that were done 67 years ago, keep one eye on the past and one on the future. What will Kake Walk '65 be like?

Izzo Replaces Marston As Man-Behind-The-Scenes

by Lois Allison

Kake Walk '64 marks the departure from the carnival scene of one of the most important "behind-the-scenes" men of the weekend - faculty advisor Frederick Marston. An overabundance of extra-curricular activities have forced Professor Marston to give up the advisory position he has held for the past 8 years; he is to be succeeded by Professor Joseph Izzo of the Math Department.

Looking back, Professor Marston describes his past as one that entails both "giving advice and utilizing past experience. Working within the framework of the I.F.C. Kake Walk Committee, student directors and faculty advisor combine to hassle out problems of finances, entertainment, presentation, etc.

Despite all its problems, Kake Walk has brought its share of light memories to Professor Marston. One fortunate year, the skits were presented to the accompaniment of a slightly overturned piano and a distinct scarcity of electricity. Another diverting memory pertains to a slight conflict between the CYNIC and the Kake Walk Committee over a publication deadline. This resulted in an interesting cat and mouse game of CYNIC distribution and Kake Walk Committee confiscation.

Kake Walk, however, has not been Prof. Marston's only extra-curricular endeavor at the university. Since coming to the UVM English Department in 1948, he has been advisor to IFC, president of the local Phi Beta Kappa chapter, tennis coach and University marshal.

Parting thoughts? The advice to "Have fun!" to the new advisor. But despite all the chaos and crises "nothing matches the excitement and fulfillment of the moment when that white hankerchief is dropped."

Grow with Us

At Xerox, you become a part of one of America's fastest growing corporations; a dynamic, well established company which is a world leader in the exciting and expanding field of graphic communications. More than 85% commercially oriented, Xerox enjoys constantly increasing operating revenues with which it can explore dramatic new applications of electricity and light. For example:

- ☐ Total operating revenues for the first nine months of 1963 reached $116,100,443; up 56% from 1962.
- ☐ Expenditures for research and engineering ($5 million in 1961; $13.5 million budgeted for 1963) have kept pace in a program of planned growth extending far into the future.

In five years, the number of Xerox employees has grown from 1500 to more than 6000, and it's constantly gaining momentum. Such a growth pattern constantly creates key job opportunities in many technical and non-technical areas, for applicants with exceptional abilities.

Many facets of our growth include:

- ☐ 157 new products marketed since 1950.
- ☐ 47 new patents were issued in 1962 alone.
- ☐ A new manufacturing and research complex situated on 1,000 acres of campus-like setting to which more than 800,000 square feet of modern facilities have been added since 1956.

Among the exciting projects presently underway within the broad discipline of graphic communications are:

- ☐ Information storage and retrieval systems
- ☐ Information transmission
- ☐ New product concepts in the medium of electro-photographic copying equipment

If you would like the satisfaction and challenge of working for such a company... and have the potential and desire to grow... there's a place and a future for you at Xerox. Opportunities exist in the following areas:

- ☐ Research and engineering
- ☐ Finance
- ☐ Manufacturing
- ☐ Marketing
- ☐ Control

Essentials Of Walking

1. Head and Shoulders
 - a. Head should be to rear forming arch with shoulders.
2. Kick
 - a. Thighs should be brought up parallel to the ground before rest of leg is extended.
 - b. Leg should be straight.
 - c. Toes should be pointed.
3. Teamwork and Smoothness
 - a. Walkers should display high degree of coordination.
 - b. Rapidity of movement ought not necessarily be considered desirable over less rapid and more decisive actions.
 - c. Hands when raised in air above head should have fingers extended and separated.

Kake Walk Scoring

A NEW JUDGING SYSTEM

This year each of the three judges will be responsible for one of the three major areas of judging. All three judges will judge each team on stunts and special steps. By judging only one of the three areas the judges will be able to more critically evaluate the performances of each team.

Financial Aid

There will be two meetings to discuss the availability of financial aid at the University to continuing students next year.

Every student planning to apply for financial aid should attempt to attend one of the two meetings. The first one is on Wednesday evening, February 26th, at 7 p.m. in the chapel. The second is on Thursday afternoon, February 27th at 4:15 in Hills Hall.

Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" Is KW Theme Song

by Eileen Giller

Every year, as George Washington's birthday and Kake Walk approach, the UVM campus is filled with the strains of Percy Wenrich's "Cotton Babes." Since 1913, "Cotton Babes" has been the theme song for Kake Walk.

At the time "Cotton Babes" was popular, it was a favorite Kake walking melody. Once a year, Percy Wenrich's song relives its past glory.

A fact little known in Vermont is that the composer of "Cotton Babes" was one of the most famous and productive songwriters of the 1910's and 20's. Wenrich is still remembered by music lovers for his biggest hits which included "Moonlight Bay," "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." When "Cotton Babes" became the UVM theme song for Kake Walk, the music was first played by the Burlington Military Band, under the direction of George D. Sherman. Since 1921, Joseph Lechnyr was the only one who performed "Cotton Babes." When the Hayward Building burned down in 1929, Lechnyr rewrote Wenrich's "Cotton Babes" from memory, thus saving the song for the sake of posterity.

Percy Wenrich was born in Ioplin, Missouri in 1887. His father loved to write music for political conventions and rallies in which he was usually involved. His mother, an accomplished musician, taught him to play the piano and the organ. Showing his musical talent in his youth, Wenrich used to perform his compositions with the aid of his glee club at political rallies. At the age of twenty-one, Wenrich was sent to the Chicago Musical College to study the organ. However, once he had been removed from the watchful eyes of his parents, he broke away from his interest in the organ and began writing popular songs. As is the way with many young artists, Wenrich's first attempts were unsuccessful. His first break came when Frank Buck of Buck and Carney Music Publishers gave Wenrich the opportunity to write a song about Africa. Buck, having just returned from Africa, thought there might be potential in such a song and even supplied the young writer with the title, "Ashy Africa." Along with this publication was another song, "Just Because I'm From Missouri." His immediate success from these songs established Wenrich in the songwriting business.

When his profession was on the downgrade and Wenrich was about to return home to Ioplin, he landed a job plugging songs in the music department of Gimbel's Milwaukee department store. It was then that another of his songs became a local hit - "Under the Tropical Moon." This provided Wenrich with enough confidence and money to get to New York. The road from here was not all clear sailing, but in the following years several other songs, such as "Rainbow" which established him as a professional composer, led him on to success. One of his songs, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," became President Wilson's favorite song. In the fruitful years that followed, Percy Wenrich composed such greats as "Moonlight Bay," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose."

Wenrich, although still composing, set up his own publishing firm in partnership with Homer Howard, which he soon sold to Leo Feist along with the rights to publish his songs. During World War I, Wenrich produced such war hits as "Where Do We Go From Here, Boys," which was sung by the Marines. This was Wenrich's last great popular hit, but not his last success.

Turning to the musical stage, Wenrich produced Castles in the Sky, an operetta (in collaboration with Ray Peck), and The Right Girl, a musical comedy. From 1914 'til 1929, Wenrich toured the vaudeville circuit with his wife, Dolly Connelly.

After his retirement from vaudeville, the composer lived in Hollywood until he was stricken with tuberculosis. He and his wife moved to Saranac Lake where she too became ill and was hospitalized for the rest of her life. During this time, Wenrich became an ardent member of the Lambs. In 1948, he wrote "Missouri, My State." His last musical effort was in 1952 when the Civil Air Patrol asked Wenrich to compose an official song. The completion and acceptance of his work, "Cadets of the Civil Air Patrol" was too much for the elated composer and several days later he died, in March of 1952.

But every year, as there is a tense silence, a drop of the handkerchief and the "Cotton Babes" melody fills the auditorium marking the beginning of a new Kake Walk. Percy Wenrich, composer of so many well-known hits lives again on the UVM campus.

John Lauritzen wanted further knowledge

When the University of Nevada awarded John Lauritzen his B.S.E.E. in 1961, it was only the first big step in the learning program he envisions for himself. This led him to Western Electric. For WE agrees that ever-increasing knowledge is essential to the development of its engineers—and is helping John in furthering his education.

John attended one of Western Electric's three Graduate Engineering Training Centers and graduated with honors. Now, through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, John is working toward his Master's in Industrial Management at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. He is currently a planning engineer developing test equipment for the Bell System's revolutionary electronic telephone switching system.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, both educationally and professionally, we should talk. Western Electric's vast communications job as manufacturing unit of the Bell System provides many opportunities for fast-moving careers for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, as well as for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. Get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Faculty And Administration Chosen To Judge KW Events

Each year during Kake Walk scores of trophies are given to houses and individuals for such things ranging from first place in walking to third place in snow sculpture. The recipients of these coveted awards are determined by a panel of judges made up of members of the faculty, and administration.

This year's judges are as follows:

Poster:

Assoc. Prof. Ann Keppel
Asst. Prof. Thomas Brodin
Mr. Malcolm Mills

Sculpture:

Mr. Paul Aschenbach
Assoc. Prof. Truman Webster
Assoc. Prof. Donald Moser

Skit Selection:

Asst. Prof. Edward J. Feidner
Asst. Prof. Earl Weaver
Prof. Frederick C. Marston

Skit Performance:

Friday:
Assoc. Prof. Robert W. Cochran
Gen. Major George D. Gram, Jr.
Assoc. Prof. Douglas P. Fay

Saturday:
Assoc. Prof. Harry Lighthall
Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuyzen
Assoc. Prof. Ian Hamboldt

Walking:

Friday:
Prof. Bennet Murdock
Prof. Paul Moody
Prof. James Schoonmaker

Prof. James Schoonmaker

Saturday:
Prof. Robert Babcock
Prof. Thomas Sproston, Jr.
Prof. Donald Gregg

Every year the judges have a difficult chore to choose the winning walkers, the best skit, sculpture and poster. Sometimes they must resort to unorthodox, but fair, methods to decide.

of Gold Key. He is now currently serving as the vice-president of the Junior Class. Ralph's main concern was the editing and production of the Kake Walk program book. Ralph's future will be either Law School or Graduate School.

GORDON PATERSON
KW Financial Advisor

The assistant directors working with the Production Director are Stephen C. Slack and Calvin K. Walker. Steve, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carstens Slack of Washington, D.C., is a junior majoring in Business Administration. Steve is a member of Sigma Phi Fraternity in which he has served as Secretary, Treasurer, and Student Association Representative. Steve was a member of the swim team and was elected Captain of the team. He also holds membership in Key and Serpent. Steve was responsible for the King and Queen campaigns, Pops Night, and walking. His future may possibly be directed towards law school. Cal, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Walker of Underhill, Vt., is a junior majoring in Animal and Dairy Science. Cal is a brother of Alpha Gamma Rho where he has served as Pledgemaster. He also holds membership in Alpha Zeta Fraternity, Gold Key, and Key and Serpent. Cal is responsible for skits, lighting, and sound. Cal's future will be occupied with graduate work in Animal Science.

The final member of the Kake Walk Staff is Miss Judy A. Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armand E. Miller of Winoski. Judy serves the committee ably in the capacity of secretary. She is a senior majoring in Business Education. Judy is a sister in Delta Delta Delta Sorority where she currently is the recipient of the Tri Delt rotating scholarship pin for the highest scholastic average. Judy has served on the Panhellenic Council, Ariel staff, and the Freshman Orientation Committee. Judy's future plans will be to teach high school.

The activities and honors are long and impressive. This is just one measure of their leadership quality. Perhaps the final and most conclusive evidence is the relative ease with which this massive undertaking was accomplished. The odds were almost insurmountable, so it seemed, and yet they have come through with splendid fashion. Their individual capabilities are without repute, but what is more impressive is the teamwork of this fine unit. The Kake Walk weekend is accompanied by numerous jobs that often cannot be accomplished by the designated person. Nevertheless, the jobs were done with the same degree of proficiency that might be expected from the designated person. One cannot emphasize the magnificent job that this group has done together—this was no one-man show. Congratulations and good luck to these dedicated people.

Yes, another Kake Walk is about to go into history, and with it, another will take its place on the drawing boards. Soon again, they will go through the motion of darts, falling typewriters, and friendly chats in front of Southwick and in the Kake Walk office. Ten bottles and fifteen migraines later, we will be the guests of another great and wonderful Kake Walk.

Fire up boys!

The assistant director working with the Publicity Director is Ralph D'Altilia, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D'Altilia of Union City, N.J. Ralph is a junior majoring in Economics. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity where he has served as Social Chairman. Ralph is a member of the advanced ROTC cadre. He is also a starter on the UVM Catamount basketball team. They Really Like To Study

Let me introduce you to the biggest "pits" in school, Alan Johnson and Robert Champagne. Doesn't sound like an impressive title does it. Well, you have to know what a pit is to appreciate what these boys are noted for. A "pit", in the UVM vernacular, is one who studies so hard and so long that at the end of his "pit session", he has to take a shower. He can be compared with an athlete training for a special event. In the case of the athlete, the shower is necessary because of perspiration caused by physical work. With the "pits", the bath is needed because of excess bodily perspiration in the under-arm area caused by mental work, worry and pressure.

Al and Bob live across the hall from me and I've learned of their study habits by observing their daily ritual. They go to class, eat, and then they study. What's wrong with that you say. Well, when they study, nothing or nobody bothers them. Their door is locked and their brains are in gear from after supper to shower time. On the night before a test, the security measure they take not to be interrupted are fantastic. They put a towel under their door, to keep the light in and intruders out, and don't stir at all. If anyone knocks, they soon go away, thinking that nobody is home.

I admire these fellows for their power of concentration and devotion to studying. I think they actually like to study. Let me tell you about them.

They have roomed together since their freshman year. Both boys were born on the same day, August 11, 1943. Both have very similar over-all averages, 85.75 for Al and 85.55 for Bob. Last semester they put in an extra effort and emerged with 90 averages. Bob had 90.25, while Al slipped to 90.10. Both are majoring in zoology. Al is carrying a 23 credit load this semester, including some night courses. Bob is only taking 18. After three years of undergraduate work, both of them are planning to go to grad school next year. Bob has already been accepted at Tufts School of Dentistry and Al is waiting to hear from his Medical School choices.

And they do do other things. Al is an excellent swimmer and enjoys going over to the gym now and then to exercise his body. Bob is interested in hockey and basketball and enjoys cheering the Catamounts in all sports. Oh, they both have girls at home and are having a good time like everybody else this weekend. But when it's over, it will be "pit time" again in 320 Austin, R.B.

UVM Places Third In Intercollegiate Debate

University of Vermont Debaters travelled to Dartmouth College and to the University of Buffalo over the weekend and made a strong showing among the nation's top debate teams.

At the Dartmouth Invitational, one of the nation's most competitive tournaments, Michael Cronin and Elzine Zak, both seniors placed third of 84 teams from 52 colleges and universities.

The tournament was "switch side" which demanded that each team debate both affirmative and negative on the topic of Federal Aid to Higher Education.

Winner of the tournament was Georgetown University, which defeated Harvard in the final round on Saturday evening.

UVM defeated Bates, Harvard, Northern Illinois, Holy Cross, St. Joseph's and William and Mary in the seeding rounds and MIT and Kings College in the octa-finals and quarter-finals respectively. UVM met winner Georgetown in the semifinals and lost on a 3-2 split decision. It was the first time in ten years that a UVM team has done so well at Dartmouth. A second UVM team of Norman Snow and Carmen Wessner also competed in the tournament. Teams travelled from the Pacific Coast, Midwest and South to Dartmouth for the tourney.

At Buffalo, affirmative debaters Cynthia Clark and Craig Nelson, sophomores, and Negative debaters Donna Kristianson and Barry Messinger tied for second place with a 9-3 record. Thirty-one teams from 27 schools attended. Tournament winner was Canisius College with a 10-2 record.

Our world-recognized trademark—"the P&WA eagle"—has been identified with progress in flight propulsion for almost four decades, spanning the evolution of power from yesterday's reciprocating engines to today's rockets. Tomorrow will find that same Pratt & Whitney Aircraft eagle carrying men and equipment to the moon and to even more distant reaches of outer space.

Engineering achievement of this magnitude is directly traceable to our conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. Today's engineers at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft accept no limiting criteria. They are moving ahead in many directions to advance our programs in energy conversion for every environment.

Our progress on current programs is exciting, for it anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. We are working, for example, in such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells... nuclear power—all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The breadth of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft programs requires virtually every technical talent... requires ambitious young engineers and scientists who can contribute to our advances of the state of the art. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in:

Career boundaries with us can be further extended through a corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. For further information regarding opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or—write to Mr. William L. Lane Series Presents "Man For All Seasons" Feb. 26

Robert Harris and Jeff Morrow in the New York Drama Critics' Prize Play "A Man for All Seasons" by Robert Bolt.

ECONOMICS CAN BE CHUCKLES

Many of you have been avoiding economics because it is so widely known as "the dismal science." Oh, good friends, stop cheating yourselves of many a laugh and cheer, because economics is a positive riot! True, it is called the dismal science, but that is only because it was invented in 1681 by Walter C. Dismal.

It is easy to understand why Mr. Dismal's discovery of economics is today almost forgotten, for the fact is that he himself only stayed with the subject for two or three days. After that he took up embonpoint, which means fatness. It is said that at his apogee, Mr. Dismal reached 1200 pounds. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

It was not until 1776 when Adam Smith published his Wealth of Nations (or Ozymandias, as it is usually known as) that the world came to realize what a rosy, twinkly, fun subject economics is. As Mr. Smith showed in his jocular little treatise, there is nothing complicated about economics.

This later became known as the Louisiana Purchase

When there is a great demand for a product, a great supply is placed on the market. When there is a small demand, there is a small supply. Take, for example, castanets. You walk into any average American town today and I'll wager you won't see more than eighty or ninety castanet shops. That is because the demand is small.

For Marlboro Cigarettes, on the other hand, the demand is great. Thus, you will find Marlboros—with all their yummy rich tobacco flavor and pure white Selectrate filter and pliable soft pack and unpliable Flip-Top box—at any counter where cigarettes are sold in every one of our fifty great States and Duluth.

To Adam Smith, I say, belongs the distinction of popularizing economics. Mr. Smith was followed by David Ricardo. In fact, everywhere he went he was followed by David Ricardo. Mr. Smith finally got so annoyed that he summoned a bobby, as British policemen are called, and had Mr. Ricardo arrested. This later became known as the Louisiana Purchase.

Upon his release from gaol, as a British jail is called, Mr. Ricardo reported to his parole officer, Thomas Robert Malthus. They soon became fast friends, and one night over a game of whist they invented the stock exchange, or chutney, as it is called in England.

Well sir, with the British having, you might say, a corner on economics, the French decided that they wanted some economics too. Being, however, a proud nation, they refused simply to borrow British economics, but insisted on inventing their own. At first they tried using the truffle hound as a medium of exchange. When this proved less than satisfactory, they switched to pomade. Discouraged by this second disappointment, they finally shrugged and said, "Oh, who cares about economics anyhow?" and returned to the guillotine and Maurice Chevalier.

America, I am pleased to report, had much better success with economics. Our early merchants quickly broke down economics into its two major categories—coins and folding money—and today, as a result of their wisdom, we can all enjoy the automatic toll station.

Well sir, I could go on and on about this fascinating subject, but I know you're all in a tearing hurry to rush out and sign up for Econ I. So I will leave you now with two kindly words of farewell: Gresham's Law.

"A Man For All Seasons" will be the first Red Lane Series presentation of the new semester. The curtain will rise on Robert Bolt's prize-winning play at 8:30 P.m., Wednesday, February 26. Winner of the New York Critics' Circle Award and four Antoinette Perry (Tony) Awards, the cast is now playing a coast-to-coast tour under the auspices of National Performing Arts.

Robert Harris, in the title role of Sir Thomas More, is one of England's most distinguished actors, having performed for over 35 years in both England and America. Seen yearly in the West End Theatres of London, he has also spent two years as a star of the Stratford, England, Shakespeare Festival, and several years as a star of the Old Vic in London. He has appeared in New York on three separate occasions.

"A Man For All Seasons" is the story of the famous Chancellor of England, Sir Thomas More, who stood up to Henry VIII. He refused to condone the King's disdain for vows - to marriage and church. It is the story of a man's passionate conviction that the world may take everything from him, but he must remain faithful to his conscience even to death.

The action of the play ends in 1535, a period when England was negotiating the sharpest corner in her spiritual history. More was a pivot of English life at the time. By 1514 More had become a member of Parliament and the author of "Utopia." He was an ascetic, scholarly lawyer who in his early years was drawn to the life of a monk. He was considered the greatest lawyer of his time, a perfect advocate. In 1517, More represented Leo X against King Henry VIII in the matter of the King's seizure of the Papal ship and its wool cargo at Southampton. More won the case. Shortly thereafter, Henry made him a member of the King's Council.

More resigned as Lord Chancellor in 1532. He could not condone the King's divorce and subsequent marriage in a country ruled by the Roman Church. After Henry VIII set up the Church of England, the Act of Succession came out requiring all citizens to take an oath to observe and maintain the contents of the new ruling. More's conscience prevailed, even to refusing to attend the Queen's coronation.

More's private and public reputations were staggeringly high -- he seems to have had no petty enemies; only great and fatal ones. The title of this play is taken from a passage which was composed by Robert Whittinton for Tudor schoolboys to put into Latin: "More is a man of angel's wit and singular learning; I know not his fellow. For where is the man of that gentleness, lowliness and affability? And as time requireth, a man of marvelous mirth and pastimes; and sometimes of as sad a gravity; a man for all seasons."

Dr. Amidon Resigns Post

Dr. E. L. Amidon, chairman of the department of medicine in the UVM College of Medicine and Medical Director of the Mary Fletcher Hospital for more than 20 years, has indicated his decision to relinquish his post as department chairman, it has been announced by UVM President John T. Fey.

Dr. Fey said the University has accepted the resignation of Dr. Amidon from the chairmanship of the department "reluctantly", but "with gratification for the contribution Dr. Amidon has made to the affairs of the University in the years he has served as chairman of the department of medicine."

Dr. Fey noted that Dr. Amidon would continue to serve on the Medical College faculty as professor of medicine, supporting the excellent medical training programs which have developed during his term of office and actively assisting in the further growth and development of the College endeavors. He said he would appoint a committee to seek a chairman as a successor to Dr. Amidon.

"I would like to take the opportunity to thank the members of the faculty of the College of Medicine and members of the department of medicine, at both hospitals for their cooperation during this time of rapid growth and development in all three institutions. The people of the state of Vermont can now be offered technically advanced, highly skilled care of which they may have the utmost confidence and pride."

Evening With IBM To Be Held Feb. 26

by Douglas O. Hanau

Director of Placement

On Wednesday Evening, February 26, at 7:30 P.M., in the Waterman Lounge, the Placement Office is sponsoring an "Evening with IBM". The purpose of the program is to acquaint Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores, and any interested Freshman in the Data Processing Industry and the IBM Company.

Acting as panel moderator will be Mr. Robert Carpenter, Branch Manager, Montpelier, Vermont. Each of the participants are former alumni of the University of Vermont. They include Mr. L. D. McEwing, UVM '51, Data Processing Manager, Brooklyn, New York; Mr. Jack Burke, UVM '54, Program Administrator, Manufacturing Industry Marketing; Mr. Paul Lowe, BSEE, UVM '55, MS/Physics UVM '57, Ph D/EE Stanford '64, Manager Integrated Systems Packaging; and Mr. Robert Hill, BS/EE UVM '60, Manufacturing Staff Engineer, General Products Division, Essex Junction, Vermont.

The speakers will each give a short presentation on their specific job areas in IBM - Systems Engineering, Sales, Research Engineering, Manufacturing - and will cover briefly the types of work they have done and the opportunities available for UVM graduates. The formal presentation will take approximately 50 minutes and will be followed by refreshments and an informal discussion period. In addition to the student body, members of the faculty and administration are cordially invited to attend.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

Berkshire Life Insurance Company will be on campus March 3, to interview Senior Math Majors for Actuarial Training. Candidates should have a B average and be willing to live in Pittsfield, Massachusetts. Berkshire will also interview Junior Math Majors for Summer Actuarial Training Program. Candidates should sign-up on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, February 24, 25, 26.

Gifts To The University

A PRETTY SONG (OR SMILE) IS LIKE A MELODY - Jean Connor of Rutland and Larry Bender of Forest Hills, N.Y., are shown playing one of two pianos in Billings Center that were gifts of the Class of 1938. (Credit: Audio-Visual)

IT'S IN THE BOOK - If a check of a reference book is all that is needed, many an argument can now be settled rather easily by UVM students, thanks to the gift of a set of encyclopedias to the Billings Center by the Family Associates of the University. Here, Pont Appel of Elmont, N.Y., and Barry Messinger of New York City do a little checking. (Credit: Audio-Visual)

Area Studies

Dr. Felike Gross, professor of sociology at Brooklyn College and professor of government, Area Studies Program, at New York University, will spend two days on the Vermont campus next week. Dr. Gross will give a lecture on Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. in room 24 Hills Building, "Types of Transmission and Consolidation of Power", and on Feb. 27 at 4:15, also in Hills, will participate in a faculty-student seminar, "Polish Sociology Today."

His appearance at UVM is under the auspices of the Center for Area Studies.

Trainer Grant Gets His Own Medicine

Bob Grant, popular University of Vermont athletic trainer, will be on the receiving end of treatments instead of the giving of the next few months.

Grant suffered a broken left shoulder in a skiing accident and is hospitalized at Mary Fletcher. Grant became Vermont's first fulltime trainer in the fall of 1962. Prior to that he had served as head trainer at Boston University for two years.

Last year at Kake Walk time, Mr. Grant went on and completed a 50-mile walk. Guess he'll have to sit this one out.

You have room for achievement in data processing—at IBM

There are challenging assignments open in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, coast to coast, with room for achievement in the marketing of information systems and equipment. ■

To qualify, you should have a bachelor's or advanced degree in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or the Liberal Arts. ■

You'll find that your opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, or space. ■

wide range of positions

Marketing: ■ The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. ■ He demonstrates how customers can achieve better business management and control through data processing. ■

Systems Engineering: ■ IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise an approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in implementing this solution. ■

opportunities for advancement

IBM, an Equal Opportunity Employer, offers you extensive training in the area of your special interest. ■ This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. ■

We also have comprehensive company-paid benefits plans... training programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field... and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study. ■

Lapointe: Minors Are Dead Majors Depend On Colleges

BY Head Baseball Coach Ralph Lapointe

Minor league baseball is dead! To substantiate this, you can check statistics and see that in 1947 there were approximately 60 minor leagues to prepare talent for major league teams. Today there are 16 leagues. From where is the talent going to come? It has been apparent for some time that the colleges are playing a more vital role in feeding talent to the major leagues. Although these two groups have not been on the best of terms during the past 15 years, it was obvious that neither group could prosper without the cooperation of the other so "a rapprochement" was effected by both groups within the last few years. The rapid decline of the minor leagues and the improved caliber of college baseball precipitated this inevitable marriage.

Major league organizations rading college campuses brought about a very serious rift between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the major league groups. In many instances college ball players were plucked off the college scene and given substantial bonuses for signing. There was also a large number who were lured away and given very little remuneration. For those young men who received sums of $50,000 to $100,000, the decision to turn pro was somewhat more reasonable. Regardless of success or failure there was enough green in the bank account to continue work towards the college degree. The tragic case was the boy who received a very small bonus and failed to make it. This individual had very little opportunity to obtain his college degree. There was the question of finances, and the fact that the boy had turned professional legislated against any form of athletic scholarship aid. There were more such cases than there were large bonus cases.

The NCAA objected strenuously to the signing of freshman and sophomores, and felt so strongly about it that they conducted an intensive survey to determine how many college baseball players who left school at the end of their freshman or sophomore years continued working towards their degree. The results were most revealing. Actually very few boys ever obtained their degree.

The spirit of cooperation which now exists between the NCAA and the Pro baseball people has brought about a more realistic rule about signing baseball players. The majors have agreed not to sign college prospects during the school academic year and not to sign any freshmen or sophomores until the sophomore year was completed. Another important step has been the formation of summer semi pro leagues which are subsidized by the majors. These leagues have received the blessing of the NCAA people and the financial backing of the major leagues. "Last summer there were 334 players from 125 NCAA member colleges playing for 50 town teams across the country. This was a 50 per cent increase over 1962. In the areas of St. Louis, Central Illinois and South Dakota-Nebraska, three organized leagues operated."

At last the college baseball player has an opportunity to play summer ball. This is a satisfactory arrangement for everyone concerned. The boy has an opportunity to develop talents, the big league scout has an opportunity to evaluate him and the college coach reaps the benefits of his players participating in a 40 game, summer schedule. The boy does not receive remuneration for playing baseball but is provided with an opportunity for gainful employment for a minimum of 32 hours per week.

College baseball seems to be on the upswing. There are many reasons for this. Improved physical facilities, indoor and outdoor, better equipment, better schedules and improved coaching. It must be recognized that the colleges are providing material for big league teams but organized baseball is also grooming college coaches. The number of college baseball coaches with big league experience is ever increasing and this has served to improve techniques and performance.

The University of Vermont picture is not as promising. We are faced with an academic calendar change in 1964-65 which will seriously affect our traditionally well balanced baseball program. In 1965 our baseball season will end May 8. It will be impossible to conduct an adequate baseball program under those conditions, unless we are able to institute a fall baseball program. This is our only salvation.

To attempt to play 16 games in 20 days, as we will have to do in 1965, is unreasonable from many points of view. This kind of scheduling will necessitate a "big league pitching staff" and I don't think we have that kind of depth. Weather will be another problem. We will be unable to make-up rained out games. In time we will have an unbalanced home and away schedule as we cannot play a home game until the last week in April. The fact that other schools in our conference have not adopted this type of calendar increases the dilemma of scheduling.

I have taken the liberty of contacting a number of New England schools with regards to playing a fall baseball schedule and have received many favorable answers -- we can find competition in the fall if we organize a program. If we are to survive -- we must develop this idea.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"OK OK, FELLOWS -- LET'S STOP CLOWNING AROUND WITH THAT SHOT PUTT!"

Story Of A Successful Coach

1964

In 20 years Ralph Lapointe hasn't changed much.

by Richard Rappaport

One of the most successful and popular coaches at UVM is Ralph Lapointe, head varsity baseball coach who also supervises the freshmen football and basketball teams while maintaining his position as an assistant professor of physical education.

Ralph began his own active sports career by starring in three sports, baseball, football and basketball at Winooski High School. After graduation from high school, Ralph attended UVM where he played three freshmen sports plus varsity football and basketball. However, Lapointe ironically never did participate in varsity baseball since he entered the armed service in the middle of his sophomore year.

After completing his tour of duty in the service, Ralph signed a professional baseball contract playing six years in the pros from 1946-1951. Lapointe spent his initial season in the minors with Wilmington, and then was brought up to the majors. Ralph played two full seasons in the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Phillies. He was then sent down to the International League, where he played for Rochester, Baltimore and Toronto. In 1951 Lapointe finally concluded his career with Tulsa of the Texas League when he retired in order to accept the head coaching position at Vermont.

While playing professional baseball, Ralph had assisted in football since 1947, but he did not become a full fledged member of the coaching staff until 1951.

LAPOINTE'S RECORD

Since he began coaching baseball at Vermont, Lapointe has never had a losing season even though he has only one grant-in-aid, and even that has only been in existence for the last six or seven years.

From the end of last August, until the end of November, Ralph and his wife were in the African country of Mali where he toured the area conducting basketball clinics for players between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five years old. In addition to conducting clinics, Lapointe also coached the national Mali basketball team while in this African country.

Ralph originally was offered this position by Tony Lupien, baseball coach at Dartmouth, who had been contacted by Nick Rhodes, a personal friend of the Kennedys, who was athletic program officer under the late President's administration.

One of the major reasons that Ralph was selected aside from his ability, was the fact that the government was looking for qualified coaches who spoke French fluently to go abroad under the Educational Cultural African Exchange.

Thus Lapointe, who does have mastery over this foreign language, accepted the position. After agreeing to accept this position, Ralph had to go through vigorous interviews and briefing sessions before being officially approved for the position, and was then sent to Africa for fourteen weeks. Also when he returned at the conclusion of his stay in Mali, he was de-briefed by government officials in this exchange program to provide good will in these politically important nations.

HIS RETURN

On his return last November from Mali, Lapointe resumed his duties as freshmen basketball coach at Vermont. Ralph is presently kept quite busy with his coaching duties, his referring of local high school games, and his numerous invitations to speak to various groups and show slides of his African trip.

With the basketball season drawing to a rapid conclusion, Lapointe is turning his thoughts to the approaching baseball season. According to Ralph "everything this year depends upon our pitching." This reason for his concern in relation to the pitching staff is that Vermont has lost last year's great star Dick Cassini who graduated, and three fine sophomore pitchers upon whom Ralph was counting have left school. Thus the squad has only five experienced hurlers

Al Foster, Carl Martin, Jim Brennan, Bill Christie, and Hardy Merrill which is a very small number for the season in which games are often played at almost every day.

However, the bright spot appears to be the hitting. Ralph expects to "pick up in our hitting over last year since we were handicapped last year in the cage where our hitting lanes were overcrowded." This year with most of the regulars back, and the situation in the cage improved, the hitting should be definitely superior to that of last year.

CATCHERS

The squad has four catchers but only one is experienced, junior Mike Behan. The other three catchers are sophomores Jim McKinnon, Tom Blanchard and Jim Manning.

INFIELD

In the remainder of the infield John Tartera returns at first base, Dick Boutilier is back at second, and sophomore Bob Cronin will play either shortstop or third. Thus there is still one important infield position left open at the present time, and filling it could be a major problem.

OUTFIELD

The outfield has three veterans returning, Bob Johnson, Pete MacDonald, and Steve Morse and thus the problem here is a minor one of finding capable replacements for these players.

At the present time Ralph lives at 2 Lapointe Street in Winooski, with his wife Cathryn and his two sons Dave, seventeen, and Tommy, seven. Dave, already has demonstrated his athletic prowess by starring for Winooski High in baseball, football, and basketball for two seasons and at Deerfield Academy this year, where he was one of only two juniors to be selected to the All-New England Prep football team. He is also a star on the basketball court for this fine prep school.

Kittens Improve Through Season

Under the guidance of Ralph Lapointe, back after an extended State Department tour in North Africa, the coach of the UVM Frosh took one week to stabilize the falling Kittens. With a team that lacks the height of most of its opponents and the finesse of the UVM varsity, they attempt to make up for it in hustle.

Using a 3-2 offense and also a high-pivot which doesn't require a tall man, they work the ball around and try for the "good" shot by stressing good ball handling. The main part of the Kittens' game is their changing defense. They use three different defenses to confuse the offensive club, changing the defense each time they come down the court.

In stressing defense, Coach Lapointe allots a large portion of practice time to defensive drills and running.

After two opening losses, the Cats are now on a 3-game winning skein, which includes a come-back victory over Norwich.

The Frosh are led by the playmaking trio of Bruce Hanna, Tim Hayes and Bill Schmidt. They depend on big (6-4) Pete Makosky and center Jack Schwerberger to pull down rebounds and provide screens for the sharp-shooting of Hanna. For added strength off the boards and in the playmaking department, Lapointe has Russ Boardman and Dick Trowbridge at his side to put into the game. Other reserves include Jerry Abbot, Don Longley, Morris Belden, Don Kruger, Nick Van Tassel and John Tobin.

The Frosh are just starting to improve and play more as a team. They are looking forward to a better second half of their schedule.

Baseball Practice Begins

The University of Vermont baseball team has been working out in the Gardner-Collins cage for the past two weeks.

The first two weeks is mainly for conditioning and getting the pitchers' arms in shape for hitting practice which will start shortly.

Vermont lost four members of last year's team which finished 14-12, overall and 5-5 in the Yankee Conference. Members missing are pitchers Dick Cassani and Ted Jones plus Joe Pare and Wayne Van Ham.

Coach Ralph Lapointe's main problem will be finding a third starter to go along with returning juniors Charlie Foster and lefty Carl Martin. Jim Brennan or sophomore Jack O'Dea may get the nod in this department.

Other pitchers hoping to stick as relievers or starters include juniors Hardy Merrill and Bill Christie plus sophomores Paul Modarelli and Mike Shea.

Coach Lapointe has an abundance of catchers with currently five men out for the backstop position. Veterans back are Mike Behan and Bill Rundle while rookies Tom Blanchard, Jim Manning and Jim McKinnon are hoping for a berth.

John Tartera will no doubt be at first with captain Dick Boutlier playing short or second depending on whether Lapointe can find a capable shortstop so Dick can play his normal second base position.

Other infield aspirants include Howie Gershater and Bob Cronin both first year men to the varsity. Cronin has the inside track at third while Gershater could take over at second if Boutlier moves to short.

The outfield finds two starters returning from last year. Veterans Bob Johnson and Pete MacDonald will be back in the outer pastures for another season. The third spot may go to a catcher or to sophomore lay Hurewitz. Other possible outfield candidates include pitchers Jim Brennan and Al Foster, who is also capable of performing in the infield. Steve Morse will be vying for service in the outfield as he returns for his second year. No doubt all these men will see some action as coach Lapointe likes to platoon depending on the pitcher.

Pitching seems to be the main problem this season with shortstop causing much concern for Lapointe. Hitting should be improved with a number of first year men gaining experience last year.

REPORT ON INTRAMURAL SPORTS

by Mel Bloomenthal

During the first semester, intramural championships were gained in the sports of touch football, tennis, bowling, squash, basketball, and handball (doubles).

Sigma Phi Epsilon initiated their winning ways in the fall by winning the all-campus touch football championship. After defeating Kappa Sigma in the fraternity final, 13-6, Sig Ep then met the independent winners, the Leftovers. Sig Ep downed the Leftovers in a thriller by a score of 14-7.

In the tennis (singles) tournament, which was an open event, John Adler of TEP emerged victorious. Adler defeated George Cook of Delta Psi for the championship.

The bowling competition followed the tennis tourney, and found Sig Ep again in the Fraternity finals. Sig Ep met defeat at the hands of Delta Psi. The Delts were subsequently downed by the independent champ, which represented the Marsh - Tupper - Austin complex, thus deciding the all-campus championship.

An independent winner also emerged from the squash (singles) tournament. The squash champ was David Edwards.

Independents prevailed in the handball (doubles) tournament also. In this contest, Cy Theobald and John Donnelly outlasted the rest of the competition.

Basketball dominated the remainder of the intramural competition. Delta Psi and Sig Ep, both undefeated in their respective leagues, clashed for the fraternity championship. Delta Psi came out on top in this tilt by a score of 40-34.

While these two teams were going at it, the Extras were downing the Underwriters, 48-38, gaining the independent title.

In the finale which decided the all-campus championship, Delta Psi halted a late comeback bid by the Extras, and went on to win to the tune of a 39-32 score.

With these events completed, the competition for the coveted All-Sports Trophy seems to be a four-team race. The top contenders and their totals are:

Sigma Phi Epsilon 300

Alpha Epsilon Pi 224

Immediately following the Wake Walk Weekend, the intramural sports program will continue. The handball (singles) and paddleball (doubles) tournaments commence on February 24. On the same date, the Faculty handball (doubles) and paddleball (doubles) tournaments will begin. This event is open to all faculty members, graduate students and administration members.

Events to follow will be the indoor relays (March 5, 9, 11), open track meet (March 12, 13, 14), swim meet, open ski meet, and volleyball (March 11). Entries for volleyball are due February 24 - March 4.

CATAMOUNT SKIERS COMPETE FOR NCAA BID

strictly tentative. Also, if Quimby can keep his ankle together for just two more weeks, then he will race in at least the alpine events, if not all four.

Lamb and Dwinell are both skiing very well and have shown that they can place with the best in the East this year. This past weekend, Nash placed a creditable fifth in the Draper Cup Downhill at Whiteface, and Jim took a second at the Mt. Tom Trophy Race. Austin and Carnie are both skiing well also, and show marked improvement with a year more experience behind them.

Leading the nordic team are returning lettermen Lozinski and Thurber. They are both strong runners, and have the potential to place well in their event. Hosmer and Goedecke, both sophomores, have been showing a good deal of promise as the season moves on.

As for the coaching, Jake Stewart's able and productive efforts have been complemented appreciably this year by the addition of Al Duval to the team's coaching staff. Al is an employee of G.E., and devotes what spare time he has to working in particular with the nordic team. The markedly improved condition and performance of the team's runners are to a large extent a result of Mr. Duval's efforts.

All in all the team feels it is skiing as well if not better and is in better shape than last year, and looks forward to a successful performance in the up-coming meets. As was mentioned earlier, their efforts will be all the more intensified in the face of the possibility of qualifying for the NCAA's in March.

FOOTBALL REVIEW

by Richard Rappaport

After a disappointing 3-5 record under new head coach Robert Clifford in 1962, the University of Vermont Catamounts bounced back in Clifford's second season to record a 6-2 ledger which was the best Vermont performance since 1949.

UVM opened up its season by defeating AIC at Springfield, Mass., by a touchdown, 14-6. In this contest, right end Paul Toussaint was the whole show as far as the point making was concerned. Toussaint scored all the Cats' points on two touchdown passes of 8 and 18 yards from substitute quarterback Jack O'Dea, and also kicked both extra points.

After their initial win over AIC, the Cats returned home to face the Army "B" team. In this hard-fought contest Vermont registered a 12-0 triumph on touchdowns by halfback Deane Kent, who recovered a fumble in the end zone, and by fullback Richie Reynolds, who ran 26 yds. off tackle for the score.

Sporting an unblemished 2-0 slate, Vermont traveled to the University of Maine in their Yankee Conference opener. The Cats lost a squeaker 14-13, when the extra point by Ken Andrade was wide. Ken Burton was outstanding in this rugged contest as he scored both cat touchdowns on runs of 30 and 10 yards from scrimmage.

The fourth game of the season against Rhode Island at home was probably Burton's outstanding performance of the season. In the Catamounts 21-8 triumph the elusive Vermont halfback scored twice on runs of 60 and 59 yards, as he gained a total of 147 yards, just three short of his school mark in one game.

the contest into a rout, as Richie Reynolds on a 2 yard run, Pete Weiss on a pass, and Frank Foerster on a 21 yard run all scored touchdowns.

The Catamounts' three game winning streak was stopped by Massachusetts at Amherst as the Redmen defeated Vermont in the Yankee Conference championship game by the score of 41-0. In this contest UVM suffered many injuries to key players, and the game was out of reach early in the second half, even though the team did not give up until the game was over. The highlight of the contest for UVM were a couple of fine runs by Ken Burton, accomplished with very little blocking.

In the season's finale, Vermont won the state title for the first time in many years by defeating Middlebury in an away game by the score of 14-0. Vermont completely outplayed the Panthers, but the score was kept down by the poor playing conditions due to the extremely inclement weather. Scoring touchdowns for the Cats were Paul Toussaint on a 10 yard pass play, and Ken Burton on a 25 yard run.

The fine play of the entire squad was evidenced by the fact that seven players, guards Ron Hertel, and George Oelze, center Rusty Brink, tackle Tom Mongeon, ends Paul Toussaint and Pete Weiss, and halfbacks Ken Burton and Scott Fitz were selected to the WVM all Vermont team. Also, Hertel, Oelze, Brink and Toussaint, made second team All-Yankee Conference, while Mongeon made honorable mention. However, the greatest honors went to Burton, who was named to the All-Yankee

There's No Place Like Home: Fuzzy Evans Cats Rout Midd. D'Altilia Stars

by Ken Spalter

If it were up to Coach Evans, it would be a safe bet that he would like to uphold the Monroe Doctrine, as far as UVM basketball is concerned. If it were possible, the Catamounts would try to avoid all foreign entanglements. At home and against Green Mountain competition, the Cats usually win. A perfect example of this domestic dominance is last Wednesday night's rout of Middlebury, 86-50.

The Evansmen now stand 3-1 in State Series play, with two crucial games against St. Michael's remaining on Feb. 24 and March 2. The first encounter will be at Memorial Auditorium and the second "at home".

The action against Middlebury was wild and wily. About mid-way in the first half, Coach Evans began shifting in substitutes until he had in a completely new team. UVM's spirited reserves put quite an exhibition of "reckless abandon" against the Middlebury irregulars who were put in the game by Panther Coach Mackey. Vermont held a 43-26 lead at the half and were not seriously challenged again. The Panthers did manage to claw their way to a 49-36 deficit, but the Cat regulars made sure they never got closer.

Ralph D'Altilia passed off for some fine assists and drove through the Panther defense like a wounded lion (or Catamount). He scored 12 points and gathered in 13 rebounds. Milt Goggans poured in 17 points and hauled down 15 rebounds to be the most productive Catamount. Captain Dave Strassburg, playmaker Layne Higgs, and scrappy little Ken Spalter all hit double figures. Mike Karel played well and scored 7 points in a reserve role.

The importance of the home court is not questioned by Coach Evans nor his basketball team. At Patrick Gymnasium the Catamounts so far have an amazing 8-2 won and lost record. However, their dismal road record of one win and five losses brings their overall record to 9-7.

The Cats began the 1963-64 season impressively with three straight wins. They beat Dartmouth in an overtime contest 85-80; edged Maine 60-59 and the following day defeated this same Maine team 75-51. Layne Higgs, a sophomore guard was the high point getter in these games.

Vermont next travelled to Northfield to take on the Cadets from Norwich. Although, potentially superior, the Cats had a poor game and wound up on the losing end of a close game. Fuzzy's men then returned home and beat Clarkson University. At Christmastime, the Vermonters spent their vacation in New York at the N.Y.A.C. It must have been a long and tiresome trip, since the Cats dropped two games.

With the coming of the New Year, the Vermonters appeared to gain new life. They won their next three games, beating Middlebury, Mass. and St. Lawrence. In these games Goggans and D'Altilia controlled both backboards pulling down timely rebounds. Higgs led the fast breaks and set up innumerable close-in baskets.

The Vermont five then had a three week layoff while they took exams. This period of inactivity seemed to affect the calibre of basketball that they were accustomed to playing. They subsequently lost their next three games (all Yankee Conference tilts) by wide margins. First the University of Conn. outmanned the undersized Vermont team. Then New Hampshire outthrustled and outshot the Cats. The Wildcats used a full court press which Vermont could not handle. In the next game, Vermont couldn't cope with the overall depth of Rhode Island. The Cats stayed close for a half but then the Rams superior strength put the game out of reach.

The Catamounts managed to win their next game against Norwich. However, they still showed the same ineptness in the opening minutes of the game. They allowed Norwich to build up a 24-8 lead before finally coming to life. The varsity kept hustling and never gave up and left the court at the half with a 4 point advantage. Finally with three minutes to go, Vermont pulled ahead again and kept this margin to earn the victory. Ralph D'Altilia played a fine game scoring 24 points and hustling off the boards. In the second half, Higgs and Ken Spalter kept Vermont ahead with their fine ball handling and court sense.

Last week the Vermonters played two road games and lost both by considerable margins. Both the Univ. of Conn. and Mass. utilized half-court presses to upset the Vermont team. The Cats were forced to throw erratic and take hurried shots. They were not able to cope with the height advantage presented by both teams.

In the two State Series games with St. Mike's, past records and past games can all be forgotten. All that counts are the ten men that are on the floor. There is such an intense rivalry between these clubs that there cannot be a favorite or underdog. It is not important who has done well up to this point. Either team could beat the other on any given night. In order for the Cats to win they must hold down St. Mike's high scorer, Tarrant and get good boardwork from D'Altilia, Goggans and Strassburg.

Mapping winning tactics - Saturday's games are won on Monday night and throughout the week at practices. Coaches Clifford and Coons discuss plans for Saturday.

The other Vermont touchdown in this contest was registered by quarterback Scott Fitz on a 4 yard run.

Following its Rhody victory the Cats won their second consecutive Yankee Conference game by defeating New Hampshire 28-6 at Centennial Field. After Dan Setika had scored on an 82 yard run on a disputed play, UVM came storming back as four different Vermont players each scored once. Burton opened the scoring on a 26 yard run which put Vermont in the lead 7-6. Jack O'Dea was instrumental in the next two touchdowns, as he passed to Deane Kent for 16 yards, and then ran a quarterback sneak over from the one yard line. The last touchdown was recorded by Scott Fitz when he galloped 20 yards around the UNH defenders.

The next Saturday the Cats played the Cadets of Norwich in the first game of the annual Vermont State Series. After a slow start, UVM easily recorded their third straight victory by defeating Norwich 27-0. Deane Kent was the first Cat to score on a 15 yard run in the second period. In the second half Vermont turned Conference first team, the All-New England first team, and Little-All American honorable mention. Hertel was honored by his teammates by being chosen this year's captain.

Feirstein To Head New CYNIC Staff

Among the new staff for the 1964 CYNIC is a very capable group of editors. The editor-in-chief is Ira D. Feirstein, of Jamaica, New York. Ira is a junior and a political science major, who hopes to go on to medical school after graduating from UVM. He has been on the dean's list every semester. Ira has been elected to Gold Key, the sophomore men's Honor Society, and to Key and Serpent, the equivalent for junior men. Prior to his becoming editor-in-chief, he started out as a staff member. He moved on to Co-News editor and then to Assistant editor last semester. Supplementing his CYNIC activities, Ira was co-chairman for the Homecoming Publicity committee and is a brother in Phi Sigma Delta.

Ira Feirstein, Editor-in-Chief

Joan Klonsky, Assistant Editor
(Credit: Scott, SPS)

Working closely with Ira this year will be Joan Klonsky, the new Assistant editor. Joan's home is Rockville Centre, New York and is a junior. Joan has been working on the CYNIC since her freshman year. Last year she was one of the two News and Feature editors. Joan has served as secretary of the S.A. Elections committee and is currently secretary of her sorority, Alpha Epsilon Phi. As a freshman, she was elected to Alpha Lambda Delta, the freshman women's honorary. Since then, she has been on the Dean's list every semester. Joan is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences and is majoring in French.

Geri Sharff, Co-News Editor

The Co-News and Feature editors for this year are two sophomores: Geri Sharff from Newton, Mass., and Betty Fuchs from Rutland, Vt. Geri, an English major, would like to teach either in high school or college when she graduates. She has been on the CYNIC staff since her freshman year, is a student guide, and a member of the Lane Series Committee.

Betty Fuchs, Co-News Editor

Betty Fuchs has been a staff member since her freshman year, and has worked closely with Dr. Jack Trevithick for Lane Series articles. She is majoring in English and hopes to go into public relations work. Presently, she is social chairman for her floor in the girls' dormitories.

Heading the Sports staff this year is Richard Rappaport, a senior from Baldwin, N.Y. Everyone is probably familiar with him as the author of "Rappa's Roundup." Richard, a history major, plans to go on to law school next year. Besides writing for the CYNIC he was the Sports editor for the 1963 Ariel.

67th Kake Walk; SAE Takes Honors

Brothers of SAE fraternity cluster around as they receive Lechnyr cup, Kake Walk's most coveted prize. Their skit placed first on both nights of KW, bringing home another two cups to the fraternity.

Lechnyr Cup Goes To SAE

By Ken Klonsky

Kake Walk number 67 is now history. From the moment the big band of Count Basie struck its first note until the Sunday morning dizziness, the students and alumni of UVM witnessed yet another great spectacle. The most thrilling part, as always, was the inter-fraternity competition.

The most coveted prize of the Kake Walk was awarded to Sigma Alpha Epsilon when they ran off with the Lechnyr cup. This trophy is presented annually to the fraternity which best lives up to the spirit and traditions of Kake Walk.

The first event was the skits. Both Friday and Saturday nights Sigma Alpha Epsilon broke the ancient domination of the Borgan Cup by Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi. Their "Boulder War" was from the judges' and the crowd's point of view unquestionably the top skit. Phi Sigma Delta came in second Friday night with "Aorta Be in Pictures" and Tau Epsilon Phi grabbed the runner-up spot Saturday night with "Moon Spots".

The spine-tingling and traditional "Walkin' Fo' De Kake" was next. The 7000 some-odd people were treated to colorful costumes and some fantastic acrobatics. The first truly fine walk of the weekend came on Friday night when Steve Schulte and Pete Leavy of Tau Epsilon Phi dazzled the crowd with their amazing synchronization. However Friday night had three fraternities surpass this fine performance. In third place came Frank Willis and Nick Morrill of Phi Delta Theta. Second was

by Lois Allison

Perpetrating an important part of the Kake Walk tradition, UVM came through with another generally fine jazz concert this year. Presented on Friday afternoon, February 21, in the Patrick Gymnasium, the concert met with generally consistent audience approval.

Starting off things with a burst of spirit were the gospel group, the Grandison Singers. Utilizing harmonic technique and an infectious sense of rhythm, the Grandisons soon had the audience clapping and singing along to their gospel renditions. Several encores attested to the popularity of the group.

Following the gospel group was the inimitable Dizzy Gillespie with his jazz group. After a preliminary bantering session with his musicians - ranging from false introductions to the Ku Klux Klan - Gillespie proceeded to demonstrate his exciting artistry on the trumpet. His unique bop style had a captivating effect on the audience, however, too much of a good thing worked to ultimately detract from the performance. An unexplained time extension of Gillespie's act caused audience patience to wear somewhat thin.

Finally, the audience got what they had long been anticipating - the headline group of the concert, the Highwaymen. Warming quickly to the harmonic, smooth-flowing style of the five collegians, the audience registered enthusiastic approval for such folk hits as the "Gypsy Rover," "Cotton Fields," "Praetoria" and, of course, "Michael".

Pat and Steve Reign at Ball

By Betty Fuchs

Royalty was the byword Thursday, February 20. In a regally decorated gymnasium-turned-ballroom, hundreds of couples watched a Count crown a King and Queen. The occasion was the annual Kake Walk Ball and the royalty involved were the inimitable Count Basie and the King and Queen of Kake Walk '64.

The beginning of the Ball officially initiated the Kake Walk weekend. Count Basie and his fifteen musicians began to play at 9:00 P.M., in a pink and gold court ballroom setting. Twinkling lights from a large gold and white chandelier spotlighted the dancers.

At 10:00 P.M. the King and Queen were presented. After being crowned by the Count, Queen Patty Russell, Pi Phi's "Breath of Spring", and King Steve Abbott, AGR's Knight in Shining Armor, ascended the throne. The music began again as the King and Queen led the next dance.

Shortly after 11:00 the musicians began their jam session. It was a roof-rocking sensation featuring a five-minute solo by the drummer.

At 1:00 A.M. the band played its last song. As the last few lingering couples left the musicians packed up their instruments and boarded their bus for the trip to their next engagement. And when Friday afternoon's jazz concert came around, the gymnasium-turned-ballroom was just a gymnasium again.

Bard's Birthday Will Be Feted By UVM

The University of Vermont's celebration of Shakespeare's four hundredth birthday will bear a distinctive "Vermont" stamp.

Already known for its annual Champlain Shakespeare Festival, the University will this year add to that month-long summer program of Shakespearean plays other events centering around Shakespeare's birthday April 23. All will feature the resources of this area and of neighboring Canada.

A highlight of the celebration will be the exhibition during the last two weeks of April (April 19-May 3) of choice items from the renowned Fisher Collection of Shakespeare books and manuscripts which is shown each summer at the Stratford, Ontario, Shakespeare Festival.

Stanley Fisher, Montreal engineer and collector of one of the outstanding private collections of Shakespearean books will not only lend his books, but will also give a talk on the collection when the exhibition opens April 19 in Bailey Library at the University. Before the exhibition closes Mr. Fisher will also lecture on his own current research into the authenticity of maps of London made in Shakespeare's day.

A second feature of the University's Shakespeare Quadricentennial celebration will be the return of Professor Gregory Falls, now head of the drama school at the University of Washington, to the campus as featured speaker at the University's Honors Day program Friday, May

1. Honors Day, which annually honors outstanding students at the University, as well as the University's founders, will thus draw back to the campus a man distinguished among university drama directors in this country, and one who - while he headed the drama group at the University of Vermont - founded the Champlain Shakespeare Festival.

Featured on the night of Shakespeare's birthday - April 23 - will be the Shakespearean criticism done by England's greatest playwright since Shakespeare, George Bernard Shaw, as that criticism has been drawn into an "evening in the theatre" by Betty Bandel, professor of English at the University. Miss Bandel, who teaches courses in Shakespeare and Modern Drama, has prepared a play entitled "John Bull's Other Playwright" which utilizes both Shaw's critical writings about Shakespeare and also his three one-act plays in which Shakespeare figures. The production will be directed by Professor Edward J. Feidner, director of UVM's Champlain Shakespeare Festival. It will feature a cast of faculty, students and townspeople.

Not to neglect the fine work being done with Shakespeare by a drama medium unknown to the great playwright - the motion picture - the University will sponsor showings of a Czechoslovakian film of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," done with puppet actors and with voices provided by the famed Old Vic company of London. This 1961 film will be shown three times on Saturday, April 25, with the afternoon showing especially planned to accommodate all interested schoolchildren in the Burlington area.

The University's own drama department, under the direction of Professor Feidner, will open the celebration by making its annual spring production a Shakespearean play. The play is "Macbeth," scheduled for a four night run, March 19, 20, 21 and 22.

There will also be musical events to remind listeners of how closely music was tied to drama and poetry in Shakespeare's plays and in the works of his contemporaries. This musical fare began with the performance here on the Lane Chamber Series of the distinguished lutenist, Suzanne Bloch, who gave a performance on the lute and virginals February 6, and who also gave a lecture-demonstration on Shakespeare's use of music.

On the afternoon of Sunday, May 3, in Fleming Museum the University's music department will present a concert of Elizabethan music, especially that associated with Shakespeare's plays. Miss Nola Marberger, instructor of music and player of the harpsichord, will be in charge of the program, which will enlist the aid of a number of faculty members and other musicians who are expert on the recorder or in the singing of Renaissance music.

While the "Shakespeare month" is on, Fleming Museum will also feature a Shakespearean exhibition, one designed to illustrate how Shakespeare's birthdays have been celebrated since the David Garrick "Jubilee" in the late eighteenth century began such festivities.

All events will be open to the public. The exhibition of the Fisher collection of books, Mr. Fisher's lectures, the presentation of "John Bull's Other Playwright," and the music program May 3 will be without charge.

Sigma Phi Epsilon's Steve Bloom and Perry Cabot, First prize went to Alpha Epsilon Phi's sharply coordinated well practiced team of Steve Frankel and Ray Haas. Saturday night saw Phi Delta's Willis and Morrill clearly asserting themselves as the top walkers of the weekend grabbing the coveted first prize. Bloom and Cabot of Sig Ep showed rare consistency in taking second again. Bob Whitman and Norm Bone of Sigma Nu, took a commendable third. In fourth place was the determined duo of Dick Bass and Paul Krupp of Phi Sigma Delta.

Dean Patzer caused quite a commotion with his awarding of the snow sculpture prizes. Theta Chi was tops with their amazing Model T Ford. Lambda Iota's Mr. Clean grabbed second and the P.T. Boat of Alpha Gamma Rho was third.

American Mime Theater Bows At February 29 Lane Series

American Mime Theater Group

On February 29, in Southwick Auditorium, the American Mime Theatre will present a program of five amusing sketches as part of the Lane Chamber Arts Series. This performance by the oldest professional mime troupe in the country marks the first appearance of any mime artist on Lane Series.

In 1952 there was no mime activity in the United States and no European mimes had performed here. Paul J. Curtis, a Bostonian who had been working in the mime theatres of Europe, wandered into the Theatre de Poche to see a pantomime by Marcel Marceau. Already a skilled actor and director, Curtis was struck by the potentialities of the medium and began to wonder what would happen if he put acting -- real acting -- with the precise and beautiful movement he saw on the stage. He became a member of Marceau's troupe, after which he studied with the father of all modern mimes, Etienne Decroux. Two years later he returned to New York and organized the American Mime Theatre.

American Mime is a rebalance of the arts of acting, dancing, pantomime, design and playwriting. Its core is the art of acting. It begins with a specially trained actor who has been taught to act silently in form. This form is not the picture -- form of the dance, but rather the emotionally motivated physical extension of his characterization. Pantomime is used not as an end in itself, but as a means of furthering the particular situation of the plays.

It may be interesting to note that all American mimes are trained through the same physical technique. This technique, while not used in the Mime plays, produces the ensemble unity so rare in performing arts outside of the Dance.

The American Mime appears in Black tights before a white cyclorama. Equipment is used sparingly -- costumes and set pieces are only suggestive. Music runs the gamut from 17th century harpsichord to 20th century electronic sound.

The Mime plays are as varied in kind and quality as there are types of theatre. All are conveyed by what the characters do and all touch the symbolic world behind the actions to stimulate an audience response that is as immediate and personal as the human body itself.

The American Mime Theatre will open its Burlington performance with "The Lovers," an eight minute Mime play that is a symbolic reenactment of the classic approach, embrace and climax performed by two legendary lovers in blank masks observed by the enigmatic figure.

The Godstuff is a thirty minute Mime play using masks, miracles and electronic music. Four Gods set out to make an artist. They choose him, tempt him, frustrate him and finally have him find the godstuff of creativity within himself.

Next comes "The Pinball Machine." This is a four minute

Mime play which follows the antic course of the embattled pinball through the hostile bumpers of the machine.

After intermission the program continues with "The Scarecrow," a fifteen minute Mime play in the classical tradition using 17th century music with selected costumes and paper hearts. The Prince must choose between the Scarecrow he made and the maiden he falls in love with.

Mime as a medium has existed throughout the history of the theatre. Today it exists in two major schools: The French Mime where the art of pantomime and gesture dominate the medium; and American Mime where the art of acting in form presents a new theatre experience.

It is this new theatre experience that American Mime is about. Stimulating, direct and frankly theatrical, it transcends the barriers of language to produce a new rapport between performer and audience and a new dimension of the world theatre.

Ribicoff Fights For Aid Bill

by the original proposed tax credit.

Mr. Keppel also pointed out that a tax credit might have the reverse effect of raising tuition, thus "making higher education even more unreachable for low-income families."

Sen. Ribicoff retorted that the bill was not designed as a substitute for any other form of aid to higher education, but was directed toward the "underprivileged middle class." According to Ribicoff, middle class students are not eligible for scholarship aid to the same extent that low-income students are, and yet they bear a financial burden in paying for higher education.

Opponents of the measure feel that direct aid through scholarships, loans and work-study programs were fairer ways of meeting the spiraling tuition costs of higher education.

The Ribicoff amendment, which would have allowed a tax credit of up to $750 a year for payment of tuition, other fees, books and supplies, was defeated by a vote of 48-45. A second amendment, sponsored by Sen. Winston Prouty, R-Vt., would have allowed a comparable tax credit to working students. It was defeated by a 47-47 vote.

EVOL SPELLED BACKWARDS IS LOVE

They met. His heart leapt. "I love you!" he cried.

"Me too, hey!" she cried.

"Tell me," he cried, "are you a girl of expensive tastes?"

"No, hey," she cried. "I am a girl of simple tastes."

"Good," he cried, "for my cruel father sends me an allowance barely large enough to support life."

"Money does not matter to me," she cried. "My tastes are simple; my wants are few. Just take me riding in a long, new, yellow convertible and I am content."

"Goodbye," he cried, and ran away as fast as his little stumpy legs would carry him, for he had no yellow convertible, nor the money to buy one, nor the means to get the money -- short of picking up his stingy father by the ankles and shaking him till his wallet fell out.

"I am clean and fresh and relaxing," she admitted.

He knew he must forget this girl, but lying on his pallet at the dormitory, whimpering and moaning, he knew he could not.

At last an idea came to him: though he did not have the money to buy a convertible, perhaps he had enough to rent one!

Hope reborn, he rushed on his little stumpy legs (curious to tell, he was six feet tall, but all his life he suffered from little stumpy legs) he rushed, I say, to an automobile rental company and rented a yellow convertible for $10 down plus ten cents a mile. Then, with many a laugh and cheer, he drove away to pick up the girl.

"Oh, bully!" she cried when she saw the car. "This suits my simple tastes to a T. Come, let us speed over rolling highroads and through bosky dells."

Away they drove. All that day and night they drove and finally, tired but happy, they parked high on a wind-swept hill.

"Marlboro?" he said.

"Yum, yum," she said.

They lit their Marlboros. They puffed with deep contentment. "You know," he said, "you are like a Marlboro -- clean and fresh and relaxing."

"Yes, I am clean and fresh and relaxing," she admitted. "But, all the same, there is a big difference between Marlboros and me, because I do not have an efficacious white Selectate filter."

They laughed. They kissed. He screamed.

"What is it, hey?" she asked, her attention aroused.

"Look at the speedometer," he said. "We have driven 200 miles, and this car costs ten cents a mile, and I have only $20 left."

"But that is exactly enough," she said.

"Yes," he said, "but we still have to drive home."

"Oh," she said. They fell into a profound gloom. He started the motor and backed out of the parking place.

"Hey, look!" she cried. "The speedometer doesn't move when you are backing up."

He looked. It was true. "Eureka!" he cried. "That solves my problem. I will drive home in reverse. Then no more miles will register on the speedometer and I will have enough money to pay!"

"I think that is a smashing idea," she said, and she was right. Because today our hero is in the county jail where food, clothing, and lodging are provided free of charge, and his allowance is piling up so fast that in two or three years he will have enough money to take his girl riding again.

Bikel Concert Cancelled

Just when folksinger Theodore Bikel will appear in the University of Vermont's Lane Series remains uncertain but one fact is definite -- his concert wasn't this Sunday. (Feb. 23).

Jack Trevithick, executive secretary of the Lane Series, has received a number of phone calls this week from people who seem to think Bikel was giving a Lane concert on Sunday.

Bikel was originally scheduled for Nov. 25 but this date was postponed because of President Kennedy's death. The concert was then rescheduled for March 23 but now this date has been scratched also.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont

VOL. 82

FEBRUARY 28, 1964

What Me Cynical?

Kake Walk time means a great deal around the offices of the CYNIC. Putting together the annual KW issue is the last of the year's toils for the departing editorial staff. However it is not their last responsibility; from among their staff they must choose the people who are to guide the CYNIC, the only medium for the expression of student views at UVM, through its next year and next volume. The responsibility now falls upon us, the new editorial staff, of assessing the CYNIC's positive qualities and shortcomings and of deciding just what we intend to do in the coming year. One goal is clear -- to endeavor to and succeed in making the CYNIC a first-rate student newspaper, which it is not today.

During the past semester a great deal of the Sceptic's wit-framed criticism fell at our doorstep. In actuality it was impossible for us to deny the greater part of this criticism. However, the weakness of the CYNIC is not to be blamed on any single person or small group of individuals. Any student who has ever read the CYNIC has been read by the great majority of UVMers even when it was at its lowest ebb must have noticed that part of the masthead which reads "The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont." It is an undeniable fact that the students of UVM have not shown an interest or a sense of responsibility deserving of a first-rate student newspaper, or a student newspaper at all.

Effective news distribution is a highly desirable goal, but it is not in itself reason enough for the continued publication of a student newspaper. This task could be readily handled by an adjunct of the Office of Public Relations. We believe that the main function of a student newspaper is to serve as a forum for campus opinion. If the CYNIC cannot fulfill this role or if the students of UVM have no desire for such a forum why continue to print the CYNIC (which takes a healthy slice from the $15 compulsory student activities fee).

At one time, the CYNIC had a regular feature known as "Studentes" and "Professores", twin columns which each week presented the opinions of a student and a faculty member on a subject of their choosing. Originally the columns of the week were selected from many submitted during the week. As interest lagged students and faculty members were individually solicited to submit pieces. Eventually, when it appeared that no one at UVM had any opinion to express on any subject, the entire feature was dropped. In the past semester the number of column-length pieces submitted can be counted on two fingers. This was despite our willingness to print any literate expression of opinion, be it on the abolition of nuclear testing, academic freedom, or the placement of an oral contraceptive dispenser in the Simpson dining room. "Studentes" and "Professores" shall be reinstated.

Letters To The Editor

Readers Knock Rockwell Visit

To the Editor:

Re Rockwell's visit I would like to be on record as strongly opposed to it on the ground that a Nazi leader does not deserve to be honored with a forum at the University of Vermont. It seems to me that some people confuse right with privilege. Thus, while Rockwell has the right of free speech, he has no right to occupy a speaker's platform on our campus; the latter is a privilege which originates with us. No abridgment of free speech is, therefore, involved in his case at all. Whoever wishes to listen to the Nazi leader is free to invite him any time and any place, yet off campus. However, the University of Vermont has no obligation to extend its facilities to a person who is glorifying one of the most horrendous systems of our time.

Impediments, such as lack of police protection, are immaterial and are really evading the basic issue: the distinction between right and privilege, between a decision to refuse and to bestow honor.

I hope that I, for one, will be spared the insult of lecturing from the same UVM rostrum as Mr. Rockwell.

Change ROTC

To the Editor:

I think that everyone in the administration should read the article on ROTC in the February 24th issue of Newsweek. This article concerns the ROTC program at the colleges of the U.S. After reading this article, I think that the University of Vermont should change its program of mandatory ROTC to one of an elective for all freshmen and sophomores. This is not just one opinion but the opinion of a very large percentage of all students.

Sincerely,
Richard Kelleway, '67

Entries are to be sent via the University Messenger Service to the CYNIC, Editor-in-Chief, Billings Center. We refuse to believe that UVM students and faculty are little more than educational automatons.

It is an unfortunate fact of life for any editor of the CYNIC (be he Editor-in-Chief, News Editor, or Managing Editor) that the greatest part of his time occupied in connection with the paper must be devoted to attempting to form and maintain a staff from a wholly uninterested and apathetic student body. Some editors have conscientiously tried to accomplish this task while others have completely given up any pretense of editing a student newspaper and instead have played around for a year with a paper which was little more than a pet project and an outlet for their personal philosophy. We shall do neither of these. If we cannot get out of our unwanted position of personnel office and return to our rightful function of editing a student newspaper we shall simply do everything possible to insure the abolition of the CYNIC and the return to the Student Association of their generously allocated funds.

The CYNIC can be a highly effective instrument of news distribution and opinion mobilization. We welcome any assistance from qualified people. We need news and feature writers, sports writers, qualified reviewers, editorial researchers and rewrite people. (We do not need lackeys--the editors do enough of this type of work.) We do not have the organization or the know-how to recruit the people we need. They must step forward.

The reinstating of "Studentes" and "Professores" and our continued policy to print almost every letter of opinion received (even to the point of redundancy) are our way of finding out if the students of UVM want a student newspaper. We repeat--if we continue to feel that the student body of UVM has no desire for a newspaper of their own we shall gladly help to dissolve the CYNIC as an organization and relinquish our revered(?) positions.

To the Editor:

In a statement to the Burlington Free Press of Wednesday, Feb. 19, Dean Rowell was quoted as saying, in connection with the invitation to George Lincoln Rockwell to speak here: "President Fey has made it clear that the University of Vermont, with its sister institutions of higher learning in our free society, must scrupulously maintain a free platform for the exchange of ideas, so long as those ideas are not seditious."

I believe some clarification is in order. Exactly what does the term "seditious" mean? Does it, as in so many cases, mean Communists? And other groups, ideas or persons whose opinions or beliefs we think are anti-American? Or does it simply mean convicted traitors?

Whatever it means, why should we deny a man with "seditious" ideas a public platform? Are we, the students at UVM, so stupid as to espouse those ideas once we hear them? Or are we intelligent enough to evaluate them for what they are, without someone "higher up" telling us that these ideas are dangerous?

Most importantly, however, is the notion that a man's ideas should be suppressed by not letting him express them. Our Constitution guarantees that a man may express his ideas freely, no matter what they are, and no

Thanks, UVM

To the Editor:

Another Kake Walk has faded into history, but the memory of this festive weekend lives on. The campaign and Steve's reign as King are among Alpha Gamma Rho's pleasant memories. We enjoyed sharing this honor and experience with him.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank the members of the student body who supported Steve.

Dale E. Wyman, President
Alpha Gamma Rho

matter what laws Congress may pass to the contrary, is it at all democratic to deny a man the right to express his ideas? After all, a man may believe anything, but he is only dangerous when he tries to put his ideas into actions, either directly or indirectly.

Please, Dean Rowell, before insulting the intelligence of UVM students (and, indeed, the whole American populace), try us with "seditious" ideas. If a Communist, for instance, were to induce us to start a cell on this campus, then you would be justified, to an extent, in your objection to people with "seditious" ideas. But do you really think that would happen?

Finally, please explain just what the "seditious" statement means. Are we students such gullible dunces, and have we so blatantly disregarded the Constitution (that is, are we now a tyranny)? I believe you owe it to the students.

Kim A. Borlskin

Med Student Opposed To Nazi Visit

To the Editor:

I am frequently amazed (and amused) by the ability of editors, particularly student newspaper editors, to praise their readers for their honor, honesty, intelligence, maturity, and above all their keenness of judgement when it comes to making the "right" decision -- then obligingly tell them what their decision must be.

In this regard your editorial of Feb. 15 is a striking example. You comment that, to date, no one has objected to the appearance of Rockwell on campus, and several letters are printed alongside to support this statement. You say that this is a sign of "liberalism" and reflects "credit to our institution and its students." Well, My Goodness! After such a unanimity of sentiment is called for who would dare to disagree? After all, we are here at the University to become Independent Thinkers, capable of making our own evaluations of right and wrong, good and bad, satire and discrimination, sex and love, alcohol and gasoline, etcetera and ad infinitum. That is why you tell us what we must believe in each of these areas (and all in the same editorial!) if we are to be considered free-thinking individuals. And if we don't agree with you; if we feel, for instance, that the history of World War II can teach us more about Nazism than a visit from Rockwell, then we are obviously very narrow minded. Anyone who doesn't agree is a Conformist, right?

You say that you (correction, "we") would not be able to tell good from bad if we were to see only good. You tell us that you ("we") are "mature" enough to remain unscathed by hate and fanaticism. Now I ask you--aren't we Wonderful? Others may be hate-mongers and fanatics, but not us! Oh no, we are too "mature" and "Liberal" for such banal concepts. (Of course, in the same article you tell us that hate does exist at UVM, but we'll assume that those people don't read your paper.) Did it ever occur to you that there is very little source for real hate or discrimination in your sheltered little undergraduate life in Rural, Christian, Republican, White Vermont?

You admit that Rockwell is sick, fanatic, hateful, etc. You praise yourself for your own steadfastness in the face of the enemy. May I ask -- just what in Hell do you want to invite him for??? So you can pat yourselves on the back some more and say, "See how good I can tell bad?" Or do you wish to have him speak here just so you can say we are "Liberal"? I submit that if you are convinced that he is evil and fanatic, and that you will not be swayed by his presentation then you are not a liberal you are a hypocrite.

Perhaps you have ideas as naive as Mr. Boriskin. He says that Krazner asked "obviously leading questions," and that Rockwell "stepped right into them." I have been to interviews of this sort before, and no one gets the best of the speaker. As a group of students eager to prove your individuality (together), you laugh when one of your braver fellows asks a foolishly obvious (or is it obviously foolish?) question. You sneer at the speaker's obviously inadequate (or is it inadequately obvious?) answer. In truth, there are only a few of you who are presumptuous enough to ask questions which have obvious answers. The rest of the audience sits back and feels satisfied that they, just like every other individualist (meaning everyone) in the group, now know that the speaker is a fool. But I would be willing to bet that if the audiences were kept small enough so that a substantial percentage of each could be "plants" (i.e. stooges who support the speaker and ask serious questions with serious answers, and perhaps flower at those who would laugh) a considerable number of the "Good Guys" would be very worried that perhaps they were not thinking "Liberal" enough, and that maybe they should "non-conform" even more. After all, there were a lot of guys there who agreed with the speaker.

I have two objections to an appearance by Rockwell. The first is concerned with the naive (and remember, "let's not be naive") attitudes and professed beliefs which are glibly tossed about as support for such a visit. "Freedom of Speech", and "the other side of the issue", and "ability to decide for ourselves" How naive can you be? You make damning statements about his fanaticism, etc.; almost call him a lunatic --- then say that you want to hear him speak. WHY? Why not invite a patient from Waterbury to speak? (I can imagine how many "Intellectuals" are saying now, "That's a Great Idea!") He might be even more fanatic than Rockwell! And doesn't he have Freedom of Speech too? How can you say that you want to hear the other side of the issue and decide for yourselves when in fact you have already heard, and already decided?

Just what is meant by "the other side?" If Rockwell's logic is as warped as you are convinced that it is, then surely there must be many more "other sides" established upon various degrees of demented logic. And you want to single out the most obviously perverted, atrocious, inhumane "side" of the lot to evaluate for yourselves. Boy, are you Free-thinkers! You sound like the little boy who can't do what he wants to do at home, and so decides to run away. But first he needs help to cross the street.

Why is it that in Germany they are still trying to bring World War II Nazi officials to trial for their crimes, while in the good old U.S.A. we "invite" people to preach to us just that doctrine which precipitated those atrocities? Are we so intelligent that we can relive every moment of history and therefore decide for ourselves what should have been done? I really don't believe that we will live that long. Rather it takes more intelligence to evaluate and learn from history. It is not a sign of intelligence to doubt everything -- to demand "contemporary proof". If we can't experience everything, then we must accept the experience of others. If you want to assert your individuality and make your own decisions choose a topic which has favorable arguments on both sides, like Social Security, or deficit spending, or even Communism -- not something in which the only dissention is the "lunatic fringe". With all you have to learn isn't it a little foolish to waste your time listening to some jerk sound off about something you already know is wrong -- in the name of a "Liberal Education?"

Mr. Paye's statement to the effect that a person who is more controversial should be listened to more is a lulu. Who told him that? If a man professes a belief which I know is wrong (and you and all the letter writers have admitted that they feel the same) there is absolutely no reason why I should listen to him. If you think that everything controversial, or everyone who says something controversial should be listened to for as long as he cares to talk, then you are missing one of the major points of an education. It is true that you should have a knowledge of the opposition and what it stands for. But you already know these things. Your education should help you to evaluate them, and if they are found to be undesirable they should be discarded so that you may search for a better answer. It is a waste of time to keep reviewing that which you already know if there is more to be learned. This brings me to my second argument.

The question seems to be whether or not we should "invite" him to speak; not whether we should allow him to do so. Personally, I don't even like the idea of his being allowed to speak. We have laws against pornography. We say that this is very unwholesome -- that it is capable of corrupting our morality. Few would disagree with this. What about Nazism? Isn't that just as unwholesome? Is sex the only aspect of our morality which is subject to decadence? I think not.

It is true that within our United States there are innumerable perverts who have beliefs similar to those of the Nazi Party. But these people are well scattered. As individuals they can do little harm except to themselves. But when a group as dynamic and convincing as Rockwell et al march onto the scene it does a pervert's heart good. Here is something with which he can associate. Here is a group of people who think the way he does. And they're even organized. With uniforms and everything. He isn't so perverted after all. "There's safety in numbers" is an old, and very true cliché.

Rockwell doesn't want to convert the campus; he only wants to contact those very few sympathizers who are present in any group. Publicity is all he wants. And whether you, or you, or you will not be swayed is of little consequence. What he desires is to give those who are already on his side something to associate with so that they will not be lost.

However, Freedom of Speech is our Constitutional Right, and the Constitution cannot be amended to cover jokers like Rockwell without the danger of some loss of freedom to us all. So he has the freedom and the right. Does that mean that we should invite him? Must we say that we'd like to hear his garbage? Even go out of our way to hear him? Say we may find something educational or illuminating in what he offers? Even pay the heat and lighting (and security) expenses involved?

I don't think his letters should even be answered. Of course, he has the right to come, and no one is denying him that right. But he wants an invitation. Perhaps he feels that if his appearance is "authorized" by the University there will be some sort of security precautions taken. In this way he may feel free to prescribe large doses of hate and violence without fear of having to swallow any of the medicine himself.

If he wants to come, again we say "again we say, 'let him come'". But let's not give him the satisfaction of thinking we want him to come. If he wants to stand in front of Billings and entertain a few "freak-seekers" that's his business. Allow him to come here for your entertainment, but do not try to disguise the motive with false, or at least naive, pretenses of maturity, intelligence, and liberalism. And remember, he isn't concerned about the hundreds whom he entertains; he only wants the few you don't care about. And no matter what reason you use to justify the invitation you will only be helping him, and not your education.

Bring Back The Sceptic

To the Editor:

Undoubtedly there are many members of the faculty, administration, and student body who received Mr. O'Hara's last column with a sense of relief, if not rejoicing. I can hear the administration saying, "Let the dust settle -- controversy doesn't belong on a pleasant campus like UVM's"; or the faculty, "This man is dangerous, we might be next"; or the students, "We want someone who speaks our language". Well, here's one student who has delighted week after week to Mr. O'Hara's commentary, and who would like to register a plea for continuation of The Sceptic.

Admittedly The Sceptic made a giant indiscretion -- and apologized for it. It was surprising that such information would not be checked before publication, but any column as lively as The Sceptic is conducive to boo-boos. Were the information correct, the acridity of the column would have been justified -- it was, after all, a serious protest against the unjust variation between departments. And this is, in fact, a topic which could well be discussed a good deal more thoroughly, even if the sacrosanct departments do bristle at the idea.

Of the few college newspapers I have read, The CYNIC holds its own quite favorably, a great deal due to the vitality and temerity of The Sceptic. It would be detrimental to the university and to The CYNIC if the Sceptic were dropped because of pressure from a number of sensitive souls. I for one could happily swallow whatever indignation I may have suffered in return for the continuing colorful columns in The Sceptic.

Reaction To SA Decision

By Janet Hadda

This article pertains to the events following an invitation, made by S.A.'s Scope, to George Lincoln Rockwell, in answer to his request that he be allowed to speak on the UVM campus. This invitation was later rescinded when, on February 19th, the Student Association by a vote of 34 to 15, refused to grant Scope the $300-600 necessary for security measures. The following are some student and faculty opinions on the subject.

Dr. Wolf Schmokel, member of the History Department and Faculty Advisor to Scope:

"I feel that he (Rockwell) isn't worth $600, I did not particularly support his coming, but since the majority of the committee decided to extend the invitation, I went along with it.

I feel that the matter has been blown up beyond all proportions. I do not feel that Mr. Rockwell is a threat to the nation or to the University, or that he will ever become a threat. There was implicit in statements made by students, a lack of faith in their country and in their fellow students, to watch Rockwell without riots -- and I regret that. In my mind, however, the decision not to spend the money for such a purpose was definitely a very wise one."

Professor Peter Heller, member of the Romance Language Department:

"I think he should have been allowed to come, if only for the sake of academic freedom. A rejection of Rockwell based on fear of riot seems to me to be an admission of impotence to prevent such a riot. It is terrifying to see so many people with so little faith in the maturity of the student body, and so afraid that our institutions cannot listen to a maniac without disintegrating."

Mr. Earl Weaver, member of the English Department:

"If someone wants to give me $600, I'd be glad to make a speech on why I think at least 80% of the American Nazis ought to be hospitalized."

Professor George Little, member of the Political Science Department:

"It is a good and defensible decision in light of the unfortunate circumstances surrounding it. The issue was never met squarely. Had it been a case of accepting Rockwell's invitation to come, instead of inviting him to come, the issue would have been presented differently. (As a general rule, the University of Vermont does not need to accept volunteers to speak, and, as another general rule, the University of Vermont should choose for itself who should appear."

UVM Medical Student:

"Even though I don't agree with George Lincoln Rockwell, I think that he should be allowed to express his views at this university in a lecture open to the public. I believe that it is important in a liberal (?) university that all speakers wishing to express their viewpoints should be allowed to do so. Perhaps if 600 interested students would each contribute $1 to or-

Fraternity Self-study

Every third student at the University has received an invitation from President Fey to participate in an attitudinal study sponsored by the Alumni and undergraduate Interfraternity Councils. The research project was designed by a committee of University faculty and administrative staff at the request of the two fraternity councils and will be administered Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings of next week. The Committee believes the study is one of the most comprehensive ever developed to collect student attitudes on fraternities. If you have received an invitation to participate, the times and places for the study are as follows:

If you live in Chittenden, Buckingham, Wills, Converse, Marsh, Austin or Tupper Halls you should go to the Marsh Dining Hall on Monday, March 2 at 7:00 p.m.

If you live in Allen House, Claggett House, Saunders Hall, Grassmount, Acacia, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Gamma Rho, Alpha Tau Omega, Delta Psi, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Iota, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Mu Delta, Phi Sigma Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Theta Chi, you should go to the Waterman Dining Hall on Tuesday, March 3 at 7:15 p.m.

If you live in Coolidge, Hamilton, Mason, Patterson, Redstone, Robinson, Simpson, Slade, Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Delta Delta Delta, Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, you should go to Simpson Dining Hall on Thursday, March 5 at 7:00 p.m.

Off-campus students may report to Marsh Dining Hall on Monday, March 2 at 7:00 p.m. or to Waterman Dining Hall on Tuesday, March 3 at 7:15 p.m.

You are reminded to bring your yellow "admission card" for identification and record keeping purposes. If you cannot be present on the evening scheduled, please arrange for an alternate date through the Dean of Men's Office.

E.A.R. Sponsors Blood Drive

The University and the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Blood Program will renew an old and worthy tradition early in March when the Ethan Allen Rifles will sponsor a University-wide blood drawing which will seek to meet a goal of 250 pints of blood.

University students, faculty and staff have been giving blood to the program since it was established in 1950, and they represent one of the major group contributors to the life-giving program.

The gifts by students and faculty of course have helped many men, women and children whose illnesses or injuries required the availability of blood, but many do not know that the Red Cross Blood Center and its program can be of vital importance to the University family as well.

A case in point occurred several years back when a quartet of University students were in an accident in New York State while home for a Thanksgiving vacation. Their critical injuries required several blood transfusions. The blood they received was provided free of charge - from the Vermont-New Hampshire Regional Blood Center on Mansfield Avenue in Burlington.

That same Mansfield Avenue Center - just around the corner from Ira Allen Chapel - will be the scene for the Ethan Allen Rifles - sponsored drawing this March 9 and 10. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and the sponsoring Rifles are trying to line up a station wagon to transport donors from Redstone Campus to the Mansfield Avenue Center on the two days of the drive. However, drive chairmen note the Center is only "a minute's walk" from Billings Center.

They are now in the process of circularizing the campus living units in an effort to line up enough donors to guarantee the 250-pint goal well in advance.

However, all those who are under 21 years of age who wish to give, will need to have a consent card signed by their parents or guardians. Such cards are available at the Desk at Billings Center.

The student chairmen for the drive hope that faculty and staff of the University who wish to donate blood will mark the March 9 and 10 dates and join students in seeking to meet the 250 goal the Red Cross Blood Center hopes the University can reach.

Aid Bill Still Alive

(CPS) — The controversial tax credit proposal for college students, sponsored by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., was defeated in the Senate last Tuesday (Feb. 4), but the issue is far from dead.

In addition to Sen. Ribicoff's pledge to bring the same bill up again next year, a similar tax allowance will be included in the amendment to extend the National Defense Education Act (NDEA) during the current session of the House.

According to Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Education and sponsor of the NDEA extension, her new proposal would allow a deduction from the total income on which tax is based, thus lowering the income tax bracket of the individual. The Ribicoff amendment would have subtracted a deduction from the amount of the tax to be paid.

Mrs. Green conceded that her proposal has little chance of passage in the House, where it will come up for debate following the current committee hearings on the entire NDEA amendment.

A tax credit for college students and their families has aroused outspoken opposition from leading education figures.

The primary objection to the Ribicoff amendment stemmed from the nature of the proposal itself, as a tax relief for middle-income families. Mrs. Green calling it a "middle-class scholarship bill," charged that it does nothing to help those students who most need help. "Low income families do not pay enough taxes to benefit from this type of credit allowance," she said.

Francis Keppel, U.S. Commissioner of Education, declared that the question was one of priority and the "first priority is to even out the chances for education." The most pressing need in the area of federal aid to education, "the opportunity for low-income families to send their children to college," is ignored

New Dorms Are Named

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont approved the naming of two new residence halls for women to honor two of the University's distinguished women graduates.

The two new halls, now under construction on Redstone Campus just south of Patterson Hall, will be named Wright and Christie respectively in honor of Jessie Elvira Wright Whitcomb, a Vermont graduate in 1887, and of Jean Alice Christie Chandler Bull, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of 1886.

Mrs. Whitcomb - whose maiden name of Wright will grace the middle unit of the Patterson, Wright, Christie complex - achieved success as a lawyer (in partnership with her husband) and as an author of several books and many children's stories. Her University honored her in her lifetime by bestowing upon her the degree of Master of Arts in 1904. In 1921 she was selected as the Founder's Day speaker, an occasion that coincided with the 50th anniversary of the admission of women as regular students. The University was the first New England institution so to recognize the fairer sex, and the first in the nation to admit women to Phi Beta Kappa, Mason and Hamilton Halls on Redstone campus are named for the University's first two women graduates and Phi Beta Kappa initiates.

Mrs. Bull was widowed in 1894 with two small children, and apparently with little means of support. She nonetheless entered the Hahnemann Medical School at Chicago shortly after her first husband's death, receiving her M.D. in 1898 and entering the practice of Medicine in the State of Washington where she gained "considerable recognition as a surgeon." She, too, was honored by her alma mater, with an honorary Master of Arts degree.

Found A Fez?

Mr. Allen G. Billings of 4 Pleasant Street, Middlebury, Vermont, lost a Shriner's fez and pin on a Vermont Transit bus traveling from Rutland to Middlebury on November 17 at approximately 9:35 p.m. He was sitting next to a student from the University of Vermont who traveled from New York City who is studying to become a teacher. Anyone knowing anything regarding the lost items is requested to notify Dean of Men, Roland Patzer.

Ever see the "Progress Corps" in action?

Its members are at work all over the free world, helping millions of people to progress toward better lives.

In India, West Germany, Italy, and in the United States, they're building nuclear power plants, launching the age of low-cost atomic power.

In Samoa, they're developing an educational TV network to battle illiteracy... while in Pittsburgh, they're working with teachers to help high school students learn more about computers.

In Wales, they're putting the final touches on Europe's first computer-controlled steel mill. Near Los Angeles they've scored a world first by putting a computer in charge of cement mill operations.

In Brazil, Pakistan and Ghana, they're providing extra-high-voltage equipment for huge dams to harness these nations' hydroelectric power. For Malaysia, they're supplying high-power diesel locomotives... for Norway, a marine engine room to power one of the world's largest supertankers.

The members of the "Progress Corps" are the men and women of General Electric, working to provide the key to progress—low-cost electric power and better ways of putting it to work. Many are engineers. Many others are international lawyers, physicians, financial specialists, marketing experts.

General Electric is growing both at home and abroad. If you'd like to grow with us, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified people begin their General Electric careers.

Captain Dave Strassburg is shown on the foul line against Brandeis in the Kake Walk game. Strassburg is a three-year starter for the Cats, and has recently been scoring well to place him fifth in the Yankee Conference in this department.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

Ever since their victory over the University of Massachusetts last January 10, at Patrick Gymnasium, the Catamounts in the last six weeks have grown progressively worse, dropping to an 8-7 ledger at one point, after they had registered a 7-2 record in their initial nine games. In this span Vermont, after defeating Maine twice and Mass. once, was soundly beaten in five straight Conference contests to drop into fourth place in the league standings.

The main question is what was responsible for this sudden downfall of the Cats after they had opened up the season in such glorious style? The answer to this question involves four primary factors. The first and most important is the fact that the schedule during the first half of the season was much weaker than that of the latter half, since UVM had to play most of their conference games during this recent period. In addition to a tougher schedule, Vermont lost the services of injured 6'-5" sophomore Steve Ross. This was a disastrous loss due to the fact that it put increased pressure on Milt Goggans, and because the Cats were forced to do without his fine rebounding in the important, tough league games. The third factor is the inexperience of the team. True this did not hurt them in the early part of the season, but that was due to the easier opponents played. In these contests Vermont was so much superior to most of these teams that inexperience did not cause their downfall. However, later in the campaign the fine Conference quintets used the team's lack of experience to advantage in a few contests, as did UNH, U. Conn., and Mass. by employing the full-court press. The last factor is the team's sudden lack of cohesiveness and team work. Early in the year the Cats worked well together, but lately it appears that a few individuals are playing for themselves and not for the overall good of the team. This is evidenced in a number of recent games when certain players shot whenever they got their hands on the ball, regardless of whether they were in the proper position or whether they had the best shot. It is this type of play that resulted in players hitting only 6 out of 25 shots for example, less than 25 percent in a number of the games.

Thus it appeared until Monday evening that the Cats, who had played one of their worst games of the season against Brandeis, Saturday, were destined to lose all of their remaining games, and finish under .500 for the season with a ledger of 10-11. This now appears not to be the case. Vermont displayed their latent talent by narrowly losing to St. Michael's 78-77 in a thrilling game at Memorial Auditorium. The Catamounts play was outstanding at both ends of the court, as they surprised both St. Michael's and the very small number of Vermont fans who attended the game. Their shooting was quite good, and Ralph D'Altilla was a tiger off the backboards as he helped the Cats grab a majority of the rebounds.

Even though their narrow loss to St. Michael's has mathematically eliminated UVM from contention for the state series crown, it did indicate that the Catamounts have regained some of their early season form. Thus Vermont has an extremely good chance to have a winning campaign for the first time in many years.

Saturday evening UVM faces New Hampshire in Patrick Gymnasium. Last time these two squads faced each other, Vermont was beaten by a considerable margin, but the way the Cats have been playing on their home court this season, and recently in general, they should defeat the Wildcats by a few points.

After Saturday's contest the Purple Knights invade the gym to play the Catamounts again in the final contest of the 1963-1964 season. If Vermont plays like they did last Monday there is no reason why UVM can't defeat them by five to ten points, and close out the campaign with a record of 12-9.

Trackmen Down Union

Last Saturday afternoon at Union College, the University of Vermont won its opening dual meet of the indoor track season by defeating the host team by the score of 49 1/2 - 43 1/2.

The outstanding performer for the Catamounts was definitely sophomore ace Don Mayland who amassed 20 points by placing first in four events. Mayland won both the high and low hurdles in 7.6 and 7 seconds flat respectively as Vinnie Cesaris placed second in the first of these events. Don also won the high jump with a leap of 5'8", and of course, his specialty the pole vault, in which he holds the school record, in 12'6".

The Catamounts also triumphed in both the 60 and the 50 yard dash as Bill Mulhern placed first in the 600 and footballers Deane Kent and Ken Burton finished one-two in the shorter event.

The Vermont squad displayed its great weakness in both the short-put and the board jump as the Cats failed to place in either one of these events.

The meet was so close that it was decided in the final event, the relay which Vermont won to emerge victorious. The relay team consisted of lead-off men senior Al Brown, Sophomore Vinnie Cesaris, senior Don Moreau, and senior anchor man Bill Mulhern.

Although this contest was the Catamounts initial dual meet of the season, it was not their first competitive outing since they had previously taken part in a triangular meet in which they placed second, defeating Colby, but losing to Bowdoin.

Last Monday evening at Memorial Auditorium the University of Vermont Catamounts lost a heartbreaking decision to the heavily favored St. Michael's Purple Knights by only one point, 78-77.

The Cats definitely played one of their outstanding games of the current campaign as they effectively checked their Winooski rivals by use of a man to man defense, and occasionally a 2-1-2 zone. Although the Cats did stop the Purple Knights as a team, they were unable to halt St. Michael's high scoring 6'-5" center, Richie Tarrant, who scored 34 points, 14 of them from the foul line.

Although the Catamounts did out-rebound St. Michael's, they committed an unusually high amount of personal fouls as both Milt Goggans and Joe Gannon fouled out. The great difference in personal fouls was evidenced by the fact that St. Michael's sunk 28 foul shots to only 15 for UVM. This disparity in fouls nullified the advantage Vermont had in field goals, 31-25, as Vermont hit for 36.5 percent as compared to 30.8 percent for St. Michael's.

This contest was so close that at no time did either team hold more than an eight point lead, and the Catamounts held that at 49-41 in the early part of the second half. However, the lead was cut to one when the Knights roared back with seven straight points. Also, the lead changed hands no less than twelve times in the last seven minutes and nine points were recorded on the scoreboard in the final minute of play.

Vermont opened up a 17-14 lead early in the first half as they effectively used their running game and fine teamwork. They lost the lead in the middle of the half, but emerged with a 39-34 halftime lead due to a late spurt just before the buzzer.

The contest was extremely close in the second half as Vermont took a 59-58 lead with 8:58 left to go in the game. Within a number of seconds St. Michael's had grabbed a 65-63 advantage on a few quick baskets, the last a tap-in by Richie Tarrant.

Then the Cats took a 67-65 lead with 4:30 to go on baskets by Goggans and D'Altilla, but the Knights tied it at 67, 69 and finally at 73 all with only 1:31 to play.

Dave Strassburg put Vermont in the lead 75-73 with a driving hook shot, but unfortunately he missed the extremely important foul shot afterward.

A jump ball followed the fight for the rebound on the missed foul shot, and the Cats got possession of the ball. However, Bill Cummins of St. Michael's stole a Spalter pass to the backcourt, and then raced the length of the court, passing off to Tarrant beside him, who had no difficulty in putting in the tying shot. On Tarrant's shot, Joe Gannon fouled the Knight center, and Tarrant stepped to the foul line and made the score 76-75 in favor of the Purple Knights.

In the final seconds Vermont took a number of shots, but missed them all, and with seven seconds left in the ballgame D'Altilla fouled Cummins who hit both foul shots and St. Michael's went into an insurmountable advantage of 78-75. Just before the buzzer, the Catamounts scored the final basket of the evening, on a layup by Kenny Spalter, which was actually meaningless, to make the final score 78-77 in favor of St. Michael's.

Outstanding for Vermont was Ralph D'Altilla, who did a fine all-around job especially his rebounding off both backboards, steady Layne Higgs, and Joe Gannon, who is steadily improving from game to game.

The Cats again face these same Purple Knights next Monday in Patrick Gymnasium in the final game of the season as they attempt to avenge Monday's loss, and conclude the season on a winning note.

Bullwinkle Moose To Play For UVM

The number one ranked UCLA Bruins have just issued a sports bulletin that their high scorer Bullwinkle Moose has flunked out of school and has been accepted by the University of Vermont on an academic scholarship. The usual one year transfer rule has been waived, and "the Moose" as he is affectionally called by his friends, according to Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans, will be jumping center Monday evening against Knight ace Richie Tarrant.

Rocky Speaks At UVM; 3500 Present at Gym

by Joan Klonsky

As an aspirant to the Republican nomination for President of the United States, Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, addressed about 3500 students from UVM, Champlain College, St. Michael's College and Trinity, on Thursday afternoon, March 27 in Patrick Gymnasium.

In a cursory speech, the Governor skimmed several vital issues. Concerning his accomplishments in office in New York, Governor Rockefeller emphasized his educational program which, through scholarship opportunities, has provided for an enrollment of 72,000 in the State University of New York, truly a commendable achievement. Recognizing that such favorable conditions are not prevalent in other areas of the U.S., the Governor stated the need for Federal aid to education, an often-debated topic.

In the field of international relations, Governor Rockefeller stated his position as against the admission of Red China to the United Nations. Not commenting upon his rationale for this position, he instead briefly discussed his opposition to Senator Barry Goldwater's proposition that the U.S. should withdraw from the UN if Red China is admitted. "The UN symbolizes the need for world unity, the forces of freedom, human dignity and peace," Rockefeller asserted. In withdrawing from the UN we would lose contact with the communist world and abandon the very democratic principles of the UN, principles which we have helped design and foster.

In attacking the Johnson administration, Governor Rockefeller decried the current leadership gap and the seemingly obsessive concern for expediency. He did not elaborate. In addition, he denounced the Government's "lack of purpose, goals and plans to carry out goals," as well as "the serious deterioration of relations with other countries."

Governor Rockefeller's speech contained, as well, mention of the employment problem in our economy, of the need for care to Senior Citizens, of the efficacy of Vermont Senator Austen's efforts toward building a basis for U.S. security today, of the various secretarial positions he has held, and of the challenge awaiting America's youth today in this "exciting time to live" wherein "we must have faith in the future."

Vienna Symphony Will Appear At March 6 Blue Lane Series

by Betty Fuchs

Mayor Edward A. Keenan of Burlington has proclaimed Friday, March 6, as the "Day of the City of Vienna" in honor of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra. On that day the famous Viennese orchestra will perform at Memorial Auditorium, under the baton of Wolfgang Sawallish, in the next-to-last concert on the Blue Series. This appearance marks the first North American tour of the internationally famous group.

The Vienna Symphony Orchestra of the twentieth century. The date of its founding, 1900, is significant. It is a year that stands between the twilight of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire and the dawn of the new Republic of Austria, that looks back toward the great romantic traditions of the nineteenth century and forward to the turbulent innovations of the twentieth. From its inception, the orchestra has dedicated itself to perpetuating the greatest music of the past and introducing the best music of the present, and to making this music available to the greatest number of people of all classes.

In contrast to the orchestras under the patronage of the nobility or the wealthy, the Vienna Symphony was destined from the start to be a public institution to fill the needs of the ordinary Viennese music lover. The regular concerts included not only the "New Works" programs, but also pops concerts and a series of programs for students of the Vienna schools arranged by the City Council. The orchestra is truly a municipal institution, and the city's only orchestra devoted exclusively to concerts.

At the same time that it has been filling the musical needs of the capital city, the Vienna Symphony Orchestra has also toured the Austrian provinces regularly, and increasingly during the sixty-odd years of its activity, it has undertaken foreign tours, thus sharing its hallowed traditions and progressive spirit with people throughout the western world. The climax of its foreign travels is its American debut tour.

Almost from its founding the Vienna Symphony has attracted the most distinguished maestros as guest conductors. Mahler, Weingartner, and the young Bruno Walter were among them in the early days. Wolfgang Sawallish first appeared with the orchestra in 1957 and made a profound impression on both the audience and the men of the orchestra for his complete command of the craft of conducting, his profound insights into music, and his youthful verve. In 1960, at the age of 37, he was appointed the orchestra's permanent conductor. It was a happy union of kindred spirits for, like the orchestra, in the words of New York Times critic Harold Schonberg who has heard him conduct abroad, "most definitely he is of the twentieth century."

CYNIC Salutes ... Dick Paye

by Janet Hadda

I was a bit apprehensive when I walked into the coffee shop to meet Dick Paye, President of the Student Association - I didn't know whether I would recognize him from his photographs alone. I did, though, and we were soon talking about Dick's experiences as S.A. President, and his opinions on a variety of matters.

When asked what had made him decide to run for S.A. President, Dick stated that he had been the Parliamentarian of the Student Association, (after having taken a course in Parliamentary Procedure). During this time, he became interested in the workings of the student government, and decided to give a try at being president. After a year in this position, Dick says, "The President of S.A. is in a unique position among students. He has the opportunity to meet and work with a variety of people in the faculty and administration. This is a great experience, but, the problem is to be able to get along with all of these people and, at the same time, not to sacrifice your individual independence for the sake of someone's administrative policy. It's simply a matter of getting along with people you don't always agree with."

Dick, who is a native of Cumberland, Maryland, and who is a brother in Sigma Nu fraternity, is an Economics major and a Psychology minor. Upon graduation this June, he will enter the Army as a Second Lieutenant, having completed two years of advanced ROTC. Being the active person that he is, Dick has a pet peeve about UVM - the complacency of its students. He stated that "UVM's big asset is that it is a small school with relatively high standards. If a person has the ambition, he can accomplish just about anything he wants to during his four years here. But, as soon as a student is admitted here, the first thing he does is to throw himself into an impersonal little rut, and, as a result, the majority of students spend four years running along in their own self-imposed rut, and they don't care what's going on in the rut next to them. In other words -- a place for everyone, and everyone in his place. There is no controversy for the sake of controversy, no curiosity. There is nothing better than a good, intelligent argument. This is where some real education takes place."

As a UVM student, it has seemed to me that the Student Association generally does nothing of too much consequence when one considers what it could do. Dick explained that students pay their Student Activity fee of $15 every year, and then never bother to find out how it is being used. If more students would take a break from the "pursuit of the all-mighty diploma" and try to find out what is going on in the Student Association, there would be much more activity from the student government, and much more controversy.

Having worked so closely with the faculty and administration of our school, Dick has come to one important conclusion. This is that UVM is "spending too much on administration and not enough on faculty salaries. A good administration is essential to every university, and there are good people here, who are interested in students and are willing to do something beyond what their job requires - men such as Mr. Hanau in Placement, and Mr. Patterson of the Treasurer's office. They are willing to take part in student activities. Unfortunately, when you get out of college, people judge you by who you are and what you know - and this is influenced almost entirely by the faculty. In order to get and keep people here, in the calibre of Dr. Severance, Dr. Babcock, and Dr. Hilberg, more money has got to be offered."

Dick feels that being in the Student Association has helped him fulfill what he considers to be a basic need of all of us. This is "to recognize who we are and what abilities we have, and to find an outlet for our abilities."

WRUV, After 11 Years, Will Broadcast FM

Rudy Zimmermann, '64, Technical Advisor to WRUV, at work in the station's control room. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

by Jeffrey Zinn and

Henry Wellman

Eleven years ago a new campus organization was born at the University of Vermont. Since that time it has grown into one of the best equipped and most efficiently operated organizations at the university. We are, of course, referring to WRUV, our campus radio station.

When founded in 1953, the station broadcasted to one women's dorm, Allen house. By 1961, it had grown large enough to become the northern Vermont affiliate of the Columbia Broadcasting System. In 1962, it extended its affiliation to CJFM Montreal, becoming the only station in Vermont to broadcast twenty-four hours a day. An ingenious engineering device, developed by Robert Piper, has allowed the station to bypass F.C.C. regulations and extend its services to all residence halls, fraternities, sororities, and a large portion of metropolitan Burlington. The station continued to grow. Now the board of trustees of the University of Vermont has given the station permission to become the first educational F.M. station in Vermont.

With the advent of frequency modulation (F.M.), WRUV will, for the first time, become licensed by the F.C.C. The station hopes to become the affiliate of the educational radio network, thereby offering educational programming of an extremely high calibre. This addition will extend the coverage of the station to all of Burlington and many outlying communities.

With the advent of F.M. WRUV will maintain separate programming on both A.M. and F.M., thereby offering a wide variety of programs in the median of news, entertainment, discussions and cultural presentations. Like the A.M. station, the F.M. will be manned by interested U.V.M. students.

The necessary funds for this organization come from many interested sources: Student Association, Wake Walk Dispositions Committee, Department of Speech, Office of Public Relations, and the University. Because of the extensive support for the station, they are able to boast some of the most modern commercial broadcasting equipment in the state, and have facilities equal to most and surpassing many in this area.

The station has thirty-five members working on the three staffs of the organization; announcing staff, engineering staff, and administrative staff. The station is managed by Ken Nalibou, with the able backing of Thomas Bradshaw and Robert Piper, head engineers, and Robert Osgood, program director. The female portion of the staff is led by Diane Gallo, secretary, and Linda Attyieh, head of the campus news department. Last but certainly not least, the whole organization is advised and assisted by Doctor William J. Lewis, the faculty advisor. To quote a member of the Staff of WRUV, he is, "A most faithful and helpful influence upon the station."

Through hard work, excellent guidance, and the support of many campus organizations, WRUV has grown into one of the dynamic forces making the University of Vermont just what it is. Yet there are many students who do not even realize just what this station is. For you students we have just one piece of advice. The next time you turn on your radio, set the dial at 570. You'll never regret it.

"Man For All Seasons" Viewed As Excellent

by Geri Sharff

On Wednesday, March 23, 1964, the George Bishop Lane Artists Series presented Robert Bolt's A Man For All Seasons, the story of Sir Thomas More. The production starred Robert Harris as More, Jeff Morrow as Thomas Cromwell, and Dick O'Neill as The Common Man, all three of whom were excellent.

Basically, A Man For All Seasons depicts Sir Thomas's rise to the Chancellorship of Great Britain and of his subsequent resignation due to his religious convictions. The story moved rapidly and clearly to a rather tragic finish. Harris's versatility was evident as he reflected all sides of More's personality.

Another outstanding performance was given by Dick O'Neill. As The Common Man, O'Neill had to assume several varied duties in the play, and he carried them off beautifully. Whether he was narrating or performing his tasks as butler, jailer, or jurymen, he was superb. He offered many opportunities for relieving the ever-rising tension throughout the play.

Nevertheless, the end result of a dramatic play does not merely rest with the actors themselves. Credit is due Robert Bolt for a superior story. His refreshing stage directions offered much in the way of creativity in terms of shifting of scene and a general forward movement of the story. The audience was not bothered by frequent interruptions for changes in scenery. Furthermore, the lighting effects enhanced the mood, especially during the prison scene. One could almost feel the dinginess of the cell.

Altogether, A Man For All Seasons was without a doubt one of the finest performances of the 1963-64 Lane Series. Thank you, Sir Thomas, for providing such an interesting and enjoyable biography.

WSGA ELECTIONS FRI.

Elections for the officers of the Women's Student Government Association Council will be held Friday, March 6. Voting by I.D. will be held in Waterman from 9:00 AM - 4 PM, in Billings from 9:00 AM - 4 PM, and in Simpson Dining Hall from 11:00 AM - 1:00 PM and from 4:30 PM - 6:30 PM. The following are the women nominated for WSGA positions:

Nominees for the office of President of WSGA Council are Janet Koch and Mary Ann Modarelli. Both of these girls have been active on the UVM campus since their freshman year.

Janet Koch, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, hails from Greenfield, Mass. During this past year she has served as secretary to WSGA Council. As a freshman, Janet was chosen for membership in Sophomore Aids, and Alpha Lambda Delta, the National Scholastic Honorary for freshman women. After serving as president of Alpha Lambda Delta in her sophomore year, she is now senior advisor to this honorary. In addition, Janet has been a member of the Sophomore Class Executive Board, a WRA member and a student guide. At the present time she is treasurer of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. Besides actively participating in all phases of UVM campus life, Janet has maintained a high Dean's List average every semester.

Mary Ann Modarelli of Redgewood, N.J., is a junior in the College of Education and Nursing. Mary Ann was the Social Chairman of WSGA Council for this past year. She has served as freshman Representative to Intro-Dorm Council, and in her sophomore year, she was the Sophomore Representative to the WSGA Joint Conference Committee and was Secretary of her House Committee. In her freshman year, she was an S.A. Senator and a member of both the University Choir and WRA. For the past year, Mary Ann has been song leader for Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Candidates for the position of Chief Justice of WSGA Council are Nancy Best, Nancy Candon, and Judy Godbout.

Nancy Best, a junior in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, hails from Fair Haven, Vt. Nancy is a newcomer to Vermont, having transferred from Green Mountain College. While at Green Mountain, she was a member of Green Key, the school's highest honorary, and Honor Board, the Judicial Board of Green Mountain College. She was also a member of Green Mountain College's Choir, Dramatic Club and Young Republicans Club. Now at UVM, Nancy has become active here and is treasurer of her floor and a WRA member.

Home for Nancy Candon is Proctor, Vt. This junior in the College of Arts and Sciences served as Freshman Representative on House Committee, and has been Vice President of her floor for the past two years. She is also a member of WRA, and is on the executive committee of the Newman Club. For the past two years she has been a member of the finance Committee of S.A.

Also a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences is Judy Godbout, a native of Cromwell, Conn. During this past year, Judy served as Secretary to WSGA Judiciary. She has also been a member of the WSGA Rules Evaluation Committee and the Rules Changes Committee. During her first year at UVM, Judy was Freshman Representative to House Committee, and as a sophomore she was Scholarship Chairman of her floor.

Pauline F. Dimick of Brattleboro, Vt., and Jane Siegfried of Albany, N.Y., are candidates for the position of House Chairman. Both Pauline and Jane have served as WSGA House Presidents for the past year.

Seeking the office of Assistant House Chairman are Cathy Hentz and Kathy Nunan.

Carolyn Kydd and Carol Souther are candidates for the office of Fire Marshall.

Juliette Bundgus and Rosemary Harvey, both juniors in the College of Arts and Sciences, are nominees for the office of secretary of WSGA Council.

Candidates for the office of Treasurer are Barbara Floyd and Karen Howe.

Shelia Cronin, Donna Kristiansen, and Bonnie L. Riggio are all seeking the position of Social Chairman.

Candidates for Scholarship Chairman are Carol Neiman and Margaret Rieuby.

Toby Churchill and Guriana Hanson are the nominees for the position of Public Relations Chairman.

Candidates for the office of Secretary to Judiciary of WSGA Council are Brenda Hunter and Barbara Kullback.

History Dept. Is Publishing Four Books

History, by definition, is a recording of past facts and events. Using this definition as a yardstick, members of the University of Vermont history department are doing a lot of measuring of past facts and events. Currently, four members of the department have books at various stages of development -- ranging from waiting for the finished product to arrive from the publisher to applying final touches to manuscripts. Vermont's "recorders of events" are Wolfe W. Schmokel, Robert Daniels, Jeremy Felt, and Samuel Hand.

Dr. Schmokel's book is "Dream of Empire: German Colonialism, 1919-1945" and is the first full treatment of Nazi plans for the creation and administration of an overseas empire. The book also examines the British and French pre-Munich policy and the conflict between Hitler's plans for expansion to the East and the salt-water imperialism of other Nazi leaders. Much of the material in the book is from official German archival sources. The book is published by the Yale Press, is 232 pages, and is scheduled for May publication.

Samuel Rosenman, who was associated with Franklin Roosevelt as a speech writer and advisor for nearly 20 years, is the subject of a biography by Dr. Hand.

Rosenman served as Roosevelt's main speech writer from the time FDR ran for governor of New York until his death in 1945. He was responsible for coining the "New Deal" slogan. Rosenman, who edited a 13-volume publication of Roosevelt's works, served as a special counsel to Harry Truman until retiring in 1946 and was the principal draftsman of Truman's 21-point program.

Dr. Hand hopes to finish his draft, which is an expansion of his Ph.D. dissertation, by the end of the summer and figures it will run about 350 pages.

"A Short Text on the History of Soviet Russia" is the title of Dr. Daniel's latest work. Already the author of four books about Communism, this latest effort is part of a new series being published by Prentice Hall, "The Modern World in Historical Perspective." The first three or four books in the series are expected to be out this fall.

Dr. Daniels said his book is intended as a supplement to college freshman or advanced high school courses designed to introduce students to Russian history. The book will be about 150 pages with maps.

Dr. Felt's first book is a study of child labor in New York since 1880. Expected to run between 250 and 300 pages, the book deals with how New York State formulated its child labor code, how effective the code was, and what part this code played in the national fight to ratify the child labor amendments to the Constitution during the 1920s and 30s.

SPS To Expand

Chris Scott, Chief of the Student Photography Staff, has announced that the staff now has openings for four new members. In making the announcement, Scott wished to emphasize that they are looking for qualified experienced students. The Student Photography Staff, which maintains an office and fully equipped darkroom in the Billings Center, has amongst its responsibilities that of taking most of the pictures used in the CYNIC. Interested students are advised to contact Chris Scott at UN 2-3389 or Ext. 233.

THE SLOW RUSH

Illustrated below is the membership pin of a brand-new national fraternity called Signa Phi Nothing. To join Signa Phi Nothing and get this hideous membership pin absolutely free, simply take a pair of scissors, cut out the illustration, and paste it on your chest.

Let me hasten to state that I do not recommend your joining Signa Phi Nothing. The only thing I recommend in this column is Marlboro Cigarettes, as any honest man would who likes good tobacco and a good filter, whose heart is quickened by a choice of soft pack or Flip-Top Box, and who gets paid every week for writing this column.

I am frankly hard put to think of any reason why you should join Signa Phi Nothing. Some people, of course, are joiners by nature; if you are one such, I am bound to tell you there are any number of better organizations for you to join—the Cosa Nostra, for example, or the Society for the Placing of Water Troughs in Front of Equestrian Statues.

But if you insist on joining Signa Phi Nothing, let me give you several warnings. First off, it is the only fraternity which admits girls. Second, there is no pledge period; each new member immediately goes active. Perhaps "inactive" is a more accurate word: there are no meetings, no drives, no campaigns, no sports, no games, no dues, no grip, and no house.

The only thing Signa Phi Nothing has in common with other fraternities is a fraternity hymn. In fact, two hymns were submitted to a recent meeting of the national board of directors (none of whom attended). The first hymn goes:

*Signa Phi Nothing,
Shining star,
How we wonder
If you are.*

The second hymn, rather more poetic in content, is to be sung to the tune of Also Sprach Zarathustra:

*A Guernsey's a cow,
A road is a lane,
When you're eating chow,
Remember the mein.*

Pending the next meeting of the national board of directors (which will never be held) members are authorized to sing either hymn. Or, for that matter, Frenesi.

Perhaps you are wondering why there should be such a fraternity as Signa Phi Nothing. I can give you an answer—an answer with which you cannot possibly disagree: Signa Phi Nothing fills a well-needed gap.

Are you suffering from mental health? Is logic distorting your thinking? Is ambition encroaching on your native sloth? Is your long-cherished misinformation retreating before a sea of facts? In short, has education caught up with you?

If so, congratulations. But spring is upon us and the sap is rising, and the mind looks back with poignant longing to the days when it was a puddle of unreason.

If—just for a moment—you want to recapture those careless vaporings, that warm, squishy confusion, then join Signa Phi Nothing and renew your acquaintance with fecklessness. We promise nothing, and, by George, we deliver it!

© 1964 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, promise smoking enjoyment, and we think you'll think we deliver it—in all fifty states of this Union. Marlboro Country is where you are.

What Me Cynical?

The 3500 students of UVM, St. Michael's College, and Champlain College who gathered in the Patrick Gymnasium last Thursday to hear Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York speak were probably less disappointed by the Governor's meager oratorical powers (merely hearing a potential presidential candidate in person satisfied many) than they were by the level on which he spoke. One could almost sense an air of insult in the gymnasium as the governor began with a grade school explanation of the American system of quadrennial presidential primaries and elections. Continuing for almost a half-hour, he touched superficially upon the problems facing America in the fields of education, unemployment, care for senior citizens, and spoke briefly about the possibility of Red China being admitted to the United Nations, and Vermont's Senator Austin's contribution to the concept of mutual security. He joked about Senator Smith's recipe for blueberry muffins, but in reality he offered nothing of greater significance to the assembled students. True, there were few votes to be collected (except for the faculty members and over-21 students), but certainly more than what the governor had to offer was demanded by the occasion.

The appearance of a major political figure (and the governor must surely be considered as such) at UVM is a rare occasion. It is almost as if students in Burlington are wholly outside the mainstream of American politics. Some have declared that American students, in general, have abrogated their role in politics through their apathy and lack of meaningful action. This is not the case. To point to our counterparts in other areas of the world and contrast their frequently direct influence on national politics (in many cases acting as the main center for mobilization of political power) with our own role in an attempt to draw some inference regarding the political consciousness of American students is an error. The most important factors in determining the extent to which students participate in the affairs of a country are those of history, traditions, institutions, and existing social structure rather than desire on the part of those involved. The American situation simply has not called upon students to act as the center for political mobilization nor made it easy for students to adopt such a role. In making this point, however, we are not necessarily supporting the present level of political consciousness of American students.

A recent issue of Newsweek magazine, in an attempt to characterize the American college student (a not infrequent project, with not infrequent lack of success) indicated that many college faculty members indicated their concern over the fact that students were "too serious". What they meant by "serious", however, was concern with their academic careers and futures, etc. A different view was expressed by a UVM faculty member who, in discussing an article which had strongly damned the intellect of students in West Germany, said that American students were just like German students in that they were simply concerned with where the money for the next beer would come from. Apparently neither source was too impressed by the extent with which we concern ourselves with the affairs of our country (more specifically, politics). In fact, American students (UVM is certainly no exception) have, in accepting their relatively minor role in politics, taken the illogical next step of resigning their interest in such matters. (We, unlike Newsweek, recognize the dangers of attempting to draw conclusions about such a heterogeneous group and welcome rebuttal.) If this is not the case they have certainly kept quiet (hence the difficulty in determining if our generation of college students has actually "gone conservative" as many declare). True, segments of American students have played an important role in the affairs of our nation (the student involvement in the Negro civil rights fight is a notable example) but we find it difficult to find a definite commitment by American students to interest themselves and attempt to involve themselves in the politics of America. We find this most regrettable.

In Memoriam

To the Editor:

It was with a sense of incredulity that I learned, on coming to school Friday, that our flag was at half-mast not for some senior member of the university who had fulfilled his life, but for my student and friend, Frances Houghaboom. The sense of grief and personal loss which you who are her contemporaries and who knew her, must feel, is paralleled by the sense of grief and loss for her generation which those of us who taught her feel.

Frances Houghaboom had in bountiful supply those qualities which make many of us happy to teach at this University of Vermont: a stout heart, sane and clear-eyed optimism, an independent and highly creative mind, and a winsome quality which I can only describe by Chaucer's term -- "gentillesse." I do not mean to suggest that these qualities are lacking in our best students from out of state (they are not), but only that Vermont seems somehow to produce an astonishingly high percentage of people so endowed. Frances was among the best of a very very good breed.

One will not forget her. One is happy to have known her. One recalls the old Scottish saying, "He has lived long who has lived well."

Re: Rockwell

To the Editor:

There are many times when I have the urge to write letters to the Editor of the CYNIC, but I purposely refrain since I believe in the CYNIC as a means of student expression. Instead of leaping into print as an authoritative, witty, cynical, learned, sceptical (choose one) member of the University staff, I find if I wait, that from the students there will come the discussion of the issue on as many or more sides than I would have considered. This is what I prefer and I believe it fulfills the purpose for which the paper is published, and that it contributes toward our educational objectives as well.

A recent letter asked me to amplify the remarks appearing in the Free Press and the use of the word "sedition". Thank you, Mr. Boriskin, for the privilege, and I in turn will be happy to get your reaction as to whether my reasoning is an insult to the University students. Neither the President nor the Board of Trustees are bound by or necessarily would agree with this statement but for a decision to be reached at my level it would have its base in these thoughts.

You have probably read the dictionary but allow me to quote: - Sedition: "A commotion, or raising of a commotion, in a state, not amounting to an insurrection; conduct tending to treason but without an overt act; excitement of discontent against the government, or of resistance to lawful authority." Briefly I interpret it to mean the advocacy of overthrow of the government by non-peaceful, non-legal means. Ours is a government which does provide for change, ordered change, and the man or men who do not wish to avail themselves of that means and submit their ideas to a vote of the people and their representatives, should not be granted a platform I believe, in this or any other tax supported institu-

I further believe that it would be an insult to the intelligence of the students to present such a person in any institution of higher education since he is advocating physical-emotion-based action for change rather than reasoned-discussion-based change, emotional or otherwise. I will also be frank to state that I would not go to hear such a person because my prejudice says that if he has something of substance for me to consider he would not need the emotion-raising gadgets to draw an audience. I might add that this prejudice has also kept me from attending a variety of non-seditious speakers, which if they had been billed as entertainment might have been real fun!

You did not ask me to explain the issue of Mr. Rockwell but by implication it is tied to this and therefore I would like to state that I did not attempt to judge his position on the basis of sedition. He has given his message in several places, he has an office and staff in Washington, D.C. Our national security officers have not seen fit to test this case in court and I by-passed the issue. His term in jail was for inciting to riot.

From my personal commitment, I consider the man much more dangerous as a purveyor of hate than on the issue of government change. On the latter he is ludicrous and dangerous in his puppet-strut, his emblem-waving, but on the former it is my considered judgement that he is an evil influence and that we do not need any more personal demonstrations of the results of hate in the wake of November-Dallas. I cannot agree with Miss Lawrence (CYNIC 2/28/64, pg. 7) that we need to see in person to understand, nor would you find agreement on my statement of his being ludicrous, around those men and women who lived in contact with the war against the Nazi ideology and its puppets.

When I was asked as Dean of Administration if the invitation the student committee had already sent to Mr. Rockwell was acceptable, I asked the same questions and requirements that I have raised at other times, including such controversial speakers as Arthur Miller and Gov. Wallace: (1) Is the man an authority in the subject field in which you plan to present him? (2) If the demand arises are you prepared to sponsor an equally adequate presentation of opposing points of view. (3) You are to have the presentation moderated by a member of the faculty on tenure. (4) You must present evidence that you will be responsible for the proper conduct of the affair and the financial costs resulting from it.

The first is an extension of the concept of academic freedom to the speaker from off-campus. We appoint a faculty member because he is trained in a given subject. We defend his right to present the whole range of ideas on that subject however controversial they may be, but we believe the student has the right to expect the teacher to stay with his subject in the classroom. If the professor of music wishes to discuss the theory of evolution of animals or the professor of zoology wishes to discuss modern musical forms, he should do so at a time and place other than in the course he has been appointed to teach. Much of the interesting part of an education is gained from just such extra-curricular contact and I am taking advantage of it since the inserted presentations of my personal prejudices are neither from my former field of zoology nor from academic administration.

The second point, I believe, is obvious. We should not shut out a discussion by insisting all sides but we must be ready to permit them. This question acts both ways for if I ask it, I must also consider if the University will be prepared to approve the speakers of opposing views.

The third point is a courtesy to the speaker and protection to the sponsor and the University against later claims of any lack of propriety in the presentation.

The fourth is standard university practice for any contract from a jazz/combo to Sir John Gielgud. If a contract for a sum of money is concerned it will be signed by a University officer only on a signed authorization that it may be paid from the organization's account and certification by the University treasurer that the account is capable of meeting the contract.

In Mr. Rockwell's case the record of his appearances has shown a prevailing pattern of crowds, pickets and physical disturbance, therefore Scope was asked to have a plan acceptable to all security officers involved and to be prepared to meet the cost.

Scope was informed that if these conditions were not met they would not be permitted to

by Richard Berk, '67

In keeping with what I am told is a freshman tradition, the Class of '67 has finally coordinated its discontent into one formal condemnation of mandatory ROTC. I do not propose to speak for the entire freshman class, for I lack both the desire and the capability warranted by such a task. But I can speak for myself.

ROTC has recently been the subject of much inner debate for me. At one point last semester I seemed to notice, through the gloom of ROTC manual 145-20, a faint glimmer of value in the course. But despite my attempts at objectivity, I find I can no longer contain my disgust, for whatever meaning I had found has long since been lost in the intellectual void of the drill cage. It is here, at drill, that the cadet is addressed by some "Fearless Leader" type in a green flannel suit, whose unparalleled devotion to rigid discipline, coupled with a limited vocabulary, has succeeded in driving many a freshman into the ranks of the neurotic. (He will no doubt succeed in driving me into the ranks of naval CCS.) Some think those who run the drill sections put on a good show, but somehow their humor eludes me and only the absurdity of the situation remains unobscured. They solicit my respect, and a few have succeeded, but most have aroused only my contempt. What many of them fail to realize is the difference between commanding respect and merely demanding it. One is the quality of a good officer, the other, of an egotist.

The ROTC program could, no doubt, teach me the valuable lesson of how not to be an individual. This would make my life infinitely simpler, yet this is one lesson I sincerely hope I never learn, for I see a higher purpose in my life (although as yet undefined) than merely becoming just one more faceless part of an intellectually stifling machine. I don't have to be reminded that it is the United States Army that has secured and preserved the right to this individualism I prize so highly. When the time comes I will be more than willing to do my share, but now is not the time. Now is the time for me to serve the interests of my country by becoming a knowledgeable person, and it is in this respect that mandatory ROTC is more than just an inconvenience, it is a detriment to my education. It detracts from other subject areas in which I could more profitably spend my time. In its defense may be offered the hackneyed argument of the "well-rounded individual." However, it is my contention that there comes a time when even aspirants to the title of "well-rounded" must view their pursuits in order of relative importance, eliminating for lack of time the least important. For me, ROTC is the least important (Yes, that's right, less than phys. ed.). For those who are at this moment thinking that at the age of seventeen I can't possibly "know what's good for me," I say that if I am old enough to desire an education (as opposed to high marks) then I am capable of making this judgement. And someone has to make it, for the administration seems a bit confused. On the one hand we are required to take two years of military science while we are given a choice of most major courses, which would seem to indicate that the administration deems ROTC more important than these other subjects. Yet, at the same time, while our military science grade is given a value of two credits in our semester average, they deny us these credits on our graduating total, a seeming indication that the course is considered worthless. As a freshman, who still needs to have the complexities of academic life explained to him, I wish someone would explain this apparent contradiction.

Contrary to the impression which I have, no doubt, conveyed by now, I do not advocate the overthrow of the military science department, nor do I condemn everyone connected with its operation. On the contrary, I think there is a definite place for ROTC as an elective and, admittedly, there are men both in the advanced corps and the department itself who's unquestionable sincerity has won my admiration. But the problem I have offered for consideration is as much their concern as it is those whose wrath I will incur at my next drill period. I am confident that the vast majority of the men who continue in the advanced ROTC corps would have entered the introductory program as freshmen, even if it had been optional, and that those who are forced into it against their will are rarely "converted" and leave only with a feeling of resentment. In my own case, taking the course has served only to confirm my earlier suspicion that the army has no use for people who think — except within narrowly prescribed limits. Along this line, my superiors on the drill field seem to equate being a good soldier with being a man, with no allowance for personality. I am afraid that by my own definition of these terms, having become their conception of a soldier, I would cease to be a man. In fact, the program has done such an admirable job of making honorable men out of its cadets that every M.S. 1 hour exam becomes a study in communal remembering.

I have been told that every year the freshman class initiates a campaign against compulsory ROTC, complete with petitions, rallies, etc., and that every year their efforts are fruitless. I don't know whether the decision we require must come from the administration or from Montpelier, but in any event, I don't expect this year to be any different. Those in authority will listen with a polite smile, and just as politely they will completely disregard everything we have said. Compulsory ROTC will continue. The man in the green flannel suit will go on insulting the intellectual sensitivity of all those from whom he demands "respect." The drill cage will continue to serve as a forum for the egotism of grown men who like to play children's games.

--And I will continue to resent being one of their toys, and will never accept their terms of surrender.

have space on the University campus for Mr. Rockwell to appear. Their decision in response to this has already been publicized.

The public press and the CYNIC have carried many differing points of view and my telephone and mail have brought me more. This is proper for people should test their ideas and I should have them in evaluating future decisions. I agree with Professor Dellin (CYNIC 2/28/64) "Thus while Rockwell has the right of free speech, he has no right to occupy a speaker's platform on our campus; the latter is a privilege which originates with us." It is a privilege but if there were a responsible student or faculty organization able to qualify on the four statements above as Dean of Administration would not withhold consent, for otherwise I would be

by Joan Klonsky

Governor Rockefeller did not impress me; I would not vote for him or any candidate, Democratic or Republican, who so presented himself. I will grant the Governor that he has been campaigning hard, travelling much, and making numerous speeches. I will also grant him that, in reality, the students of UVM, St. Michael's, Champlain and Trinity, who will vote in November, will have no effect upon the outcome of the election. However, I object to an attitude of condescension apparent in the speech of the Governor, who must have failed to realize that college students are generally more intelligent and better informed on current national and international issues than the population of the country as a whole.

I am pleased for the Governor that his educational program in New York has been so meritorious, and that he has held umpteenth positions as Secretary of this or that. But I would have been so much more delighted if he had devoted his wasted half hour to a more specific discussion of a more worthwhile nature: Why is the Governor opposed to Red China's admission to the UN? What particular program would he offer for Senior Citizens? Where has the leadership gap in the current administration occurred and how has it proved detrimental? Why should or should not the U.S. continue aid to South Viet Nam? How would the Governor improve the Alliance for Progress? or even: Why should the Governor be the Republican nominee for President of the United States as opposed to Nixon, Scranton or Goldwater?

As one of 7000 college students employed in Washington, D.C. last summer, I heard many speakers in a seminar program, including Senators Humphrey and Kuchel, Edward R. Murrow, John Glenn, Attorney General Robert Kennedy and the late President John F. Kennedy. Senator Humphrey spoke on politics and international issues, Robert Kennedy spoke on civil rights, John Glenn spoke on the aeronautics program, to cite a few; following his talk, each speaker answered questions posed to him by members of the audience.

What has left me with an indelible impression, however, was the ability of each speaker to establish immediate rapport with the audience, composed exclusively of college students. It was a rapport based not so much on capacity for articulation, but on overt expression of sincerity; that when a speaker tells the youth of America that the future rests upon them, he tells them with confidence in their intelligence and their potentialities, not as a trite utterance of sham idealism.

establishing my independent right to censure from which the next step would be book burning. I can agree in part with Mr. Heins (CYNIC 2/28/64, pg. 5) "If a man professes a belief which I know is wrong... there is absolutely no reason why I should listen to him." It is his privilege not to listen, but I maintain it is not his privilege to judge and decide that there is an absolute wrong which also holds for me. Please note, Mr. Boriskin, that at no time did I say that seditious ideas were necessarily wrong. I said that as a public institution with public responsibility we will not present them. I am still quite aware of

Against the assault of laughter, nothing can stand.
Mark Twain

Le Sceptic est mort, Vive le Sceptic. One lost soul in last week's CYNIC beckoned for a return of that dread agent the Sceptic, so here to answer his call are we, the Neo-Scepticists to return satire, controversy, criticism, and discontent, to and at the glorious University of Vermont. We will attempt each week to say something nasty about at least someone or something and since we will be students, possibly we can escape the pressures foully exerted against our mostly honorable predecessor. Our motto: All criticism is constructive if directed against UVM. This worthy banner bears the same purpose as the last bit of life in a clay-cold, catamount corpse.

What to kick around this first week? How about everything. Kake Walk! In literary circles it is called Saturnalia, in religious circles it is called ritual and in ritualistic (fraternal) circles, it is called religious saturnalia. Even though the skits weren't written by Eugene O'Neill, the boys put alot of work into them. Let it never be said that they wasted their time. How about the fifteenth walkers each night, wasn't it exciting to know they were the last.

Kake Walk brings to mind Aldous Huxley's Ape and Essence. In his post-nuclear war world, Belial day was set aside once a year when everyone was allowed to make up for the sex not allowed the rest of the year under pain of death. During this weekend at UVM, we are allowed to do slowly until 2:00 in the morning what we must grab a bit faster the rest of the year. Kake Walk is the time when the Puritan fathers of our school put away their temperance signs and allow, to a degree, human beings to freedom of human beings. Enough on this anarchy.

How about ROTC? You freshmen and sophomores are still complaining about that compulsory garbage. ROTC is the only course in the school taught by entirely competent teachers on a completely incompetent subject. It is the course where the officers, remembering the days of their lower classmanship, take out on you, the sophomores and freshmen, their repressed hostilities, feelings of inadequacy and some other big psychological words which I don't remember.

So what are you guys gonna do? Huh? I'll tell you the only way to defeat this blight of militarism on our otherwise peaceful campus. This coming Monday and Tuesday, no one goes to class. You can all afford one cut. If enough people cooperate, you do the same thing again and indefinitely. Even our men in green won't flunk an entire student body. With no people attending classes you guys can't lose. Fight for Vermont; don't keep the campus green with militarism.

How about WSGA? Here, as in ROTC, slaves are made of our students. Curfews prevent our American youth from doing what they have to wait for Kake Walk to do. Not only that, but WSGA imposes all kinds of totalitarian restrictions on their subjects. (By the way, what is WSGA besides some abstract being that strikes terror into every female UVM heart. Is it an extension of the Birch society, Communism, the K.K.K., the D.A.R., or just the Dean of Women's office?) WSGA trains women to report themselves on the honor system. No; they don't report themselves if they have robbed, beaten or murdered someone, they report themselves if they haven't "signed in." More serious crimes, like appearing at their compounds after they have been sealed are not left to the honor system for reporting. Instead, waiting for the two-minute tardy are the house mother (never has "mother" had such an awful connotation) and her henchmen; spies chosen from among the girls for their narrowness, nastiness and chasteness. That's one of the nicer things about WSGA, the way it gets girls to work against and report each other. It would be great now to make a comparison of WSGA and the methods preached by George Lincoln Rockwell....

If girls at this school were not such sheep living under the crook of America's double standard, I would suggest a mass refusal to enter the dorms this coming Saturday evening but one can't fight against ignorance and fear. (at least not at UVM).

As long as I did mention Lincoln Rockwell — does S.A. have anything better to do with $600 or for that matter all the money that this school weasles out of us for our extracurricular activities? God will protect us from controversial people. Instead, we will get enlightened speakers like Lyndon B. Johnson and Nelson Rockefeller.

Speaking of the Free Press, the Lunatic Fringe of Burlington would like the beatnik, atheist, pinko, socialist, Castroite, peace marchers who dislike Barry Goldwater, to report themselves for listing to the Attorney General's office. Reading the two great newspapers of this state, the Free Press and the CYNIC, one finds that it is bad to be a conservative, because they are fascists, it is bad to be a liberal because they are subversives and sensationalists, but it is best to be a nobody because then no one can accuse you of anything because you aren't. Nobodies of the world unite....

Enough fun and games for this week. If anyone out there in UVM land has any desire to write bait literature for the CYNIC, ask our friendly editor, who is bewailing the lack of journalists in his first editorial, who "we" are. Give him the secret handshake and wink three times while standing on one foot and....

Patrick Henry, the Boston Tea Party and a certain honored document which begins "When in the course of human events..." By-the-way, Mr. Boriskin, would you please reread the first amendment to the constitution. I am not a legal adviser but it does not say to me what it seems to say to you.

Letters from members of the faculty have asked "have you and the President abrogated your responsibility?", "we expect more leadership from you, the students should be told that they may not have such a speaker.", "they (students) are not so much interested in free speech as they are in doing damage to the Uni-

I cannot agree with UVM Medical Student, (CYNIC 2/28/64, pg. 5 col. 5) "that all speakers wishing to express their viewpoints should be allowed to do so." A university campus is not a soapbox. In fact I raised these doubts to the student who made the Rockwell request to me. He assured me they wished to bring him for an intelligent presentation not as a show and within minutes he stated that he considered the man a fool but he should be heard!

AID BILL IN TROUBLE

WASHINGTON (CPS) --- A massive aid program aimed at the U.S. college student has slim chances of getting through Congress this year.

Casting a shadow of doubts over the higher education program is the upcoming civil rights bill battle in the Senate.

No one knows for sure how long the Senate will be embroiled in what promises to be a long, bitter fight over the most sweeping anti-integration measure since reconstruction days. Best estimates now see a congressional snarl imposed on other major legislation until the Senate finishes the civil rights bill -- one way or another -- by late fall.

Still pending in committee are House and Senate versions of mammoth student aid programs to get able but dollar-short students through college.

Getting strong administration support is the Senate version, introduced this month by Sen. Vance Hartke, D.-Ind. It comprises ideas germinating in the White House, the Office of Education and congressional circles of higher education supporters.

Similar to the Hartke bill -- but containing enough differences for a tough compromise fight -- is an old program of Rep. Edith Green, D.-Ore.

Mrs. Green, chairman of the House Education Subcommittee, was defeated when backing the same plan last year in a conference committee.

Both House and Senate backers fear that the civil rights bill will eat up congressional attention until the November elections. Even if the fight is finished by August, they will be hard pressed for supporters bent on stumping for reelection.

Any last minute attention before campaigning or racing to the summer national party conventions will probably be directed at higher-priority programs such as the administration's was on poverty.

The only glimmer of hope could come from decisive action by Senate supporters of the civil rights package. It would be approval of cloture -- a gag rule imposed on southern filibuster forces early in the debate.

Cloture, however, is a dirty word to both Sen. Mike Mansfield, Senate Democratic leader, and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, his GOP counterpart.

While the two support the civil rights package passed by the House Feb. 10, Dirksen has some strong objections to the key public accommodations and fair employment practices sections.

Parking Problem Worsens

Though one Kake Walk skit suggested UVM solve its parking problems on the moon, even completion of the new Votey Engineering Hall has not yet resulted in the kind of research breakthrough needed to make that visionary solution an early reality.

In fact, according to Dean of Administration Lyman S. Rowell, the man who would be the first to push the button for Operation Moon Park if he could, completion of Votey Hall will increase the need for reserved parking spaces in that area. At present, there are 89 reserved spaces in the area, whereas there are 194 staff members who will now use the area who have yellow stickers. Students can probably guess the result without reading further -- the number of reserved spaces will be increased from the unreserved. But don't blow your tops, already, the number of unreserved spaces will be increased elsewhere on campus.

Before we get to that, however, it ought to be noted (always tell them the worst, first) that the number of reserved spaces in the Home Economics parking area is also going to be increased from the present 157 reserved spaces to 175 -- an increase of 18. This increase is necessary to serve the 277 yellow-stickered cars whose owners work in the area and who have strongly expressed their feelings through the faculty building and grounds committee that they must have a reasonable chance to find a parking space in the area where they work.

On the plus side of those whose stickers are not privileged by yellow pigment are plans to increase the number of unreserved spaces in the Waterman parking area. This increase in the unreserved is being made possible by the exodus of engineering faculty and staff from Waterman to Votey.

It might also be noted that there are 86 unreserved parking places in front of Buckham, Chittenden and Wills Residence Halls -- not too bad a location for those on their way to Bailey or Votey or Hills and other nearby points -- and another 99 unreserved spaces at the rear of Buckham, Chittenden and Wills, and another 35 in the vicinity of Converse. These may be entered from Colchester Ave. They are rarely ever close to filled.

Dean Rowell advises "it is recognized that everyone desires to park as close to his source of activity as possible. The University will continue to provide reserved parking areas for staff in the vicinity of the various buildings. Parking spaces for student cars will not be provided in greatly increased numbers on the center campus," he said, "unless a charge is made to students using them, adequate to provide for their construction."

He said calculations have shown "this would require a charge of about $60 per year. We hope to avoid this unless student demand suggests it is desired."

But paved parking areas are expensive to build, he noted, adding, "I suspect this would be true even on the moon."

Financial Aid Notice

Mr. Reed Saunders, Director of Financial Aid, spoke last week to interested students concerning financial aid for the 64-65 school year. For those students unable to attend these meetings, applications are now available at the Financial Aid Office. It is imperative that all applications for aid be turned in on or before April first. Emergency applications, however, will be considered throughout the year.

Mr. Saunders outlined the available funds, which are "limited primarily to Vermont residents because of endowments." Since there are only ten scholarships available to out-of-state students those students are urged to investigate the scholarship and loan possibilities within their respective states before applying to the University of Vermont for aid.

As stated in the financial aid information sheet, there are five primary sources of aid: Wilbur scholarships, which "constitute approximately one-half of the scholarship aid available to freshmen and upperclassmen"; restricted scholarships; unrestricted scholarships, which are "awarded on the basis of need, demonstrated scholastic ability, and personal character"; athletic grants-in-aid, "awarded upon the recommendation of the Director of Athletics..."; and loans, which are "an important financial aid source available to students who need help and who are willing to pay for part of their current education from their future earnings." There are University Loan Funds available to students as well as those loans of the National Defense Education Act and the United Student Aid Fund.

Further information on the scholarships and loans mentioned above can be obtained from the Office of Financial Aid, which is open from 8:30 to 5:00, Monday through Friday. Applicants for aid are urged to discuss with Mr. Saunders any questions or problems that may arise concerning financial aid.

Debators Are Victorious

University of Vermont Debaters completed their most active weekend of the spring season participating in three (3) tournaments at Notre Dame University, Bowling Green University, and the U.S. Naval Academy. Overall the UVM Debaters compiled a 15-5 record. At the Notre Dame event, Michael Cronin of Richmond and Elaine Zak of Burlington won 6 of their 8 debates and took fifth place in the tourney, after losing a split decision in the quarter-finals. Victories were gained over the University of the Pacific, the University of Wisconsin, Michigan State, Notre Dame, John Carroll, and the University of California at Santa Barbara. Losses were sustained to Carson-Newman and to Wayne State University. Michael Cronin was awarded a prize as the second best speaker in the field of 100. At Bowling Green, Ohio Norman Snow of Burlington and Carmen Wessner of Manchester recorded a 5-1 mark, holding victories over Georgetown of Kentucky, Augustana of South Dakota, Bradley University, Marietta, Bowling Green and losing only to Augustana College of Rock Island, Ill. Norman Snow won a speaker plaque as the fifth most outstanding debater in the tourney. Finally, at Annapolis, Maryland, UVM Debaters, Carl Lisman of Burlington and David Waite of Springfield capped the weekend's activities by winning

Correction

Shortly before Kake Walk, the CYNIC asked former editor Bob Bernard to write a column expressing his views on some topic. He decided to explore the history of the blackface controversy from its beginning (in the 50's). Unfortunately the final paragraph of his column was omitted through an oversight. In the interest of clarifying his position we would now like to present that omitted section.

Yes, blackface should have been done away with, not because it was ever intended as a mockery, but because it was made an issue. And when such issues are not vigorously contended with by an Opposition so that they become simply issues, then the black grease paint should be removed and Tradition booted out the door. The individuals of the University have some soul searching to do in order to determine for themselves if this is the way it should really be. Removal of the white rings from the eyes and lips would have added more dignity to what was, is, and always will be an attempt at the representation of a historical fact with nothing more in mind than the enjoyment of the precision and beauty of the event. Furthermore, it would seem that any attempt to paint the walkers' faces another color is truly making a mockery of the situation and cannot be justified. An Indian in warpaint should not be walking for a cake.

Blood Drive Mon.-Tues.

Several hundred student hours -- as a conservative estimate -- have been dedicated to an effort to turn out at least 250 Vermont students, faculty and/or staff members this Monday and Tuesday (March 9-10) for a University-wide blood drawing at the Red Cross Blood Center on Mansfield Avenue.

Those willing and able to give a pint of blood will be warmly welcomed at the Center, which is just around the corner from Ira Allen Chapel on Mansfield Ave. Hours of the drawing will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days, and the sponsoring Ethan Allen Rifles have promised there will be a station wagon circulating from Redstone campus to the Blood Center on both days for those who might like a ride to or from the drawing.

University of Vermont students, faculty and staff have been important to the Vermont-New Hampshire Regional Blood Program, having given generously to the program every year since its inception. The total given to date is more than 5000 life-sustaining pints, and many UVM students, staff and families have been recipients of blood donations under the program.

Those interested in giving may sign up in advance, at Billings Center, or walk in on either Monday or Tuesday. However, those under the age of 21 who wish to give will need to have consent cards, available at Billings, signed by their parents or guardians.

To get to the Blood Center, turn right at the Ira Allen Chapel onto Colchester Ave., walk or drive east (only a short distance) until you reach Mansfield Ave., on your left. Turn onto Mansfield Ave., and Blood Center is on your left across from the Mansfield Ave. Fire Station.

Purple Knights Topple Cats, 84-74

by Rigahrd Rapport

The 1963-1964 basketball season came to a close with the defeat of the Cats by the Purple Knights of St. Michael's last Monday evening before a record crowd, the score of 84-74.

The Catamounts play was quite erratic, looking quite good in certain spots, but on the other hand appearing extremely poor in others. The Cats were greatly hampered in the first half when Layne Higgs acquired three personal fouls with about ten minutes remaining to play in the half. The loss of the Catamounts only playmaker resulted in rather sloppy play by Vermont which allowed St. Michael's to hold a 35-32 halftime advantage. With the loss of Higgs, the Cats were actually quite fortunate to be trailing St. Michael's by only such a very small margin.

The rebounding was not extremely strong in this contest, especially off the offensive backboard. This can be attributed to the fact that the team was shooting when no one was underneath the basket, and to also that Ralph D'Altilla was used outside, instead of underneath the basket where he worked effectively last week in the team's one point loss to these same Purple Knights.

The game would not have been as close as it was were it not for the outstanding play of Chuck Glick, who was definitely closing out the twilight of his career in grand style. It was unfortunate that Glick did not receive such fine performances from the remainder of the squad, as they had exhibited last week at Memorial Auditorium in the first St. Michael's encounter.

Even though the Catamounts play the last Monday evening was not outstanding their overall record of 11-10 definitely was, since it is the first winning season Vermont has had in the last five years. This includes the squad of the previous three years who had great potential, but were greatly hampered by dissension among the players. This was due to the fact that each one was interested solely in himself, and his own benefit, instead of the overall good of the team.

They played like five individuals each in his own one-man game, who happened to be wearing identical uniforms.

The success of this year's squad was surprising, due to the fact that only one starter returned from last year's team captain Dave Strassburg. However, the team developed quite rapidly as they overcame their inexperience, and exhibited a great deal of teamwork and desire, two characteristics which had been missing from Vermont basketball for a long time. The squad finished in fourth place in the Yankee Conference with a record of 4-6 which was the best showing in a number of years. This was a shock to all the national basketball magazines, (as if they were actually paying attention to Vermont this season anyway) who had picked UVM in their pre-season ratings to definitely finish in last place in the Yankee Conference.

In Vermont state series play the Cats finished with a record of 3-3, losing to Norwich, and St. Michael's twice. While the losses to the Purple Knights were expected, and by larger margins than the actual results the loss to Norwich was a disappointment which tied the Catamounts with the Cadets for second place in state series play.

The outlook for next season looks quite good. With three starters returning, Milt Goggans, Ralph D'Altilla and Layne Higgs, and a few good substitutes from this year's squad, Vermont should improve on its record of this season, and has an excellent chance to place third in the Yankee Conference. In-state series play the Cats should battle St. Michael's again for the Vermont crown.

At this time of the year many awards are given out such as All-American, All-Conference, etc. I would personally like to award the following which I hope are all taken in the humorous vein in which they are meant:

Outstanding Defensive Player - Milt Goggans
Speediest Ballplayer - Ralph D'Altilla

UVM Girls BB Team Beats Skidmore

The Women's Recreation Association basketball team traveled to Skidmore College at Saratoga Springs, New York, where it won two out of three games during the invitational basketball-swimming sports day tournament there on February 29. Coached by Miss Marilyn Stauff of the Women's Physical Education Department, the UVM Girls battled to a 21-18 victory over Green Mountain College in the first game; Carolyn Kydd led the winners with 8 points, followed by Arlene McLeod with 5.

The second exciting game saw UVM nip Middlebury College, 23-22. Jean Hackett sunk the winning point from the free throw line during the last minute of play. High scorer for Vermont in this game was Nancy Nelson, 10 points, followed by Elaine Colt, 5 points.

In the final game of the day, the UVM girls went down to defeat at the hands and deadly aim of a strong and powerful Vassar College club by the score of 30-13. Nancy Nelson and Carolyn Kydd each netted 6 points, and Elaine Colt sunk a free throw, all to amass the largest number of points scored against the Vassar team all day.

When it was all over, the scoring columns showed Nancy Nelson to be high scorer for the three games, with a total of 20 points. Individual scoring for the Vermont club was as follows:

Game	1	2	3	Total
Nancy Nelson	4	10	6	20
Carolyn Kydd	8	3	6	17
Elaine Colt	0	5	1	6

Glick Excels As Career Ends

by Dave Matthews

The fast-finishing St. Mike's Purple Knights put the damper on University of Vermont victory hopes for the second straight Monday evening by spurting to an 84-74 win over the Cats before a turn-away crowd of 4500 at the Patrick Gym. In a nip and tuck battle until 1:50 left in the game, the Knights rolled through a Vermont full court press and took the win going away. The Cats were trailing by only 73-70 with 1:50 on the clock and had the ball and the momentum going their way after scoring three straight hoops. Dave Strassburg fed Ken Spalter in the left corner, but the sophomore reserve missed a spinning jumper and Knight ace Dick Tarrant came down with the ball and was fouled by Strassburg. Tarrant converted the one and one situation for two points. SMC Captain Marty King then chipped in with two layups off a fast break to ice the game. Vermont tried to rally with hoops by Strassburg and Bobby Nurse, but time ran out.

The Knights got off to a small lead early in the game, mainly on the high arc jumpers of Ed Kryger. Vermont came back on the shooting of seniors Chuck Glick and Strassburg to keep the game close. The Knights spurted again and went into a seven point lead, but Ralph D'Altilla and Strassburg combined to cut the halftime edge to 35-32 in favor of the visitors from Winooski Park.

Vermont played some of its best basketball of the season early in the second half to rally and take a 44-39 lead over the shocked Purple Knights. Big men in the spurt were Milt Goggans, who scored well inside against the defensively weak Tarrant, and Glick, who hit for three straight from the outside.

But the swift moving Tarrant took over and scored eight points to lead the forces of Ed Markey back on top. The teams were never more than four points apart for seven of the last ten minutes of the game.

St. Michael's reserve, Bill Sullivan, gave the Knights a 63-61 lead with 2:48 left and then Kryger and Tarrant opened the gap. Fuzzy Evans sent speedy reserves Spalter and Nurse in with the Cats trailing 73-64 and the little guards raced around the court stealing the ball and cutting the lead to 73-70, where the breaks were finally applied by the Knights.

Baseball Schedule

The 53rd annual Southern Trip and a home two-night Yankee Conference doubleheader highlight the University of Vermont's 1964 baseball schedule.

The Catamounts, embarking upon their 72nd season, will play 23 games, opening in Annapolis on March 25 against Navy and closing on Memorial Day against traditional rival Dartmouth. The twilight-night twin bill is against New Hampshire on May 20.

Coach Ralph Lapointe starts his 13th season at Vermont with the distinction of never having had a losing season. Vermont has won nine state titles and tied for two others since the former major league infielder took over the reins in 1952.

Since fielding its first team in 1888, Green and Gold nines have won 821 games and lost 656.

The 1964 schedule:

Regular season -- April 24 and 25, at Massachusetts; 29, St. Michael's (Vt.).

May 1 and 2, Connecticut; 4, Middlebury; 8 and 9, Rhode Island; 11, at St. Michael's (Vt.); 12, Norwich; 15 and 16, at Maine; 18, at Norwich; 19, at Middlebury; 20, New Hampshire (2); 30, Dartmouth.

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS

CATAMOUNT CLIPPINGS. -- Seniors Dave Strassburg, Chuck Glick and Bobby Nurse all went out in a blaze of glory. Captain Strassburg led Vermont scorers with 21 points while Glick turned in one of the finest games of his career with 16 markers. Nurse nearly sparked a Cat victory in the final minutes with his hustling defense and good shooting. Tarrant led the Knights with 31 points while Kryger added 20... It is estimated that nearly 1,000 fans were turned away... Crowd was largest to ever attend basketball game in Vermont ports history... Ralph Lapointe's freshmen ended a 7-3 season by slaughtering hapless St. Michael's yearlings, 71-52... However the Knights do not need freshmen help next year as four starters, including Tarrant and Kryger, will return.

Rubinstein Closes '63 '64 Blue Series

Artur Rubinstein who will appear at Monday's Lane Series.

By Betty Fuchs

The Blue Lane Series for the 1963-64 season will come to a close with the presentation of the incomparable Artur Rubinstein in a piano concert Monday, March 16. At 75, an age when the coordination of most musicians is gone, the Rubinstein touch remains untouched.

For his Burlington performance, Rubinstein will play a varied selection, opening with Beethoven's Sonata in C Major, Opus 2, No. 3. Next he will play Carnaval, Opus 9 by Robert Schumann. Following intermission will be four selections of Debussy, Homage a Rameau, Poissons d'or, Ondine (2nd Vol. Preludes), and La Plus que lente. The final pieces, by Chopin, include Ballade in G Minor, Opus 23, Four Etudes, and Andante Spianato and Grande Polonaise brillante, Opus 22.

In the New York Times Magazine, on January 26, 1964, music critic Harold C. Schonberg described the regal Rubinstein entrance. "Without trying, he lets the audience immediately feel that it is facing a Presence. Look, my lord, it comes. Polite, agreeable, not gushing, he accepts the homage due him. He seats himself, and his nose points toward the stratosphere like the prow of a jet going upstairs. The audience waits, breathless. Rubinstein is in no hurry. He must compose himself; he must think of the opening piece; he must wait for the last cough to dissipate before he puts his hands on the keyboard. Suddenly the auditorium is filled with golden piano sound. A typical Rubinstein concert is under way."

Rubinstein has been playing the piano for about 71 of his 75 years. At the age of 4 he already was a famous citizen of Lodz, Poland, and was passing out engraved cards on which was written "Artur the Great Piano Virtuoso." At 11, he made his formal debut in Berlin. By the time he was fifteen, young Rubinstein had spread his talents to encompass most of Germany and Poland, playing once in Warsaw with the orchestra under the direction of Emil Mlynarski, whose daughter Aniela, as yet unborn, was in later years to marry the brilliant soloist.

Rubinstein first came to America in January, 1906. During the first tour which lasted three months, he gave seventy-five concerts. After leaving America, Rubinstein gave no concerts for several years. When he reappeared in Berlin in 1910 he was asked where he had been and what he had been doing. "Oh," he replied, "I have been dead for a few years." Actually he had been in Paris devoting those years to incessant study.

Though Rubinstein's appearances in the United States were many up to 1927, he did not visit this country again for a decade thereafter. Meanwhile in 1932 he had married Aniela Mlynarski at a fairy-tale wedding in London attended by celebrities in music, art, literature, and diplomacy. His daughter, Eva, was born in Buenos Aires in 1933; his son, Paul, in Warsaw in 1935; baby Alina and John Arthur arrived in Hollywood in 1945 and 1946 respectively. In 1946, Rubinstein became a U.S. citizen. The Rubinsteins and their children now divide their time between their houses in Paris and New York.

On Friday, March 6, the students of UVM elected the new officers who will head the Student Association for the coming year.

The new President is Theta Chi's Dick Badger. This member of the Class of '65 has been affiliated with SA since his Freshman year, when he was SA residence hall senator. As a sophomore he became Sub-Treasurer of the organization and this past year he has been Treasurer. He has a tremendous familiarity with the Association's workings. Furthermore, he has been occupied this year with the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee, the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, and as Representative on the Inter-Collegiate Council. Certainly Mr. Badger is an active and valuable member of the University of Vermont.

Walter Meyer of Alpha Tau Omega is SA's 1st Vice President. This hard-working sophomore has been in the Association as a Representative, a chairman of the Elections Committee, and as a member of the Central Research Committee. Furthermore, Walter worked as Editorial Research head of the CYNIC and was a University Player in the fall of '62.

Pi Beta Phi's Karen Preis is the new 2nd Vice-President. She has been Public Relations Chairman of WSGA council this past year and a member of the Sophomore Aids. Last year, as a freshman, she was Representative and Secretary of Patterson Hall's Intra-Dorm Council, President of her pledge class, and a Student Guide Club member.

Helen Keith of Kappa Alpha Theta takes over as Secretary of SA. For the past year she has been Sub-Secretary of the Association, UVM Representative to the Inter-Collegiate Council, and a member of the Catalina Club. Last year she served as Vice President of her pledge class and as a Freshman Representative to WSGA.

(Credit: Felder, SPS)

Susan Gorman, SA's new Sub-Secretary, is also a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and the Class of '66. At Patterson Hall she has served as SA Senator, WSGA House Committee Representative, and social chairman of her floor. Moreover, she held a post on the SA Elections Committee.

The difficult job of Treasurer is now held by sophomore Dave Matte. This past year he served as SA Senator from Tupper Hall and became a member of the Finance Committee. As a freshman he was a Residence Hall Assembly Representative.

Helping Dave as Sub-Treasurers will be Diane Meyer of Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon's John Bradley. Diane, the only freshman officer of SA, is social chairman of Clagget House, censor of her pledge class, WRA Representative, and a member of the girl's swim team. Mr. Bradley, a sophomore, is the Executive Officer of Newman Club and an active member in his fraternity.

Players Present MACBETH

As part of the University of Vermont's celebration of Shakespeare's quadricentennial, the University Players, directed by Edward J. Feidner, with technical direction by B.G. Ackley, will present Macbeth in the UVM Arena Theatre located in the Fleming Museum on March 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 at 8:30 P.M.

This production will mark the first Shakespeare play to be presented by the University Players since 1956, when Othello was performed at Southwick Auditorium.

The part of Macbeth will be played by David Storti, seen earlier this year in Edward Albee's The Zoo Story, and in G.B. Shaw's Major Barbara. Marianne Woods will play Lady Macbeth. She was seen in last year's production of Miller's The Crucible.

The roles of Macduff and Lady

Macduff will be played respectively by Ernest Cabrera, who played Undershaft in Major Barbara last semester, and by Nancy Street, Albee's American Dream's Mrs. Backer. Miss Street and Mr. Storti are well-known to the patrons of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival as the UVM Minstrals.

Other members of the cast include Michael Bonneau, Charles Goudy, Robin Schore, Suzanne Boudreau, Lorretta Felanko, Norman Hines, Olof Johnson, Paul Humes, James Miles Worthman, Ivan Karp and David Scherk.

Although the performance has been extended one night because of advanced ticket sales, the supply of tickets is quickly diminishing. We urge you to make your reservations as soon as possible.

CYNIC Salutes ...

Robert Collier

By Geri Sharff

"The students at UVM are not really apathetic," says Bob Collier. "They simply lack issues about which they could become enthusiastic." Bob, who has been here for four years and has seen a tremendous change in the attitude of the student body, would like to see some of the old spirit which seems to have disappeared from our campus. According to Bob, the intellectual environment at UVM is too small to be conducive to "revelations." Burlington is not politically sharp enough for an honest-to-goodness fight.

Bob is a philosophy major and intends to go to law school in September. As the outgoing president of the IFC, he has personally confronted the problem of how to promote student interest in what should be student affairs. He feels that the CYNIC should be more effective in providing controversial topics - something that everyone can dig their teeth into. We all know that it is possible to capture the interest of all the students; we have seen this at both Vermont Conference and at Kake Walk. What, then, is wrong?

Bob Collier throws open a question to the entire student body. As a reader of the CYNIC and as a student at UVM, how would you improve the attitude on campus? If you are sincerely concerned, you will think out this problem. Let your ideas be known. Other people are interested in becoming involved with student affairs also. Where are all the agitators?

If Bob's questions are answered, UVM will have a new face. Bob is especially hopeful that the students will pick themselves up and move. He himself has moved on campus. As a brother in Alpha Epsilon Pi, Bob was president of his fraternity before being elected to his former post on IFC. He is also a member of University Players and enjoys working with radios as another hobby. We wish him luck as he leaves UVM in June for a successful future.

Burlington Hosts Maestro Sawallisch

And The Vienna Symphony

By Robert Jahrmarkt

On Friday evening, March 6, the Lane Series presented the Vienna Symphony Orchestra, with Wolfgang Sawallisch conducting. The program included works by Mozart, Hindemith, Richard and Johann Strauss.

Mayor Keenan, Mayor of Burlington, welcomed maestro Sawallisch and the Vienna Symphony to the Queen City. The mayor made a brief speech welcoming the orchestra and added a few remarks of his own. Maestro Sawallisch, to show his appreciation, gave the mayor personal manuscripts of the great Viennese composers: Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven. Then Maestro Sawallisch stepped up on the block and lead the orchestra in a heart-warming rendition of the Star-Spangled Banner and the Austrian National Anthem. Some profoundly affected member of the audience stood up and shouted "long live Austria." After this the concert began.

The first work to be performed was the Symphony in C major (K 551), sometimes known as the "Jupiter." Maestro Sawallisch failed to provide the grandeur and heroism that this symphony demands. Every Mozart symphony requires delicacy and elegance, but these should not be elevated to a level surpassing all other musical interests. The first movement, the Allegro vivace, was not as truly convincing as it should have been. The movement lacked force, drive, and depth. It sounded more like dreamy night music than a heroic first movement. The second movement, the Andante cantabile, was tender and poignant, just as it should be. The third movement was as elegant and aristocratic as any Mozart minuet. The fourth movement, though, the Molto allegro, was not nearly forceful enough, nor was it very well coordinated. The five basic themes were not clear and this made it difficult for the audience to appreciate the amazing tour-de-force, which this finale represents. The first work of this program, then, was not an overwhelming success; but the second work was.

Wolfgang Sawallisch, Conductor of Vienna Symphony

The juxtaposition of a Mozart symphony and a Hindemith symphony is a curious and refreshing combination. The "Mathis der Maler (the Hindemith Symphony)" is twentieth-century music; the "Jupiter" is eighteenth-century music. There are obvious differences in form, structure, tonality, and treatment; yet, strange enough, both symphonies evoke certain states of soul. Hindemith's in twentieth-century terms and Mozart's in eighteenth-century terms. In this sense, then, Hindemith carries on the classical tradition of absolute music. Maestro Sawallisch had less difficulty handling twentieth-century Hindemith than he had handling eighteenth-century Mozart. The first movement, Concert of Angels, was filled with spirit, emotion, and vigor. In the second movement, Entombment of Christ, the elegiac tone, the arching melodies, and the mournful dialogue between instruments were all successfully combined and had a superb effect. The third and last movement, The Temptation of St. Anthony was as furious and dynamic as the first. After this came intermission.

The two concluding works were Strauss (Richard) Tone Poems: Macbeth, opus 23, and Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, opus 28. These two works are the very opposite in scope of the two preceding works. There is a definite story and picture image associated with these and all other Strauss Tone Poems. Maestro Sawallisch handled both works well. They were rhythmic, shocking, and intensely alive. These are the important features of Strauss music.

Maestro Sawallisch came back to the block to play an encore. He chose a waltz from Johann Strauss' Tales from the Vienna Woods.

There will be a meeting of the UVM International Club on Friday, March 20, at 7:30 PM in the Billings Center.

Program for the meeting includes:
1. General Meeting
2. Indoor Game Night.
Refreshments will be served.

Tom Thomsen wanted challenging work

He found it at Western Electric

T. R. Thomsen, B.S.M.E., University of Nebraska, '58, came to Western Electric for several reasons. Important to him was the fact that our young engineers play vital roles right from the start, working on exciting engineering projects in communications including: electronic switching, thin film circuitry, microwave systems and optical masers.

Western Electric's wide variety of challenging assignments appealed to Tom, as did the idea of advanced study through full-time graduate engineering training, numerous management courses and a company-paid Tuition Refund Plan.

Tom knows, too, that we'll need thousands of experienced engineers for supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience necessary to qualify. Right now, Tom is developing new and improved inspection and process control techniques to reduce manufacturing costs of telephone switching equipment. Tom is sure that Western Electric is the right place for him. What about you?

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—we want to talk to you! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Panhel-IFC Councils Choose Rogers, Hackel As Presidents

This is the time of year for elections on the UVM Campus, and Panhellenic Council is no exception. Panhel's new officers for 1964-1965 are: Merry Rogers, President; Denise Plunkett, Vice-President; Susan Rider, Secretary; and Rosemary Harvey, Treasurer.

Merry is a junior from Crestwood, N.Y., in Alpha Epsilon Phi, and is its scholarship chairman. She was also 1964 Kake Walk Queen Campaign Manager for AEPHI. Merry is an S.A. Senator and this year was secretary of the S.A. Elections Committee. She is a member of the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee and a Military Ball Queen candidate.

Denise, also a junior, hails from Woodbury, N.Y., and is vice-president of Gamma Phi Beta. She was in charge of this year's Rushing Handbook for Panhel. Denise was also chairman of the Freshman Mixer during Orientation this year, and last year was chairman of the Freshman Record Committee. She is also on the CYNIC and Ariel Art Staff.

Sue is a junior from Quincy, Mass., and a member of Delta Delta Delta. She is Scholarship Chairman and House Committee Social Rush Chairman of Tri-Delt. Sue is also a member of Staff and Sandal and was on its Homecoming Committee this year.

Rosemary, a junior from Bennington, is a member of Alpha Chi Omega. She is a WSGA House President and is president of the Inter-dorm Council.

Panhel has many plans and aims for the coming year. They will continue to support a Greek child as they have done in the past. Panhel is also in the midst of planning a new rushing program for next year, due to the new calendar. No definite plan has as yet been evolved, according to Merry.

Tuesday, March 3, the Inter-Fraternity Council selected its new officers. The new president is Marty Hackel (Phi Sigma Delta). Other officers are: Vice-President, Ken Bailey (Theta Chi); Treasurer, Mike Broutsas (Sigma Alpha Epsilon); and Secretary, Jack Brusa (Phi Delta Theta).

One of the first tasks of the new IFC Council will be to investigate and try to evaluate the new, very open, rushing system which was used this year. This system is a radical departure from past rushing procedure. The council plans to find out where it went wrong by sending out questionnaires to Freshmen who did not rush.

The biggest job of the IFC this spring will be the tabulation of results from the "Fraternity Self-study," prepared with the help of the Dean of Men's office and the IFC advisors, Dr. Perrine of the Psychology Department, and Dr. Lewis of the Sociology Department. This self-study, the biggest of its kind ever given in the United States, will show where the fraternity system's weaknesses lie, where its strong points are, and where some changes can be made. Marty Hackel believes that the results of the study, for which the IFC expects to have many requests from other schools, will help fraternity systems elsewhere, as well as at UVM, since other schools have many problems which are essentially the same as those here.

This year, the IFC has initiated a lecture series. The first lecture, on March 21st, will feature prominent columnist John Gardi. It is the council's hope that this series can be expanded next year.

To quote the IFC president, one of the Council's big goals for this year is "...to get each fraternity average above the all men's average. Academic life is something which the fraternities must continue to emphasize, and by being in a fraternity, one can benefit academically as well as socially." In conjunction with this aim, Marty would like to have visitors from National Fraternities come to UVM again as they did this year. Scholastic-oriented workshops were held which were very beneficial to everyone concerned, and the Council hopes to have more of them next year.

The most important duty of the IFC, according to Marty, is to see to it that fraternities work together and share ideas and solutions to problems which are common to every house and occur on every campus. He said: "We'd like to develop a fraternity spirit to go along with the house spirit." This goes not only for our campus, but for others too. This is one reason why Marty hopes that there will be a New England IFC Conference sometime this spring, as there has been in years past.

When asked for his own opinion of fraternity, Marty replied: "I personally have gotten a lot out of being a member of a fraternity and being a member of the fraternity system. I've made many friendships with many different types of people. I enjoyed working as the IFC Secretary this year, and I hope next year to improve the system as best I can; this can only be done by all fraternity men working together in a bond of common brotherhood."

AEPHI Brings "Loneliness" To UVM This Wednesday

By Merry Schron

A rewarding and interesting evening will be presented by AEPHI on March 18th when they prove that ----

Rebels and upstarts have a way of stirring up a great deal more interest than run-of-the-mill heroes, and there is always room for one more which Tom Courtenay, new-British film star, portrays in "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" to be shown at the Strong Theatre. According to Courtenay's screen character, Colin Smith, "Running has always been a big thing in our family. Especially running away from the police."

Having come from quite a different background, Courtenay had a strenuous mental and physical workout in order to live up to the social conditioning and the running prowess of this particular kind of rebel. Courtenay managed to overcome personal economic restrictions in obtaining an education through winning scholarships. His natural bent for acting diverted his course from the teacher's podium to the stage. It was while performing in the Old Vic's production of "The Seagull" that he was discovered by Tony Richardson, England's top director-producer. Signed to portray Colin Smith in the proposed screen version of Allen Sillitoe's "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner", Courtenay first had to dig in and find out what it was like to be one of the resentful underprivileged class of boys who seemed to gravitate to Borstals (reformatory schools). The fact that his character could outrun any competitor forced Courtenay into a strenuous physical fitness program.

During the filming, he had to run cross-country clad only in shorts and T-shirt in snow, rain and biting winds. Throughout all of this, the essence of a young rebel about to execute a simple, cruel revenge on the authorities had to clearly emerge.

Courtenay's ultimate triumph in the demanding role left him in a warm critical glow but in a decidedly cool frame of mind with regard to athletics. Any further rebels he might portray won't have a flair for the field of sports.

Michael-Regrave stars in "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner." Produced and directed by Tony Richardson, the Bryanston-Seven Arts production introduces Tom Courtenay and features Avis Bunnage, Peter Madden, James Bolan and Topsey Jane. Allan Sillitoe adapted his award-winning story for the Continental Distributing, Inc. screen release.

And more of the story? And a promise of excitement, thrills, and moments of suspense? Join AEPHI for "One of the Year's Top Movie Experiences." (New York Post).

NSF Awards Grant To UVM

The University of Vermont computing center is going to be able to handle more complex problems and to solve them more quickly.

The National Science Foundation has awarded UVM a grant to aid in the purchase of a new IBM 1623 core storage unit. The new equipment will bring the total storage potential of the center to 40,000 digits of memory.

Vermont was among the first institutions of higher learning in New England to have a computing center, starting in 1961 with a 1620 data processing system which used paper tape input and output.

Today, the center includes a 1620 central processing unit with automatic division and indirect addressing, a card read punch, a control unit, a special typewriter, two printing card punches, card sorter with counters, and a printing card punch.

When the additional core storage unit is installed, Howard Smith, Coordinator of Research at UVM, estimates that it will be possible to tackle problems three times as complex and that it will also be possible to handle more work because of the time saved by the new setup.

More than 150 persons are now making use of the computer and a class in its operation is given by the mathematics department.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont

What Me Cynical?

Contrary to common belief, student apathy is not turning this campus into an intellectual wasteland (that is, not student apathy alone). It took a remarkable combination of student apathy, organizational bankruptcy, and administrative irresponsibility and shortsightedness to guarantee the absence of the Centaur from the UVM campus this Spring. (Freshmen might not even be aware that the Centaur was UVM's student-edited magazine of creative writing and art.)

Like all other student organizations, the Centaur submitted a budget to the Student Association last year. However, all that was indicated on the budget-request sheet was that the organization desired $3,000 to be used for the publication of three issues this year. There was no indication that the editors had solicited bids from local printers. Nor, was there any itemization of anticipated expenses. Then, SA's Central Research (?) Committee, using research techniques unknown even to the officers of SA, ascertained that the University of Vermont had no need for a student-edited magazine of creative writing and art. Next, SA's Finance Committee refused Centaur's budget request, thus supplying the coup de grace for an organization already dying from lack of student interest. (Shades of Vermont Conference '62!!!!)

Just where to place the responsibility for the demise of the Centaur is not easily decided. Certainly the editors of the publication were negligent of their responsibilities when they submitted their sketchy budget request to SA. But then again, wasn't there any way in which SA could assist them in preparing a proper request when it was obvious that their first would not suffice (especially when the absence of a budget appropriation meant that the Centaur could not continue to exist). And as to the Central Research Committee's findings, these are highly debatable to say the least. It hardly seems possible that any intelligent group would deny UVM's need of a publication like the Centaur, especially when there is no other medium for the presentation of student work of a creative nature on this campus.

Regardless of why there will not be a Centaur this year, the fact remains that there will not be. Publication of the creative writing efforts of UVM's students is not the mission of the CYNIC (although we gladly publish occasional samples of student poetry). A student newspaper, ideally, should present comprehensive coverage of campus news and act as a platform for the airing of student opinion. However, since we view the passing (temporarily, we hope) of the Centaur as both regrettable and intolerable we shall endeavor to assume part of its role.

The exact nature of our endeavor has not yet been decided. Certainly we shall have to consider the financial restrictions imposed upon us by our own tight budget. What we do hope to do is to present a Spring Literary Supplement sometime this May. In preparing this supplement, we hope to have the cooperation and aid of those students who worked with the Centaur in the past or who wish to do so now. We do not intend to replace the Centaur. We doubt if our effort will approximate the quality which that publication represented. But, we do hope we shall ameliorate a somewhat intolerable situation.

At the present we urge all students who wish to contribute to the Spring Literary Supplement will send their manuscripts and poems to the CYNIC, Spring Literary Supplement, Billings Center. We also hope to be contacted in the very near future by any students who who desire to take part in the preparation and editing of the Supplement.

Crinkled Converse Comments

To the Editor:

In the Kake Walk edition of The CYNIC there was a letter signed "Wrinkled Redstone". Wrinkled thinks that she has it tough with only one ironing board for 75 girls. I would be only too happy to trade the two ironing boards in Converse Hall for one automatic washer that is in proper working order. We have one washer (only cold water) for 800 freshman men.

It seems that the director of housing expects us freshmen to take our laundry down to the lake and beat it between rocks. If this is the case then our room and board fees should be reduced since we aren't receiving all the "services" supposedly included in the fee.

ROTC Defended

To the Editor:

As a senior in his final semester at UVM, my interest in campus affairs has admittedly begun to wane. I did not believe that the classical freshman foment in opposition to the compulsory ROTC program could, at this late date stir me. However--

My reaction to you, man in the green suit, was most caustic. In fact you must forgive me if I should forget myself and refer to you as the "boy" in the green flannel suit.

You admit that you lack the capability to speak on behalf of your class. I heartily endorse this concession. This is all that I do endorse in your argument. You actually do little more than whine in "canned" phrases about the abortion of your recently conceived, foetal intellect. You say that you are subject to "a forum of egotism" during the drill hour. You say that those who lead you, lead you in children's games exhibiting limited vocabulary. To make matters worse, all this humility and degradation, plus two hours of classroom work (which is really wasted anyway since everyone cheats) serves to deprive you by stifling your quest for education and higher purposes, which you neglect to name. You then go on to say that this business is so distasteful that you will consider "a Naval Officer Program. (I sincerely doubt that the Naval approach to military training is really much better suited to your demands.)

You conclude, oh bohemian in green, by lamenting on the fact that the administration and the military department will turn politely deaf ears on your desperate pleas. Do you expect to immurely slander those to whom you appeal, and then receive sincere and mature reply?

Do you at the same time propose to speak for a group who you inadvertently label as summarily dishonest? It seems pointless to ask you what you expect. I doubt that you know.

(Do not fret however! I am with you. I too am against the present system of compulsory ROTC. My reasons are somewhat simpler. I feel that a compulsory program forces into its numbers, the stereotyped image of the prejudiced, narrow minded youngster who does not feel that there is time in his rapid schedule of intellectual growth for training of a unique, though no less valuable character than his regular academic disciplines. This sort of dissenter detracts from a program of merit. This seems converse to your view which holds that the program detracts from the individual, and stifles his educational pursuits. To such an unfounded statement, I offer in evidence, the present members of the senior class enrolled in ROTC. These men you label as having limited vocabulary are entering professional schools, graduate studies, and respectable careers of all sorts upon graduation. As one of them, I feel that ROTC had added to my intellectual experience at UVM in intangible, unique ways which my other courses could not.

I ask you now, man in the green flannel suit, to what sort of higher purposes do you subscribe?

THE SCEPTIC

"Your college has guts. There are a lot of colleges that don't. Be proud of it." Courtney Craig Smith President, Swathmore College.

ANY RESEMBLANCE OF THE FOLLOWING TO ANY PERSON ON THIS CAMPUS IS PURELY ASININE

We were all jumpy and jittery when we went to meet Bob Spende, President of the Student Body at the Student Union Cafeteria. We feared this renown and great personality would ignore such little ones as ourselves. Over in the corner, all shrivelled up, Bob sat, talking to himself. We went over to him and asked him whether we might pose a few questions on the current situation on campus.

"I'm for Dick Nixon," he replied in earnest. "I've taken courses in Political Science, History and Animal Husbandry and am a well-rounded person. I think I can tell because I'm President of the Student Body."

"What problems have you met while being President?"

"Mainly," he answered, "I have to deal with too many people."

Bob is in Alpha Alpha Sigma frat and is majoring in Liberal Arts. He is from Newburgh, N.Y., and plans to enter the Peace Corps.

Bob's big peeve is the lack of action on this campus. "The trouble with this campus is that it has no spirit like me. Why, I remember when I was very active. During demonstrations against tuition raises last year, I was the first not to do anything. Why, during my term of office we have got rid of 'Centaur'. (to you freshmen, the Centaur was a magazine of fiction which was utterly awful - it contained work which could not hold a candle to such great authors as Grace Metalious and James Michener or great poets like Edgar Guest). This group wasted money and it was my decisive action that got rid of it. During my term of office, I can effectively say that more nothing was accomplished than at any other time. When Norman Rockwell wanted to speak here, who fought for the majority student opinion? Who? Student Body has remained, under my guidance, a purely administrative organ which it was meant to be. We can't be bothered with politics on this campus." He smiled meekly.

We stood up with awe. "May we ask one more question?"

"Why of course, certainly," Bob replied.

"What one thing did you get out of being the President of S.B.?"

"Why, an entry on my graduate school application"

Yes, dear children, it is this time of year again. A little Spring is in the air, the birds are on the wing tra-la. This past Friday, some Freshman (or semblance thereof) decided it is time to rid this campus of that two-credit course in hurty-gurty commonly known as ROTC. The freshmen lined up boldly on one side of the field - 200 strong. Fire crackers were set off. Brooms were set ablaze. Then, suddenly on the edge of a field came the cadre of the military in full dress - represented by one Sergeant with an education of an abnormal variety. This brave man routed the two hundred off the field and proclaimed beamingly, "my strategy is talk 'em to death."

The instructors in ROTC's prime objective is to become a tape recorder (the desire is actually Freudian in spirit, but there is no room here for this) - read a book and spit it back at those things called students. Come Springtime weekends, English instructors will be teaching in Lafayette to the tune of "COMPANEEEEEE! PLATOOOOOON! SCHWARTZ!" while sergeants will be swaggering up and down squad columns holding their big golden sticks. (this also could, conceivably come in for analysis).

Who is in the military department? We have, primarily, a select group of Majors and Captains who graduated from that Citadel of American learning where scholarship excels - West Point (Now, come on guys, think straight, where did the most boring non-entity in the department come from?). Backing up the "Pointers" are a group of intellectuals who find time to cram for each lecture - they'd be good if only they learned the language. Then there are the sergeants - the unfits. Those who most of you have seen in Burn's detective uniforms. Now come on Colonel, there must be some regulation somewhere prohibiting outside employment during active service in the armed forces. A word must be said about what is taught (and we use the term loosely) in ROTC. To take a good example the Advanced Military Science Class of 1950, wasted a year respectively on the Civil War, Tactics, Ordering (Left, two, three, four) and Teaching. The present address of the Class of 1950 - Army division is the graveyards in Korea.

Yes, the demonstration against ROTC is over for this year. The eggs will return to their incubators and will come again next year to get scrambled or turned sunnyside up by a second rate potential - general. Next week, rumor has it that the freshmen will urinate on the Military Science building. The students (?) at this university have proven themselves, again, to be a "power" on campus. This year alone major demonstrations were run protesting the Rockwell "ban" and against ROTC (a note on that Rockwell fiasco. The administration must share blame here for quitting and capitulating and, in effect, recognizing the control by the Burlington Free Press Editorial Board of this campus.) The University, supposedly is the fountainhead of knowledge. Well, welcome to - VM. Blah, Blah.

QUESTIONS FOR THIS WEEK

- 1) How come that house on Main St. had a KW party?
- 2) Who is Dick Paye?
- 3) Whatever happened to that UVM civil rights committee? As a matter of fact, whatever happened to the International Relations Club, The Young Democrats and The Young Republicans.

Sceptic Wit Needed

To the Editor:

I, too, would like to add my voice to that of the student who wrote last week, asking for the recall of The Sceptic. Are we to refuse his witty and well-written columns if we would permit a nationally-known representative of a fascist organization to speak, but not allow a person nearer our consciences to challenge us? Are we afraid of scraping our skins in this uninvolved, lethargic university, which many students as well as faculty agree is very apathetic? Mr. O'Hara brought us many issues which forced our involvement in words if not in action. Our policy of "laissez-faire," or more accurately, indifference, is going to an extreme. Let us awaken to read and evaluate the challenges and charges of a sceptic.

STUDENTES

by Kim Boriskin

I do not want to belabor the issue of George Lincoln Rockwell any more than is necessary, but it seems to me that the issue has now gone considerably beyond Rockwell. He has, however, served to bring out several attitudes about the United States and what constitutes a danger to it, and it is this aspect of the discussion I would like to explore. These attitudes disclose, I believe, a basic distrust in the democratic system of government, whether the people who put forth the arguments and attitudes realize it or not. They are therefore worthy of discussion, even at the risk of repetition, and I intend to cover them.

Before I do, however, I would like to make a few short comments that have only minor bearing on the basic issue. I will begin with a plea of guilty to the charge of naivete made by Walter Heins in a letter two weeks ago. Today it is the height of naivete to read something before making a judgment; the truly sophisticated person says "I have been to interviews of this sort before, and no one gets the best of the speaker." One can only hope that as a doctor Mr. Heins will exercise more naivete and less omniscience when making a diagnosis.

There is nothing more amusing than to see someone taking a newspaper to task for saying something simply because he happens to believe the opposite, and doing it in exactly the same terms as he objects to, only without the satirical intent that usually accompanies such criticism. Just reread Mr. Heins' first three paragraphs.

Doc Heins says that pornography can corrupt our morals, or at least implies agreement with this view. Haven't we learned yet that pornography is not a cause of moral corruption but a symptom of it? A society that provides such a large market for pornography already has something wrong with it, and passing laws against a symptom will not eliminate the cause, no matter how much we say it will.

Doc also says that Germany is "still" trying to bring World War II Nazis to justice. Still? The correct way of saying it would be "is just starting." I believe you will find that the number of people tried in Germany until just a few years ago is rather small, and that, despite recent prominent West German officials hanging themselves, they are still not prosecuting very zealously.

Finally, Doc Says that "If we can't experience everything, then we must accept the experience of others." But, if we can't experience a concentration camp, at least we can see, first hand, what a genuine Nazi is like, and at least get a view of the shadow of a gas oven. Here is a Nazi; isn't that experience?

Now, after all these minor comments, there is still the basic issue of what a democratic government is and is not. One thing it isn't is the letter of its Constitution. The First Amendment says "Congress shall make now law...abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press..." However, one must remember that the words of the Constitution are simply a set of restraints upon the governments, state and federal (mostly federal), of the country, but that their intentions go far beyond the mere letters. What the First Amendment says is that it is far more evil to suppress any idea (or those who expound the idea) than the idea itself could ever be. It says that if we can put down any person we disagree with we can put down every person we disagree with.

It is, therefore, precisely the unpopular idea which must be protected most scrupulously from suppression. We often get the urge to try to shut someone up simply because we think he is a fool (i.e., we disagree with him), or even worse, but we must at all costs resist that urge. It is not a logical conclusion that as soon as a few -- or even one -- unpopular ideas are suppressed everyone who disagrees with the suppressor will soon be persecuted, but once we can see our way clear to suppress one person, or to condone or ignore his suppression, the capability is there for the suppression of just anyone we disagree with. That is why we must be especially careful that nobody gets put down because he preaches unpopular ideas, and the more unpopular the idea the more careful we must be. This can be extremely painful, of course, but it is a pain we must bear.

There are a large number of people who have either failed to grasp this most essential idea of democracy, or who have somehow come to distrust it; there seem to be more of the latter among educated people, while the former type of person exists among the more hysterical part of the populace. We have just seen this distrust very subtly displayed; it has apparently gone unnoticed.

To the Editor:

I know that you guys are commies and won't print a letter from a good AMERICAN but I'm writing anyways. This letter (sic.) is defending Mr George Lincoln Rockwell, one of the few men that can save us.

Mr Rockwell says that Barry Goldenwater (sic.) is a Commie like all the rest of that croud (sic.) and he is right. Mr Rockwell says that General McArthur (sic.) is the best man to be president but the Commie doctors (sic.) are going to kill him with cancer just wait and see. That means that only Mr Rockwell is left to be president but none of these dam (sic.) pinko run paflys (sic.) will run him because they are all afraid of him and because they know Mosco (sic.) will be killed if he is running. I was glad that you invited the great man to give a speech (sic.) at UVM but I knew it was to good to be true. You said that the security prices would be to (sic.) hi (sic.) but you know dam (sic.) well that the reason (sic.) you didn't let Mr Rockwell give a speech is that you couldn't get enough (sic.) Commie adgitaters (sic.) to yell at him so you wer (sic.) afraid the riot wouldn't go and that he would be herd (sic.) and listened to and some people might start supporting him so you had to call the whole thing off. But Mr Rockwell knows why. It is because all you dam (sic.) smart jews are all Commies like he says and so is Goldenwater (sic.) so you have to keep him shut up. But one of these days he will make you see and then AMERICA will be great again and I'm just sitting back watching (sic.) and laughing (sic.) untill (sic.) you guys get yours good which you will just you dam (sic.) atheist jew pinkos wait untill (sic.) Mr Rockwell gets in.

I am yours for a WHITE CHRISTIAN AMERICA like (sic.) Mr Rockwell says and he is right.

Be Original, Sceptic

Some readers appear not to be aware that the "Sceptic" column is no longer being written by Professor O'Hara. The fact is that the column is now being written by a student (Mr. O'Hara had long lamented the necessity of having to have a faculty member serve as campus critic.)

To the Editor:

It was with dismay that I read the replacement for our already somewhat inadequate "Sceptic" column. Certainly our new sceptics did manage to say a few "nasty" things in a flimsy way, but the questions brought forth were ones already worn thin.

For example, the perennial outcry against compulsory ROTC was mentioned in this column. A few questions were asked such as, "So what are you guys gonna do? Huh?" May I ask what all that means? Is it a threat? Is someone attempting to sound tough? To me, these were senseless words, existing only to occupy space. They definitely didn't enhance the quality of the article.

Next our sceptics offered the suggestion that M.S. I and II Students cut ROTC to make their feelings felt. Whether or not they were sincere in their suggestion I don't know, for the sceptics slipped into a vagueness defying decodification. But it doesn't really matter. Cutting classes was thought of when I was taking ROTC too. Not very refreshing, boys.

PROFESORES

By Leonard G. Robinson,
Colonel, U.S. Army, Professor of Military Science

The question of required versus elective ROTC is not within the Military Science Department or the United States Army to resolve. That is a decision for the University's Board of Trustees. It is safe to assume that as men of mature judgment, the trustees continually review matters pertaining to University curriculum.

As for my own views, which are purely personal and are not necessarily those of the U.S. Army, I think it is logical to assume that for some time to come our society will need armed forces of considerable size and strength. This is not a desirable requirement, but it is one that must be met. One may well ask how the requirement is related to higher education. The answer, I submit, is that higher education serves not only the function of preserving, expanding, and transmitting knowledge, but also of applying knowledge to practical problems. The requirement for armed forces is a practical problem which demands solution.

A key element of our national policy is the commitment to resist aggression wherever it may occur. The forces that can do this can also deter aggression and contribute to maintaining peace. This has been demonstrated so often in recent years as to scarcely require mention. As a means of keeping the cost of such forces within reasonable bounds, the United States maintains a large portion of its needed strength in an active status and the balance as an organized and trained reserve.

Among the reserve as well as active forces there is a great need for a high level of skill and talent, especially among officers. A high level of technical knowledge is needed to operate complex weapons systems and supporting equipment and to plan for their use. The military services also need their share of talented and educated young men as leaders, men who understand the role of the military establishment in our democratic society and who have the analytical skill, judgment, and executive ability to manage large operations.

Our colleges and universities constitute the principal source of such talent. Facilities of the U.S. Military Academy can provide only about 25 percent of the annual requirement for career officers and less than 4 percent of the total annual input required to man the active army. The balance of the requirement is met primarily by the ROTC.

The belief that an elective ROTC program will furnish enough volunteers to meet the requirements is unfortunately invalidated by the experience of institutions which have abandoned required ROTC during the past. Their experience shows that drastic reductions in enrollments occur and that the production of officers drops to about 60 percent of former levels. Were it not for the 133 colleges and universities (of the 234 offering Army ROTC) that still maintain a required basic course, the shortage would be critical. Thus, the basic course is an important means of convincing thoughtful undergraduates of the desirability of seeking admission to the advanced course. Polls taken at several institutions were the required basic course is maintained indicate that 60 percent of the advanced course cadets would not have enrolled in the basic course at the time they registered as freshmen if it had been elective. The results reinforce a suspicion that understanding begins to grow toward the end of the sophomore year. At any rate, one must conclude that voluntary programs do not attract enough students to meet annual needs for officers.

It is possible to make a case of sorts for the view that ROTC is a waste of time for those not planning to apply for the advanced course. But this presupposes that the program itself is being administered in a routine manner. I am convinced that a basic course program that is carried out with energy and imagination can provide much that is of value to the student. Military history, the organization of national security, the fundamentals of leadership, and even map reading can contribute significantly to the student's general education. More important, the training also helps to develop attitudes and habits that will be advantageous in any walk of life - self-confidence, good bearing, self-discipline, and the ability to take and give orders, not to mention a set of values not oriented exclusively on the individual. Personal self-interest should not be the sole criterion for judging the value of the basic ROTC program. The cadet is not only a student; he is also a citizen with the obligation to contribute his share to the common defense and to promote the general welfare of his country.

This is not to say that the program is perfect or even the best system that can be devised. However, it is what we have. Much time and effort have been devoted in recent years to improve ROTC. There is room for more improvement. Some improvement depends on legislation now under consideration in Congress and on other factors not fully known at my level.

Even though ROTC training seems tedious and dull at times and the siren songs are tempting, it takes resolution and strength of character to turn them aside in favor of the stern calls of duty. Duty implies personal sacrifice, and honorable men place duty above personal interests. These are the values which made the United States. The heritage which our forebearers have left behind can be maintained only so long as other young men are willing to give the same full measure of devotion to their country. And the time is now, not after it is too late. As President Johnson said in his State of the Union message on January 8, "we must be strong enough to win any war, and we must be wise enough to prevent one." The President has also said that there is no calling with greater importance for the peace and safety of our country and the world than the military.

To entertain a suspicion, as confessed by the author of your March 5 "Studentes" article, that our Army has no use for people who think other than within narrowly prescribed limits, is to admit that one still has much to learn.

The discussion of the WSGA was equally poor. Sounds like UVM girls are being treated as "slaves." Why haven't the girls complained about it yet? And why are the sceptics concerned about the treatment of "sheep ... living under a double standard?"

Then, suddenly, the sceptics become one, speaking in the first person singular instead of the first person plural. Did one of you disagree with the other? I can see how one could be embarrassed with being associated with such foolery.

Believe it or not, boys, the S.A. doesn't do too badly with the "money this school weasles out of us for extracurricular activities," that is, unless you consider Vermont Conference and the school newspaper that you write for wastes of time.

Independents View Selves

With fraternity self-evaluation week under our belts, the independents of this campus have also taken this chance to look themselves over and once again explain their views to the students of UVM. The group is headed by Howard Cyr, moderator, with the able backing of David Kemp, secretary, Phil Buttaravoli, treasurer, Roger Jackson, social chairman, and Tom Johnson, judicial chairman.

These men head the Men's Residence Hall Assembly, a group dedicated to the purpose of giving the non-fraternity members of this campus the academic and social freedom which they wish and deserve. In doing so they have been able to create a type of freedom, both academic and social, which has added a great deal to this campus. They have no regulated quiet hours, yet many independents declare that they cannot study in the library because of the noise. Although they are under more strict supervision by the administration than the fraternities, they have a regular schedule of open houses and social events. In cooperation with Saga Food Service they have held four buffets with dances following them this year. Yet to come is their annual Parking Lot "Orgy".

The students provide their own supervision at these events with success equal to that of W.C.A. They are proud of the fact that, "There is no case of pregnancy as a result of an open house." All kidding aside, they have sponsored an unusually high calibre of entertainment under the management and supervision of the students.

The assembly also sponsors regular speeches by faculty members. So far this year they have been entertained by Professor Colburn and Coach Ruffer. In the immediate future Coach Lapointe will also speak. A new program, recently put into effect by the assembly, allows individual students to invite professors to lunch. The assembly feels that this will promote better teacher-student contacts.

The independents are justly proud of their "Ulcer department." This department includes the most extensive volumes of guidance material available on the campus, with emphasis placed on graduate school and career opportunities. Although they have no exam files, the group feels no loss because of it.

Maintaining law and order when everything else falls is the Judicial Council. This body of students handles cases referred to them by the dean of men. Their most famous case to this date, referred to as the "Case of the meal ticket borrowers," resulted in kitchen duty for the offenders.

Perhaps the greatest conflict arising over the independents has dealt with Kake Walk. The independents feel that they can add a great deal to this event. Although their ultimate goal is complete participation in the event, they are prepared to settle for being allowed to enter one pair of walkers from the Marsh, Allan, Tupper complex. They pointed out that in the past independents have been allowed to walk and in 1945 a pair of independents won the event. They referred their case to the Committee on Jurisdiction who has in turn referred them to President Fey. Because Kake Walk is a "university function", they feel, and perhaps justly so, that they have a distinct right to have full participation in this social event. At the present they are awaiting the decision of President Fey before they proceed any further.

The future holds many things for this group of students. At the present they are working on one large project with their excess funds. The most logical suggestion at the moment seems to be the renovation of their recreation room. They ultimately hope to add weathered wood walls, a soda fountain, and a juke box. This addition, they feel, will get rid of the sterile atmosphere the room has now and make it more "liveable".

Without a doubt the independents are an ever increasing group of students dedicated to the principles of academic and social freedom. If given the proper chance they could become a much greater force on this campus than they are now. Let's give them a chance! If we do they will be able to make the additions to this university they desire—additions to the benefit of the whole university.

This distrust is displayed in many ways. One is the bringing of Germany into the argument. To equate America, 1964, with Germany, 1933, is to show either a misunderstanding of the relative situations of the two countries, or a distrust of our system of government. In the present case it seems to be the latter. These people must know that our mood in America is not the type that would allow us to fall prey to a Hitler. We are not suffering from an ignominious defeat in a war; we do not need a strongman to tell us how great we are (on the contrary; we could use a little humility); our economy is certainly not suffering the way Germany's was; and we do not need any scapegoat for our troubles (we already blame too many things on Russia, or Communists in general). Most importantly, our system of government has always allowed the demagogue — even the fanatic like Rockwell — some room to operate, but when he got too powerful our natural conservatism came into play and put him back in his place — not suppressed him, mind you, but let him know he had gone too far, and that we were going to stand for no more incursions upon our ideals of fairness or democracy.

There is no reason to believe that things will be any different in the case of Rockwell, or of a Communist. In Germany, Hitler controlled the press soon after he took power, and anyone who depended upon knowledge of his doings to argue against him found himself with no supply of information. In the United States every little move of people like Rockwell is reported somewhere, and the press would be the first to start to oppose any demagogue, if he went too far. If the American people are naturally conservative, the press often borders on the reactionary.

For all these reasons the example of Germany is an invalid one. If a person can seriously believe that we are liable to fall prey to any kind of totalitarian leader, then they have a distrust of the system under which they live.

Another argument, similar to the one about Germany, is the relatively simple one of the "troublemaker." A Rockwell, or a Gus Hall, they say, is a spreader of hate, unrest, violence or any number of other things. Perhaps he is, but it is our fault if we are susceptible to it. Once it is recognized that we are dealing with serious and dedicated enemies of our system, and not, as many believe Nazis or Communists to be, clowns or showoffs or publicity-seekers, and if this is kept constantly in mind, then it is possible to keep our emotions under control and to deal with these people calmly and rationally. I believe that if the American public is made aware of what it is dealing with, and keeps this in mind, we will see the riots almost, if not completely, disappear. I also believe that in colleges this is fairly easily accomplished, whereas it is not so easy in the general populace. But even with the riots, after sufficient exposure to an enemy we will tire of him; no defeat is as complete as that of a demagogue or would-be dictator who is listened to and ignored.

The final, and most pernicious, argument is that people whose ideas we believe to be bad should be suppressed, at worst, or just not listened to at best. Suppression, even if it were not against the very bases of American government, is plain senseless. Are we so dumb that we are going to fall prey to every Rockwell, Hall or other demagogue? I think not, and to believe otherwise is not only an insult to the American people, but an insult to the very things we stand for. And what is wrong with preaching treason? A man simply can not be suppressed for his beliefs. Actions are something else, of course, and so is direct complicity in a treasonous act, but to simply believe in anti-U.S. ideas is still in the best American tradition. Dissent, no matter how violent or evil, is not to be put down until words become actions, and then only the actions are to be stopped, not the ideas.

Certainly it is our prerogative to not listen to someone, but not, as Mr. Heins unwittingly advocates, when we are ignorant of what the person has to say. He says that we all know what Rockwell stands for, but I wonder about that. Just how many students on this campus know exactly what Rockwell stands for, or what you would be likely to hear from a Communist, or what the universal bogey-man, Communism, stands for? Not very many, I dare say. Are we at a university to learn? Then learn by seeing the object of so much contempt, not by reports about him alone. Or is Rockwell a publicity-seeker, out only to comfort his sympathizers? Good! With a little comforting they may crawl out of the woodwork into the daylight where we can see them, which is just where we want them.

All this adds up to a distrust of the democratic process. In the case of colleges, it is a distrust mostly of the students abilities to see and evaluate ideas, seditious or otherwise, for what they are, and to reject them if they are evil in some way. I once observed in a letter to the Free Press that for a country so young the United States has a great distrust of its youth. Some of the views in this controversy, as expressed by students themselves, show why. The rest of the country is only taking its lead from the American youth, which even distrusts itself.

However, in the general case, this distrust of our system of government is perhaps as detrimental to that system as any Nazi or Communist. If we profess to believe that our system is indeed a great one, then we must trust it, no ifs, ands or buts. We should, to be sure, have a certain amount of wariness — or even a little distrust — of the men who we elect to run the government, for man is still corruptible, and must be kept honest. But we must not transfer this distrust to the basic workings of the system; absolute freedom of thought and speech, unabridged until that thought or speech becomes action against those same freedoms. If we do, we will eventually lose those freedoms just as surely as we would under a Hitler or a Stalin.

Fine Arts Four To Be Here Sat.

By Betty Fuchs

The Fine Arts Quartet, which will perform at Ira Allen Chapel on March 14, today ranks as a master of the chamber music medium. The appearance of the ensemble here between concerts at Dartmouth and M.I.T. brings to a close the Lane Chamber Arts Series for this year.

The Fine Arts Quarter - Leonard Sorkin and Abram Loft (violins), Gerald Stanick (violinist) and George Sopkin (cellist) - came into being in 1946 as the star attraction of a weekly program over the American Broadcasting Company network. So successful and popular was the program that it ran for eight consecutive years. In travels from coast-to-coast, The Fine Arts Quartet established itself as both a popular musical attraction and a major creative force on the American musical scene.

An unequivocal success at home, the Fine Arts Quartet made its European debut in 1958, touring twenty-seven cities in seven countries. In London, it offered what one critic referred to as "staggering examples of technical mastery, precision, and musical form". In the words of a distinguished French critic, Marc Pincherle: "The music could not have been presented with more eloquence, vitality and musicality than it received from the Fine Arts Quartet." A fifth tour of Europe is already solidly booked for April-May of 1964.

Since 1955, the Quartet has been in summer residence at the University of Wisconsin, in Milwaukee, where it coaches and lectures on chamber music and participates in a concert series known as "Summer Evenings of Music," as part of the University's Summer Arts Festival. Also since 1955, the Quartet has conducted seminars at the Music Center of the North Shore (Chicago). In Chicago, too, the Fine Arts Quartet has presented an extensive annual series of concerts in the Loop and on the city's North Shore. For the past two years, the ensemble has been the visiting quartet at the Cleveland Institute of Music.

As of the academic year 1963-64, the four members of the Fine Arts Quartet have been appointed Artists-in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin (Milwaukee), with the rank of Associate Professor in the music faculty of the University's School of Fine Arts.

The first violinist, Leonard Sorkin, studied at the American Conservatory, the Chicago Musical College, and with Mischa Mischakoff. He is a resident of Glencoe, Illinois, is married and the father of two children.

Abram Loft, second violinist, studied with Herbert Dittler in New York. He holds a Ph.D. in musicology from Columbia University and was formerly Assistant Professor of Music there. Mr. Loft is married, the father of three children, and lives in Highland Park, Illinois.

Gerald Stanick, native of Winnipeg, studied violin there; a violinist from the age of sixteen, he studied with David Dawson, Nathan Gordon, and Benar Helfetz at the University of Indiana. A resident of Glencoe, Illinois, Mr. Stanick is married and the father of three daughters.

George Sopkin, cellist, studied with Daniel Saidenberg in Chicago and with Emanuel Feuermann in Switzerland. He also attended the Chicago Musical College. After his discharge from the Air Force, he and Leonard Sorkin organized the Fine Arts Quartet. Mr. Sopkin is married, the father of two children, and lives in Winnetka, Illinois.

Votey Hall Opens Doors At Last

NEWEST ADDITION FOR UVM

The new Votey Engineering Building which finally opened its doors last week. Students now hopefully await the destruction of East Hall. (Credit: Scott, S.P.S.)

The long-awaited opening of the new engineering building has finally arrived (a result of which will be the even longer-awaited destruction of East Hall). Votey Hall is the new, three-story home of the University's mathematics department as well as the departments of civil engineering, electrical engineering, and mechanical engineering.

However coldly modern Votey Hall may seem on the outside, the interior is bright and comfortable. It is surprising to discover that the windows, mere slits of glass to the outsider, are more than unique identifying devices. The colorful materials used throughout the building also add to this brightness.

The outstanding features of Votey Hall include private offices for the instructors. The lecture room, however, is perhaps the most interesting feature of the building. This acoustically designed room, which is now in use, can seat 250 people. One of its most intriguing aspects is a wall of revolving blackboards. This room also has facilities for showing films.

Some other interesting features of Votey Hall are the reading room, for which definite plans will soon be made, and the mechanical engineering room containing a large flow tank which is used in hydraulics. There is also a sound-proof laboratory containing a wind tunnel.

The advantages of Votey Hall are many, and the best way to introduce them to you is to suggest that you investigate the new engineering building for yourself. A tour is definitely worth the time, for having seen Votey Hall, one can readily agree that it is an attractive and welcome addition to our campus.

UVM Doctor Presents Paper

A University of Vermont pediatrics professor was a member of a panel of 19 experts who discussed birth defects problems at a special symposium in New York City on Friday (March 6).

Dr. Jerold Lucey, associate professor of pediatrics in the College of Medicine, presented a paper, "Drugs and the Intra-uterine Patient," in which he discussed the possible harmful effects on the baby of drugs taken by pregnant women.

The symposium was sponsored by the Greater New York chapter of the National Foundation-March of Dimes as a part of a nationwide attack on the birth defects problem. More than 300 physicians attended the sessions.

JANET KOCH WILL HEAD 1964-65 WSGA COUNCIL

Janet Koch, President

The leader of the new WSGA Council will be Janet R. Koch of Greenfield, Mass. A junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, Janet served as the Secretary of WSGA Council. She has also been President of Alpha Lambda Delta, a member of sophomore Aides and a member of the Executive Council of her class. She has been on the Dean's List for every semester. Presently she is also serving as senior Advisor to Alpha Lambda Delta and as treasurer of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

Working closely with Janet this year, will be Mary Ann Modarelli, the new Vice-President. A junior in the College of Education and Nursing, Mary Ann hails from Ridgewood, N.J. During the past year, Mary Ann was Social Chairman of WSGA Council. She has also been a Freshman Representative and Secretary of House

Mary Ann Modarelli, Vice-President

Committee, and an SA Senator. She is a sister of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Judy Godbout, Chief Justice

The new Chief Justice is Judy Godbout of Cromwell, Conn. Judy a junior in the college of Arts and Sciences, has served this past year as Secretary to Judiciary. She has also been a member of the WSGA Rules Evaluation Committee, Scholarship Chairman on her floor and during her Freshman year was Secretary of her class.

Juliette Bundgus from Burlington, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, will serve as Secretary. She is presently Vice-President of Staff and Sandal, and Scholarship Chairman of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. She has also been a Scholarship Chairman and Secretary of House Committee and a member of Sophomore Aides.

The new House Chairman is Jane Siegfried of Albany, N.Y., a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. Currently Jane is House President of Mason Fifth and Assistant Rush Chairman of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority. She has been on Dean's List for the past three semesters.

Hailing from Glen Rock, N.J., and a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences is Barbara Floyd, the new Treasurer. Barbara is Vice-President of her floor, Secretary of Intra-Dorm Council, Corresponding Secretary of WRA and a sister of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

Donna Krushansen of York, Pa., is a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences and is the new Social Chairman. Donna a Dean's List student every semester, is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta and Sophomore Aides; Social Chairman of WRA, a cheerleader, and was Secretary of the freshman class. She is a sister of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

The new Fire Marshal is Carolyn Kydd, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, hailing from Pottersville, N.J. She is Fire Captain of her floor, Fire Marshal of Intra-Dorm Council, WRA Membership Chairman and a sister of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

Barbara Kullbach of Monticello, N.Y., a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences is Secretary to Judiciary. Barbara has served as Vice-President and Secretary of her floor, and as Secretary of Alpha Lambda Delta and Intra-Dorm Council. She has been on Dean's List every semester and is Vice-President of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

Assistant House Chairman is Cathy Hentz, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, hailing from Springfield, Vt. She is a member of sophomore Aides and WRN and is Fire Captain of her floor. She is a sister of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

Guri Hanson of Rochester, N.Y., a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, is Public Relations Chariman. Guri is a member of Staff and Sandal, a Fire Captain of her floor, a WRA Representative and a sister of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority.

THERE
AN EAGLE
ON THE MOON

Our world-recognized trademark—"the P&WA eagle"—has been identified with progress in flight propulsion for almost four decades, spanning the evolution of power from yesterday's reciprocating engines to today's rockets. Tomorrow will find that same Pratt & Whitney Aircraft eagle carrying men and equipment to the moon and to even more distant reaches of outer space.

Engineering achievement of this magnitude is directly traceable to our conviction that basic and applied research is essential to healthy progress. Today's engineers at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft accept no limiting criteria. They are moving ahead in many directions to advance our programs in energy conversion for every environment.

Our progress on current programs is exciting, for it anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. We are working, for example, in such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells... nuclear power—all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application.

The breadth of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft programs requires virtually every technical talent... requires ambitious young engineers and scientists who can contribute to our advances of the state of the art. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in:

MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

Career boundaries with us can be further extended through a corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. NUQUIST AUTHORS BOOK ON VERMONT TOWN GOV'T

A study of the town government system in Vermont has been published by a University of Vermont professor.

Dr. Andrew E. Nuquist, McCullough Professor of political science at UVM, has written a 276 - page volume, "Town Government in Vermont." Published by the Essex Publishing Co. of Essex Junction, the volume is a manual for town officers with citations to the statutes and is a source book of varied and historical information for the layman.

The book is the second in a series about state government planned by the Government Research Center at UVM. A companion volume by Prof. Nuquist, "Vermont State Government and Administration," is scheduled for fall publication.

"Town Government in Vermont" is a complete revision of a series of articles on the same topic which appeared several years ago (in the Rutland Herald).

Following a historical summary of the development of the positions, duties and practices of both the major town officers and the long series of minor positions are explained, and in many cases illustrated by examples of officers in action so that the background for the usages of today may be known. There is also a discussion of the Town Meeting and of the contents and posting of the warning without which no official town business is possible.

In the introduction, Prof. Nuquist suggests that this study of town government may well be the swan song of this system of government. Declining population, modern needs, and the lack of trained personnel all conspire to make many older practices outmoded. He also suggests that more inter-town cooperation could slow down or even halt this decline of local government. Without this cooperation, at present virtually unused, Prof. Nuquist says local government on the town level is doomed.

The relationship of the town to the county government is touched upon briefly, as well as the interrelationship of both these units and the state legislature. Some of the consequences of unrepresentativeness upon local government are mentioned.

New Committee To Raise Funds For Med School

The appointment of an 11-man Steering Committee to head a national fund-raising effort for the College of Medicine has been announced by President John T. Fey of the University of Vermont.

A $1,000,000 goal has been set for the medical alumni and Chittenden County divisions of the campaign. The balance of the total $8,700,000 required for the construction of phase III in the College's building program will be sought from corporations, foundations, and other friends of the College, with Federal matching funds available to medical schools expected to provide more than half of the required funds.

The Building Fund Steering Committee plans to seek $750,000 in subscriptions from medical alumni, and $250,000 in subscriptions from businesses and non-alumni individuals in Burlington and Chittenden County. Heading the community effort will be Hilton A. Wick, Burlington attorney.

The major portion of the new 235,000-square-foot facility will be used for instruction of medical students and some graduate students in the allied sciences. The building will adjoin the Medical Alumni building, dedicated in 1959, and the Medical Sciences building, completed in 1962. At present, plans are being made to begin construction of phase III - a larger facility than the first two structures combined - in the fall of 1964.

Key features of the five-story phase III building include: (1) A medical library planned to accommodate an eventual five-fold expansion of the present collection, (2) Three lecture theaters, wired for closed-circuit television - the largest with a seating capacity of 260 for all-College conferences, (3) A dining area and adjacent faculty-student lounge, and (4) Individual teaching laboratories for the basic science departments, allowing flexibility in teaching arrangements and for further expansion of training programs.

The entire complex, when completed, will house all academic departments of the College of Medicine. The departments are now working in eight separate locations on the University campus.

NOTICE!

All students who wish to join the CYNIC staff are urged to submit their names to the CYNIC, Editor-in-Chief, Billings Center. We need news and feature writers, production staff workers, and especially sports writers. Experience, while desirable, is not a prerequisite for all positions.

seats are not going to be used. Smaller facilities could have been produced with a great saving of planning, time, and expenditures of large sums of money.

A look of how these available grants-in-aid are being allocated is quite interesting. Coach Robert Clifford is attempting to get the finest football players who meet the academic requirements that he is able to acquire. However, he is handicapped that he is bidding for players that are wanted by big-time football schools such as Penn State, Syracuse, and the Ivy League. He believes, and I agree, that you should go for the best available even though you may have to settle for the near-great players in the end. Fuzzy is handicapped by the fact that he has only $2000 to use for grants. Thus he has a problem whether to give it all to one player or attempt to divide it among two individuals. It has been rumored that UVM is in danger of losing an outstanding 6-7 basketball prospect to another Conference school due in part to the small amount of available funds.

Ralph Lapointe's $1000 is almost worthless if he wants to attract an out of state baseball player, because tuition alone is $1500 beginning in the fall.

The only fault found lately in recruiting is the fact that too many players in all sports come from the same state, (New Jersey), and most of them from the same city, (Union City). This practice, which has its peak fortunately and is declining, is understandable due to the fact that Vermont's only scout lives in this area. This individual known as "the friendly fireman" used to give out all his extra scholarships to all the kids in the neighborhood who played high school ball, and who could gain entrance into Vermont.

SOPH STAR BREAKS RECORD

By Dave Matthews

Coach Arch Post's Catamount indoor track team leaves early Friday morning for Orono, Maine, to take part in the Yankee Conference indoor track meet at the University of Maine-Cage Saturday afternoon. The Cats are 1-3 in dual meets this season, while finishing second in a triangular meet with Colby and Bowdoin.

The Cats were edged out by New Hampshire last Saturday, 63-50, in the final tune-up for the biggest meet of the indoor season. Despite the loss, two cage records were set by UVM.

Sophomore pole vault sensation Don Mayland will be facing his toughest competition of the season this week after setting a Collins-Gardner Cage record at 14 feet, one-half inch. Mayland broke his old record of 13-10 3/4 on his third attempt. The New England AAU champion then missed three times at 14-6, but was well over the bar on two jumps and hit the barrier on the way down. In an effort to get more spring, Mayland has been working with a heavier pole this week and expects better results.

The Vermont relay team of Al Brown, Vin Decesaris, Ken Burton and Bill Mulhern ran its best race of the year and set a mile relay record of 3:33. Mulhern also was victorious in the 600 yard run on a brilliant come from behind spurt in the most exciting race of the day for the large crowd.

Larry Perlmuter copped the 50 yard dash while Tom Whitaker, Burton and Pete Stickney same through with wins in the weight events for Vermont.

Looking ahead to this week's meet, host Maine will be the favorite. Rhode Island and Massachusetts could also come home a winner. Vermont's first place hopes lie mainly with Mayland and Mulhern while the sprinters could surprise.

Mulhern can be expected to run a good 600 for the Cats while Mayland is favored to win the pole vault. Mayland will have to fight off Dean of Maine, who has jumped 13-8 this season, and Gonsolvas of Rhode Island, who tied Mayland in height at the AAU championships, but lost on number of misses. The young Catamount fence-leaper is undefeated in two years at UVM and holds cage records at Bowdoin, Bates, MIT and Vermont.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

By Richard Rappaport

One aspect of UVM athletics which the typical student knows little or nothing about is the Vermont grant-in-aid program.

The University of Vermont has been slowly increasing the number of grants-in-aid (are in correctly known as athletic scholarships) in the last few years. Until this coming year (1964-65) fifteen grants were given with twelve for football, two for basketball and one for baseball. However, it was found that this system would be unsatisfactory due to the recent raise in tuition since there was only a limited fund for these grants. Thus a new policy was adopted which allotted a definite amount of money instead of a number of grants for each of the three major sports. The maximum figure of $15,000 a year, was used instead of fifteen grants-in-aid with the same distribution being used as under the old plan.

These grants-in-aid are distributed according to need with the most given to any individual from out of state theoretically being $2550 a year, but this is extremely rare. This new plan was approved by the athletic council and President Fey and has to be formally approved by the school trustees. The funds come from various sources including soda, candy, and cigarette vending machines, university scholarships and restricted scholarships by alumni.

UVM, unlike other schools, does not give any advantage to athletes who apply for admission. The athlete is accepted by the school, and then the grant-in-aid is offered, but standards of admission are uniform for all applicants to UVM.

One of the problems faced by Vermont in the past couple of years is the fact that other schools in the Yankee Conference were giving out a great many more grants to athletes and these were not always based upon need. Also, some schools (such as U.Mass.) were getting financial aid from the legislature and governor which UVM was not getting. In addition the small size of this state forced Vermont to get athletes out of state which limited the number of players that could be brought in to play. This discrepancy among Conference colleges was evidenced this fall when the Cats in second place were trounced by first place Mass. 41-0.

An attempt to place a limit on scholarships has been tentatively made. Fortunately, it is not as liberal as the Southeastern Conference's 140 scholarship limit a year. However, it still places Vermont at a disadvantage, but this deficit is not as great as it formerly was. This new ruling limits any Conference school from spending more money than fifteen times the cost of room, board, fees, and the average of in-state and out-of-state tuition for one student. This policy was agreed upon by the six presidents of the Yankee Conference schools, but may be modified by a meeting of Conference athletic directors which was held last Monday in Philadelphia.

An analysis of Vermont's grant-in-aid program reveals a few pertinent facts. First to compete on an equal footing with other schools Vermont should under this new plan, use its maximum allotment of funds, which would be approximately (15 x $1900 which is $28,500 or $13,500 more than what is now being used. You may ask where will the money come from since Vermont is far from what may be considered an economically healthy state. While this is quite true, I am sure that this extra money or a part of it could be located and allocated, as in Mass., by our Honorable Governor Hoff and the great state legislature.

The state government could be easily reimbursed if the money was properly used. These funds could be effectively used to award grants-in-aid in hockey, a few more in basketball and baseball and one each in swimming and track. These grants could result in outstanding hockey and basketball teams which could bring in capacity crowds with at least half of the people paying money to gain admission to the games. What was the point of building a new gym which has a capacity of close to 5000 people and a large hockey rink, if these

by Jim Langlois

After an absence of twelve years hockey successfully returned to the University of Vermont. The team amassed an overall record of five wins, three losses and two ties for a .600 percentage. The Cats took two games from MIT, and one apiece from UConn, Boston State and AIC. The two ties were both with UMass, while all three losses came at the hands of the University of New Hampshire.

To do as well as they did UVM had to overcome several handicaps. Not only were they inexperienced, but they did not have the benefit of one scholarship. And most important fourteen of the original twenty-four players were lost along the way for one reason or other. The last game of the season (against UMass) was played with only two lines and three defensemen, with the Cats still gaining a 4 to 4 tie.

Penalties also hurt the team, who had a total of 130 penalty minutes for ten games. This means that for an average of thirteen minutes every game, UVM was short-handed.

A bright spot was the fact that Coach Ruffer had special permission from the NCAA to use freshmen. Seventeen men on this year's squad were Frosh.

Marshall Stevenson, a sophomore, was the leading goal getter with eleven, and was also the leader in total points with nineteen. Ozro Swett, a freshman, led in assists with nine and was second in total points with fourteen. The rest of the top ten in points consisted of Paul Dorsey with thirteen, George Cook with twelve, Tony Risse and Paul Barrett with nine each, Henry Vihlein with eight, Bill Dunn with six, and Paul Ryan, Jim Brock, and Tim Twomey with four apiece. Although not among the leaders in scoring, Juniors Art Garvin and Ken Sousville and Freshmen Orlin Svenson and Bob Snyder also played very well for Coach Ruffer's pucksters.

As for the men in the net, Bob Sousville, who is probably one of the best goalies in the area, made 246 saves and allowed only 32 goals in eight games for a .885 percentage. Senior Tony Russo had 19 saves and allowed only 3 goals in two games for a .864 percentage, and Freshman Tom Grew had 30 saves and allowed 3 goals in two games for a .909 percentage.

Overall the Cats scored an average of 5.4 goals per game and were scored upon an average of 3.8 goals per game.

Next year's prospects look even better. Not only will the club be more experienced, but only one player, Captain Tony Russo, is lost through graduation. Most of this year's squad are freshmen and sophomores, and many of the players who left during this season are expected to return for next year.

What will hurt is that again there will probably be no scholarships, which is too bad because Coach Ruffer could have his pick of a number of top Canadian players, who would be happy to go to school so close to home. It is also doubtful that freshmen will be allowed to play next year, a move which was protested this season by some of the opposing coaches.

Next year's schedule is both longer and stronger. The Cats will again play UMass, AIC, tough New Hampshire, Boston State and UConn and have added games with Williams and Middlebury, Norwich and College Royale Militaire in Quebec, for a total of sixteen games. UVM hockey fans will have a chance to see fast and exciting hockey next season.

Outing Club Slalom Sunday

The UVM Outing Club is sponsoring the Seventh Annual Sloppy Slalom on Sunday, March 22, at Smuggler's Notch Ski Area in Jeffersonville, Vt. Anyone who has ever been on skis before (faculty included), and even those who haven't, are invited to attend the fun. To start the day off the slalom, geared for the novice to intermediate skier, is about half a mile and approximately thirty gates long. Class A, B, C racers, professional skiers, certified instructors, and college ski team members, are ineligible for this race in order to give everyone a fair chance.

Team or individual applications are at the Information Office in Billings Student Center, and must be in the hands of John Rie at 170 Spruce Street, with an entry fee of $1.50 per team of four, or $.50 per individual, no later than 6 P.M. Friday, March 20. Trophies will be awarded the best men's and women's team, and the best individual men's women's times.

Rubinstein Thrills All

By Bob Jahrmarkt

The Blue Lane Series for the 1963-64 season came to a stunning close Monday night (March 16) with a magnificent performance by one of the world's most renowned pianists, Arthur Rubinstein. Mr. Rubinstein's program included works by Beethoven, Schumann, Debussy, and Chopin.

With his white bushy hair all up in a frazzle, Rubinstein emerged from behind the curtain and youthfully strode along the stage to his piano. When he sat silence fell over the audience. The first work he performed was the Beethoven Sonata in C major, Opus 2, No. 3. The Sonata was beautifully conceived and perfectly balanced. He played each movement at a logical speed, never too fast or never too slow. The second work of the program was the Schumann Carnival, Opus 9. Here the playing was polished and sophisticated and sounded of experience. Many notes were dropped, but it made no difference.

After intermission Rubinstein played four selections by Debussy: Homage a Rameau, Poissons d'or, Ondine, and La

Plus que lente. Each was a delight to hear. Gentle and unassuming they evoked a very real sense of peace and serenity. The final selections were by Chopin. The Ballade in G minor was pleasing but sometimes a little sloppy. The four etudes were fun to hear. Each one sounded like a little poem rather than a study piece. The Andante Spianato and Grande Polainaise ended the program. The work was both lyrical and spectacular.

In an age when automation was even made our young pianists sound like machines Mr. Rubinstein happily reminds us of the day when playing came from the heart, not just the hands. Modern pianists dazzle us with the speed of their steel fingers but fail to really communicate with us. Rubinstein, on the other hand, shapes his music so beautifully that we are tempted to reach out and call it our own.

One may assume that Mr. Rubinstein's secret lies in his many years of experience. Such an assumption is, of course, true to a great extent. But one would be greatly mistaken if he assumes that, given equal time, all pianists will sound like Rubinstein.

NSF Grants Aid To UVM

The University of Vermont has received a grant for $10,000 from the National Science Foundation for support of an undergraduate research program.

Dr. Cecil Criss of the chemistry department will direct the institute.

Five students will spend 10 weeks conducting research this summer and will receive stipends. During 1964-65, six students will be engaged in research during the regular academic year.

The NSF has awarded 295 grants totaling nearly three million dollars for undergraduates performing individual research in the biological, engineering, mathematical, physical, and behavioral sciences. A total of nearly 3000 students will be engaged in such programs this summer.

Each student selected is responsible for his own research project, guided by an experienced scientist.

This will mark the third summer of the program at UVM.

Vermont's campus will be humming with activity of institutes this summer. In addition to the undergraduate research institute, other NSF-sponsored programs include one in electronic transitions, two in mathematics, one in physics, one in earth science, and a summer research program.

Ciardi To Speak For IFC Saturday

John Ciardi, poet and former Poetry Editor of the Saturday Review.

A recent recipient of the John Holmes chair at Tufts University, John Ciardi, one of the foremost American poets, will appear here on March 21, 8:00 P.M. at the Billings Student Center under the sponsorship of the Interfraternity Council.

Mr. Ciardi, visiting professor and poet in residence this year at Tufts, has just completed seven years at Poetry Editor of the Saturday Review. These have been years of liveliness, controversy, and insight. Few American poets have so invigorated the discussion of poets and poetry today.

Boston bred, Mr. Ciardi received his B.A. from Tufts University in 1938. His M.A. was granted by the University of Michigan, where he was also given a Hopewood award in poetry. At Harvard, he began as an instructor in English, and after a short period, was made a Briggs Copeland assistant professor of English. In 1953, he went from Harvard to Rutgers where he became Professor of English, resigning in 1961 to become a free lance writer and lecturer.

Recently, Mr. Ciardi appeared as the host of the highly acclaimed CBS television program, "Accent". This discussion format, with prominent current personalities as guests, gave the general public an opportunity to witness his brilliance.

Among his books of poetry, How Does a Poem Mean, became the book that is now widely used as a college introductory text to the study of poetry. Through this work he has been able to lift the cloud of misunderstanding surrounding poetry by his lucid, yet penetrating comments. His latest scholarly achievement is a translation of Dante's Inferno (familiar to many of our Sophomore English students,) and Purgatorio, which have been highly praised by critics. He is presently working on a translation of the Paradise.

Being a father of three children, he has been provided with a listening and reading audience for his children's books of poetry. His recent, I Met a Man was #4 on the New York Times Children's Book List. It introduces new readers to the delights of language, and is filled with riddles and amusing puns. Five other children's books by Mr. Ciardi have been published by Lippincott.

Dialogue With An Audience, also published by Lippincott, is a collection of articles from his "Manner of Speaking" column of the Saturday Review that readers have answered with emphatic distaste or appreciation.

"Is Reflective Literature Compatible with the Pace of Modern Society?" will be Mr. Ciardi's topic for his forthcoming lecture at UVM. Through his abounding capabilities, Mr. Ciardi will surely present a provocative and enlightening evening.

Performance By Fine Arts Quartet Concludes Lane Chamber Art Series

The Lane Chamber Arts Series ended on a high note last Saturday evening, with an excellent performance by the Fine Arts Quartet.

The selections chosen were an interesting combination, ranging from the very well known to the somewhat unusual.

First on the program was the Quartet in D major, Opus 76, No. 5, by Haydn. Unlike many musicians, the members of the Fine Arts Quartet played well even at the very beginning of the concert. Their tone, both individually and collectively, was superlative, and they played as a unit, even in the complicated third movement.

The second composition, Quartet No. 2, by Karel Husa, came as a surprise to the audience, particularly since it was such a strong contrast to the preceding selection. The dissonance of the notes, as well as the sudden plucking of the strings throughout the first movement, gave a definite uniqueness to the piece. Karel Husa is a contemporary Czech composer, who is presently teaching at Cornell University.

The third selection, which was more typical of a chamber music quartet, was the Quartet in C minor, Opus 51, No. 1 by Brahms. Although this composition definitely is along traditional lines, one could detect an occasional slight dissonance, and a plucking of strings in the first movement. Like both other works, this was played with precision and polish.

As an encore, the Quartet played an excerpt from the Fourth Quartet by Bela Bartok - the Fourth Movement, Alegretto Pizzicato. This piece, which is classified in the same category as the music of Husa, delighted the audience and proved, once again, the versatility of the performers. The members of the Quartet are Leonard Sorkin, violin; Abram Loft, violin; Gerald Stanick, viola; and Gerald Sopkin, cello. They are Artists-in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin, in Milwaukee, and are presently on tour. Their very hectic schedule makes even more admirable the fine performance they presented.

Sell-out Crowd To See "Macbeth"

University Players rehearse "Macbeth". (Credit: Adeso, SPS)

For the third time in the University Players history, all tickets have been sold out in advance of the first performance. The play is Macbeth, which opened last night at 8:30 PM in Arena Theatre, and runs through Monday, March 23. The other two plays which were sold out before curtain time were Carmen in 1960 and Three Penny Opera in 1961.

Macbeth is being presented this year by the Players as a part of the quadricentennial celebration of Shakespeare's birth. Featured in the role of Macbeth is David Storti, with Marianne Woods as Lady Macbeth. Ernest Cabrera and Nancy Streit will play Macduff and Lady Macduff, respectively.

Other members of the cast are Michael Bonneau, Charles Goudy, Robin Schore, Suzanne Boudreau, Loretta Zelanko, Norman Hines, Olof Johnson, Paul Humes, James Miles Worthman, Ivan Karp and David Scherk. Edward J. Feidner is the director of Macbeth with technical assistance by B.G. Ackley.

Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.

So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17½ feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size makes it a luxury car. But not the price.

Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15¼-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space.

This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over).

Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it. And finally, Corvette—still 14½ feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.

The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.

Essler, Cook To Attend Engineering Conference

Deans Warren O. Essler and Clinton D. Cook of the University of Vermont will spend nearly a week in Southern California attending a unique conference of engineering educators.

National concern in the field of engineering education for the new dean, who must face heavy administrative problems with no management experience, has resulted in plans for an Institute for Engineering Deans to be held March 24-28 at the University of Southern California's mountain conference center at Idyllwild.

To be sponsored jointly by USC's School of Engineering and Graduate School of Business Administration, the Institute program will be arranged particularly for the engineering dean who has occupied his post for five years or less. Of the 45 deans who have indicated strong interest in the Institute plans as outlined by USC Engineering Dean Alfred C. Ingersoll, 36 will be in this category. Nine others will be experienced in their deanships and will serve as "resource persons" for the program.

Sessions of the five-day conference will explore many topics -- from the organization of the engineering dean's office itself to matters of departmental budget, the administration of engineering research, distribution and delegation of authority and even the objective evaluation of one's own performance as a dean.

Principal responsibilities for the program have been assigned by Dean Ingersoll to Dr. John W. Gould, Dr. Arthur Gutenberg and Dr. Anthony Athos, of USC's Graduate School of Business Administration. Keynote address for the Institute will come from Dr. Robert W. French, Director of USC's Executive Programs, Graduate School of Business Administration.

Among the visiting speakers will be Dr. William Price, Executive Director of the U.S. Air Force's Office of Scientific Research, who will talk on "A Government Agency Official's View of the Administration of Engineering Research;" Dean Joseph M. Pettit, Stanford University, "Challenges and Satisfaction of Engineering Deanship;" Dean M.R. Lohmann, Oklahoma State University, "Distribution and Delegation of Administrative Responsibilities."

Talk On Sex Given By Prof

"Sex, Morals, and College Students" was the topic of Dr. Anthony J. Samenik's lecture, was presented on Thursday, March 19, at 7:30 P.M. in the North Lounge at Billings Student Center. The talk, sponsored by the Newman Center, was included in the Augustine Lecture Series.

Dr. Samenik, professor of Home Economics at UVM whose area is family relations and human development, presented the dilemma confronting college students due to the discrepancy between religious and scientific prescriptions of sex. Because of this value conflict regarding his moral behavior, the college student is left to determine his own mode of conduct. By combining the religious and scientific concepts, a better understanding of moral theories can be achieved.

Through his talk, Dr. Samenik hoped to "help college students establish a moral philosophy of sex based on scientific knowledge and religious truths about man."

EUROPEAN JOBS

The trend among students is to work in Europe during the summer. Thousands of jobs (e.g. resort, lifeguarding and office work) and travel grants are available to every registered student. Some wages are as high as $400 a month. For a complete prospectus, job and travel grant applications, a $1 ASIS book coupon and handling and airmail charges send $1 to Dept. POLICIES CONCERNING COMMERCIAL ACTIVITIES ON THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT CAMPUS WHEN UNDERGRADUATE CLASSES ARE IN SESSION

1. There shall be no general campus distribution of free samples.

2. Non-university representatives wishing to make sales of articles or services may do so only through established university departments. The University Store may act as a selling agent for those non-university agents which have no academic or administrative departmental relations. All other non-university representatives should consult the Dean of Administration.

3. Except for designated Bulletin Boards and commercial advertising space in university publications and on WRUV, the use of university facilities for promotion or fund-raising for personal gain is prohibited by Board of Trustees' action of April 20, 1963.

4. A recognized campus organization may promote a fund-raising activity if the proceeds are for the improvement of the organization or for an educational or public service function. The suitability of the fund-raising activity shall be cleared with the Director of Student Activities.

5. Students wishing to sell articles or take orders in the University Residence Halls must obtain written permission from the Dean of Women for Women's Residence Halls and from the Dean of Men for Men's Residence Halls. Door-to-door soliciting in the University Residence Halls is prohibited.

* Solicitors wishing to call on Fraternities and Sororities must obtain permission to do so from either the Interfraternity Council or the Panhellenic Council.

NOTICE

The Billings Center Governing Board announces that applications for election to the Board for 1964-65 are now available at the Main Desk in Billings.

Students are referred to the "Green Pages" as regards academic qualifications for election.

The deadline for the return of these applications is APRIL 15th. If you have any questions regarding the functions of the Board or the applications for election, contact either Mr. Spees (Ext. 515) or myself (Ext. 433).

Finance Firms Accused Of High Interest Loans

WASHINGTON (CPA) - Commercial finance firms making loans to students of more than 1,000 U.S. colleges and universities this week denied congressional charges of collecting "outrageous" interest rates.

The charges were made by Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., who accused several commercial firms of collecting as much as 60 per cent interest annually on loans to college students and their parents.

Sen. Paul B. Douglas, D-Ill., has introduced legislation requiring interest rates charged for most college student loans to be no more than 9 per cent. Douglas introduced the bill as an amendment to the National Defense Education Act (NDEA) after Hartke made the charges.

Two of the largest firms accused of gouging by Hartke denied the charges explaining they were providing expensive billing and collecting services - as well as money - for U.S. colleges and universities.

One explanation came from Robert Keir, president of the C.I.T. Financial Corp., which owns the Tuition Plan, Inc.

"We aren't really lending money," Keir said. "We're providing a billing and collecting service for over 700 colleges, mostly private, that don't want the clerical work."

"The schools offer this service and turn over the contract of the parent to us. We handle all bookwork and place life insurance on each parent's life."

"Insurance is between a quarter and a half of the charge," Keir explained. "Most parents are between 45 and 55 and many are uninsurable. We don't investigate credit. What we charge for money is secondary."

Keir noted that parents in the $15,000 a year income bracket were the biggest borrowers under the C.I.T. program. He said such families didn't like state and federal loan programs because they normally involve 10 years and charge 6 per cent interest annually.

"State programs are for needy families," Keir said. "They tend to exclude the middle group."

Rather than gouging, Keir said his firm was making a substantial social contribution by saving colleges money needed for such collecting and billing services.

Harold Logan, a spokesman for Education Funds Inc., a subsidiary of Household Finance Corp., voiced a similar defense.

Rather than gouging, Keir said his firm was making a substantial social contribution by saving colleges money needed for such collecting and billing services.

Harold Logan, a spokesman for Education Funds Inc., a subsidiary of Household Finance Corp., voiced a similar defense.

"Our service cost is enormous," Logan said. "All loans have to be put on a computer."

He said that more than 300 colleges, mostly private, "furnish lists of all students to us." His firms then contacts the parent - all by mail - to offer the loans without credit checks.

"There are very few multiple-year contracts we don't have to change," Logan said. "For example the University of Denver's tuition is going up $300 next year. We have to change the loan contracts."

Hartke accused Keir's firm of charging 60 per cent interest annually for its loans. Logan's firm, Hartke said, charges as much as 54 per cent under some of its programs.

While both firms called Hartke's figures incorrect, they did admit some banks and other lenders offered lower interest rates. They placed most of the blame for the high charges on schools wishing to keep free of the red tape involved in college loans.

Sen. Douglas' amendment apparently has heeded part of the firm's defense.

It would require the 1,500 colleges and universities taking part in the NDEA loan program to participate with loan firms charging no higher than 9 per cent annually.

Douglas said his amendment would have the beneficial effect of "encouraging colleges to cooperate with lenders offering low-cost loans."

"It would impel schools to look after the interest of their students and students' parents. All I ask is a minimum of sound business discretion," Douglas said.

Douglas praised one firm - United Student Aid Fund, Inc., a private non-profit firm located in Indianapolis, Ind. - "for keeping interest rates down to a simple 6 per cent annually."

Key & Serpent Will Accept New Members

The application of any male member of the Sophomore class for membership in Key and Serpent, Junior men's honor Society is now being accepted. They would like all men interested, to submit a letter listing their qualifications no later than 5:00 p.m. Tuesday, March 24, in the mail box of the Key and Serpent Society, Billings Center, addressed to James Foley, President.

The letter should contain the nominee's scholastic achievements, (a minimum of an eighty average the last semester or an over-all average of seventy-eight) plus the extra-curricular activities which the individual has participated in. They also would like to know the reason why he wishes to be a member of the Society.

Members of this years Society are involved in almost all of the campus organizations and are active in campus affairs. The Society assists during Freshman Week activities, co-directed Homecoming with Staff and Sandal, as well as participating in individual projects on the campus. We hope to have many applications for membership in the Society for next year.

CYNIC Salutes ... Fred Weisberg

"The Interfraternity Council and the Student Association, which should be the core of student organization, have lost a lot of power and prestige in the last four years," says Fred Weisberg. He feels these two organizations, being the centers of student activities, could regain the positions they held on campus four years ago if the leaders were backed by a more interested student body. He feels there are only a few people helping the leaders of these organizations to solve the many problems that arise on the campus. He thinks, however, that there definitely is spirit on the campus. This spirit is displayed at such events as Kake Walk and the important athletic contests of the year. Fred believes a large portion of this spirit is derived from the diversified student body.

Fred is a senior from Stamford, Conn. He is a brother of Phi Sigma Delta majoring in Political Science. After graduating, he plans to attend law school for three years and then serve two years in the army. He feels he has been very fortunate to have been associated with many campus organizations. He is presently one of the most active students on campus, being chairman of the Kake Walk Committee, President of Boulder, a member of the Ethan Allen Rifles, and Chief Justice of the Student Court. His past record of campus activities include being Chairman of the Homecoming Committee, an assistant Kake Walk Director, and President of Key and Serpent last year, and a member of the Gold Key during his Sophomore year. For these extracurricular activities, Fred has received the Phillip Goodman Award (national fraternity). We wish Fred good luck in the future following his graduation in June.

What Me Cynical?

A noticeably dominant topic in lectures, books and panel discussions of late is the current American revolution in morality. More evolutionary than revolutionary, this incipient shift in moral values in directly related to woman's progressive "emancipation". Her stature heightened many fold by blossoming educational opportunities, the American woman since World War II has enjoyed almost unlimited fulfillment intellectually. Unfortunately, equalitarianism has not sufficiently extended itself into social realms. Consequently, woman is still subject to the obsolescent double-standard of morality. Her striving for emotional fulfillment remains frustrated.

In translating this dilemma from a philosophical plane to the reality of the college campus, we are left with a rather complex situation necessitating examination. Learning not only straight academics during her four years of college, the co-ed is exposed as well to a curriculum offering various sociology, psychology and philosophy courses which deal with culture, individuality, personal motivation and ethics. The college years are formative, impressionable years, during which the co-ed grows to understand herself and her own capabilities through constant interaction with others.

At the University of Vermont the Dean of Women and the WSGA are the two principle organs governing female undergraduate life. We think it's about time that a re-evaluation of the respective functions of these groups was made. Not to do so would only be reactionary. We are not advocating an adoption of a philosophy of free love, no curfew of promiscuity; but, rather an adaptation of WSGA and the Dean of Women's Office to the existing philosophy and practicality of the present, a philosophy and practicality mentally and physically expressed by the women of this University. In other words, there is, in actuality, a divergence between the token rules and regulations of WSGA and the lives of the women students themselves.

We don't "feel" the presence of WSGA except as a tool to further the supervisory guidance of the Dean of Women. To us, and certainly to countless others, the WSGA operates as a sort of machine, emitting every once in a while: certain recommendations or suggestions as to what to wear when and how to wear it; or benevolent announcements that curfew has been generously extended half an hour because of Military Ball or Kake walk.

There is no dearth of moral contradiction in the too familiar WSGA handbook. Emphasizing universal recognition of "a high degree of honor in each individual" on one hand, the WSGA literally stifles any overt spontaneous attempt to exercise this personal honor. Much too picayune and sneakily insinuating are the rules governing signing out and peach cards. Unwittingly, WSGA and the Dean of Women have drawn a rather crooked, superficial line in determining standards of morality. If a girl has general permission to sign out of the dorms and sleep with her boyfriend wherever and whenever she pleases, then good for her. But does this mean that a co-ed with restricted permission is less moral, more immoral, amoral, or whatever, if she somehow manages to sneak out illegally in illicit pursuits similar to those of her more fortunate friend? Of course not.

The cold, hard truth is that morality is an individual thing. Our civilization endures not because of some abstraction called society or group standards, but because there is a vast majority of individuals whose personal standards and conscience dictate honorable behavior which insures our mutual preservation.

Any supervisory body can legislate the material and the superficial, and punish its transgressors. But no body, no congress can dictate how we lead our own personal, essential lives. There will always be decency because man and woman are naturally, phenomenologically decent; there will never be degeneracy, provided that man maintains sincere faith in the innate decency of his fellow man and his fellow woman.

Store Prices Exorbitant

To the Editor:

One of the few things at this university that both students and faculty members agree upon is the exorbitant prices charged by the University Store. This not only causes a reluctance in students to buy books, but also the same feelings are manifested in faculty members when they have to assign additional books for their classes. The deprivation or limitation of the very necessary tools of our education is an unfortunate situation and must be remedied.

At the present time the University has us with our backs against the wall. Most conscientious students who need the convenience and advantage of owning their text books are forced to pay the outrageous prices charged by our University Store. Of course one can always sell his used books back to the store at the close of the semester for some pocket change! The crux of the matter is that we are forced to spend about one hundred dollars a year for text books alone. This is quite a sum of pay, especially at a university where the tuition goes up or other unnecessary payments are assessed at every opportune time. The paradox is that the inflationary cost of text books, along with almost every other item carried in the store, is unnecessary and avoidable! For those who do not know what the Messiah is called, the magic word is "co-op."

Such a co-op or non-profit book store would operate in the following manner: the University or a group of students under the Student Association buys the books directly from the publisher and sells them to the students at a slight profit; just enough to cover handling costs and overhead. This simple system has proven highly successful at many other universities and colleges throughout the nation. At co-ops not only do the students pay a reasonable price for their books and supplies, but enough profit is made so that students who are in financial need can get their books at a substantially reduced rate. Why not here?

We all complain to each other about situations like compulsory ROTC, the University Store, the rising cost of an education at UVM, etc., but we do nothing about them. We feel it is time for the UVM student body to take positive action towards the formation of a co-op. A cooperative store would bring sensible prices and substantial savings to all UVM students.

Freshman Airs Complaints

To the Editor:

Bravo Neo-Sceptics! The fighting spirit of the freshman class has returned and I'm sure that the original Sceptic would be proud to see his work (or is it fun) carried on. Progress and betterment never arose from complacency, and criticism never killed an institution. As well as a compliment, you also deserve some advice, namely that too much wood will kill the fire. There are certainly many things to be criticized at UVM, but not everything.

It seemed to be the general opinion that Kake Walk of '64 was run very efficiently. As for the length, would you rather that the fraternities drew lots to see who walked, or are you able to offer some other solution to the ??? problem.

As for the extended curfew, what exactly is it that you have to "grab a bit faster during the rest of the year"? You should be more careful with subtle statements such as this or the WSGA will clamp down even more. Actually, I was under the impression that the WSGA is a fairly efficient and respected organization.

If you had stopped to take a closer look at the picture, maybe you would have noticed the irresponsible action of its male counterpart, the Men's Residence Hall Council. In a recent edict, the council proclaimed that all men eating at Waterman would (must) wear coats and ties at the Sat. evening meal. There are many facets of this issue. First of all, there were only 8 members present at the meeting in question, out of a total membership of over 20. As is evident, a quorum was not present and therefore all motions passed are null and void. Overlooking this fact, yours truly took an impartial poll in Waterman due to the violent objections from members of the freshman class. Out of over 300 polled, 79% were opposed to this law, yet at a subsequent meeting of the council, the members solemnly stated that they had represented their floors in voting the motion into effect. This flagrant violation of adequate representation must not go unnoticed. By the time this article is set to print, another meeting of the Residence Hall Council will have taken place. If nothing is done to remedy the situation as it stands now, then the only manner in which the freshman voice may be heard will be through the process of referendum. In view of this fact, I urge all freshmen to be aware of current issues and, if interested, to come to the meetings, which are open to any interested student.

Another problem which seems to come to the fore each year is the compulsory ROTC program. From my own experience in ROTCEE, the compulsory aspect is completely defeatist. If any freshman ever had the desire to go advanced when he started, this desire surely isn't cultured as he continued the program. Either he is discouraged by the fellows on his left or right (probably both), who have placed the chip of resentment on their shoulders and make drill miserable for all involved, or he is frustrated by his "gung-ho" platoon leader who struts around, more like a tin god than a prospective soldier, and gives out demerits like they were "Babcock for Governor" stickers. When it comes around to giving merits, however, he has to scratch his left rump in order to find one. This situation is getting so bad that at the last drill a platoon leader told his troops that they looked so terrible that he was going to give them a "special chance" to improve. He then proceeded to tell them that there would be a "special" drill session at 6:00 PM on Mon. in the cage, and that if they cared at all about how they looked, they would be there. Well, that's exactly what he will find out; how much they care about how they look. I'd like to see how many show up but, confidentially, I'm not going either.

These "men" are a minority (fortunately), but let's not forget that all it takes is a few, each commanding about 30 cadets, to discourage 20-30 prospective 2nd lieutenants from ever desiring to go advanced. One solution would be to gather up all these "machines" and ship them to West Point where their fervent and passionate desire for the military may be quenched; because they are killing the program (which is basically sound and educational, as well as constructive of respect and leadership).

The only solution to the problem is to make ROTC voluntary rather than mandatory. As soon as the University realizes this, the department will be capable of turning out prospective soldiers rather than prospective Mickey Mouse club members. At least they will know that they are working with 100% cooperation, and that those involved have a firm desire to acquire a knowledge of the military.

Freshmen, if you feel persecuted, don't sit back and take it like sheep; the French didn't and neither did the Colonials, and both France and America have reaped many harvests from their revolutions.

Think First, Sceptic

To the Editor:

Before this response to the "Sceptic" column on March 13 is labeled a defense of the Military Science Department, I should state that I do not take, and have never taken, an ROTC course. Some criticism of the department is justified as is much defense. So far, the defense far outweighs the offense, for the latter has only been on minor points.

One quote, however, from the March 13 column, is very repulsive.

"To take a good example the Advanced Military Science Class of 1950, wasted a year respectively on the Civil War, Tactics, Ordering (left, two, three, four) and Teaching. The present address of the Class of 1950 - Army division is the graveyards of Korea".

I must object to the use of words such as these, for they are not warranted. If the Sceptic must fan a hotbed of controversy, then he might at least do it in a manner worthy of the position which he is in and not as a twelve year old malcontent or a Harding Newtonby.

Or possibly the Sceptic does not realize that he may turn his head from his intellectual and skeptical pursuits to see a banner flying on a staff in front of Billings. That ensign, Mr. Sceptic, is not waving over this campus - or any other campus or place - entirely free. Those members of the Class of 1950 lying in Korean graves are but a small number of those who have given their lives so that you might write your column and voice your thoughts in a free society.

Freedom Now?

To the Editor:

As a Conservative thinketh: on Tuesday, March 10, UVM was supposed to hold, along with other Vermont colleges, a mock Presidential primary. But at the last minute it was called off (for UVM only). Why? According to Thomas F. Koch, chairman of College Young Republican Club of Vermont, the UVM supervisor "wouldn't hold one at UVM when he decided Goldwater wouldn't do so good." The Burlington Free Press reported on March 11.

Now who is this supervisor that so faithfully upheld the principles of democracy? Is he some Red, out to sabotage the students of UVM? Not at all, He is a staunch defender of Freedom and Americanism: Darrell Luinetti, frequent writer to the Free Press and avid Goldwater fan.

Freedom? What kind of freedom can Mr. Luinetti pretend to stand for when he will call off a mock primary simply because his fair-haired savior, Barry Goldwater, wouldn't do too well? If it weren't so sad it would be funny.

Daytona Beach Dont's

To the Editor:

TO STUDENTS PLANNING TO VISIT DAYTONA BEACH:

The city of Daytona Beach welcomes all visitors. We are a resort town and a large part of our economy depends upon the tourists. However, like any other community, we have certain rules and regulations that must be observed to maintain order and decency within our City.

During the past Easter holidays, numerous arrests of students were made. Some of these arrests could possibly be attributed to ignorance of the law, but the vast majority were caused by carelessness and thoughtlessness.

All persons arrested by our Police Department for crimes other than traffic violations are fingerprinted and photographed and copies are sent to the FBI in Washington. Later when persons so arrested attempt to obtain employment or officially enter a profession, this record will inevitably come to light and it may well be the cause of failing to obtain the position sought. Our Police Department frequently receives letters from young people who were arrested here, requesting that the record of their arrest be destroyed so whatever position they are applying. Unfortunately, we are unable to do this.

This letter is being sent to you in the hope that you will read it, understand it, and appreciate the viewpoint of we who are sending it to you. The following are some of the rules and regulations that are included in our City Ordinances as laws, violations of which have caused the arrest of the greater number of young people. These laws are not directed at any specific group of people, but are laws that every one residing in or visiting our community must obey. In the interest of brevity, these are listed as DO NOTs:

1. Do not drink intoxicating beverages on the streets or sidewalks.
2. Do not have intoxicating beverages in your possession if you are under 21 years of age or attempt to obtain any by use of false identification.
3. Do not start fires on the beach or any other public property.
4. Do not mark your car with any writings, designs, figures or pictures that could be considered obscene or indecent or dress in a manner that could be so considered.
5. Do not trespass on private property such as motels or hotels without the consent of the owner or manager or gather in crowds on public property so as to obstruct the free flow of vehicular and pedestrian traffic.
6. Do not drink to such an extent that you become intoxicated.
7. Do not litter the beach or streets with beer cans and other rubbish.
8. Do not use profane and indecent language in public.
9. Do not injure or destroy either public or private property.
10. Do not come prepared to camp out on the beach while you are here as this is not allowed.

The traffic ordinances of the City of Daytona Beach are for the most part similar to those in your home area. The speed limits are posted on streets where a speed in excess of 25 miles per hour is allowed and the speed limit on the Ocean Beach is always 10 miles per hour during day light hours and 15 miles per hour at night. Do not ride on any part of a vehicle other than the seat or drive your vehicle in the ocean as this is not only unlawful but the corrosive action of the salt water is damaging to the vehicle.

We, the people of the City of Daytona Beach, will be happy to have any of you visit here at any time. All we ask is that you obey our laws and respect the rights of others as we are sure you do in your own home town.

The flower is wilting away
Oh, selfish weeds:
But our Pericles wanders by.
He caught a glimpse of its Saddened state.
Slowly with meticulous care
Are birth is conceived,
Then selfish weed of late (selfless be):
A hope no more, no more?
What ephemeral dreams these were.

Dreams with power made real.
Wilted flowers again glorified.
Tumultuous thunderstorms,
Lightning-flashes ill-conceived.
Pericles, great soul, upon this flower

Fell.
Sense, a growing strength, to uphold

This body
To fertilize the earth
Then once again the flower
May breathe.

THE SCEPTIC

A spectre is haunting Europe-the spectre of Communism.

Karl Marx, Friedrich Engels

I wake up in the morning and look out my window at the beautiful snow-capped green mountains stabbing against the bright blue sky. I grab my Burlington Free Press and lie down languorously after a sumptuous Saga morning repast. I open my Free Press and as the sun shines through its yellow pages of journalism, the scene outside my plush dormitory room takes on a change in color. As I read further into the paper, there is no doubt about it, Vermont begins to undergo a subtle change. By the time I reach the editorial page the evil tinge has become more pronounced. When I start reading the Letters to the Editor, I look out my window and there it is, that once beautiful green state has turned a bright and bloody pink.

Taking heed from the Editor's warning I looked around and sure enough, what did I see marching up North Winooski Avenue but Fidel Castro and the mighty Cuban army invading the area they covet most, of all the world's most splendid land, Vermont. There didn't seem to be much resistance from the natives so I assumed that we have been sold out by the Communists in the CIA. Better red than dead, I decided to make some peace agreements with Fidel.

"Hi Mr. Castro," says I, feeling very embarrassed being the only one around not wearing green fatigues.

"Hi" says Fidel.

"Watcha doin here," says I.

"Painting the town Red," he answered.

"Oh," I said "How come this town?"

"Because Burlington, Vermont has all the characteristics we Cubans have wished to own of any area in the world. Your barns house the world's best cows," he said breathing in deeply the thick manur-rich odor which permeated the sparkling but fetid air. He continued, "Your town is lovely, set on the shores of lovely Lake Complain."

"Not Complain," I said.

"I'm not complaining," he said.

"It's Champlain," I said.

"Oh Champagne, why didn't you say so. Do they serve it in this building right here?"

"No," I said, "That's a fraternity house; you can't get any alcoholic beverages here. Besides you don't have a draft card."

"Oh," he said.

We had been walking all this while until we were just at the edge of the campus. Surveying the formidable statue of Ira Allen, Fidel said:

"Here is another reason I decided to invade Vermont. Your university is known for its energy, excitement and equality. That's right, the three E's of Excrement."

"Enlightenment," I corrected.

"Shut up," he said, "I hear you have good racial balance on this campus, Seven Negroes to four thousand whites. When we get finished everyone will be Red."

I looked back and noticed he had painted Burlington Pink from the lake shore to Waterman building. Some students had arrived and as they passed by Fidel they laughed, not seeming to notice his troops and the pink aura of the day. When Fidel asked about their laughing I explained to him that in our country only beatniks wear beards and everyone laughs at beatniks.

When he asked why they hadn't noticed the approaching Red tide, I explained that they were probably New Yorkers and that only Vermonters could understand the menace from the Caribbean.

As we started walking around the campus, I explained the many lovely buildings of the university. I told him that we have a building for everything. Our latest one was going to be for God, and that it was hoped that the Newman Club could raise money for a building for another God.

"In ten years we will have at least four buildings for the many different Gods on campus," I explained to the highly impressed Red butcher.

"Do many people believe in God in Burlington, Vermont?" asked Fidel.

"On Sundays and major holidays," I explained. Gee, I sure had to explain a lot to that guy; he didn't know anything. He thought that the Billings Student Center was where avid, mass debating was encouraged. I told him that only the minds were abused in this hotbed of Bourgeois behavior. I decided I'd start being a little un-American so that maybe he would give me a big command position when his coup was over. Maybe I would be president of S.A. or I.F.C. or R.O.T.C. Organizations with a lot of letters always impress me.

Anyway, while we were at the student center one of those beautiful girls that are always there came up to us. She had brown hair with yellow stripes and wore black boots with ski pants and a great big sweater. She couldn't speak Spanish, so they tried French; when that failed they tried English. As a last resort he used his fingers for sign language which she readily answered, saying that he would have to pay. For her cup of coffee. Later on, Fidel said that in his country women carried guns. I told him that the Dean of Women's Office didn't let girls do that.

Soon we arrived at the ROTC building and the greenies were out there dribbling. As soon as Fidel came, they yelled "bad! bad! Go away you dirty Red Commie you!" Then everyone was told to fire, but nobody had any ammunition or other important things like guns so they gave up. I said that the oldest of those boys might be valuable as hostages but Fidel said he didn't think so. "Go away," said the greenies, so we left.

Fidel was getting sort of tired and so was I. He finally answered my early question and said that the only reason that Cuba wanted Vermont was that it was the only place in the world that was dumb enough to hysterically fear their little island. It was at this time that I woke up and had morning sickness or whatever Sceptics have when they are pregnant with ideas after being raped by the depravity of the Bourgeois world. May the Red, White, and Blue always have Red in it.

Questions for this week:

1. Who will be the next Dean of Men/Women?

2. How come that house on Main Street had a KW party?

A WHAT???

What is an amanuensis (pronounced a-man-u-en-sis)? This word is unfamiliar to most people for it is a rather specialized word which is not in common use in the modern English language. I asked more than fifty people what they would do with an amanuensis. Not a single person gave an answer that showed they knew the meaning of the word. A few people I stopped would look at me in an odd manner, mumble an incomprehensible answer, and quickly walk away. The most common answer was, "I'd throw it away." One junior, a man of the out-of-doors said, "I'd put it on my back and hike up Mt. Mansfield." A senior at Phi Delta Theta had the most humorous answer, saying, "I'd pet it." Two girls thought it would be a good idea to write with an amanuensis. A sarcastic sophomore dryly commented, "I'd kill it." A girl from Allen House jokingly thought it would be nice to sleep with one. The most unusual answer was from a freshman in Buckham who said, "I'd use it to pay my bills." Even one teacher I approached could only comment, "I really couldn't say," and hurriedly departed from the classroom. What is an amanuensis - have you figured it out? An amanuensis is a secretary who takes dictation.

Is There A Population Problem?

Will the mass majority of our children starve in the future? Will there only be "standing room" left fifty years from now? The answers to these exciting questions (and more) will be sought in an interesting panel discussion on Monday, March 23rd, at 8:00 PM in the North Lounge, of the Billings Student Center.

This panel of experts will include three prominent professors from UVM, who are versed along these lines, and two members of the clergy. They are:

F. Babbott - Assoc. Prof. of Epidemiology

E.J. Miles - Assoc. Prof. of Geography

D. Gulyas - Asst. Prof. of Sociology

Rev. Gaston Carrier - Unitarian Church

A member of the Catholic clergy from St. Michael's College.

Undoubtedly, the moral issues of birth control and family resettlement will arise. All those interested in this paramount problem are invited to attend. A question and answer period will follow.

Thanks to Mike Walk, Mixes and Matches returns:

Congratulations to Don Sawyer, Alpha Epsilon Pi, '66, on becoming lavaliered to Ann Ross, of Brookline, Mass. Also to Alpha Epsilon Pi's Mike Sacks, '64, and Alpha Epsilon Phi's Micki Austern, '65, on their pinning and Steve Devins, Alpha Epsilon Pi, '65, on his pinning to Gail Karger, Brooklyn Community College.

Best wishes to Alpha Epsilon

Phi's Bobbie Bigman, '66, on becoming pinned to Garry Murphy, '64, Middlebury College.

The brothers and pledges of Theta Chi, extend their congrats to: Doug Rexford, pinned to Diana MacLean, Vic Young and Sue Ratcliff on their pinning, and to Bob Shattuck, and Christine Pattee of Kappa Alpha Theta on their stapling. The Sig Ep's are "uncles". Congratulations to Bob and Gail Rasmussen on their Sig Ep legacy. Also, the Sig Ep's have announced the pinning of Dave MacDonald, '66, and Carol Stocks of Endicott Junior College.

Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Gamma Rho had a very enjoyable dessert hour on South Prospect St., the Delta Delta Delta's had a successful tea.

The Owls announce the pinning of Nancy Lombard to Spencer "Rebel" Baker.

Congratulations to all new fraternity officers on their gavel dangles.

Ruth Lichten Renews Title

Ruth Lichten of Manhasset, N.Y., a senior at the University of Vermont, won the New England championship in oral interpretation of literature for the second year in a row over the weekend.

Miss Lichten defended her championship against representatives of 16 other colleges and universities at the New England Forensic Championships at Emerson College in Boston. Her coach is Dr. H. Jane Wamboldt of the UVM speech department.

The UVM debating team ended the tournament in fourth place with a record of 5-3.

The affirmative team of Craig Nelson of Greenville, Maine and Cynthia Clark of Springfield, Vermont ended with a 2-2 record, defeating Emerson College and Rhode Island University, losing to Holy Cross College and Maine. The team received an award for excellence because of their high quality points. The negative team of Donna Kristiansen of York, Pa., and Barry Messinger of New York City tallied a 3-1 record defeating Boston University, Brandeis, and Norwich while losing only to Bowdoin College.

NEA Announces Rise In Salary

WASHINGTON (CPA) - The median salary for all college and university teachers for a nine-month period is $8,163.

That is a 6.2 per cent increase in the middle range of college pay since the last academic year.

But the best that the National Education Association (NEA), which announced the salary study last week, can say is that the increase is "encouraging."

Trouble is, said the NEA, that the increase means that the fat cats of the college faculty are getting fatter, while the majority of college teachers are fighting an uphill battle for better pay.

"This figure," said Dr. Ray C. Maul, who directed the NEA study, "does not compare favorably with earnings in other professions which require a similar investment in education."

Here is the way the NEA found the middle-range salaries for male college faculty members:

- $11,312 for professors.
- $ 8,969 for associate professors.
- $ 7,539 for assistant professors.
- $ 6,114 for instructors.

Making the female faculty ranks boil is the NEA finding that the median salary for all women teachers in college is $6,940 - $1,223 less than their male counterparts.

The same difference is apparent in the median pay scale for the four teaching ranks.

If your aim is being president of a college or university, your salary will be somewhere around $17,330.

BETWEEN

AND THE DEEP SEA

THERE'S A WIDE RANGE OF OPPORTUNITY
IN THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES

To outer space and into the deep sea, we take the sum total of our scientific and managerial knowledge. A case in point is Telstar, which represents the first step toward a worldwide communications system. Another example, the new deep-sea amplifier that simultaneously transmits two-way messages. Both communications triumphs stem from Bell System planning, research and development.

Such trailblazing projects command the best of managerial and scientific talent. That's why you'll find, throughout the Bell System, men with college training as diverse as the responsibilities they shoulder. Their backgrounds run the gamut from liberal arts and business courses to science or specialized engineering majors.

Admittedly, the work is demanding. It requires that unusual caliber of man who finds a greater satisfaction in challenge than in ready solution... who is eager to see his education yield dividends... who wants an immediate opportunity for leadership.

Men with this kind of impatience will discover the stimulation, welcome and rewards they seek in the telephone business.

Miss Harp To Play Flute

Mary Anne Harp, a Graduate Teaching Fellow in the Music Department, will give a flute recital Monday, March 23, 8:30 P.M. in the Ira Allen Chapel. This is in partial fulfillment of the requirements for a Master of Arts degree in Music. She will be accompanied by Dr. David Kinsey of the music department.

Miss Harp is a graduate of Fredonia State Teachers College. She was a scholarship student and graduated cum laude. She studied privately in Antwerp, Belgium and participated in a Christmas seminar in Puerto Rico in 1962. She has played with the Erie Philharmonic Orchestra, Fredonia Chamber Orchestra and the Vermont Philharmonic.

Her program includes Sonata I by Handel, Poem by Griffes, Reverie and Petite Valse by Caplet and Sonata by Hindemith. Miss Harp has been a student of Dr. Frank W. Lidral, chairman of the Music department.

Presidents of large public universities command between $45,000 and $18,500 - a median of $27,250. A smaller, public university president gets from $14,000 to $27,500 - a median of $21,582.

It is that large, non-public university president who is on top, getting between $22,000 and $45,000 - the middle ground is $34,500. The small private institutions pay as much as $35,000 to the president - but most get less than $11,000.

In the hinterlands, the president's salary plunges. The NEA said there are 40 presidents of small private colleges getting less than $10,000 annually.

The NEA found the academic gold in the hills of the west. For all ranks of teachers, the geographic median high is paid in the west - $8,777. The deep South is the lowest - $7,412.

At those small private colleges, the administrations jumped pay brackets by 5.6% since last year to a new median for low ranks of $6,264.

Offsetting the seemingly big hike was a 6 per cent pay increase by large private universities during the same period for a median high of $9,318 in all ranks of teaching.

Higher education appeals for more administrative talent is being backed up with higher salaries, the NEA reported.

Median salaries for university and colleges for the academic executive levels show these medians:

$13,644 for undergraduate college deans; $9,144 for deans of men; $10,512 for business managers; $9,871 for athletic directors; $8,883 for head librarians and $9,572 for directors of admission.

The biennial NEA study serves as a guideline for higher education teachers and administrators.

The NEA said that teachers in institutions paying the higher salaries have consistently received the higher per cents of salary increase.

"Funds to compete successfully with other occupations seem to be available to only a small minority of the institutions. The majority are fighting an uphill battle," the NEA said.

Peace Corps

It is not too late for college seniors to apply for the Peace Corps and enter training this summer, say Peace Corps officials.

Applications filed as late as June first could still be processed in time for entrance into one of the training programs beginning in middle and late summer. However, the sooner the better say Peace Corps officials, to allow for better planning on the part of both the Peace Corps and the applicant.

In addition to turning in a completed Questionnaire, an applicant must take the Peace Corps Placement Test. These aptitude tests will be administered nationwide at Post Offices in principal cities throughout the United States on March 14, April 11 and May 9. The same test is to be given at UVM on April 24.

Peace Corps information teams from Washington will still be visiting many more colleges and universities this spring and will be administering the Placement Test on campus. Peace Corps officials emphasize that this is a non-competitive test, with no passing or failing grades.

This summer the Peace Corps hopes to train as many as 6,000 men and women at approximately 55 colleges and universities throughout the country. College seniors, available in June, have a much better chance than the average applicant to enter one of these training projects if they apply now, state Peace Corps officials.

Folk Dances To Be Taught

A guest folk dance teacher, Dudley Laufman, will teach Scottish dances, Balkan Kolos, english Contras, and other folk dances at Southwick ballroom on Saturday, March 21st from 3:30 - 5:30 P.M. He is from Canterbury, New Hampshire, and will play the accordion as musical accompaniment for the dancing. He will also sing folk songs and tell folk tales. The event is sponsored by the Women's Department of Physical Education as part of the Folk Dance courses taught by Miss Norma Albert.

The two hour session is open to any who are interested in participating or observing. No experience in folk dancing is necessary. Mr. Laufman will conduct an evening session at Goddard College on the same date.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

By Richard Rappaport

This past weekend the class S, M, I, and L high school state championship basketball games were held at Patrick Gymnasium before two capacity crowds. If people are willing to watch the inferior brand of basketball played in Vermont, why won't they attend UVM games which are certainly, if nothing else, on a higher caliber of play. There are many reasons for this poor attendance at Catamount home games.

The first involves the apathetic attitude of the UVM student body towards almost all types of extra-curricular activities, but it seems that the general consensus toward varsity sports is even worse than it is in regard to other outside interests. Students feel that they have no time to attend these games since they are supposedly too busy studying or participating in individual pursuits.

I believe that poor attendance is also caused by the fact that Vermont games lack the spirit and color that distinguish games in other universities.

In regard to spirit the chief fault lies with the UVM cheerleaders who leave much to be desired. They wear Victorian outfits, are generally unenergetic, and do not attract the best available candidates. The reason that they are unable to get the most outstanding girls to participate is due to the fact that they have very little prestige, and that they are actually a small, tight clique consisting of mostly local Burlington girls who went to high school together. In fact, the boy cheerleaders when they performed at a couple of games during the season, generated much more spirit, than the girls ever had before, with much less rehearsal.

Color and pageantry could be added to the home basketball contests by the use of the UVM band which could be seated in the stands playing appropriate school and other fighting songs. Not only would this aid the spirit of the fans, but it would also help encourage the team to give that extra added incentive that wins close ballgames.

Another reason for the slight attendance is the lack of publicity and coverage given to Vermont games by the local radio and television stations and newspapers. They allow a great deal more time and space for the high school, and even Y.M.C.A. games than they do for Catamount contests.

Getting away from this difficulty concerning lack of attendance at Catamount basketball games we turn to another problem, this one facing Vermont's Yankee Conference track champions, pole vaulter Don Mayland, and the mile relay team consisting of Al Brown, Vin Decesaris, Ken Burton, and Bill Mulhern. These individuals want to attend the Penn Relays, one of the greatest collegiate track events of the year, on the weekend of April 25, during which Vermont has no regular meets scheduled. However, their going hinges to a great extent on whether they receive the official backing of the school, namely the athletic council. I strongly urge the council to support them and if possible pay for their expenses for two reasons. First, it would give the school badly needed track publicity and second, it would give both entrants, especially Mayland, an opportunity to be pushed by better competition.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Vermont will face All-American baseball (and football) players Columbia's Archie Roberts and Navy's Roger Staubach, on this year's southern trip. — Last year's frosh basketball star Bobby Hillas is returning to school next fall and will be eligible to play after the first semester in late December. — Vermont fall football practice starts earliest in the school's history this year on August 22, due to the new academic calendar. — Senior Larry "Beasle" Bender once received $10,000 a game from the St. Louis Cardinals three years ago, when after two minor league games he broke his wrist, was released, but still collected the $20,000 bonus. — Dick Defeo, transfer from Northeastern, was rated a better signal caller than Mass. quarterback Jerry Whelchel while both were in high school. — Speaking of Whelchel, he was recently dismissed from school for disciplinary reasons. — Former All-Ivy football player at Harvard Chet Bourillis is a student at Vermont medical school. — Cat center Steve Ross was approached in high school by NYU who offered him a basketball grant-in-aid. — John Babcock is this area's public relations director for St. John's basketball. — Quarterback Scott Fitz, one of the greatest high school basketball ballplayers in New Hampshire history, did not receive any scholarships to college, not even to UVM. However, Vermont did finally recognize his talent by offering him one at the end of his freshman year.

Ralph's Last Minute Instructions

Baseball coach Ralph Lapointe giving final pointers to his team before they depart on the annual southern trip. The squad opens against Navy on March 25 and plays six games in seven days.

Trackmen Preparing For Season

University of Vermont trackmen are now busily preparing for the outdoor season and possibly the Penn Relays after taking part in the first Yankee Conference indoor championships at Maine last Saturday. Despite fielding a limited team of eight men, the Cats rolled up 17 points on three wins and two fifth places.

Sporting some of the best individuals in New England track this season, the forces of Archie Post have indicated that they would like to enter the April 25th Penn Relays at Philadelphia if it receives the University's permission.

Hoping to make the trip are the new Yankee Conference relay champions, consisting of Al Brown, Ken Burton, Vic DeCesaris and Captain Bill Mulhern. The Green and Gold baton-passers upset favored Maine to win the title in a time of 3:28.6. Mulhern ran a brilliant race from the anchor position and won the event going away from the field.

The speedy captain was also crowned the 600 yard champion in a winning time of 1:13.8. Mulhern ended the indoor season undefeated and now will attempt to do the same thing in the outdoor 440 yard dash.

Only one record was broken at Maine Saturday and Vermont fans surely can figure out who broke it. Sophomore pole vault sensation Don Mayland leaped 14'-3/4" to edge Rhode Island's John Gonzales for first place. Mayland did not miss a jump until 14'-6", where he hit the bar coming down for the second straight meet. Gonzales also jumped 14'-3/4", but had misses at 13'-6", so the Vermont ace was declared winner by fewer jumps. It was the fifth cage record that Mayland has broken this season in New England.

Mayland also hopes to enter the Penn Relay pole vault competition, but admits he would have to go close to 15 feet to even place in the meet. The now paralyzed Brian Sternberg won the event last year with a record 16'-5" jump.

Larry Perlmutter and Tom Whittaker also hit the scoreboard last week for the Cats with fifth places in the 50 yard dash and weight event, respectively.

SUPPORT YOUR TEAM!

The Vermont Varsity baseball team will play six games on their southern trip beginning Tuesday, March 25. They will be playing in the Washington, D.C.-Maryland area against Navy and George Washington and in the New York City Metropolitan area against Hofstra, LIU, Rider and Columbia.

Letters Awarded To UVM Athletes

Varsity basketball letters have been awarded to 11 members of the 1963-64 University of Vermont basketball team.

Vermont, playing its 50th season of basketball and 22nd under Coach John (Fuzzy) Evans, won 11 games and lost 10 for its best season since 1958-59.

Seniors earning monograms were Capt. Dave Strassburg of Essex Junction, Chuck Glick of Far Rockaway, N.Y., and Bobby Nurse of Astoria, N.Y. Juniors earning letters were Ralph D'Altilla of Union City, N.J., Carl Frattini of Barre, and Joe Gannon of Burlington. Five sophomores lettered. They were Layne Higgs of Barre, Milt Goggans of Hoboken, N.J., Mike Karel of Yonkers, N.Y., Steve Ross of Orange, Conn., and Ken Spalter of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Strassburg led the team in scoring with a 16.7 average, followed by D'Altilla at 14.1, Goggans at 13.9, and Higgs at 13.5.

Goggans was the top rebounder with 13.9 retrieves per contest and for much of the season he ranked in the top 10 nationally in this category.

Included in Vermont's wins this year was the 250th for Evans since he became head coach back in 1940. His 250th triumph, witnessed by the home fans, came against St. Lawrence, 85-75.

Eleven members of the University of Vermont's first inter-collegiate hockey team in 12 years have been awarded varsity letters by the Athletic Council.

Receiving letters are George Cook, Providence, R.I.; Paul Dorsey, Belmont, Mass.; Arthur Garvin, Westfield, N.J.; Peter Kidder, Dixfield, Maine; Anthony Rishe, Potsdam, N.Y.; Paul Ryan, Winchester, Mass.; Robert Sausville and Kenneth Sausville, South Orange, N.J.; Robert Snyder, Glenville, Ill.; Marshall Stevenson, Potsdam, N.Y.; and Ozro Swett, Dixfield, Maine. Anthony Collard, Buffalo, N.Y., received a manager's letter.

JV awards went to Anthony Russo, Winchester, Mass.; John Rutledge, Scotia, N.Y.; and manager Philip True, Melrose, Mass.

Coached by Bill Ruffer, Vermont won five games, lost three and tied two in putting its first varsity hockey team on ice since the 1951-52 season. The young Catamounts, predominately a freshman team (the ECAC granted permission to use freshmen), captured runner-up honors in the first annual Yankee Conference hockey tournament held in Burlington.

Stevenson was the leading scorer with 11 goals and eight assists for 19 points while Bob Sausville tended the nets and allowed only 32 goals in eight games.

TOP 15 HOOPSTERS

Jim Rich, a steady performer for the University of New Hampshire Wildcats for the past three years, is the New Yankee Conference scoring champion. Rich scored 230 points in 10 games to clinch the title and replace Roager Twitchell of Massachusetts as the leader. The latter, bothered by injuries most of the campaign, slipped to 14th place.

Dennis McGovern and Steve Chubin, members of the co-champion University of Rhode Island Rams, took over second and third spots, respectively. McGovern, who led briefly, was held to only nine points in the final conference game against Connecticut and saw his average drop to 21.4. Chubin scored 208 points for a 20.8 average while Nick Mandravelis of New Hampshire was fourth with an average of 20 points per game. Pete Bernard of Massachusetts was fifth with a 19.9 average. The top 15 scorers follow:

The Verinon Cynic

VOL. 82

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BURLINGTON, VERMONT

APRIL 9, 1964

AEPi On Social Pro; Restricted Until Fall IFC Judiciary Consulted

Dean of Men Roland Patzer, acting upon the recommendation of the Inter-Fraternity Council Judicial Board, has placed Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity on social probation. The University action, based on an infraction of Article 7 of the "green pages" rules (concerning alcoholic beverages) will last for an undetermined length of time although the fraternity may apply for the resumption of its social privileges in September, 1964.

On Saturday, March 29, two freshmen attended a "beer blast" at the fraternity's chapter house on South Willard St. and were put to bed by officers of the fraternity after the former had become intoxicated. Awakening at four in the morning the two freshmen set out to raid the Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity chapter house on College St. During their brief visit they took some party decorations as souvenirs. On their way back to the AEPi house they decided to also raid the Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority house on Main St. While attempting to break into the residence they awakened the sorority's house mother who called the Burlington police.

When the police arrived they arrested one of the freshmen but the other ran back to the AEPi house. There he awakened an officer of the fraternity and the two of them went in the officer's car to find out the whereabouts of the other freshman. They were both arrested near the AEPi sorority house. They were all detained by the police until seven in the morning and the University was notified of their actions and arrests.

Dean Patzer referred the case of the freshmen and the fraternity to the IFC Judicial Board. The Board, which consists of three fraternity presidents, two house advisers, and the IFC adviser as an ex officio member, held hearings on the matter on March 21, and decided to recommend social probation for the fraternity to the Dean. Dean Patzer accepted this recommendation as well as a second on which makes it impossible for the two involved freshmen to pledge any fraternity until Spring semester 1965. Social probation means that the fraternity may not sponsor, co-sponsor or register any social functions until their status is changed.

New Orientation Program Set For Class Of '68

Because of the forthcoming calendar change in the UVM school year, a new freshman orientation program will be initiated, beginning this June. It is hoped that this program will be an improvement over the original fall orientation in at least two ways: 1. There will be more time to counsel students, which will lead to an improvement in the advising program and, 2. By the elimination of social programming there will be a greater emphasis on the intellectual aspects of college.

Instead of the 4-day Program for all freshmen, the new plan will consist of a series of one-day orientation programs for groups of approximately 250 students. Parents will also be invited to attend, and meetings will be scheduled for them.

The most important aspect of summer orientation is the advisory program. Presently, it is thought that each adviser will be assigned about six students for each of the five scheduled orientation days. As much as possible, the student's interests will be in accordance with the adviser's specialty. The adviser will follow his advisees through their freshman year, having the responsibility of assisting them in their selection of courses for the spring semester and of planning the students' program for the Sophomore year.

The period for the Orientation days is as follows:

Group	Arrive	Leave	Students
I	June 17	June 18	250
II	June 19	June 20	250
III	June 21	June 22	250
IV	June 23	June 24	250
V	September 8 - 9		200

The following is a program for a typical Orientation group:

First Day

3:00 - 5:00 P.M. Arrival of students and parents.

Student hosts and Head Residents will be present to assist in finding rooms. All women will be housed in one unit and all men in another. Waterman dining hall will be open for students and parents.

5:30 P.M. - Dinner

A cafeteria style meal will be served to students and parents. The student hosts and various UVM personnel would also be invited to attend and mix with the group.

Tours of the campus to see some of the main buildings and hear a bit of history about them will be arranged and conducted by the student hosts. Such tours may include both parents and students.

7:30 P.M. Talk by the President

Philosophy of the institution and educational goals.

8:15 P.M. Discussion Sessions with Advisers

(Possibly the student hosts might also join these groups)

Student Hosts will be selected to help with the new orientation period. They will not be paid, but their room and board will be paid for through the program.

The discussions would be informal. At this time the adviser has an opportunity to become acquainted with his group and vice versa.

This is a period for the adviser to answer questions and lay the ground work for the individual session with each advisee the next day. The sessions would last for whatever time seemed best but would break up by 9:45 P.M.

9:45 P.M. Punch, milk, and cookies with general discussion period.

It is suggested that after the talk by the President, the parents go to separate rooms to meet with the academic deans and discuss the colleges and their programs in an informal session.

Second Day

7:00 - 7:45 A.M. Breakfast

8:00 - 8:30 A.M. Meeting with Academic Dean

8:45 - 11:15 A.M. Advisers (a break would be arranged during this period when coke and lemonade would be available)

11:30 - 12:00 NOON Meeting with Personnel Deans

12:00 - 1:00 P.M. Luncheon

1:15 - 1:45 P.M. Meeting with Registrar and Financial Officer

1:45 on Counseling Sessions with Advisers
Student files program and is sectioned

In cases where individual testing (reading, foreign language, etc.) was required, arrangements would be made for those persons to take them in the afternoon at the Testing Center.

The Financial Aids Officer will be in his office during the entire time in order that students and parents may have individual appointments.

In the morning, from 9:30 to 10:30 A.M., it is suggested that the parents might meet with the Personnel Deans. In the afternoon, at two o'clock, the parents might meet with Public Relations and get a story of the University's general aims and development as well as the Parents Associates organization presentation.

Contest Winner Performs

by Geri Sharff

A most charming and talented young woman demonstrated her skills on Tuesday that have made her the winner for the last two years of the New England Forensic Conference in Oral Interpretation. Her name is Ruth Lichten.

Ruth presented an outstanding program which she divided into three parts. First, she chose a scene from Sidney Howard's The Final Cord. Ruth believes that drama is especially difficult to the fact that there is nothing but straight dialogue. Since there are not any sentences revealing emotion or mood, the voice and the face of the reader must convey everything. And it certainly did in Ruth's case. She completely captivated her audience.

From the dramatic selection, Ruth went on to read two short stories by Katherine Mansfield.

The first, "Miss Brill," concerned a lonely old woman involved in her daily habits. As Ruth read the story, she became Miss Brill herself. Every muscle on her face and each gesture of her hands responded to the characterization. The next story, "A Doll's House," depicted the cruelty of society toward children. Ruth communicated the bewilderment and rapture of the youngsters as she again became the little girls.

Ruth's final choice was taken from the family of poetry. She explained to the audience the danger of falling into a sing-song rhythm while reciting poetry and also of interpreting the meaning fully to the listeners. Ruth exemplified her warnings by reciting "Mr. Flood's Party" by Edward Arlington Robinson. Because she was so engrossed in the ideas expressed in the poem, the rhythm was altogether secondary.

For her last reading, Ruth chose two poems taken from the collection of Don Marquis. The poems were about Mehitabel, the cat. If Ruth had trained a cat to talk and had brought it in to perform, she could not have sounded more like this animal. One had only to close his eyes and listen. The tone of her voice, the deliberate emphasis on certain sounds, and the overall effect was nothing short of excellent.

Ruth's performance was well-attended, just as her talent warrants. We all wish her luck next year as she continues with her studies in speech and oral interpretation.

Seniors:

HONORS DAY CONVOCATION will be held on FRIDAY, May 1, at 10:15 a.m. in the IRA ALLEN CHAPEL. Classes at 10:00, 11:00 and 12:00 will be cancelled. The purpose of the convocation is to honor the senior class and all those students who have achieved scholastic distinction or have won prizes during the year.

The SENIOR CLASS will join the academic procession in cap and gown. The procession will form at 10:00 a.m. in front of Billings Center, or inside in case of rain.

The new President of Student Association and the new Chief Justice of the Student Court will be inaugurated. Students on the HONOR ROLL and members of the HONORARY SOCIETIES will receive recognition.

Music will be furnished by the University Band, the Organ and the Carillon.

PLEASE be in line PROMPTLY at 10:00 a.m., directly behind the faculty.

Academic caps and gowns are available for rental in the former Waterman Stacks at the head of the stairs, second floor, Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. beginning April 6. Rentals are made for the period from Honors Day through Commencement.

Kappa Sigma Returns After Six Month Ban

On Wednesday, April 1, UVM's "dorm X" once again became Alpha Lambda chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity. The fraternity had been banned from the campus as a result of "irresponsible behavior" on the part of its members early Sunday morning, October 20, 1963 at the Kappa Sigma house on Main Street.

On that morning Dean of Men Roland Patzer was called to the house by the Burlington police after a beer bottle had been hurled at a policeman trying to quiet Kappa Sigma members. The police had been called to the scene after trouble had flared up by the partial destruction of the Homecoming Poster of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity and traffic had been halted on the street covered with broken glass.

The action, expelling the house, was taken, the University said, because of the "malicious destruction" of a neighboring fraternity's homecoming weekend display; "gross conduct toward civil police authority"; and the cumulative record of the chapter "over the past few years — all deemed by the University to be related to violation of alcoholic beverage regulations."

However, the University permitted the house to remain open as a residence unit after it made an "appropriate apology" to the Police Department of Burlington and to the fraternity whose Homecoming poster was damaged, and after the fraternity's Alumni Corporation hired a head resident for the house.

The first order of business for the newly reinstated fraternity was to hang out once again their fraternity shingle and flag in front of the chapter house on Main Street.

Feidner, Bandel Honored

Two University of Vermont faculty members have been named to serve on the National Committee of the Shakespeare Anniversary Committee.

The two are Edward J. Feidner, director of drama and director of the University's Champlain Shakespeare Festival, and Prof. Betty Bandel of the English department.

A committee to celebrate the Shakespeare quadricentennial was first proposed by the late President Kennedy. Mrs. Kennedy is serving as honorary chairman of the committee. President Johnson announced in February that a committee would lead this country's official celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare.

Animal And Dairy Center To Be Built At Vermont

(From the Free Press)

Plans for a new animal and dairy science center for the University of Vermont will go to Montpelier this week to be presented to the State Building Council.

The plans are for a new UVM farm on Spear Street, South Burlington, which may replace the present farm on upper Main Street by the fall of next year.

Most of the present farm will be torn down and it is expected the animals will be moved out by late next summer, according to Melvin A. Dyson, UVM controller.

Dyson and Albert M. Smith, chairman of UVM's department of animal and dairy science, will present plans prepared by Cowles and Bausch, architect of Shelburne, to the building council.

The Legislature at its special session approved $400,000 for the construction of the center and for renovation of the UVM Research Center and Morgan Horse Farm at Weybridge.

Dyson said the Weybridge renovations are expected to get under way this summer and will account for about $100,000 of the $400,000 appropriation.

The building council must approve and implement the university's plans before work can get under way on the South Burlington project.

Present plans call for a new animal science laboratory, a classroom and office wing, a dairy barn for 80 head of cattle, a calving barn and a building in which horses would be kept and any animals brought from Weybridge for demonstration would be boarded.

The appropriation also will cover construction of silos and storage sheds and renovation of two existing houses and three other farm buildings.

The appropriation does not cover tearing down the existing farm, Dyson said, and this will probably be put to bid when the time comes.

Dyson said the only buildings not to be razed are the agricultural engineering building, which is adjacent to but not on the farm, a small, red brick barn, and the cow barn.

The cow barn will be used as on-campus storage for the maintenance department. All other UVM shops and storage facilities have been centralized at abandoned Ethan Allen Air Force Base, but one on-campus storage spot is needed.

The cow barn has a concrete floor, and is best suited for storage, he said.

At Weybridge, plans call for renovation and repairs on the dairy barn, a beef cattle barn, the sheep barn, machinery shed and shop, main horse barn, paddock, a barn and one house.

The Legislature cut about $20,000 from the request. The money would have been used to renovate one house and replace a ram barn.

Plans also call for construction of a new brood mare barn and a new seven-bay storage shed.

The decision to renovate the Weybridge property came from the Legislature following public hearings on whether the property should be disposed of or turned into a park.

Out of the hearings grew a plan to expand the farm for research with sheep, cattle and horses, and perhaps even use it to store monkeys used at the College of Medicine.

Moving the farm at the UVM campus was deemed necessary because of the expanding campus and surrounding development of highways and businesses.

Debaters Honor UVM

Michael Cronin and Elaine Zak, who have qualified for the National Debate Championships. (Eldred, Audio-Visual)

A pair of University of Vermont debaters qualified on the weekend of March 20th for the National Debate Championships to be held at West Point on April 23-25, 1964.

Elaine Zak of Burlington and Michael Cronin of Richmond, both seniors, took honors at the District VIII elimination trials held at the University of Maine. In collecting a total of ten judges votes out of a possible sixteen, the team scored against Brandeis University, Harvard University, St. Anselm's College of Manchester, N.Y., St. John's University of Hillcrest, L.I., Boston College, Mt. Holyoke, M.I.T., and the University of Maine. In all, UVM met 8 of the top 10 schools.

Under the District System the nation is divided into eight geographic regions. Each district holds its own elimination trial and selects its top five debate teams to send to the National Champion competition. District VIII is comprised of schools in the New England states and the State of New York.

The other four schools to qualify for the West Point Championships include Harvard University, Boston College, St. Anselm's College, and St. John's University of Hillcrest, L.I. Twenty-four schools were represented in the trials. Dr. Robert Huber, Chairman of the UVM Speech Department, coached the team. The topic debated was the National Inter-collegiate proposition: Resolved, that the Federal Government should guarantee the opportunity for a higher education to all qualified High School graduates.

MISS VERMONT PAGEANT

The Miss Vermont Pageant will be held in Burlington, Friday, April 24 and Saturday, April 25. Mrs. Marion Sargent, director, has announced.

The two day pageant will start Friday when contestants arrive and will culminate Saturday evening in the Memorial Auditorium when the new Miss Vermont is crowned. Other activities Saturday will include luncheon and dinner at which the girls will meet judges and guests from the Miss America Pageant committee, and rehearsal for the evening gown competition.

Single girls between the ages of eighteen and twenty-eight who have been graduated from high school and who are Vermont residents may enter the contest. Also eligible are young women who are living in the state while students at a college here.

Contestants will take part in an evening gown and swim suit competition and must also be able to demonstrate some talent such as singing, dancing, clothes design or recitation, in a three minute routine.

Winner of the Miss Vermont title is awarded a $1000 scholarship and a chance to compete for the Miss America title in Atlantic City next September.

The present Miss Vermont, Melissa Hetzel, a UVM alumni, who won a second scholarship of $100 as the Most Talented Popular Singer in the Miss America Pageant, is returning to Vermont this week from a six week tour of the Caribbean as a model with a cartoonist's show appearing at USO installations. She will be on hand for the pageant.

During her reign as Miss Vermont she has made numerous appearances including one on the "Tonight" show of Johnny Carson and a singing engagement at the Baggy Knees in Stowe.

WHAT'S NEW IN THE APRIL ATLANTIC?

"Must the Colleges Police Sex?": John T. Rule, former Dean at M.I.T., in a provocative article, says "To deny a student the right to have a girl in his room is to punish him for what he might do with her."

"U.S.A. Revisited": John Dos Passos takes a new, kaleidoscopic view of our country — its turnpikes, motels, huge publicity parties, and some of the men who have formed the sinews of our society.

Alumni House Keeps Busy

The Alumni Office staff all pitch in to help on mailing day. The office handles over 1,000,000 pieces of outgoing mail.

The Alumni Office on campus has worn many "hats" during the past year. From its first beginnings as an Alumni Council on a Saturday morning 43 years ago, the present-day Alumni Office has grown tremendously. Ever striving to strengthen the ties which bind the University and the students who have attended it together as a family, the Alumni Office engaged in a wide variety of activities during 1963.

....if an alumna in Yokohama writes them of her delight in finding another Vermonter in alumni departments of sister institutions across the United States. Much has been learned from their work - what they've done and how it's been accomplished.

The Alumni Office keeps a close tab on corporations which have matching gift programs. Frequent publicity is given in the Alumni Magazine - not only to have the gifts doubled, but perhaps to initiate matching gift programs. Grants from foundations are studied, too, to discover where, and if, UVM fits into the picture. Alumni files are researched to find possible liaison between the University and business capital. To keep alumni constantly aware of University events, a detailed calendar is being considered, replete with photographs of campus life. In Vermont, where almost 50% of alumni reside, new highways have shortened the trip to Burlington and a greater participation in the many campus programs may be realized. These events, from lectures of a serious nature to athletic contests, should satisfy the tastes of all alumni.

Alumni are urged to form clubs wherever possible, and the large, established UVM clubs of metropolitan areas are encouraged to break into smaller, more geographically favorable clubs.

Each year the Alumni Office

mails four issues of the Alumni Magazine, seven issues of the Bulletin, and a myriad of class and club letters. During 1963 more than 1,000,000 pieces of outgoing mail were processed - in weight, over 25 tons.

Reunions are eagerly awaited by the classes and the Alumni Office shares this enthusiasm. Each year's affair gets bigger and better, and the Office has learned much in the presentation of these successful yearly events. Special occasions during the year, like Kake Walk, produce frenzied activity in the Alumni Office when ticket requests pour in; and, when alumni find themselves seated with their classmates, this didn't just happen - it was planned that way!

Plans are being considered to enable the Alumni Office to "reach" the undergraduate before he becomes an alumnus, thus making for a stronger alumni body. He may not cherish those campus memories until several years after he is graduated, but if he gets into the habit of supporting Annual Giving right after graduation he swells the ranks of active alumni.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of Rally Round the Flag, Boys! and "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

WELL-KNOWN FAMOUS PEOPLE: No. 1

This is the first in a series of 48 million columns examining the careers of men who have significantly altered the world we live in. We begin today with Max Planck.

Max Planck (or The Pearl of the Pacific, as he is often called) gave to modern physics the law known as Planck's Constant: Many people when they first hear of this law, throw up their hands and exclaim, "Golly whiskers, this is too deep for little old me!"

(Incidentally, speaking of whiskers, I cannot help but mention Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades. Personna is the blade for people who can't shave after every meal. It shaves you closely, cleanly, and more frequently than any other stainless steel blade on the market. The makers of Personna have publicly declared—and do here repeat—that if Personna Blades don't give you more luxury shaves than any other stainless steel blade, they will buy you whatever blade you think is better. Could anything be more fair? I, for one, think not.)

Max showed no indication.....

But I digress. We were speaking of Planck's Constant, which is not, as many think, difficult to understand. It simply states that matter sometimes behaves like waves, and waves sometimes behave like matter. To give you a homely illustration, pick up your pencil and wave it. Your pencil, you will surely agree, is matter—yet look at the little rascal wave! Or take flags. Or Ann-Margret.

Planck's Constant, uncomplicated as it is, nevertheless provided science with the key that unlocked the atom, made space travel possible, and conquered denture slippage. Honors were heaped upon Mr. Planck (or The City of Brotherly Love, as he is familiarly known as). He was awarded the Nobel Prize, the Little Brown Jug, and Disneyland. But the honor that pleased Mr. Planck most was that plankton were named after him.

Plankton, as we know, are the floating colonies of one-celled animals on which fishes feed. Plankton, in their turn, feed upon one-half celled animals called krill (named, incidentally, after Dr. Morris Krill who invented the house cat). Krill, in their turn, feed upon peanut butter sandwiches mostly—or, when they are in season, cheeseburgers.

But I digress. Back to Max Planck who, it must be said, showed no indication of his scientific genius as a youngster. In fact, for the first six years of his life he did not speak at all except to pound his spoon on his bowl and shout "More gruel!" Imagine, then, the surprise of his parents when on his seventh birthday little Max suddenly cried, "Papa! Mama! Something is wrong with the Second Law of Thermodynamics!" So astonished were the elder Plancks that they rushed out and dug the Kiel Canal.

Meanwhile Max, constructing a crude Petrie dish out of two small pieces of petrie and his gruel bowl, began to experiment with thermodynamics. By dinner time he had discovered Planck's Constant. Hungry but happy, he rushed to Heidelberg University to announce his findings. He arrived, unfortunately, during the Erich von Stroheim Sesquicentennial, and everyone was so busy dancing and duelling that young Planck could find nobody to listen to him. The festival, however, ended after two years and Planck was finally able to report his discovery.

Well sir, the rest is history. Einstein gaily cried, "E equals me squared!" Edison invented Marconi. Eli Whitney invented Georgia Tech, and Michelangelo invented the ceiling. This later became known as the Humboldt Current.

Mr. Shulman is, of course, joking, but the makers of Personna Blades are not: if, after trying our blades, you think there's another stainless steel blade that gives you more luxury shaves, return the unused Personnas to Box 500, Staunton, Va., and we'll buy you a pack of any blade you think is better.

What Me Cynical?

It is quite difficult to remember the last time that an avowed Trotskyite was invited to UVM in order to speak before the students and faculty of the University. Fortunately, the Student Association Cultural Activities Committee (SCOPE) saw fit to bring such a person here.

This past Thursday, Mr. Levitt, one of three students, who until recently was under indictment for violation of the state of Illinois' Anti-Subversion Law (a true child of the McCarthy era). Before an assembled group of approximately eighty students (perhaps a UVM record for a lecture concerning a topic which has no connection whatsoever with sex or the morals of collegians) he carefully presented the details concerning his indictment, against which he had the support of many student and citizen groups as well as the American Civil Liberties Union.

We were happy to note that the audience generally was sympathetic to his case, which obviously involved an infringement on his civil liberties. However, we cannot understand the apparent compulsion of many to "pin him up against the wall". Mr. Levitt was wrongly accused of implying that those behind the drives to insure complete civil liberties and civil rights for every American were generally committed to the achievement of socialism in this country. The fact is that he merely stated that the converse is true; socialists generally are committed to the idea of full civil liberties and civil rights for all (and historically have spearheaded in instances the movements towards these goals).

The above is one of a few of the accusations which were made concerning the motivation behind Mr. Levitt's talk (was he trying to get publicity mileage for his Trotskyite position through his civil liberties case?). Apparently UVM students and faculty (if we may take the audience at this SCOPE presentation to be somewhat representative) honestly believe that our democratic system is hardly worth preserving if we must compromise the very ideals on which it is founded (in this case, the right to hold ideas apparently repugnant to a great many Americans without the fear of persecution). It is unfortunate, however, that the audiences at this presentation did not use the discussion period to dispute Mr. Levitt's case (or his presentation of it) of his Trotskyite views. The audience chose to discredit rather than to discuss.

The University owes a great deal to SCOPE for this and many other interesting programs. The members of this committee, under the able leadership of senior Larry Koff (a future Peace Corpsman headed for Senegal), have earned the support of the entire University community in their endeavor to expand the committee's program of activities. They have shown extreme prudence and judgment in allotting their meagerly allocated funds. Surely, the Student Association should continue and increase its financial support of this vital group.

Stop Thief!

To the Editor:

Is this University a hang-out for robbers and thieves? Does such baseness as stealing have to exist in the university where we are supposed to be preparing ourselves for an honest, decent future? It seems to me that the University should not be categorized under this heading, but I sometimes have my doubts. Saturday, April 4, someone stole several purses at A-D Pl, all of which probably contained, as in my case, all my identifications, important papers and some money.

1. My driver's license
2. Social Security card
3. Red Cross Blood Donation Record
4. UVM Identification
5. Several Pictures
6. Addresses

What do other people want with my papers? They will be of no use to them but are very important to me. The money - very little. This is one of my least worries. Whoever took my purse can spend this without any guilt feelings - which will probably be the case!

My purse was found, buried in the snow, everything demolished and all my identifications missing. There were also parts of someone else's purse with mine. If whoever took my papers would please return everything perhaps my faith in mankind might be restored.

Blood Drawing A Success

To the Editor:

The entire Blood Center staff joins me in expressing our appreciation to the UVM students and faculty who responded at the blood drawing held on March 9 and 10 under the sponsorship of the Ethan Allen Rifles. This was the first two-day drawing held locally and the final total of 306 pints was well above the 250-pint goal.

As chairman of the drawing, David Keller did an outstanding organizational job. We are thoroughly aware of the tremendous amount of time and effort he and his associates devoted to this task and trust that they were as well pleased as we with the final results.

The Student Nurses Association headed by Miss Frances Leitner, together with other student groups, also provided valuable assistance to our professional staff in the processing of donors and we are grateful for their help.

In line with the announced plan of inter-campus cooperation, we were encouraged to note that four Trinity College students and one St. Michael's College student gave blood at this drawing.

Thanks to this outstanding response, we were able to continue providing all the blood required by our hospital patients. We know they and their families join us in thanking all who helped in this project.

THE SCEPTIC

"Bad taste depends on whose px is getting gored." Anonymous

We've been playing games in recent weeks with the producers of that attempt at journalism known as "The CYNIC." It seems that the boy-genius who runs this successor to toilet paper has taken it upon himself to edit this column. He has in the last two editions successfully ruined and eliminated the artistic merit from these journalistic masterpieces. He has deprived this campus and you the reader of fine editorial comment while attempting to obtain fillers for the other seven pages. If one takes into account that the children of this school contribute $500 an issue for this piece of manure, one wonders,

- Last time, you read how wonderful Arthur Rubinstein was ("Many notes were dropped but it made no difference").
- You read a collection of publicity notices on a poetry editor and a Violin Quartet (articles nobody who's hip bothers with.)
- You read (for the third week in a row) about some guy who thinks there isn't any interest on the part of the student body but does a lot anyway.
- You read an editorial mistakenly titled "What Me Cynical?"
- You read a letter from a cop telling you not to be bad boys or bad girls.
- We all read "Mixes an Matches."
- You read a "sports" "column" viciously and angrily attacking the local Vermonters for watching winning high school basketball teams instead of the losing Vermont "hoopsters."

Actually, there is hope. The Editor-in-Chief is a bright-eyed lad with new and different ideas such as replacing the "Centaur" with "Poet's Corner." Last week, "Corner" showed high intellectual ability and literary understanding which, rumor has it, caused English instructors to tremor. What can you as conscientious children do about this fragrant waste of money. Primarily, nothing. But secondarily write to your SA representative. Tell him you resent editorial censorship. Tell him you want the CYNIC abolished (You will have to live without the Sceptic but you must sacrifice). President Johnson has called for fiscal responsibility. Let's all be American and get on the bandwagon.

We thought you'd be interested, after a month, to find out who produces, after buffetings of censorship and attacks on civil liberties, these little vignettes of genius each issue.

Owen Lattimore, a political science major is recognized by most as being the more fluent and more humorous of the two authors. Ow, as his friends call him, is a registered Democrat and hopes to go to graduate schools concentrating in Asian studies. His only admitted prejudice is against Irish who he feels are persecuting him. He calls Baltimore, Maryland his home.

Larry Ferlinghetti is attempting to major in English. Larry feels that the University of Vermont would be a great institution if everyone thought like him. Larry's motto is "I can always spot a well-informed man. His views are usually the same as yours." His main outside activities cannot be printed for fear of editing (now you like to know) but he is an avid and enthusiastic camper. Larry originally came from San Francisco but now is a resident of Coney Island. He has no ambition.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REVIEW

- The campus was treated to a sample of political bastardy and perversion (a la G.L. Rockwell) when a Trotskyite delivered an address at UVM. The meeting illustrated two points. First, the ignorant student body was wrong - George Rockwell should not speak on this campus - his intelligence would be insulted. Less than one hundred students and faculty were present to hear a man who accomplished the same function Rockwell was supposed to (Perverse political logic).

Second, various interested members of the faculty were rude and very unintellectual. The sheep, of course, followed suit.

- There are again sixteen fraternities at UVM. Hard and cruel punishment was inflicted and we may all forgive and forget. It is a compliment to the Dean of Men that he has shown his control over the campus and, in particular, his control of all fraternities from living room to kitchens.

- Tufts University dismissed a Professor with tenure (for those ignorants, tenure is the academic substitution for security) for not having published any academic work in eight years. If UVM is to become Ivy-Leaguish, President Fey should follow suit and dismiss all those intellectuals who haven't been producing.

- The Office of Institutional Research of the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant colleges (commonly known as OIRASULG) announced an average 6% increase in tuition for this year for all member colleges. UVM, as a member institution, and under the capable leadership of President Fey kept pace and raised its tuition 25%. UVM is a leader in its field.

- While you children were playing at home an incident took place in the upper middle class community of Kew Gardens that requires repeating. A woman walking home from work was attacked by an unknown assailant. Her screams frightened him off but he returned again and stabbed her. Three different times the man returned within the period of a half-hour and finally she died. While this was taking place, 37 adult, well-bred, middle-class and for the most part college educated people like many of your parents looked on from the safety of their apartments without doing a thing to aid the young woman. Only after it was all over did one get up the "courage" to call the police. Someday you will live in your ten-room splitlevel house and say with pride to your children, "Why should I get involved?"

- "Dr. Strangelove," a humorous movie about nuclear warfare was viewed in Burlington. For those who saw it, bear this in mind: The Secretary of Defense in 1948, Thomas Finletter, under the strain of work and during work suffered rampant in the State Department and the Pentagon. After weeks of strain, he committed suicide. Blah, blah.

QUESTIONS FOR THIS WEEK

- 1) What is your salary rating, Mr. Professor?
- 2) Is this column going to be printed?
- 3) Why is the Billing's Center governing board banning Trotskyites at the Student Center (Free Speech)?
- 4) For whom does the bell toll?

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

John T. Fey, President of the University of Vermont.
(Eldred, Audio-Visual)

The essential nature of a university combines the characteristics of conflicts -- of change and stability -- of separateness and of unity -- of individuality and of cooperation.

To achieve excellence a university must be capable of innovation and change. It must offer freedom and viability to the scholars who pursue knowledge and truth within its walls but it must have a dedication to the long range needs of society which it serves. It must be sensitive to the needs of society and yet must not be diverted by every shortrun change which occurs in the long march from ignorance to enlightenment.

Today new pressures, both external and internal, combine with old and long-existing conflicts in a threat to the essential unity of the American university. In addition to the pursuit of pure knowledge and truth, in the process of educating the undergraduate there are countless new demands being made on our institutions of higher education. Rapidly growing research programs, demands for new graduate programs, the urgency of educating foreign students and of international educational involvement, service needs of both state and federal governments, and the requirements of business and industry have all placed new and growing expectations on the already sensitive and heavily burdened structure of the university.

As a result of these growing pressures there is an urgent necessity for a clearly defined and broadly understood philosophy of the work of the university. There is a need for an improved understanding of its functions and its responsibilities on the part of faculty, students, and alumni as well as on the part of foundations, legislators, government officials, businessmen, and the entire citizenry who provide financial and moral support. Failure of such understanding could well destroy the possibility of effective leadership in shaping the future of American higher education.

It is in this spirit that this annual report has been prepared. It is to be hoped that the activities of the University demonstrate, in and of themselves, a continued dedication to knowledge and learning which is accompanied by and balanced with a contribution to the state and nation through research and service. And it is hoped that this report will provide assurance of the preservation of the essential unity of The University of Vermont in an educational system that has already made a unique contribution to the advancement of man's peaceful existence and his understanding of the world.

ENROLLMENT

This fall, for the first time in its history, the University enrolled more than 4,000 students. This is close to the maximum enrollment which we can accept if we are to continue as a "small" university, and may I affirm here that we have neither desire nor need to become "big." We are a part of a small state committed to quality, not quantity. Our purpose is to provide an excellent education opportunity for all qualified Vermont students. To provide a diversity of programs along with the stimulus and challenge of heterogeneity, we traditionally have opened our doors to a substantial number of students from other states and increasingly from other countries. In the fall of 1963, we enrolled undergraduate students from Australia, Canada, China, Cuba, France, India, the Netherlands, Peru, Sweden, and Yemen; and graduate students from Belgium, Bolivia, Chile, Germany, Great Britain, Korea, Macao, Sierra Leone, Venezuela, and Viet Nam.

In recent years, students from Vermont have represented approximately 50 per cent of the total enrollment. In the years immediately ahead, when the pressures for college admission will be at their peak nationally, it is expected that the percentage of Vermonters enrolled may increase to 60 and possibly 65 per cent of the total.

GRADUATE EDUCATION

Throughout most of its history, The University of Vermont has been primarily an undergraduate institution. The fact that it has been a good one is attested to by the numbers of graduates it has sent on to advanced degrees. Within the past several years, however, our institution has given new and purposeful encouragement to the development of graduate programs. This has its own elements of conflict. Graduate programs generally are more costly than undergraduate programs in an era when the costs of the latter are soaring; they require additional staff when competition for faculty is already keen; and they demand qualifications of teaching and scholarship which are in short supply throughout the nation.

Yet our responsibility is clear. Our nation and our institutions of higher education face a severe shortage of men and women with the advanced education required to meet the demands of advancing technology and the accelerating quest for knowledge. Those institutions which can establish or expand graduate programs have an obligation to assist in meeting this need. The University of Vermont has this capability and we owe it to our faculty, our students, our State, and our nation to realize this potential. In 1962, the University awarded its first Doctor of Philosophy degree; in 1963, two candidates earned this degree, and we expect to strengthen and expand our programs in the years immediately ahead as faculty, laboratory, and library facilities permit.

In addition to fifty-six different programs leading to the Master's degree, our Graduate College now offers doctoral programs in the fields of Biochemistry, Botany, Chemistry, Microbiology, Pharmacology, Physics, Physiology and Biophysics, and Zoology.

GRADUATE COLLEGE ENROLLMENT GROWTH 10 YEAR SUMMARY: 1953-4 to 1962-3

RESEARCH

How much and what type of research should a university undertake? How much subsidization should it expect or accept from the Federal government? Should it enter into contracts to perform industry-oriented research?

What is its responsibility to the State in terms of service? These are basic questions which are difficult to answer in a period of development and change.

University research has been defined as the "scholarly investigation of the unknown -- the secrets of nature -- the bonds that hold molecules or people or universe together -- looking back to the beginning and projecting into the future -- particles and systems -- the concrete and the abstract -- the highest forms of life and the lowest." Research is essential to learning and learning is essential to teaching.

If we are to fulfill our avowed responsibility to create a community of scholars, both old and young, to provide an atmosphere for the discovery as well as for the exchange and transmission of ideas -- we must support a program of research, not concentrated in one area where support is readily available, but in all areas where intellectual curiosity requires the scholar to question what he already knows and to seek further.

As one of our nation's fine small universities, The University of Vermont has been able to build a research program which has now passed the two million-dollar level. In this instance, it has been the quality and diversity of University resources in the Colleges of Medicine, Agriculture, Technology, and Arts and Sciences which has enabled the University to increase its research activity tremendously. And yet, our primary goal has been and continues to be to provide a balanced program. For here, with wise planning, unity may be greatly encouraged. The result is that much research crosses college and department lines. A good example is offered by faculty of the Department of Physics in the College of Arts and Sciences working with Medical College faculty in the Departments of Physiology and Biophysics in a Public Health sponsored project to investigate effects of ultra sound applied locally to individual biological cells; another example -- the work of the Departments of Anatomy and Home Economics in studying the relationship of common dietary fats to blood lipid levels in human subjects.

Possibilities for joint endeavors are endless, adding impetus and impact to the concept of unity. Yet the characteristics of conflict are also present. A strong research program is a stimulus for the faculty of an institution and for all of its students, but it also takes time from teaching when teachers are increasingly needed. It imposes additional administrative burdens when administration is also being faced with new or expanded responsibilities in student loan, insurance, construction financing, and other programs related to carrying out the education, service, and research functions of the modern university.

Research requires laboratory space when facilities are already crowded. It demands equipment that is often expensive and specialized in use. Still, without a strong research program, we can neither hope to attract and keep a good faculty nor to meet the needs of our graduate program.

While it is vital to the health of a university to conduct research, no university can maintain this level of effort from its own resources. Fortunately we have attracted a large amount of support from both Government and private foundations and this support is a compliment to the diversity of our resources. We will continue our efforts to balance our research program and to insist that supporting agencies pay a fair share of overhead expense, for we cannot afford to subsidize research at a cost to our undergraduate educational programs any more than we can afford to neglect the opportunity to advance knowledge and to contribute to the economic health and general well-being of our society.

The scholarly publications of our faculty also give evidence of their activities in advancing knowledge and enriching education at the University, and an accompanying photo, showing more than 60 books authored or edited by members of our faculty, symbolizes that activity.

COSTS

While demand for higher education and its services has accelerated rapidly, so have costs. The University's annual operating budget has virtually doubled; the amount provided by the State of Vermont has increased substantially since the 1955 legislative action which formalized the status of our University as the state university of Vermont; yet the percentage of the total budget provided by the State has not increased substantially.

One major reason is the fact that The University of Vermont -- in partnership with most colleges and universities -- has been forced to raise tuition periodically. We have already announced another increase for the fall of 1964, which will raise resident tuition from $416 to $500 per year, and nonresident from $1200 to $1500. The increase was necessitated by the Legislature's reduction of the University's budget request for the present 1963-65 biennium.

It might be well to say here that the University has enjoyed, particularly since 1955, especially good relations with the Legislature and with the political leadership of the State.

Though the University's budget requests were reduced by the last Legislature, it would be inaccurate to deduce from this that the Legislature or the Governor were unfriendly to the University.

Rather, the 1963 Legislature and future sessions of the Legislature face the perplexing problem of finding more funds for support of elementary and secondary education and for the State Colleges at Castleton, Lyndon, Johnson, and Randolph.

Under these circumstances the efforts of The University of Vermont to continue to maintain standards of excellence take on challenging if not trying dimensions, for it is tempting to suggest that the University mark time or lower its standards temporarily to permit more resources to be devoted to upgrading the entire system of public education within Vermont.

This simply cannot be done, of course, in a time when colleges and universities must find fairly substantial annual increases just to keep pace.

FACULTY

Past reports have dealt, almost annually, with the problem of faculty recruitment for our nation's colleges as they faced the crest of the "tidal wave" of enrollment which 1964 and 1965 will usher in. Our nation simply is not producing enough qualified teachers to staff the nation's 2,000 institutions of higher education. Colleges and universities which have not dedicated themselves to the major postwar challenge of upgrading the position of the teacher must inevitably suffer a gloomy deterioration.

The University of Vermont has made worthy progress in advancing faculty salaries but the progress is neither uncomplicated nor without significant cost in the University's budget planning. The chart below shows something of our problem. The University annually provided salary increases which have kept us within sight of our goal to double faculty salaries in ten years, as recommended by President Eisenhower's 1956 Commission on Education Beyond the High School. Yet, as the chart shows, we have actually lost ground in terms of comparable colleges and universities in the Northeast. Every effort is being made to meet this challenge within this decade.

But salaries alone will not attract and keep a good faculty. Every alumnus or alumna who has ever yearned to live in Vermont knows that the location of our University has a considerable attraction for many. But more than this, the Board of Trustees has given enlightened and encouraging support to programs designed to attract and retain a strong faculty.

In addition to continuing salary increases, the Board has developed a program of related fringe benefits which has substantially improved the position of our staff. 33 faculty members already have benefited from the sabbatical leave program which was inaugurated in October, 1959, and consideration is now being given to a "Junior Sabbatical" program which would make it possible for very promising younger members of the Vermont faculty to be given leave for advanced study.

The past year has seen the University find, within its own ranks, personnel for three important posts. Dr. Clinton D. Cook, formerly chairman of the Department of Chemistry, was selected by a committee of his peers to be the University's first Dean of Faculties, a new position authorized by the Trustees in accordance with a major recommendation of the University-wide self evaluation.

Dr. William H. Macmillan, former chairman of the Department of Pharmacology, was chosen to succeed Dr. C. Ernest Braun as Dean of the Graduate College, when Dean Braun retired last June after 35 years of valuable service to the University.

Dr. Warren O. Essler, chairman of the Department of Electrical Engineering, was named to succeed Edd R. McKee as Dean of the College of Technology when Dean McKee retired last June after nearly 30 years of outstanding service to Vermont.

ALTHOUGH UVM INCREASED FACULTY SALARIES SUBSTANTIALLY IN THE PAST FIVE YEARS

INTEGRATION OF DIVERSITY

If one of the principal assets of our University is the diversity of its resources as one of our nation's fine small universities, some of our most compelling problems also stem from that same diversity of resources.

It is a primary responsibility of administration to create a harmonious and efficient environment for carrying out a balanced program of education, research, and service; and to give direction to planning which is aimed at insuring that a productive balance is maintained.

The essential strength of the University is its essential unity, and it is necessary to understand that such unity must be responsive to the changing demands which must be made upon it by a society which has drawn its strength and greatness from education.

The University of Vermont has had many significant opportunities in the past year to demonstrate that its resources are quality-oriented, that they are promisingly diverse, and that they may be made responsive, through wise planning, to expanded roles in the area of education, service, and research.

The University has undertaken a major role in helping to provide for the future of Vermont. It is assisting the State government in a variety of programs designed to survey the needs and the potential of the State; it has conducted a major educational television study seeking to secure a state-wide ETV network, and it has voluntarily joined forces with the State Board of Education and the Vermont State Colleges Board in an effort to coordinate planning for public education at all levels in Vermont.

The University's total operation continues to be expanded, but only when evidence shows that expansion is both wise and necessary. The development of interrelated programs in undergraduate education with graduate and research programs has been encouraged and studies begun as a result of the self evaluation are being carried forward.

To discuss the particularly vital issues of higher education and to continue the ongoing study and planning of the self evaluation, a series of faculty seminars has been inaugurated. The two sessions already held have considered the establishment of educational priorities and the role of research and scholarly activities.

Few who know the University would pretend it is perfect or dream that it ever will be. But those who know it intimately recognize that it remains dedicated to excellence in its programs and always must be if those of us who are entrusted with its future are to be true to its heritage.

WHY BRITAIN ATTACKS YEMEN?

by Ahmed A. El-Heddad

Some friends and acquaintances asked me the above question after the recent air raids on the city of Harib, inside the Yemeni territory, on Saturday, March 28, '64.

Before answering the question I'd like to make a few introductory remarks to clarify the issue.

Britain invaded the city of Aden in 1839 and then declared it a colony. Soon after that act of violation, British diplomats appeared there sitting with a group of illiterate chieftains of various tribes of that territory and worked out a "settlement" while other British officials distributed all kinds of gifts, horses, camels, money and clothes. This strategy enabled Britain to circumvent certain chieftains in order to put their thumbprints on various papers, the legal contents of which they did not and could not comprehend. Britain maintains that these papers are treaties negotiated by the two "parties" concerned. By this illegal method which was based on coercion and deceit, Britain was able to slice a considerable part of Southern Yemen and call it a British colony and protectorate.

After this historical account I would like to go back to the recent raid incident and attempt to explain the basic reasons for it. It might be useful to indicate here that this is not the first attack of its kind. Britain has exercised this kind of aggression several times in an attempt to terrorize Yemen and compel her to renounce her right to that part of Yemen.

Britain cannot concede the fact that the Yemeni revolution was a decisive factor in the history of the country and particularly of that occupied part of Yemen. Our revolution which overthrew the Ancient Regime and established a progressive republic was a great achievement in our political development.

Britain today is the only country which maintains diplomatic relations with the ousted King. The Royalist embassy in London has no business except to insight and encourage British aggression on the Yemen republic. Britain, in violation of all principles of international law, provides the Royalists with munitions and sends her military officers to train the Royalist followers in a desperate effort to restore the monarchy to Yemen.

I say Britain is not willing to accept the fact that Yemen has freed herself from the autocratic and reactionary regime, that is Yemen is planning to go ahead in working to achieve the goals the revolution of Sept. 26, '62. These goals are 1) to establish a republic based on the democratic principles, 2) to draft a permanent and modern constitution which embodies the principles of democracy, 3) to strengthen and improve the Yemeni army, 4) to develop the natural resources in order to improve the living conditions of the Yemeni people, 5) to work in co-operation with the other Arab countries to achieve Arab unity.

Britain, on the other hand, regards these goals as incompatible with her imperialistic objectives in Southern Yemen and in the Middle East in general. As a matter of fact Britain sees in the Arab unity more danger than in a Communist takeover of the Arab governments.

Tor these reasons I believe that Britain, unless checked by some force, will continue her aggression on Yemen in an attempt to retard the economic and socio-political growth of the Yemen Arab republic.

Apathy A Myth

To the Editor:

After listening to and observing this great University for several years I have lately come to the conclusion that UVM students, contrary to popular myth, are definitely not apathetic. The trouble goes far deeper than any apathy, and is actually far worse in nature. It is not limited to students, but is shared, in large part, by faculty and administrators as well.

First, let us get rid of this nonsense about dictionary definitions; they are irrelevant. If the dictionary defines apathy as a total lack of emotion or feeling, then those who say UVM students are not apathetic on that ground are right, for only a corpse fits that definition. Otherwise we can ignore the dictionary and define apathy as not really caring about matters of importance, the attitude of "So What?" That type of attitude certainly appears to be dominant on campus. I say appears to be dominant; in truth it is only a ruse to hide a deeper trouble.

The trouble here is simply that UVM students are scared silly of anything, especially ideas, that threatens to intrude on their cozy, comfortable little world. They are assailed with tremendous self-doubts, and as a result they fear that they may be unable to cope with any intrusion upon their comfortable beliefs. If, indeed, they turn out to be correct and can not cope with the intrusion they will be assailed with even more doubt, and might be required to think as well. This is just about the worst position a UVMer can think of himself as being in.

However, he will never admit this to himself, for to realize that he does doubt his own worth would be even more painful than the doubt itself, or even than thinking. So, in order to hide the truth, he very carefully fosters the myth of apathy, this being less discomfiting. He can partially free himself of the charge of apathy by ignoring it, which is exactly how he gets rid of any other threat to his comforting delusions, thus giving the appearance of apathy in the first place.

As a matter of survival, however, he can not ignore everything, and so he will fight against whatever he conceives to be the biggest threat to his comfort, rather than just ignore it. Witness the outcry against Rockwell, especially by people who should have known better. Listening to Rockwell would have required an effort to keep his emotions under control and to think rationally about an irrational argument, so the UVMer resisted. Too, he was afraid he might discover that he could not rebut Rockwell's arguments -- or worse, that he might be in sympathy, and therefore frowned upon (the worst of all possible punishments) -- which would only aggravate and reinforce his self-doubts. Do any of you remember STOP and Dean Clifford? Throughout the whole campaign I got the feeling that very few people really cared about paternalism, but that the real reason for the demonstrations was that Dean Clifford's housing rules represented a threat to the comfort and convenience of the men. Then there is the Sceptic. Both Mr. O'Hara and the current Sceptic have been greeted with a great deal of derision and unthinking criticism; much more, certainly, than they deserve for their relatively mild accusations and criticisms. Why? Because students (and those faculty members who were rightly or wrongly offended by those taunts as well as the various Deans who saw controversy as a threat to their peaceful campus), instead of thinking about the Sceptic's arguments, would rather throw about the charge of "criticism-for-the-sake-of-criticizing," thereby eliminating the need to think and dismissing, in their minds, their potential tormentor at the same time. Are the various student organizations timid, reluctant to present, or engage in, any real controversy? Is the master body, S.A., too timid to do anything more than hold Senate meetings (where, very often, less than half the Senators show up) and hand out money (except, of course, for something really worthwhile (and controversial) like Rockwell), or refuse to send even a short telegram to James Meredith (remember?), harmless (to themselves) as such a gesture would have been? Do they refuse to stand up against what they conceive to be unfair or oppressive treatment by the UVM power structure, instead of just talking all the time? Who can expect a group of students, almost all of whom are too timid to want to engage in anything controversial, and frightened green of anything provocative, to be anything but an organization of parliamentarians and financiers?

Add to this all the other organizations who quietly take what is handed them by a Dean or a faculty member (who is often there to see that nothing significant happens) because they are too scared to resist, or even think of resisting, and you can see why this resistance-by-ignoring appears to be apathy. It is a symptom of our society as a whole, so one can see where college students get it from as well as from the Puritan heritage of resistance to all but a narrow range of ideas. This does not mean, however, that it can be forgiven, for it is just as evil when practiced here as it is anywhere else, and perhaps even more so because we should know better. It helps to show why this country's youth is so distrustful of itself. It helps explain why we are doing so badly in world politics. We are simply a college and a nation of self-doubters who are afraid of anything that challenges us, especially intellectually.

I do not believe that we really have any reason to doubt ourselves, but we do it nonetheless. Nor do I believe there is a cure for us unless each individual decides to put up with himself for a while, and with the painful truth about himself, until he comes to realize that he has no reason to doubt himself. (I could be wrong, of course; you know yourself (hopefully), and much better than I do, and maybe you really do have valid reasons for doubting your own worth.)

Just one word of advice in closing. Don't be so scared of anything alien to your cherished and holy comfort, especially ideas. They won't bite you if you don't want them to, even if you don't simply ignore them. And who knows, maybe you'll discover that you aren't as inadequate as you think you are after all. Wouldn't that be a pleasant surprise?

Campus Morality

To the Editor:

I would not take issue with the first two paragraphs of the editorial in the CYNIC of March 20th. However, the reevaluation of the WSGA and the Dean of Women's Office subsequently advocated in the unsigned editorial would result in no more than a reinstatement of the present system. In advocating "...an adaptation of WSGA and the Dean of Women's Office to the existing philosophy and practicality of the present..." The editorialist is willingly or unwittingly blind to the actual function of these two administrative offices. The University of Vermont is a state institution whose enrollment is not, as is that of the Brandon Training School dependant upon Legaland Social Coercion, but almost entirely upon its reputation in high school circles. If, by way of illustration, UVM was considered a place where "no nice girls went", obviously, there would be many fewer serious woman scholars here, and, consequently, many fewer serious male scholars here.

The function of the Dean's Office and the WSGA is not, then, the governing of female undergraduates in a manner consistent with the actual morality of the majority, but the governing of them in a way such as to prevent any spot upon the reputation of the school. When one realizes this unwritten (and perhaps unspoken) function of the Student-Administration Liaison Office, one can see that the importance to the Administration of the "...philosophy and practicality mentally and physically expressed by the women of this university..." is insignificant when compared to the influence of the morality constantly preached and expected, and occasionally practiced by the parents, who, it must be remembered are choosing, or not choosing, UVM for their daughter's education.

The "picayune" and "sneakily insinuating rules about signing out of the dorms are not, as the editorialist would see it, the results of a superficial and unwittingly crooked determination of a standard of morality, but the result of an attempt to maintain a reputation.

They should not be judged as rules legislating morality, but as innate regulations calculated to preserve the name of our university.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

A STORY IS GOING AROUND, HENLEY, THAT YOU CAN'T ADEQUATELY HOUSE YOUR FAMILY ON YOUR PRESENT SALARY.

Can you avoid living in "Jamsville"?

It won't be easy. By 1980 most Americans will live in 40 large metropolitan areas—each with more than a million population. To keep your community from becoming a "Jamsville" will take people with ideas—ideas that can help cities move more traffic swiftly, safely and economically.

Some of the ideas come from the men and women of General Electric who, in effect, form a "Progress Corps."

In major cities, they're helping to develop balanced transportation built around rapid rail-transit systems . . . and they're providing advanced equipment to power and control the trains. They're also developing a TV monitoring system that enables a single engineer to control miles of auto traffic . . . a jet engine that speeds commuters in a hydrofoil ship over the waves . . . and another jet engine to lift travelers over traffic via turbocopter at 150 mph.

Traffic is only one of many problems General Electric people are working on. Their numerous projects, in this country and around the world, demand a variety of talents: engineering, finance, marketing, law, physics and many others.

If you'd like to join the "Progress Corps" after graduation, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified young people begin their careers at General Electric.

Billings Center Costs

To Richard Badger, President, Student Association -

I am pleased to submit to you at this time a statement showing the expenditure of the funds allotted to the Billings Center and administered by me during the past year. The first page shows the summary of the total expenses and the balance on hand when the lights now on order are paid for, of $5,605.52. This amount is at present uncommitted although I have a few requests for small amounts that have been suggested to come from this fund. I have held this amount in order that the groups interested in pursuing the installation of a sound system may be assured of having as much as possible toward such installation which seems to be one of the most needed further acquisitions.

The lights will be installed and this we hope will adequately take care of the lighting in the apse. A major item still to be considered is the lighting in the north lounge and I have withheld ordering this until we see how well the ceiling lights being installed in the apse work out. It may be that similar lights in the north lounge would be the answer to lighting in that area.

Some additional folding conference tables and chairs for the former Student Association office are among those items still to be considered.

If there are any questions regarding this summary, I will be pleased to try and answer them for you. I hope that the furnishing of the building will prove to be satisfactory.

Sincerely yours,

L. S. Rowell
Dean of Administration

Faculties Join To Further Research

The University of Vermont will give new and formal emphasis to close research cooperation between faculty members in the University's medical, engineering and science faculties, it has been announced by President John T. Fey.

Dr. Fey said that the University's College of Technology will give major research emphasis to specialization in engineering problems related to biology and medicine.

He said the program has been worked out by the University's Dean of Faculties, Dr. Clinton D. Cook, in cooperation with Dr. Robert Slator, Dr. Warren Essler, deans of the University's colleges of medicine and technology, and Prof. Howard M. Smith, Jr., coordinator of Research.

Dr. Cook noted that the program is a "formalized and logical outgrowth of numerous research projects in which medical and engineering faculty have worked together."

He said that the quality of the University's resources in engineering and the sciences, and their close campus proximity to the University's College of Medicine and its two major affiliated hospitals "make natural a marriage of engineering and biomedical research."

He said that Dean Slater has called the location of the UVM medical college on the same campus with the College of Technology, the College of Agriculture and Home Economics and with science departments in the College of Arts and Sciences "a principal and promising asset," and one which the Medical College desires to develop.

Dr. Cook said that this view "has enjoyed both practical and philosophical support from the undergraduate divisions involved," and he noted the early interest of the department of biophysics in the Medical College in developing inter-locking research efforts.

It will be the University's engineering departments which will give principal emphasis to development research in the biomedical engineering area, and their recent move into new and centralized facilities makes possible the formalization of their approach at this time, according to Dean Essler. His research with implantation of radio transmitters in animals is typical of the kind of project in which engineering tools and techniques may contribute answers that biologists and physiologists cannot achieve conventionally.

Dr. Cook notes that a determined and continuing effort will be made to attract research support for work in three areas under the new program:

First, engineering work on fundamental biological problems where a background in mathematical and physical science may provide fresh insight. As an example, he cited studies by Dr. Stanley Rush of the department of electrical engineering, investigating electrical characteristics of human tissues, with Dr. Eugene Lepeschkin at the Cardiovascular Unit at the DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital.

Second, the development of effective techniques for gathering and processing data in experimental investigation and for clinical diagnosis. Dr. Cook said the development of an in-line analog computer for measurement of lung functions typified the kind of approach possible. The system was developed at the cardiopulmonary research unit of the Mary Fletcher Hospital by Dr. John Abajian, Jr., Shinozaki. Dr. Abajian has done pioneering work in medical electronics. Dr. Shinozaki holds a master's degree in medical science, with strong training in mathematics.

Finally, the program will also seek to advance research in the design and development of instrumentation, and Dr. Cook cited the work of Dr. Essler in animal transplants, noting that implants of tiny transistorized radio transmitters have been made in arctic animals. The instruments have also been used in a study project at the University's College of Agriculture and Home Economics seeking to study heart and uterine activity in cows.

The emphasis of the College of Technology in the field of biomedical engineering will apply principally to the research activity of the College. There are no plans to reorganize the engineering curriculum, although both Dean Cook and Dean Essler feel that the research specialization will increase the opportunity for both undergraduate and graduate students to participate in research in which emphasis is on bio-medical engineering.

"We expect," says Dean Cook, "that this will have the effect of increasing mutual interest and understanding among students and staff in the engineering, the physical and the life sciences. We think this is practically and philosophically consistent with the effort of the University to continue to develop the fullest and most harmonious cooperation among the diversity of our resources as one of the nation's fine small universities."

"While we didn't design the program for this purpose, the kind of engineering environment this will create would seem to be likely to produce engineering talent ideally suited for Vermont and its potential for the development of instrument companies," he said.

Civil Rights Group Needs Funds Urgently

ATLANTA, Ga. (CPA) — The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) is in dire need of funds to continue and expand its operations, according to Mary King, a member of the SNCC staff here.

Miss King said the Atlanta staff was paid last Friday for the first time in two weeks. "We don't know when we will be paid again," she added.

SNCC is usually kept alive by individual contributions more than by massive membership drives or large foundation grants and support, Miss King told CPS. The reason it needs funds now is that income from personal fund raising of the staff has fallen beneath the expenditures to which SNCC has committed itself.

"We have not decreased our activities," Miss King said, "but we will need money to keep our staff housed and fed. Several of the staff have already received eviction notices or are two to three weeks behind in their rent."

SNCC's fixed expenses include financial support of the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO) in Mississippi to the tune of $4000 per month. SNCC staff member Bob Moses directs the operations of COFO from Jackson, Miss.

SNCC is also committed, financially and staff-wise, to full support of the campaign of Mrs. Amelia Boynton in Alabama for Congress.

"While we have sent more than $80,000 into Mississippi in the time we have been there (since August 1961), and while we do need more money for the 80 SNCC field secretaries working in Mississippi, we also need money for general expenses," Miss King added.

"It has come to the point that the women in the neighborhood (Atlanta's so-called "Buttermilk Bottom") have begun to collect food for us," Miss King concluded.

LANE SERIES CHANGE

The Theodore Bikel concert, on the Red Lane Series, has been cancelled. Mr. Bikel will not appear on the Lane Series this year; he may be re-engaged at some time in the future. Mr. Bikel has gone into rehearsal in the leading role of a Broadway musical, "Cafe Crown," which opens on April 20 at the Beck Theatre.

In place of Mr. Bikel, the Lane Committee has been fortunate in booking two major folk singers: Miriam Makeba, a native African, and Leon Bibb, who has previously sung twice in Burlington, once on the 1961 Lane Summer Series.

The date for the Makeba-Bibb concert is Monday, April 27, at Red Series tickets will be honored.

Cats Return From Southern Trip

Dave Strassburg shown here with Coach "Fuzzy" Evans has been awarded honorable mention on the 1964 Academic All-American basketball team. (Credit: S.P.S.)

UVM Captain Makes Academic All-America

Dave Strassburg, captain of this year's University of Vermont basketball team, has been accorded honorable mention on the 1964 Academic All America basketball team.

The Academic All America basketball team is sponsored annually by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) and is designed to honor athletes both for their prowess on the cage court and in the classroom as well.

To be eligible for consideration, a player must be a regular member of the varsity squad and must be maintaining a B or better average in the classroom.

Strassburg has been a leader in the classroom as well as on the basketball floor. A pre-med major, Dave has been a member of Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and the Boulder Society, men's sophomore, junior and senior honor societies respectively. He also has been a class officer and is currently cadet battalion adjutant in the advanced ROTC program. He was one of 11 New England finalists for Rhodes scholarships.

In basketball, Dave was a starter from his sophomore year on. This past season found him the top scorer with a 16.7 average and for his three years, he scored 915 points for a 13.4 per game average.

Dave is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Strassburg of Essex Junction. His father, also a former Vermont athlete, is a member of the men's physical education department.

Swim, Ski Teams Award Letters

Varsity letters have been awarded to nine members of the first University of Vermont swimming team.

Swimming became the 11th intercollegiate sports at Vermont this winter and the young team, coached by Les Leggett, won two meets while losing four.

Earning letters were: James Nixon, Rochester, N.Y.; David Cheney, Springfield; Arthur Fromer, Great Neck, N.Y.; Peter Fredericks, Essex Junction; John Gloetznor, Norwalk, Conn.; Charles Kendall, Orchard Park, N.Y.; Lynn Bicknell, Middlebury; David Pietsch, Honolulu, Hawaii; Trent Anderson, Hillsdale, N.J.

Gloetznor was elected captain of the 1964-65 team. The junior was the third leading point getter this past year with 45 points in Vermont's six meets. His speciality was the 100-yard free-style.

Vermont defeated Norwich twice while losing to Plattsburgh State, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and McGill.

Nine members of the University of Vermont ski team that took part in the NCAA championship have been awarded varsity letters by the Athletic Council.

Lacking individual standouts, the Green and Gold showed its best over-all team strength in recent years. Coach Jake Stewart's skiers took a fifth place in the Dartmouth Carnival, a fourth in the Middlebury Carnival and a fourth in the Easterns to qualify for the NCAA meet at Dartmouth where Vermont finished eighth.

David Chamberlain of Saxtons River received the manager's award.

Coach Ralph Lapointe gives a few hitting pointers to his team. The Cats open the regular season on April 24 against Mass.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

In a lonely hospital room, eleven hundred miles away from his friends at school, a courageous athlete is facing the sternest test of his life.

While most students were enjoying their Easter vacation at home with their families, this individual, Vermont track captain senior Bill Mulhern, has been lying in traction in a hospital bed with serious injuries, a broken back and neck, suffered in an automobile accident on March 25.

Mulhern, his roommate John Morse, and Vinnie DeCesaris were enroute to Florida for Easter vacation when they suffered a collision with another car at a considerable speed. DeCesaris suffered only cuts and bruises, but Morse lapsed into a coma as a result.

Fortunately Mulhern is not paralyzed and is recovering so well that an operation may not be needed. If possible he would like to be moved to Burlington in the near future, so that he would be able to get tutoring in his courses and take oral finals, which would permit him to graduate as scheduled in June.

Bill, an English major from Cedar Grove, New Jersey, is a brother of Delta Psi Fraternity and has been participating in track and cross country for Vermont since his freshman year.

This season he was undefeated in the 600, indoors, winning the Conference championship. Mulhern also anchored the victorious relay team which was scheduled to participate in the Penn Relays on April 25. Naturally these plans have been cancelled due to the accident, and replacing him for the outdoor season in this event and the quarter mile will be an extremely difficult task.

I am sure that Bill would appreciate hearing from his friends and his fellow students. Any words of encouragement which you may give him will be a great aid in his struggle to regain his health and return to his normal daily routine.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: A respected and well-liked English professor while a student at Vermont was one of the outstanding track stars in the school. However, all of a sudden he retired from competition, grew a beard, wore a beret and began walking around campus reading his poetic inspirations aloud. --- UVM was unable to give Olympic skiers from Vermont, Rebel Ryan and Billy Kidd grants-in-aid, so they are going to Colorado University instead where they have been offered full scholarships. --- Vermont will have six full teams playing football next fall if all the players remain in school. --- All Conference basketball star Roger Twitchell of Massachusetts is the best tennis player in the league having won the championship the last two years. --- Speaking of Conference foe Massachusetts, there is a good possibility that Boston College and Mass. may play each other next year as part of Mass.'s expanding football program. Both schools have an open date late in the season, and if they both have good records will play this contest as their tenth game. --- Senior Jack Lipkins once bowled a 300 perfect game. --- Fullback Richie Reynolds batted .634 in his freshman year, but never went out for the varsity baseball team. --- Former Vermont outfield star Levi Brown is now playing Triple A baseball in the Milwaukee Braves chain. He led his Class A league last year with 91 R.B.I.'s. --- Larry Bender, when a freshman, asked Ralph Lapointe for a baseball scholarship, but due to Lapointe's lack of available funds he was unable to give Bender the financial aid he desired. A little while later to Ralph's disappointment, Bender signed a $20,000 bonus with the St. Louis Cardinals. --- U Conn's basketball coach, Fred Shabel is doing the most amazing recruiting job in this sport ever seen in the Yankee Conference. He's already has, among others, a 6-7 All-Long Island center and a 6-2 All-New York City Catholic guard in the fold for next season.

Tartera Belts Three Homers

While most students were enjoying their Easter vacation at home or sunning themselves in Florida, the University of Vermont baseball team was busily preparing for the regular season by making its annual southern trip.

Playing six games in seven days UVM concluded the trip with a 2-4 overall record.

The Cats opened their campaign by defeating Navy and George Washington on consecutive days by scores of 4-0 and 6-5 respectively.

In the first game, leading Vermont hurler Al Foster threw a seven hit shut-out against last year's co-leaders of the Eastern Collegiate Baseball Conference. After this whitewashing of Navy, Bill Christie in relief of Carl Martin gained the decision over George Washington. The Cats displayed an unusual amount of power in this contest gathering thirteen hits including two home runs, one each by Captain Dick Boutillier and John Tartera.

Unfortunately for the Cats, mounts after their successful opening in the initial two games they dropped the next four games in a row.

In the Hofstra University contest, UVM's third hurler Jim Brennan, a relief pitcher last season, had a little difficulty pacing himself in his first varsity start, but should be accustomed to his new role once the regular season gets underway. Even though the Flying Dutchmen emerged victorious, bright spots for Vermont were Bob Johnson, who went three for five, and Tartera who slammed his second homer of the trip.

The following day the Cats mounted opposed the hard hitting Long Island University Blackbirds who were too much for fourth hurler Hardy Merrill to handle. This second straight 8-4 loss was highlighted by Pete MacDonald who had two hits in four at bats.

After a well needed day of rest on Easter Sunday, Vermont traveled to Trenton, New Jersey, to face last year's Eastern regional finalist Rider College. The pitching of Carl Martin was quite effective, but the two runs he allowed were enough for Rider to win since UVM gathered only three hits, two by Bob Cronin.

Following this 2-0 defeat by Rider, Vermont concluded its southern trip in freezing temperatures at Baker Field against Columbia University. This was quite a tough loss for Al Foster, who hurled a fine game, but had no fielding support as the Cats made too many costly errors. Cronin had two of the team's total of seven hits, and Tartera closed out the trip with his third home run in six games.

Final statistics for the trip revealed that the team, as a whole, batted .238 while the leading hitters were Tartera with .350, Cronin with .348 and Captain Boutillier with .261.

Overall the trip was a success since it allowed the team to practice outside and gain invaluable experience for the regular season. The games and all the records of the southern trip will for the first time not count on the season's records. This was agreed upon by Lapointe and the athletic department before the trip began. Thus these games are now considered exhibition games or the school's spring training.

This weekend the Cats are going to Boston to play MIT in a number of scrimmages. This will permit Vermont to practice outside which is essential if they are going to be properly prepared for the league opener against Massachusetts on April 24.

Returned Volunteers Flooded With Offers

When the first wave of Peace Corps Volunteers was channeled into several developing countries in 1961, service in the Corps was a risky business.

There was no assurance that a two-year stint in the Peace Corps would be anything but a liability to one's career. The organization was operating as a temporary agency under an executive order. Many Congressmen were skeptical about the program, thinking that it might become a haven for wild-eyed extremists and draft-dodgers.

Last year when the first Peace Corps Volunteers returned to the United States, their gamble paid off. Job offers as well as grant and fellowship opportunities poured in. Major industries made it clear that they want returning Peace Corps Volunteers to consider the business world before formulating plans for their life's work.

Reaction to the Peace Corps was almost universally favorable. The administration was pleased, members of Congress pledged full support and educators shouted praise.

John Monro, dean of Harvard College, said that "two years with the Peace Corps today can be as significant as a Rhodes Scholarship."

The President of IBM said it was clear to him "that members of the Peace Corps will be particularly employable when they complete their tours of duty. They will have demonstrated their ability to take on tough jobs under extremely difficult circumstances and to follow them through to their completion. There are never enough people of this kind available in any enterprise."

The response to Peace Corps Volunteers, according to Dr. Robert Calvert, director of the Career Information Service, "has been excellent. Colleges and business firms have been enthusiastic."

Over 40 colleges have earmarked 200 scholarships and fellowships for returning Volunteers. Social welfare agencies, youth organizations and service projects have ex-

Corps Seeks June Grads But Myths Still Persist

"Waiting for the college graduations in June is like waiting for the kick-off in the Rose Bowl Game," according to one Peace Corps official. "When the whistle blows it really breaks loose."

The official, Jules Pagano, Deputy Director of Training for the Peace Corps, explained that the Corps expects to recruit the bulk of the 6,000 Volunteers needed by September from the June graduating classes.

"We have 75 different programs scheduled to begin right after graduation," he said. "The slots for the 3,000 Volunteers returning this year will have to be refilled in addition to the 3,000 new jobs being created. All we have to do is get people to apply."

The biggest problem, according to Pagano, is dispelling some of the myths that have grown up about what the Corps looks for in Volunteers.

"Too many students think that all we need are people who know how to drive tractors, grow rice or prune trees. This is false. Liberal arts graduates, no matter what their major, are constantly needed."

"It's the liberal arts graduates," he said, "who fill the bulk of teaching assignments and who will be needed to help fill the backlog of requests for educational assistance in Latin America and other areas. Many of our community development workers are graduates with liberal arts backgrounds."

"The weird part about it," said Pagano, "is the fantastic opportunities being offered to some of the Volunteers overseas. Many Volunteers with only bachelors' degrees are being assigned as university faculty members. The demand for anybody who can teach the English language is terrific. Where else can anybody with a B.A. get a chance to teach at this level?"

"Naturally most of the Volunteers assigned to teaching jobs work at the secondary level, but even this is unbeatable for giving the feeling that you are actually accomplishing something."

Educational programs will be expanding in Latin America, a region which previously requested mostly community development workers.

Another misconception held by many college students is that an applicant must be proficient in a foreign language.

"Many overseas assignments require only English," according to Pagano. "In some countries, English is the official language and much of our classroom teaching is done in English."

If a foreign language is needed, the Peace Corps will teach it to the Volunteer. "It is pretty ridiculous to expect the normal college graduate to know any Bengali, Arabic or Swahili," Pagano said.

Peace Corps Initiates Senior Year Program

A strong dose of hard work for little pay is being offered to 800 college juniors this summer by the Peace Corps.

The newly-established program will provide six to eight weeks of intensive summer training for college juniors who are planning to join the Corps after graduation. Six individual study areas have been arranged at six American universities for the summer project. The programs will emphasize language training and the development of skills which will be needed in projected overseas Peace Corps projects.

The six plans will provide training for:

- Secondary school teachers for English-speaking Africa
- Secondary school teachers for French-speaking Africa
- Urban community development workers for Spanish-speaking Latin America
- Rural community development workers for Spanish-speaking Latin America
- Teachers of English as a foreign language
- Volunteers who must learn exotic languages not ordinarily taught in American colleges

Each of the six training programs will also include courses in physical education, health education, American studies and Peace Corps orientation.

The students' home colleges will be asked to evaluate the summer program with a view toward granting credit for participants. Juniors selected for the summer program will receive allowances to cover transportation. At the university training site, they will receive room and board, and a modest living allowance.

In the spring of 1965, those who have undertaken—and survived—the summer training will be notified as to which project they will be assigned.

A brief training period and final Peace Corps selection will follow the Volunteer's graduation. A successful applicant can expect to be overseas about 60 days after receiving his diploma.

Applicants for whom there is no room in the summer program will be processed in the regular manner for programs starting after their graduation date.

Mary Jo Weeks, a graduate of Southern Methodist University, has organized her pupils into a Girl Guide unit in North Borneo. She and her husband live at Mile Ten, a remote village under the shoulder of spectacular 13,000 foot Mt. Kinabalu.

The Editors

This special Peace Corps college supplement—distributed by the nation's college newspapers to nearly a million college students—was written and edited for the Peace Corps by four college editors.

The four who spent a week at the Peace Corps Washington headquarters preparing this supplement were:

Tom DeVries, editor emeritus of the Roosevelt Torch (Roosevelt University, Chicago); Everette Dennis, editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald (University of Oregon); Tom Donoghue, editor of the BU News (Boston University); and Dave McNeely, editor of the Daily Texan (University of Texas).

The supplement, a Peace Corps publication, is being distributed to college newspapers in cooperation with the newspapers, the U.S. Student Press Association and the Associated Collegiate Press.

Origins of the Peace Corps Idea First Proposed To Michigan Students

It was just past midnight on a chilly October morning in 1960 when the young Senator from Massachusetts mounted the steps of the Michigan Union in Ann Arbor and asked a group of University of Michigan students if they were willing to go overseas to help their country.

"There was a hush," one observer said, "and the mood of the crowd seemed to change."

That was the first time that John F. Kennedy publicly mentioned the Peace Corps. He did so again in a nationally televised speech a month later at the Cow Palace in San Francisco which brought 30,000 letters of support for the idea.

Where did the idea come from? Since the Peace Corps is now so successful, many people have claimed credit for originating the idea, and many can be given credit.

The first legislation in the area was introduced by Congressman Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.) in January, 1960. Reuss says he got the idea in 1957 during an inspection of the United States foreign aid effort in Cambodia.

Reuss brought the subject of an overseas youth corps into a speech at Cornell University. As he later said, "The response there—and wherever else I have discussed it—was electric."

Reuss's legislation — called the Point Four Youth Program—was sponsored in the Senate by the late Senator Richard Neuberger of Oregon and was added to the Foreign Aid Authorization Act. Eventually $10,000 was allocated to make a study of the plan and the Agency for International Development took the responsibility for getting the study done.

AID had a difficult time finding a group willing to take the contract, but finally Colorado State University's newly founded research center agreed to do it.

On June 15, 1960, after Reuss's proposal and before the money had been allocated for the study, Senator Humphrey proposed that a youth corps be set up. His legislation was the first calling for more than a study of the feasibility of the idea.

The Colorado group had just accepted the contract when Kennedy mentioned the idea at San Francisco. After he was elected, he established the Corps on a pilot basis by an executive order on March 1, 1961. Congress answered his request to set up the Corps on a permanent basis with a bill that President Kennedy signed into law on Sept. 22, 1961.

By the time the group had the report out, the Peace Corps had been going more than six months, and the first Volunteers were overseas.

How did President Kennedy get the idea? According to George Sullivan, who is writing a book on the Peace Corps and spent several months researching the origins, Kennedy's contact with the corps idea came from several sources. Reuss reports that he sent his information to Kennedy in August or September of 1960.

Among those who influenced Kennedy in the development of the Peace Corps program besides Reuss, Neuberger, and Humphrey, were Chester Bowles, Archibald Cox, Walter Reuther, Ted Sorensen, and Lyndon B. Johnson. Johnson had mentioned the idea in campaign talks even before Kennedy. Bill Moyers, who later became deputy director of the Corps, was a member of Johnson's staff at that time.

The early, derisive comments about the "Kiddie Corps" and "Disturbing-the-Peace Corps" have been replaced by such universal backing that the Peace Corps gets 94 to 96 percent of its annual appropriation request, which is much better than the average for other agencies. Peace Corps matters are usually passed by voice vote; a roll call vote has never been necessary.

The success of the Peace Corps has been attributed to two things: the fact that it is apparently a good force for peace in the world, and the leadership of Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver. Everywhere in Washington, Shriver is given credit for being the man who made the Peace Corps work.

Senator Humphrey wrote in 1961, "The effect of Peace Corps work will be invaluable. The citizen of an underdeveloped country may forget a case of American supplies quickly consumed; he may resent a load of American guns turned over to his government. But his memory of working with and sharing the skills of an American citizen will be strong and enduring."

"America's best resource is its people."

Reuss was asked his opinion of the implementing of his idea, and if he had any suggestions for improvements in the Corps.

"I think it's as close to being perfect as anything can be."

Job Offers . . .

pressed strong interest in returning Volunteers.

Such institutions as the University of Chicago, Rutgers, George Williams, New Mexico, Yale, Syracuse, New York University, New York State College and the University of Kansas are offering special grants and fellowships exclusively for returning Volunteers.

In recent testimony to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Dr. Calvert noted that "approximately half of the former Volunteers are enrolled in a college or university. They are attending 117 different schools in all parts of the country. Among this group 99 hold fellowships, assistantships and scholarships with a total value of over $214,000."

About 15 per cent of the Volunteers who have returned took positions in private industry. Such firms as Shell Oil, Hilton Hotels and the Chase-Manhattan Bank enthusiastically sought volunteers.

The federal government has attracted a high percentage of returning Volunteers. The Peace Corps alone has now hired 51 Volunteers for administrative positions in Washington and overseas.

The Volunteer's experience overseas should provide him with an excellent internship for various kinds of federal careers overseas.

A large number of Volunteers are working as teachers. Calvert said that "one study showed only 13 per cent taught before entering the Peace Corps. Now 25 per cent want to make teaching their career."

The Peace Corps placement officer remarked that "one group of Volunteers who served in Nigeria is now making plans to serve migrant workers in this country by developing a mobile school."

Calvert heads the Peace Corps Career Information Service which was established to assist Volunteers returning from overseas with educational and occupational planning. The Service also serves as a focal point to which opportunities for returning Volunteers may be directed by educational institutions and by employers both public and private.

Corps Seeks . . .

The Corps has provided Volunteers with intensive language training in more than 40 foreign tongues.

"The Corps' only real language requirement," said Pagano, "is that the Volunteer have the native intelligence to learn one if his assignment calls for it. We don't consider it any real problem though. We've taught Punjabi to grandmothers heading for India and Pushto to farm boys going to Pakistan."

"Not that we're denying that it's a grind. Having a twelve week deadline to become fluent in one of these unusual tongues can be a little unnerving, but most college grads have done pretty well."

"It's ironical. Our Peace Corps built their brickyard."

No Guarantee, But . . .

Volunteers Unlikely Draft Candidates

"We can't guarantee anything, but . . ." is the usual opening reply when a Peace Corps recruiter is asked the inevitable question about a returned Volunteer's draft status.

Corps officials who have been dealing with the problem for the past three years are the first to admit that the situation is far from being crystal clear. They do have a few of the answers, however.

The act of Congress authorizing the Peace Corps specifies that Volunteers should not be draft exempt. Although some legislators had felt that Peace Corps Volunteers should be released from military obligations, many were of the opinion that such a situation would result in a rash of applicants whose only motivation was avoiding the draft.

It was decided by the Selective Service Board, however, that service in the Peace Corps was definitely "in the national interest" and so a Volunteer could legitimately request a draft deferment. This is currently being done.

When a Volunteer's service in the Corps has ended, his deferment is terminated. Legally he is again eligible for the draft but actually few are called. "We actually only know of six Volunteers who have been drafted after they came home," said one Corps official.

Many of them have been returning to school to do graduate work and they just go back on their student deferment status," he said. "Some of them get married and become deferred that way. Others wind up with government jobs that qualify them for deferment. Frankly," he said, "most draft boards look rather kindly upon returning PCVs. From what we know of the cases of returnees who have been drafted, it appears that they didn't have jobs or anything and were just hanging around."

"Draft boards can be pretty autonomous though and it's tough to say exactly why they might have a returnee drafted. We can advise a returnee about his status and write a letter to his draft board for him, but legally there is no recourse."

"Congress is aware of the situation," he said, "and since the first big crop of returnees are now coming back the situation is bound to move a little more into the spotlight."

Internally, Peace Corps Volunteers and staff members often take opposing views on "the draft exemption question."

"I don't want a draft exemption," said one returned Volunteer who is now working as a staff member in Washington. "Nobody with any sense actually thinks that spending two years in some mosquito infested jungle is easier than service, but I don't want anybody questioning my motives. I think the Volunteer feels a terrific sense of accomplishment which he might not get in the service, but still I don't think he should automatically be exempted."

Others feel differently. "When a guy comes back from a two year Peace Corps assignment he shouldn't have to start worrying about the draft," one Corps official said. "He's certainly made a sacrifice and performed a service for his country. In peacetime situations where there is no big draft call, I think Volunteers ought to be officially exempted."

Ironically, both sides agree that an official draft exemption would have no effect on the caliber of the Volunteer being sent overseas.

"We know what kind of motivation we're looking for in Volunteers and, frankly, anyone who is just trying to beat the draft usually doesn't get through the screening process. Even if he did, he'd probably be washed out in the first few weeks of training."

Cooperative Venture for Stability

Volunteers Encourage Cooperative Effort

The Peace Corps Volunteer is usually pictured with dirt under his fingernails, digging in the mud to help the lowly peon plant his crops. Actually, a large percentage of the Volunteers are involved in initiating a cooperative effort between people in areas where working together was unheard of before.

Community development, as this process is called, takes place in both villages and urban areas. It involves three steps.

First, the Volunteer must get to know the people and be accepted by them. This is described by Volunteers as one of their toughest problems because it is a relatively inactive period and they are unable to see any tangible results from their efforts. They may get to know the people by talking to them in cafes, meeting with them on the street or helping them in small chores.

The second phase consists of organizing the community to hold meetings at which local problems are presented. This stage is also difficult. It may take many sessions before the Volunteer can get an orderly meeting.

In the third and final stage, the Volunteer starts mobilizing the community to work on its defined problem. In many foreign countries, people are articulate and thorough planners, but sometimes become bored by the things they have planned. As one Volunteer said, "Our greatest enemy is the 'elaborate plan.' The idea becomes the substitute for the work and sweat that is really needed. We in the United States are a country of doers—we avoid elaborate planning and speech-making and quickly roll up our sleeves and go to work. Our greatest efforts as Volunteers are spent in getting the sleeves up."

The Volunteer must get the people of the country to do the work themselves. If the Volunteer does it himself, his time is wasted. Many Volunteers arrive in an area, and the villagers ask shortly, "Where are the bulldozers?" The Volunteer then might tell the villager to approach his own government about supplying a bulldozer. The idea is to get the people in the area to help themselves.

One example of a rural community development project was a cooperative vegetable-growing enterprise in Chile. A Volunteer talked 20 families into growing three kinds of vegetables together and marketing them together. By cooperating, they were able to rent a truck to take their harvest to town instead of each having to use his ox-cart. The profits were split among the families with a small amount to the cooperative to keep it going.

Some of the farmers made as much from one harvest as they made in two years working on the large, privately owned farms where they were employed.

Another project by the same Volunteer involved getting a bred sow from CARE and splitting the resulting litter among several families. The female pigs in the litter were bred, thereby producing a litter from each female. Of this third generation, one pig was given to CARE to repay the original loan, and one was given to the cooperative.

This has been criticized in some areas as communistic, but it is actually the highest form of free, private enterprise. Under communism, the state owns and controls everything. Under the cooperative program, the farmer owns his pigs and treats them as his own. The whole cooperative movement developed by the Volunteers could be described as a process of cooperative individualism.

Whether in urban or rural areas, the Volunteer is concerned primarily with getting the people to work together. He tries to develop the organization of the area so that the people will carry on after he goes home.

Although it is too early to tell with certitude, the indications are that the villagers will be capable of dealing with their own problems after two years of work with the Volunteer.

James Welcome, a graduate of the University of Illinois, is a member of a community development project, in Colombia. Here he supervises brick-making, a project the local people have undertaken with the help of the Volunteers.

Peace Corps Stays In Spite of Trouble

From Panama City a worried Peace Corps field representative sent telegrams to the 57 Volunteers in the country asking if they were all right. And from Santa Fe, 150 miles away, came the laconic reply: "I'm fine, thanks. And you?"

The answer is one detail in a story that is beginning to be standard in the Peace Corps: the Volunteer is rarely a victim of the daily diplomatic crisis; he can expect to continue his work virtually unhindered.

In the Panama crisis, six Volunteers were away from their sites when trouble erupted. They were escorted back to their areas by Panamanians and remained at work throughout the crisis—including the break in diplomatic relations.

Anti-American rioting in Are-quipa, Peru, seemed to pose a danger to the Volunteers there until the people with whom they were working staged a counter-demonstration supporting the Peace Corpsmen.

Volunteers were also in Ghana, Tanganyika, Brazil, Cyprus and a dozen other African, Latin American, and Asian countries during strained or violent periods.

In the Dominican Republic, an army-sponsored coup overturned a democratic government and caused the suspension of diplomatic relations, but the Volunteers stayed on. In many villages, Peace Corpsmen say, the Volunteer is the only American anyone has ever seen and the news of a break in diplomatic relations matters to them not at all.

In Indonesia, the story is less dramatic but as impressive. The 30 Volunteers there arrived in two groups six months apart. The first group was met by anti-American demonstrations and the second welcomed by government officials.

The Peace Corps field representative in Indonesia, David Burgess, likes to cite the case of Medan in northern Sumatra. There, the newspapers launched a vicious attack on the Peace Corps and three Volunteer coaches.

While the editorial attacks continued—saying that Volunteers had been ejected from many countries and that they receive military and espionage training—the three coaches led the Medan city basketball team to the national championship and the swimming team set an Indonesian record.

Leveo Sanchez, Peace Corps desk officer for Central America explains why the Volunteer is such a successful diplomat. "He has identified himself with the community," he says. "To the people he is first a member of the community and a friend, and second an American."

He is the handsome American.

Corps Aids In Cities

There are no Peace Corps Volunteers working in Paris but not many of the 7,000 members are living in grass huts either. Many awaken in the morning to the sound of street cars and truck traffic.

"One of the most popular myths about the Peace Corps," said one official, "is that everybody is living in the jungle some place 700 miles from the nearest city."

Nigeria refutes this point, however. Peace Corps projects are concentrated in the six major cities. Volunteers there are teaching in secondary schools and universities.

Ibaden, in the western part of Nigeria, is exotic enough to fit the usual conception of a Peace Corps site—it is the largest all-Negro city in the world. Some 30 Peace Corpsmen are teaching there in secondary schools and universities. Another 25 Volunteers are working in Enugu, a city of 42,000 in eastern Nigeria.

Five hundred miles away in Liberia, 80 of the country's 300 Volunteers are working in one city alone—the capital, Monrovia. Members there are engaged in all levels of teaching; some hold public administration jobs in the government.

On the other side of the Atlantic, in Peru, the Volunteer is again found almost as often in the city as in the "bush." Nearly half of the Volunteers in Peru are in urban areas—60 in Lima alone. Significant numbers of Volunteers are also assigned to cities in Venezuela and Chile.

In Bolivia, there are Peace Corps Volunteers in villages, but a recent project sent Volunteers to supplement university teaching staffs in La Paz, Santa Cruz and several other large towns.

In Turkey, a Volunteer can expect to be sent to anything from a rural hamlet to a town of up to 50,000 population. Living conditions in any case are "fairly nice," according to Volunteers.

In Lagos, Nigeria, things are so good that drinking water need not even be boiled.

Most of the people on city assignments are teaching, but they are not trained teachers. The Peace Corps does not ask that Volunteers have experience—let alone training. Volunteers must have a bachelor's degree with a major or minor in the field which he will teach.

One Peace Corps official admitted that he prefers untrained potential teachers because they were more likely to have a good knowledge of their field and "be able to do other things too—like glaze windows."

In east Africa only one-third of the Volunteer teachers have had experience in schools in the United States.

Peace Corpsmen in secondary schools usually work under local head masters and teach the traditional subjects: language, math, science, and history.

Under the influence of Peace Corps teachers, however, many of the host country schools are now including technical courses in their curriculum. As many of the students will only attend classes for the first few years, Volunteers feel that it is important to teach subjects that they can use immediately in making a living.

Students Assist Campus Liaisons

There are more than 500 student Peace Corps committees working with college liaison officers. Some of the larger Peace Corps committees are at the Universities of California, Kansas, Purdue, Oregon, Minnesota and New Hampshire.

The University of California Peace Corps Committee keeps the office open throughout the day to handle applications from prospective Volunteers.

Bob Gale, director of Peace Corps recruiting, said "The active work being done by the California committee, and the fact that they are able to keep the office open throughout the day is undoubtedly one of the major reasons for the large number of Volunteers that come from California."

Other committees are presenting Peace Corps programs to local clubs, showing Peace Corps films and coordinating visits from Peace Corps personnel to the campus.

Students who are interested in setting up Peace Corps committees on their campus should write Bob Gale, Peace Corps, Washington.

Jerry Page, a graduate of Colorado State University, does recreational work in the slums of Caracas, near the area where the Nixons were attacked in 1958. Here he is shown with one of his boys.

The Volunteer's Motive-To Be A Do'er

No one who knew him at the University of California had any doubts about Bob Stillwell's future. The groundwork seemed pretty well laid out. A degree in political science and a handful of applications to law schools seemed to chart a promising future. But that was a year ago. Today the tall, blond Californian is not reading law at Harvard or Yale—he's teaching English to children in Nepal.

Bob Stillwell sidestepped the security of the so-called affluent society to serve as a Peace Corps Volunteer. Thousands of young, well-educated Americans have been motivated to go half way around the world to exotic lands to teach English, to develop local governmental units or to participate in other Peace Corps projects.

Does the Peace Corps Volunteer have the fervent, missionary zeal? Is he a flag-waving patriot who wants to sell underdeveloped peoples about America's virtues? Bob Stillwell's interest in the Peace Corps characterizes motives which have led thousands of college students to temporarily postpone their careers for voluntary service overseas.

Bob Stillwell is a composite of thousands of young Americans who want to do—to participate rather than remain detached observers. There is no real Bob Stillwell, but there are hundreds of Volunteers with similar backgrounds and desires. He wants to help people in developing countries learn the skills that have made the U.S. a powerful industrial nation.

The Peace Corps can foster better international relations. It is a way to work for peace and to be an intimate part of the progress of a developing nation, the tall Californian maintains.

Bob and his colleagues are not caught up in any desire to Americanize others. His expressions of patriotic feelings show a broad concern for strengthening the United States in its relations with other countries. He'd like to improve the U.S. image abroad.

There is something fresh and genuine about the enthusiasm of other Volunteers who trained with Bob. They ranged from a student of East Asian affairs who is writing his Ph.D. dissertation on the economic development of Nepal to an elderly grandmother who wants her children to live in a peaceful world.

He wants to apply his knowledge of English and inter-personal relations to another culture. He wants to gain inter-cultural experience, general knowledge and personal satisfaction through Peace Corps service.

Bob emphasizes a spirit of co-operation. He has no desire to go overseas to "help people" per se. He says he wants to work with the people, to motivate them to put into practice some of the principles which the Corps is pushing.

Service in the Peace Corps, Bob believes, will be an attractive asset on anyone's credentials. You have to have a certain amount of drive and stamina in order to stand up under the pressures which we face. It is a real experiment in self-knowledge.

Not all of Bob's colleagues share in the scope of his altruistic outlook. Some Volunteers in Nepal and elsewhere are not particularly concerned with spreading democracy or combatting communism, but are more interested in traveling abroad and applying their knowledge. It is also an opportunity, as one agricultural worker put it, "to identify with something bigger than we are ourselves."

Bob has many of the qualities of the most successful kind of Peace Corps Volunteer. He is no wild-eyed idealist, neither is he a resigned pragmatist. He is both self-motivated and socio-motivated. He has a strong belief in the Peace Corps. He wants to build a better world and to change the American image. By the same token, he wants to work with people, to enjoy person-to-person contact, to teach, to apply his specific skills, to gain an inter-cultural experience, to learn and to further his own career.

Like most good Peace Corps Volunteers, Bob is quite specific about what contributions he hopes to make and he is not at all shy about what he expects in return. He sees the Peace Corps as a service organization with a primary function of helping the less fortunate.

There are Bob Stillwells at every college and university in the country. They all have similar motives which allow them to make the transition from four years of books and collegiate social life to aiding people in a developing country.

They are endowed with a certain kind of enthusiasm, vigor and verve. They live by strong personal convictions: seeking to serve others in the service of their country. They have a desire to learn another culture in depth. They want to travel and to combine adventure with education. They want to broaden their perspectives in a mature fashion. They want to challenge their strength and ingenuity. And they were in the chorus that answered President Kennedy.

Other Countries Begin Peace Corps Program

The United States is not the only country with a program to train volunteers for work in the social and economic development of countries in Latin America, Africa, and Asia.

The 13 national volunteer programs now underway vary in the amount of government support they receive, but all are characterized by a goal of putting young people into developing countries.

The Canadian University Service Overseas, for instance, is a privately financed organization which has placed 160 volunteers in some 30 countries. Most are secondary school teachers, youth workers, rural development specialists and medical personnel.

In South America, Argentina has begun training a group of 50 teachers to be placed in neighboring countries through the Organization of American States. The Argentine program is being financed by the government.

The Scandinavian countries are also involved in aiding the less industrialized nations. Denmark's program, called Dansk Ungdoms U-Landsarbejde, sent its first group of eight volunteers to Tanganyika last September and other volunteers are in training. Norway and Sweden are also in the early stages of planning and training programs.

By the end of 1962, international volunteer programs were considered important enough so that 43 nations gathered in Puerto Rico to discuss the future of the idea. They formed the International Peace Corps Secretariat to increase the supply of volunteer assistance available to the developing countries.

The Secretariat has offices in Washington.

While the International Secretariat concentrates on developing foreign service programs, it also assists developing countries to form their own national youth organizations for domestic work. Through these efforts El Salvador now has 60 volunteers working beside U.S. Peace Corps members in that country.

Other countries with volunteer programs underway include Australia, Belgium, France, Germany, Netherlands, New Zealand, and Great Britain.

New Call For Secretaries

The Peace Corps needs 100 experienced secretaries to serve as Volunteers in overseas Peace Corps offices as chief secretaries and office managers.

A director and subordinate staff members are assigned to each of the countries in which Volunteers are working. They are responsible for the activities of all Volunteer programs. In their assignments, the secretaries will have contact with high-ranking host government and U.S. officials.

In June, a special training program for the secretaries will begin at the Peace Corps headquarters in Washington. They will receive administrative training and training in language and area studies.

Candidates should submit a Peace Corps Volunteer Questionnaire to Secretary Recruitment, Peace Corps, Washington, D. C. 20525.

Sam Fisk, a graduate of Columbia University, teaches at the Commercial School in Addis Ababa. As an extra-curricular project, Sam and other PCV's have organized a recreation program for the children of lepers. Here Sam plays with one of his young acquaintances.

'Over My Dead Body'

Pacifying Parents Poses Recruiting Problem

"Over my dead body!"

That was the reaction of one parent when his daughter expressed a desire to join the Peace Corps.

Dispelling fears and misconceptions of parents such as this is providing a new communications challenge for the Peace Corps staff.

The Peace Corps staff is giving increased attention to the need to keep parents informed of the Corps' operations and objectives as well as providing them with an awareness of the specific conditions which their sons and daughters can expect in the field once they become Volunteers.

"Objections from parents causes some Volunteers considerable psychological strain and in some cases may even keep potentially good Volunteers out of the Corps," according to Dr. Joseph Colmen, Peace Corps research director.

"Many parents," Colmen says, "are not aware that the Peace Corps can be a positive factor in a person's total development. In their minds, two years in the field is an unnecessary interruption of the student's career."

Colmen believes that there is an element of anxiety about the unknown—some parents don't quite understand why their son or daughter would want to spend two years of his or her life in a developing country. This kind of isolation provides an unhealthy environment for both physical and mental health, some parents believe.

Many parents' initial responses to the Peace Corps spring from a reservoir of misinformation which inevitably includes the mud hut image. As one Peace Corps official put it, "the parent sees his young daughter in some remote village, fighting exotic tropical diseases, isolated from civilization, hungry, tired and scared."

A special message to parents has been prepared to dispel many of the misconceptions about the Corps. The message makes it clear:

- That Volunteers are not placed in work sites where the health hazards are so great that real dangers are posed;

- That living conditions are modest, but adequate, and not often sub-standard slum-like conditions;

- That Volunteers are never more than a few hours from telecommunications services;

- That Volunteers are not placed in any country where a record of instability poses an apparent danger, and that if the need should arise an emergency evacuation is available in every country;

- That the Corps offers long range intellectual development advantages and is an asset, not a liability, to an individual's career

The concern for parents' awareness in no way undermines recognition of the Volunteer as a mature and independent individual. The message to parents is given to each potential Volunteer after he makes the initial application. It is up to the student whether he wants to give it to his parents—he may just use it to answer questions and clear up doubts in his parents' minds.

Men like Dr. Colmen and his colleagues at the Peace Corps believe that by providing full information to parents a new spirit of co-operation and understanding will result among those involved both directly and indirectly in the Peace Corps.

PRODUCTION HONORS BARD'S BIRTHDAY

Students, faculty members, and townspeople will join forces to present JOHN BULL'S OTHER PLAYWRIGHT, a play featuring Bernard Shaw's criticism of Shakespeare, at the Arena Theatre on Shakespeare's birthday, Thursday, April 23, and on the following night, April 24, at 8:30 o'clock.

The play, which has been prepared by professor Betty Bandel of the English department to include both Shaw's critical writings about Shakespeare and also the Shavian one-act plays in which Shakespeare figures, will be a feature of the University's two-week celebration of the Shakespeare Quadricentennial. It will be directed by Edward J. Feidner, director of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival and of the University's drama program.

The event will be open to the public without charge, but those wishing to attend are asked to make reservations at the drama department, Extension 262.

Heading the cast is a well known Burlington actor, G.B. Rood, who plays G.B. Shaw. He was in the professional theatre for several years, playing with the Provincetown Playhouse and in summer stock. Since his return to Burlington, where he now heads the G.B. Rood, Inc., office equipment company, he has been prominent in dramatics here, having played many key roles with the Burlington Community Theatre.

Opposite Rood will be a student actor, Ernest Cabrera of Burlington, who will play the talkative Bust of Shakespeare. Cabrera, a junior student who plans to teach after he graduates, has had major roles in Shaw's MAJOR BARBARA (Andrew Undershaft) and Shakespeare's MACBETH (Macduff) on campus this year.

Also featured will be Ralph W. Preston, instructor of mathematics, who will play the "Ph.D. Candidatus."

A highlight of the evening will be the inclusion of Shaw's puppet play, "Shakes vs. Shav," for which Justine Barker, wife of Dr. S. B. Barker of the Medical faculty, has created four puppets -- "Shakes," "Shav," Rob Roy, and Macbeth. Mrs. Barker is an accomplished puppeteer and maker of marionettes, and several of her puppets have appeared in recent school productions in the Burlington area.

Yale Russian Chorus Performs Here Sunday

The UVM faculty and student body will have a rare opportunity to see a free concert sponsored by SCOPE and presented by the YALE RUSSIAN CHORUS at 7:00 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday, April 19th.

The YALE RUSSIAN CHORUS, formed in 1954, composed of some thirty undergraduate, graduate students and faculty, share a common interest in understanding and in interpreting Russian music and culture.

In 1962, the YALE RUSSIAN CHORUS returned to Russia for the fourth time since 1958 and also undertook their first European Concert tour. They sang in such cities as Cambridge, Paris, Geneva, Toulon, Zurich, West Berlin, Stockholm and in Lille, France they won the first prize for male choruses at the second Festival de Chant Choral.

The response to this group has been overwhelming. Averill Harriman, Assistant Secretary of State, said: "The Yale Russian Chorus is one of the most imaginative and penetrating programs of cultural exchange that has ever been undertaken by the government or by private initiative...The chorus is a wonderful expression of America."

In Paris the chorus was able

to "call forth a delirious enthusiasm." In Cambridge "they captivated their audience with an excellent and brilliant display." In Boston the audience applauded them with the explosiveness of Yale Alumni at the Harvard game and of music lovers at a concert of more than usual importance." (Boston Herald)

Here is a group that has put American idealism into a form that is wholly appreciated by all. Their concert will be drawn from their repertoire of Russian liturgical, classical and folk music.

In order to ensure yourself a seat, pick up a free ticket in Billings at the Student Association office, the 13th through the 18th. Tickets for other than UVM students and faculty will be 75¢. Tickets also available at the door, if response permits.

Physics Department Receives Unrestricted Research Grant

Research being carried out by the University of Vermont physics department on the interaction of gas molecules with solids has won an unrestricted research grant of $3,000 from the Gulf Research and Development Company.

The research is being carried out by Dr. Albert D. Crowell with Dr. Edward L. Foley and Dr. John E. Krizan and several graduate students. Dr. Crowell is chairman of the physics department.

The UVM research on interaction of gas molecules with solids falls into two categories:

first, an experimental study of the interaction of carbon monoxide with metal surfaces, using radio tracer, photoelectric and thin film techniques; second, a theoretical investigation of the forces between simple nonpolar molecules and graphitic surfaces of the forces between such molecules when they are "in the neighborhood of a graphitic surface."

Dr. Crowell said that the changes produced in the electronic structure of gas molecules when they interact with solids may be drastic, and he said understanding of the processes involved has "particular relevance" for development of fuels and for understanding and control of corrosion.

"Modern technology has new problems in this area, due to the rarified ionized gases encountered in the stratosphere and ionosphere," he said.

The University also has received support for this research from the Research Corporation, the National Science Foundation, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Army Research Office.

UVM Hosts Annual Program

The University of Vermont in cross section, from admissions procedures to lifetime career opportunities, will be examined by 1,000 Vermont high school students when they visit the campus on the 12th annual High School Day, on April 18.

The program, always ample, is being expanded this year along lines first developed for high school juniors in 1963 -- the practice of giving the visitors more than one chance at a scheduled specialty.

"This practice was very successful in 1963," says Director of Admissions Harold C. Collins. "It helps to avoid schedule conflicts and also, if the student finds the first offering of the program of his choice is overcrowded, he can come back for the second period."

The day will begin with registration from 9:15 to 10 a.m. in Waterman. After a general session in Ira Allen Chapel, the visitors will follow varied schedules, but the program will bring them all together again at 4 p.m. in the Chapel for a band concert.

General topics to be covered during the day are: college admission, agriculture, education, engineering, science and mathematics, liberal arts, music, sociology, commerce and economics, health and home economics.

Sample college classes will be conducted in art, chemistry, classics, English, mathematics, philosophy, political science, psychology, speech, and zoology.

Demonstrations and exhibits include the Army ROTC, UVM's IBM 1620 computer, the language laboratory, the mathematics exhibit and mathematics prize examination winners.

Open house is planned by the Bailey Library, Billings Center, Chemistry Laboratory, the DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital, Fleming Museum, the Home Economics Building, Patrick Gymnasium, Physics Laboratory, and the Religious Centers.

Lunch will be served from 11:15 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. for boys in Waterman and Marsh Dining Halls and for girls in Simpson and Waterman Dining Halls.

Members of the classes of 1965-1966 wishing to make application for nomination to Student Court elections should have their applications in the Student Court box at Billings Center by Monday, April 20, 1964. The application should contain a list of campus activities and a statement of the reasons for desiring the position. Elections will be held the last week in April.

Three UVM Coeds Compete For Miss Vermont Title

Three UVM coeds will vie for the title of Miss Vermont in the annual contest sponsored by the Vermont Sunday News Fund. The reigning Miss Vermont, Melissa Hetzel, is an alumnus of UVM and Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi Sorority is Jean Ann Conner, a twenty-year-old, hazel-eyed, blonde from Rutland. A junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, Jean is enrolled in Liberal Arts with plans to become a speech correctionist.

At UVM, Jean is on the staff of the Ariel, and is music chairman for her sorority. She has sung in the Vermont Varieties each of her three years in school, and the past two years has sung in the Club Carnival.

Jean will sing for her talent performance in the April pageant.

Under sponsorship of Delta Delta Delta Sorority, is eighteen-year-old Susan Elizabeth Fick. The brown-haired and brown-eyed freshman will do a dramatic reading in the talent competition of the Pageant. Should she win the $1000 scholarship award, Susan will use it to continue her education at UVM.

Susan has been active in drama in her high school at Wyckoff, New Jersey. In her senior year she won a drama award and played in "Our Town" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." She has also studied piano and ballet.

A senior, Leah Corkran Owens will compete under the sponsorship of Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. "Lee" will dance in the pageant's talent division.

Active in UVM's University Players, the blue-eyed blonde has had roles in "Rashomon," "The Crucible," and the children's play of the group's spring tour. Last summer Lee was granted a scholarship to work with the Champlain Shakespeare Festival and worked on several phases of the festival's production.

Lee has worked as a model, swimming instructor, and weekend ski instructor at Bromley Ski School. She hopes to teach and if she is winner of the Miss Vermont $1000 scholarship, will use it for educational training at an evening school.

School's Out.

Right now, graduation seems way off in the wild blue yonder. But it's not too early to start planning. In the future, you'll look back on decisions you make today with satisfaction... or regret.

What can an Air Force career mean to you in tangible gain? The opportunity to take on executive responsibilities you might otherwise wait years to attain. And a head-start into one of a wide range of possible careers in the exciting Aerospace Age.

As an Air Force officer, for example, you may be flying a supersonic jet...helping to keep America's guard up. Or you may be in an Air Force laboratory, working to solve an intricate scientific or technological problem.

Doing jobs like these, you can hold your head high. In addition to being essential to your country, they're the beginnings of a profession of dignity and purpose.

Bonneau Stars In "Tartuffe"

As part of the Fine Arts Festival, the University Players will present Moliere's comedy, Tartuffe on May 7, 8, 9, in the UVM Arena Theatre.

Tartuffe is considered by many authorities to be Moliere's best play because of the characterization of Tartuffe, a ridiculous as well as a sinister force. He beats his breast, wears out his knees in church, and sanctifies to the right and left with every breath. It is to such a holy man that Orgon turns over first his soul, then his house and fortune, and finally even his daughter, who is in love with another. Although the grip on Orgon is strong, Tartuffe meets his match in Orgon's young second wife, her step-daughter, and a servant, all of which are too intelligent and spirited to be taken in. How they expose Tartuffe, how they lead him on to a declaration of love to Orgon's wife while the husband is sleeping and how they strip him of his mask produces as amusing a series of complications as any that Moliere concocted.

Playing the title role, will be Michael Bonneau, who will be remembered for his roles in Major Barbara and Macbeth. Ann Abbott, who will be remembered as Major Barbara, will play Dorine. Pamela Robertson is playing Elmire.

Others in the cast are: Judie Ruskay, John Martin, Burt Tepfer, Donna Kristiansen, Errol Selsby, Don Coscina, Robert Collier, Esther Sundell, and Robin Schore.

Special rates for groups of ten or more are being offered at $1.00 per ticket. Regular admission is $1.50 each. Reservations may be made at B-5 East Hall or by calling Ext. 262.

PLACEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

On Wednesday, April 29th, a representative from Pan American World Airways System will be in the Placement Office to interview candidates for positions of Air Stewardess. Any Senior women wishing to interview with Pan American should make arrangements to sign-up in the Placement Office, 36 Waterman, as soon as possible.

U S NAVY

DISCUSSION

On Tuesday, April 28, a Navy Officer-Information Team will be on campus at the Student Book Store from 10:00 a.m., until 4:00 p.m., to discuss the opportunities available to college graduates as officers in the U.S. Navy.

The Information Team of Lieutenant R. H. Foberg, USN and Lieutenant Junior Grade R. W. Bieber, USNR, will have information available on the various officer programs for both men and women.

Students interested in fulfilling their military obligation as a Naval Officer are invited to discuss with the Information Team the many officer programs available in the U.S. Navy.

Summer Festival Includes Shakespearian Comedy

When the Champlain Shakespeare Festival players present "As You Like It" on warm evenings in August and early September of this Shakespearean Quadracentennial year, a 65-year cycle will be completed.

It is believed that "As You Like It" was first given at the University of Vermont in June, 1899, by an all-girl cast, outdoors, and at night. The performance resulted in "enthusiastic expressions of praise and pleasure."

This summer, young men and women of the Festival Company will present this play, along with "Romeo and Juliet," and "King John" in the University's Arena Theatre in the Fleming Museum, directed by Edward J. Feldner.

The players of 1964 and of 1899 have one thing in common -- an "arena," because, in 1899, "As You Like It" was given on the lawn of Grassmount, then and now a residence for women at the University.

Among Vermont alumnae today are three who played their parts on this grassy stage -- Miss E. Mabel Brownell of Burlington, as the banished duke; Miss Mary T. Brownell of Essex Junction in the important role of the servant; Adam, and Anna Shepard Lutman of Philadelphia as Sylvius, a shepherd.

The part of the heroine, Rosalind, was played by the late Mary Paddock Hazen, for many years a resident of Burlington.

The production, under the direction of the University's English department and the late Prof. Frederick Tupper, was not without its pains. The rather scanty coed enrollment was combed for talent, most of it totally inexperienced. A feeling of discouragement before the event had to be transformed into high resolve. The reason for having an all girl cast is lost in the mazes of history.

On the asset side were determination, the inspiration of the young, scholarly, and witty Professor Tupper, the ideal setting, the large oval Grassmount lawn then surrounded by a high green hedge. The imposing colonial doorway of the old Van Ness mansion gracefully doubled as a ducal palace.

The 400 spectators were treated to moonlight and starlight when the stage lights were turned out to indicate changes of scene. An enormous elm tree "wreathed from base to branches by a vine of large, starry white blossoms" was the tree on which the lover, Orlando, placed his verses to Rosalind.

Rehearsals, without doubt, began long before the final ten-day count down when Leon-Vincent of New York, a "veteran stage manager" took over the production. Costumes came from Boston.

During the play the lilting songs were sung without accompaniment. The production was called "a new phase of enjoyment." The young actresses, who had seen few, if any, plays, let alone act in them, were free of "staginess." The audience was delighted.

Encouraged by success, University of Vermont students presented other Shakespearean plays: "Much Ado About Nothing" in June, 1900; "Twelfth Night" in June, 1902; "The Tempest" in July, 1904; "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in June, 1905; a repeat of "As You Like It" in June, 1907, and other dramas of this great age.

CYNIC Salutes ...

Linda Wellman

by Janet Hadda

All women students on campus have heard the name Linda Wellman, but the majority of them probably know very little about the quiet girl who is the outgoing president of the Women's Student Government Association.

Linda is a native of Brattleboro, is a senior in the Elementary Education curriculum, with a concentration in speech correction. She will marry in June, and will make her home in Indiana, where she intends to teach.

As president of WSGA, Linda considered the biggest part of her job as being the head of the WSGA Council. It was her job to see that the group really functioned as a council, and that all decisions made were properly communicated to all women students. She also stresses the importance of being informed of the wishes of the women students.

The most worthwhile part of being in a position such as hers, Linda believes, is the learning experience involved. One learns what procedures must be followed in order to achieve action in a school this size, and one also meets and works with members of the faculty, as well as the deans. Says Linda, "You begin to feel as if you're part of the school - You get more working knowledge of the other side." Before she became president, Linda served as Freshman Representative, Scholarship Chairman, House President, and President of the Inter-dorm Council.

Linda is also a member of Mortarboard and a sister in Pi Beta Phi sorority. She says she will miss most, after graduation, living with a group of girls.

Linda Wellman

Linda, who, has always enjoyed getting to know groups of girls, says it is a pleasant change from all her brothers at home.

When asked about the new WSGA Council, Linda replied that she believes it to be a very capable group which will be able to do much for the Women students at UVM.

UVM Band Annual Spring Tour

UVM's Concert Band took its Annual Spring Tour from April 9, Thursday, to April 12, Sunday. On Thursday afternoon, the band members were guests of two Vermont High Schools: The Peoples Academy in Morrisville and Spaulding High School in Barre. That evening, the musicians traveled to Rumford, Maine, to present another concert. Friday was spent in Rumford and Farmington, Maine. Concluding the tour was a combined concert on Saturday evening given by the UVM Band and Colby College Band in Waterville, Maine.

Two soloists added flavor to the band's performances: Alan Irwin played the tuba and Robert Levis, the xylophone. A trombone trio consisting of Gregory Moxhay, William Duke, and John Vibber, played "slide kicks".

The main selections presented were: Arban's "Carnival of Venice," Lavallo's "Big Brass Band," Madden's "Cakewalk," Raccini's "Fantastic Toy Shop," and Bergeim's "Old Vienna."

UVM Catalogue Features Art

The University of Vermont, mixing Yankee thrift with ingenuity, has made its 1964 Summer Session catalogue a showplace for the arts, reproducing in photographs more than 30 pieces from the collection of the University's Fleming Museum.

The catalogue also reprints three poems, carrying over a tradition begun three years ago by Summer Session Director Raymond V. Phillips.

Dr. Phillips notes that the poems, first used as fillers, augmented a variety of photos used in the catalogue to illustrate the charms of the Vermont campus in the summer. "We had so many favorable comments on the use of the poems, that we decided to extend the idea a bit, taking advantage of the fact that we have a fine small museum on our campus."

Reproducing pieces of art from the museum didn't require any extra pages in the catalogue, he said. "We simply left out photos showing our campus and other scenic photos of the lake and mountains. Reaction thus far has been warmly enthusiastic."

The 80-page catalogue features a four color cover of an oil painting by Francis Colburn, chairman and professor of art and resident artist at Vermont.

A poem, "Return to Summer," by Gladys LaPlamme Colburn, wife of Prof. Colburn, is featured on the reverse cover. Mrs. Colburn until recently edited the poetry magazine, "Patterns."

The inside pages of the catalogue reproduce in black and white 35 works from the Fleming Museum collections, including oils, woodcuts, water colors, etchings, pottery, sculpture and wood carvings.

WHO SAID

Foreign Study is for Language Majors
Only.

Of course, it's for them, too.

But it's also for undergrads in history, political science, international relations, economics, psychology, philosophy and some other fields.

We know. Over half the students in our university centers in Europe aren't language majors. They're pursuing studies in their own fields, and giving them a fresh, European dimension—without interrupting their college careers.

Foreign study may suit you, too. (It isn't for everyone.) This is the time of life when the experience of Europe can mean most. It will mean most if you use it to deepen and extend your formal studies.

You might look into it—and learn about our programs, including a new one opening next fall at the University of Madrid.

Our centers don't offer mere "civilization" courses. They aren't cozy little "ghettos" for Americans. Institute programs immerse you in a great European university as deeply as your abilities allow. (We supplement and guide your studies, as necessary, to make sure they satisfy U. S. requirements.)

What Me Cynical?

Re: Mr. Rockwell

Shortly after it became apparent that George Lincoln Rockwell would not appear at UVM we wrote to him asking that he write an article especially for the CYNIC outlining some of his views. We received a speedy reply stating that he would be glad to oblige and that his article would be on its way to us within a "few days". This correspondence went on over a month ago. On page five today (quite a "few days" since early March) appears the article Mr. Rockwell prepared for us.

When the Student Association Cultural Activities Committee (SCOPE) first decided that they were going to sponsor an appearance of the American Nazi Party Commander here at UVM they first had to obtain the permission of the Administration. This they were granted, "reluctantly," through the Dean of Administration, Dean Rowell. The only condition was that SA would foot the bill for providing an adequate security force for Rockwell. It was on this question of whether SA should allocate $600 for Rockwell's protection that the SA Senate voted when they decided to veto his visit.

The initial reaction of UVM students to the possibility of the Nazi leader's appearance was general approval and enthusiasm. It came as a shock to many students when the SA Senate took the action it did. Those students who disapproved of this action apparently forgot the true aims of SCOPE and the University, and some went as far as to mistake this denial of the privilege to speak here as a denial of Rockwell's freedom of speech.

It is possible that a few students were not acquainted with the views of G. Lincoln Rockwell (we think his CYNIC article should help to inform these few), but certainly the vast majority were and are aware of the particular brand of hatred he espouses. Were they going to hear Rockwell or see him? If they were interested in seeing this political freak, then certainly a side show would have been a more appropriate place to view him than a university and Ringling Bros. would have been a more appropriate sponsor than a "cultural activities committee."

Furthermore, if we already knew what Rockwell stood for, why bring him to Burlington to stir up the few ever-present anti-Semites and other assorted perverts and perhaps move a couple (perhaps only one....perhaps none) to action? Do we have the right to precipitate such a development in a community (in which many of us are merely transients) if we are motivated purely by our desire to be entertained. A clear indication that some educational purpose would be fulfilled is called for. We unequivocally believe that no educational purpose would have been served if Rockwell had spoken at UVM. We know what Rockwell stands for. We know his techniques. We already have SA Movies and Winooski for our entertainment.

Mass Meeting

The Object of the mass WSGA meeting at Simpson Hall Wednesday night was "a last resort to bring to attention the situation concerning pink cards." Despite repeated violations in pink card regulations and the women students' candid queries left unanswered and referred to the Dean of Women, it seems that the WSGA, though trying valiantly, has failed to recognize the real situation at hand. WSGA Council asserts its concerns as being strictly "legal", that is, as pertaining to the letter of the law in the Handbook. Ultimate decisions of legality, however, become prejudgments of morality by the Dean of Women's Office.

Case in point: a UVM co-ed was denied permission by her Head Resident and the Dean of Women to sign out for Kake Walk weekend at a male student's home last year. The reason given was that the University had to protect its reputation. Was this not a presupposition, a direct innuendo that the girl's intentions were dishonorable? At the mass meeting WSGA Council's principal objection was the increasing incidence of pink card falsification, or "lying", as it was termed. Yet, here was a girl who was being completely honest - she even had permission from her parents. Is it not just as false, just as wrong, to prejudge one's moral character as it is to "lie" on a pink card? Rules are made for the majority, and, of course, observed by the majority; it is a closed mind which chooses to judge the majority as if it were the tiny, "immoral" minority.

Further, a statement was made that the University and the Dean of Women are responsible for the maintenance of the University's reputation and for the protection of the women themselves. We have never heard of any instance of damage to the University's reputation; when any incident occurred, doubtless it was kept "hush, hush" anyway. As for protecting the women students, granted there should be available knowledge as to a girl's whereabouts. But, beyond that, what are they being protected from besides asserting their honor, and experiencing life itself?

Letters To The Editor

Injustice Done

To the Editor:

In the past I have read "Rappa's Roundup" in the CYNIC with interest and have generally enjoyed what I read. I was deeply hurt, however, when I read "Rappa's Roundup" in an earlier March edition in which reference was made to a very dear friend of mine who is also a good friend of the University and of the Athletic Department.

The "Sports Editor" referred to this man as the "fireman" from New Jersey who only entices athletes from his immediate bailiwick to attend the University of Vermont. It may not have been his intention to demean and belittle but objective reading of the column in question clearly leaves the impression that he has demeaned. This man, the "fireman" (so called) at great personal expense and use of time and effort has persuaded top flight athletes to attend the University of Vermont many of whom were actively sought by Ivy League Colleges and the big independent colleges. He did this out of his great love for the University and his loyalty as an alumnus. He wanted to see UVM athletic teams hold their own in Yankee Conference Competition rather than be the doormat for other teams in The Yankee Conference.

Many members of the present UVM football and basketball teams are athletes that he persuaded against great odds to attend The University of Vermont. Were it not for these athletes the past football and basketball teams would have been dismal flops.

The Sports Editor refers to the re-entry this fall of a basketball player by the name of Hillas and he, the sports editor, is very pleased with this. He does not know that the so-called "fireman" persuaded this athlete to enter Vermont as a freshman two years ago and that now after a year's persuasion convinced this boy to re-enter Vermont this Fall. Many colleges dangled athletic scholarships before this athlete's eyes; but the "fireman" persuaded him to enter Vermont.

The Sports Editor is unaware of the time and effort and great personal expense that this alumnus has expended to the end of improving the caliber of the UVM athletic teams.

Write!!!

To the Editor:

For anyone who does really care about the outcome of the civil rights bill now in the Senate, a reminder seems to be in order. There is no effective way to publish a form letter, nor to circulate a petition -- what kind of personal concern does that demonstrate to the Senators receiving them?

On this issue of simultaneous national and personal importance, every member of this university should have a stand. Do not neglect to write the Senators from Vermont and those from your own state, reminding them of the importance of the civil rights bill H.R. 7152 in the human rights struggle.

If, after considering the small effort this is and the lives that have been dedicated and given for this movement, you choose by inaction not to write, please let me know. I'll remember never to entrust my life or liberty to you.

THE SCEPTIC

"The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring - Tra-La"
- W.S. Gilbert

Dear Sceptic,

I am a college student from the greenish part of New England. Well, to get down to brass tacks, my boyfriend and I (we're almost engaged) decided to go all the way. I mean we're liberal and all that and we didn't have any of those silly inhibitions that the rest of the world has. Well, a funny thing happened, you see I'm pregnant. It's funny because we took all the precautions, its not like we were Catholics or anything. Well anyway, now that I've discovered that I'm going to have at least twins, what do I do? I haven't seen my boyfriend in two weeks. He's very liberal too and doesn't believe in all this social responsibility garbage. Well anyway, I'm scared... what should I do, I'm in the second month. (Is ab...tion safe?

Yours maternally,
A. Landers

Every week, we of the Sceptic advisal staff get one or less letters like the above and must again rack our brains to think of solutions for those foolish young people who take that highly dangerous "big step." Unfortunately, we don't know what to say to Miss Landers though we have a lot of advice for her boyfriend which he took two weeks ago. But aside from these immediate solutions, what does a young girl do who finds herself suddenly getting abnormally fat? Let's look into the problem of sophisticated collegiate pregnancy and explore the opportunities open to a growing girl.

Marriage - This category used to be very popular among lascivious lovers, but today, what boy in his right mind would marry that slut? I mean if a girl engages in sexual intercourse, she is obviously not a fit mother or wife but a lewd whore. Obviously Miss Landers should not expect marriage from the boy she no doubt seduced, but must take the consequences she deserves for the terrible act she encouraged.

How can we have any understanding for a girl who compromises herself so, and then asks for help, claiming also to be an atheistic liberal. Well from the bottom of our hearts, we can summon up a bit of compassion for the poor girl. Though she deserves the stocks and a Scarlet letter on her back, she is a fellow human being and deserves some sympathy. Miss Landers must realize that the holy bans of marriage are out of the question for her, so, our next recommendation would be Abortion. This is a little known field, known only to those who know it, though those who don't, think they do, but what they know is no good. Our advisory board of thirty seven ministers from all walks of life, after studying Dr. Spock very carefully, gives our seal of semi-secure service to Joey the abortionist over at the university infirmary. Joey has lost only three patients after forty-five years of bowing and scraping. We have slight reservations however, in suggesting the use of abortion, because many people don't like to go to the doctor. Doctors poke around, ask embarrassing questions and have really no place in such personal situations. If Miss Landers was squeamish about calling in a physician, we would suggest either self-abortion (horseback riding and other unspeakables) or retirement to a Young Lady's Home.

Homes for Unwed mothers. This classification has been found to be a most satisfactory alternative to just living a normal embarrassed gestation cycle. Our only objection is that the young lady in question, must pay to have her child conceived in love. The advantages, however, far outweigh the monetary unattractiveness. The young mother can spend each day among many other ladies in various stages of their delicate conditions. Think of the magnificent constant talk of baby clothes, adoption, infanticide, revenge... Everyone gets very chummy-chummy over their mummy-tummy. And Miss Landers will love to join the happy post-grad club of Harlots Anonymous. H.A. sponsors a yearly ball for those ruined women who have not yet gotten married. The club also has connections with the prostitution arm of the Mafia providing a chance for a secure job to young ladies in need. Post-grads may also work in black market babies, obscene book censorship or for the Mother part of God, Mother and the American Home.

We have suggested three lovely possibilities for today's unwed mother but remember, it's still not a very easy thing to live down a child, especially one given away. Remember what happened with Oedipus! We of the Sceptic staff, are most concerned with the morality of the whole situation and are really shocked at the amount of illicit sex going on at the university. At a recent convention, our agent in the Freshmen dorms reported that in all the discussion that he had eavesdropped on, there was never ever a virgin partaking in the conversation. Over in the girls dorms, our agent has discovered that not one female has been deflowered. This discrepancy would suggest that maybe the men were lying. Somebody's lying, because as spring comes, we will trip over them lying in the grass all over campus. The sheep fold has been locked which means the girls will have to bear the full brunt of the season when the sap begins to flow.

So, the Sceptic wishes to wish a happy spring to all of you and remember our first words on what can happen if the sap, this spring, flows uncontrollably. Spring should be a time of rejuvenation - not over-population; a time of feeling good to be alive, not to wish you were dead. Men, be careful! If you can't be careful, have some getaway money. Women! Remember always that boys will be boys.

Last week we made a mistake in our ascribing suicide to Thomas Finletter. The mad Secretary of Defense was James Forrestal who took his own life during the Truman administration. We regret this oversight.

Questions for the week:

1. Does "social probation" mean that spirits are banned from South Willard Street? Is he kidding?
2. Why is the power struggle going on inside the Billings Center Governing Board.
3. Where does one go on campus to become ill?
4. What is the status of the "Let's Bring Back Dean Clifford (the ex-Dean of Men) Movement?"

WORLD RACE WAR

By G. Lincoln Rockwell

It has become increasingly apparent that the Jew-Communist leaders in New York and Moscow have gotten something started which is getting away from them.

They have been USING anti-White-racism to supply them with a black, brown, yellow and red "army" to destroy the authority and hegemony of the White Race, which built Western civilization. In my book, This Time the World, readers will recall that I stated that Communism is a "mutiny of the inferiors of the earth against the White Race, led by the Jews".

Now the inferior dark mutineers have become conscious of their own power in their endless numbers and masses -- AND ARE ENGAGED IN A GROWING MUTINY AGAINST THE JEWS WHO HAVE BEEN USING THEM!

From a theoretical Marxist-Leninist ECONOMIC uprising, Communism has gotten away from its Jewish masters all over the earth and is degenerating into a global RACIAL uprising by the dark races against the White master race.

In British Guiana, mongrel Communist leader, Cheddi Jagan, married to Communist Jewess, Janet Rosenberg of Chicago, is experiencing RACE RIOTS and is forced to call in British White Tommies all the way from England.

In the United States, Martin Luther Coon and other similar Jew-Communist spawned Negro "leaders" are becoming drunk with their own power as they organize larger and more terrifying herds of rampaging blacks to terrorize our cities, and are breaking away from the brilliant and ruthless calculations of their Jew-Communist former masters. Jew Spingarn, president of the NAACP, is now moaning and groaning about Martin Luther Coon's mass marches. But the Jews can no longer stop this damned foolishness by the Negro leaders who do not realize that their power heretofore has come solely from brilliant Jew leadership and who now imagine they are black Moseses, ordained by a Negro "God" to seize the blessings of White civilization on behalf of their cannibal brothers.

In Cuba, Castro is leading a Marxist revolution and seizure of power which was conceived, aided and abetted by our own State Department, the New York Times, and the New York Jew Communist planners. But Mr. Castro, swept up in a roaring tidal wave of mongrel Cuban "nationalism" -- thoroughly mixed up with hatred of WHITE "Yankee imperialism" -- is not half so much a Marxist as a leader of Latin American MONGRELISM against the pure White men who civilized and built Latin America.

In Africa, the so-called "emerging nations" of Negroes -- "nations" like Ghana are in the Soviet orbit, but are increasingly BLACK NATIONALISTS out to fight and destroy WHITE LEADER SHIP as much as, if not more than, to produce a Communist world tyranny for the benefit of Jews whom they begin to see as "White men", rather than as "fellow Marxists".

In China, precisely the same thing is happening.

Placed in positions of indescribable power over millions and millions of human beings by the world conspiracy of Jew Communists, yellow leaders, like Mao Tse Tung, are either ignorant of, or have forgotten, the source of their own power -- the Jew-Communist, Zionist world machine. The Jews have taught them to hate and to fight "White imperialists" -- and the yellow men, blinded by their own vast power over endless millions of Chinamen, are turning on the Jew-Communist commissars and other White Communists the same hatred against White men first planned by the scheming Jews.

WHAT IS HAPPENING, NOT ONLY IN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA, BUT ALL OVER THE WORLD, IS THAT THE DARK RACES OF THE EARTH ARE UNITING IN A BLOODY MUTINY AGAINST THE WHITE RACE WHICH IS OUTNUMBERED BY MORE THAN 7 TO 1.

We have been predicting precisely this development since the first day of our operation, 5-1/2 years ago. Now, more than ever, I am convinced that world history is in the throes of a GLOBAL RACE WAR.

Thus, White Americans on our side who continue to think in terms of "states' rights", economics, "free enterprise", taxation, the Constitution or other side issues, will soon enough find themselves standing on pretty pink clouds in the sky and they will fall with a crash onto the bloody field of RACE WAR -- down where we are already.

It will take perhaps as much as 30 years before this developing race war becomes open and general all over the earth with every member of the White race and all the dark races thoroughly aware that they ARE at war with each other. Or it may take only a year or two more for the most hideous conflict in world history to become open and general.

That it will not come, is the wishful and empty hope of chicken-brained fat-heads and "liberals".

For more than 100 years, since 1848, when the Jew, Karl Marx, declared the "war" in his Communist Manifesto, the Jews have been brilliantly and ceaselessly agitating the swine of the world to overthrow the farmer. Their idea has been to get the massed swine to do the overthrowing for them and get rid of the "farmer" so THEY COULD TAKE OVER.

As is usual with the plans of the cunning, paranoid Jews, their carefully laid plans have BACKFIRED.

Their dark army of mutineers is now turning on its Jewish masters -- along with the rest of the White Race.

The Whites themselves, in spite of the most monstrous Jewish propaganda campaign in newspapers, magazines, books, movies and TV in the whole history of humanity, are becoming increasingly aware of the Jewish role in Communism and race-mixing and are turning on the Jews too. All the pleas for "brotherhood", "tolerance", "humanitarianism", etc., cannot hide the ugly yids who always show up in NAACP and CORE picket lines, at Negro conventions, marches and other assaults on the White Race.

The Negroes themselves, as we have pointed out in many a Rockwell Report, are more and more aware of the fact that the "White people" who are oppressing and exploiting them the most, are JEWISH landlords, usurers, easy-payment salesmen, Zionist whisky dealers, dope peddlers, white slayers, etc.

The Jews are thus finding themselves in a horrible "no-man's-land" as the lines are formed up for the nightmare race war, which THEY INSTIGATED.

They whine and groan that both the blacks and Whites are resorting to "scape-goatism" to explain how come they are increasingly hated by both sides in a conflict they precipitated. But this will not save them from the wrath of the millions of human beings, both dark and White, they have set at each other's throats.

As the lines of the up-coming race war become more clearly drawn and rigid between the White man and the dark mutineers, the wandering Jew, who fomented it all, will find himself ruthlessly hunted down by BOTH sides.

There is no stopping the global, racial conflict ahead. The dark inferiors of the earth are drunk with a sense of their "growing power" and have irretrievably committed themselves to all-out attack upon our White Race everywhere on earth.

It will come.

Let it come.

In the long run, there is no appeal from the verdict of nature and history. Either the White Man will become conscious that he is (or at least has been) the master race -- and with that realization will go an all-out dedication to the rest of the philosophy of the National Socialism of Adolf Hitler -- or the White Man will perish. And with him will perish White Western civilization.

In terms of the billions of years of natural history, it is only a few historical moments until the White Man will receive the acid test in the crucible of world history. We will soon know whether the wonders of Western civilization will continue -- or whether this relatively tiny ball of mud in space will once again whirl empty of human life through the endless reaches of outer space.

THE PUBLIC RELATIONS UNIVERSITY

by Kim Boriskin

Item - A letter appears in the Free Press criticizing UVM for extravagant buildings. It is followed by a letter from someone connected with the school who agrees with the first letter. The writer of the second letter is called before a UVM professor who is friendly with President Fey and is on a few important committees. He tells the writer that the letter shouldn't have been written because letters like that from inside the organization make it harder to get money from the state. (He also suggests, incidentally, that the writer clear all his letters with the prof's wife, who works for the Free Press.) In other words, anything that smells of dissension within the ranks is "bad press."

Item - An editorial appears in the CYNIC criticizing WSGA and the Dean of Women's office for being out of step, both with each other and with the moral attitudes and realities of the times. Next issue a letter appears saying that WSGA and Dean Harris are interested in preserving UVM's image as it appears to high school students and their parents. Getting good students, he says in effect, depends on the purity and virtue (or better, the apparent purity and virtue) of UVM's womanhood. Again, reform of WSGA would be "bad press," as it were.

Item - After three of the five hour exams in M.S. 12 the class average is 86. The ROTC department is told to get it down about ten points, we are informed, because a class average that doesn't fit into the neat little bell curve implies, not that there is an exceptionally smart class, but that the material or exams are too easy, and it doesn't look good to be out of step with the rest of the school. Still more "bad press."

Item - In a statement to the Free Press regarding the possibility of a visit to UVM by George Lincoln Rockwell, Dean Rowell, instead of saying only that a campus organization wanted him here and that he didn't see fit to interfere, goes on with what amounts to a public apology and justification for being a bit liberal. Again, too much concern for UVM's popular image.

Subversive Sceptic

To the Editor:

The "Sceptic" of March 20 was insulting, derogatory, and beneath the dignity of the "CYNIC." The "Sceptic" is sinking to low depths of humor and slander in an attempt to gain interest. The use of the red butcher of Cuba was disgusting. The comparison of Castro with the U.S. army is an example. How can you compare a tyrant who keeps millions in oppression and threatens the United States with those who would give their lives so that we may maintain "Freedom of the Press."

I personally took an affront when you compared that dictator to religion. In atheistic Cuba, religion is suppressed while in the United States we have free by all. The allusion to "four gods" can be rebuked by any religious leader. The pledge to our country says "One nation, under God." In the freedom of the United States we have God, Castro has substituted Marx for God.

That column has obviously outlived any usefulness it ever had. The editor should fulfill his responsibility to publish a good and loyal publication and remove the Sceptic.

Item - UVM receives an invitation to appear on College Bowl. It is turned down. One of the reasons given is that such exposure is liable to give us the reputation of being "the college with Kake Walk," and nothing more than that. (The unspoken assumption here is that UVM will not do well enough to be remembered for anything else.) Once more, too much concern for our image.

The one thing all those episodes have in common is that they all show more concern for public relations than they do for anything else, especially for the truth. Four of the five items concern "official" attitudes, and in the other a student is more concerned with the image UVM's women present to high schools than he is with the scholastic record we present. Perhaps one more thing all five episodes share is that they are all a bit sickening.

I respectfully submit that when a decision is made about anything concerning UVM -- or any university, for that matter -- the last consideration should be the public relations aspect, and in no case should the image we present be the deciding factor. If what we do does not look good to the public it is too bad; we can not cater to what the public likes to hear without compromising ourselves a little bit. If something we say or do does not sit well with the "audience" we can try to explain ourselves to it -- to educate it -- but we have no need to justify ourselves to anybody.

If the University of Vermont is to be a good university we must stop this nonsense about how things appear to someone else and get down to the business at hand, which is educating people. Furthermore, I suggest that if we are going to continue worrying about what the public will think, instead of whether what we are doing is right, then we should drop the name of the University of Vermont and incorporate ourselves as Collegiate Public Relations of Vermont, for that is what we are coming to. Also, if so many people are as concerned about public relations as they appear to be, why doesn't our budget provide for some money to hire and advertising agency? Perhaps that is the ideal solution anyway. While the ad agency is busy worrying about how best to improve UVM's image we can stop fooling around and get down to the business of running a university.

Black the cycle dances drunk on wind, beneath branches, dark furies, lethalties;

blunt and exquisite they burst in his hands,
his exhaust, a scabrous ballet of delininations, and he kills dogs who ride his fenders, hits them with a chair he keeps under the seat, or steers them stunned into oncoming cars.

Civil Rights Plea Voiced

JACKSON, Miss. (CPS) -- The student body President of Tougaloo College has voiced a plea to students throughout the country to assist Tougaloo in its defense against the reprisal directed at the school from the Mississippi State Legislature.

Three Mississippi legislators are sponsoring a motion to repeal the charter of Tougaloo College. According to their reasoning, the college has served as a constant source of students concerned with the civil rights movement in the South.

Student Body President Stephen Rutledge appealed to the American student community, through the United States National Student Association (USNSA), to be fully aware of the situation and to aid the College in its defense.

"The attempt has been made to intimidate, suppress and pressure a college community which is one of the only institutionalized threats to the status quo of racism, segregation, economic and social deprivation," Rutledge said.

USNSA called on its member-schools to pass student government resolutions condemning the bill and urging its defeat and/or the governors veto. USNSA also suggested that a petition be circulated among the students, faculty, and administration with the same content as the student government resolution.

Frank Millsbaugh, Director of USNSA's Community Issues Desk, said, "Mr. Rutledge's letter to me concluded with the pledge that 'Tougaloo stands ready and willing to continue its efforts to provide a good higher education and to keep the ray of hope and inspiration shining in Mississippi.' The American student community, by its actions, can be instrumental in the keeping of this pledge."

Cynic Vignettes

After pulling out some dusty volumes of the CYNIC, we noticed that much of what our forerunners at UVM had to say still had relevance. Other pieces just tickled our 1960's fancy. Here are a few we liked in particular.

APATHY - 1901

In the past, a great deal has been said about "college spirit" in the University of Vermont. The CYNIC from time to time has used it as a text, it has been referred to in college meetings, and the impression has often been conveyed that undergraduates and alumni of this college are lacking in this important characteristic.

Is this true? We believe not. We believe that the misapprehension arises from a wrong interpretation of the phrase, "college spirit," and from a failure to understand the character of the typical Vermont college man.

With many, "college spirit" is synonymous with enthusiasm. Must we then conclude that love for one's college home is inseparable from bon-fires and college yells, and that loyalty to Alma Mater is to be measured by noise? Is not the spirit of a college rather that which gives it its individuality, a subtle influence that works upon those who work within its doors, and sends them out with certain marks upon their characters that time may strive in vain to wholly erase?

It may be that Vermont students are less enthusiastic than those of some institutions; if so, may it not be because they have a truer sense of proportion - a clearer recognition of what it is worthwhile to be enthusiastic about? It may be that Vermont alumni say less about college loyalty than do some others; might it not be because they think more? Ask a Vermont graduate why he did not go to any of the other New England universities, and the chances are that he will not argue the question with you, but somehow you will fail to move him to any expressions of regret.

Vermont is not lacking in that individuality which constitutes the real college spirit; and if that spirit was to be summed up in a word, we should say that our University stood for self-reliance. Men who hold the making of their own lives; who are forced by circumstances to take life seriously, who weigh matters carefully, may well lack somewhat in enthusiasm; but there are qualities that lie deeper and rest on a firmer basis than enthusiasm. What the results of this spirit have been, the records of our alumni show; they have not - most of them - been men who have shone with a dazzling brilliancy, but they have been men who have held positions far above the average, men by whom many an undertaking in the realms of statesmanship, business, science, and abstract thought, has been carefully and steadily carried to success.

NEW GYM - 1901

In this issue we place before the alumni and friends of the University, a cut of the new gymnasium, accompanied with an article by President Buckham. The gymnasium is no longer chimerical; enough money has been subscribed to warrant beginning the structure, and work has, in fact, already been begun on the foundation. But although the success of the enterprise is assured, we would not have friends of the University infer that there is no further need of money to carry the work to its ultimate success. The response to the appeal for funds has been generous, but not as generous as might be desired.

The plans provide for a building ample in dimensions and complete in equipment. The desirability of such a building at the University of Vermont, needs no argument. What we wish to call attention to, is the opportunity of those who have the interest of the University at heart, to do it a good turn. Every dollar subscribed will add to the success of the project. In behalf of the students of the University who have so long waited for the hoped for gymnasium, we appeal to the alumni to respond to this call to show their loyalty to their Alma Mater.

PROGRESS - 1885

The question of the feasibility of substituting the electric light for gas is yet far from settlement. The competition will be finally decided by the consideration of the relative expense, regard being also given to the quality of the light afforded. Some experiments which have recently been made for increasing the illuminating power of gas have been attended by satisfactory results. The most effectual devices are those by which a more perfect combustion is secured.

By concentrating a number of burners so arranged as to play upon each other, and by improved arrangements for regulating and directing the draught of air upon them, it has been made clearer and more fixed. Burners constructed with this object in view have been tried in London, and found to give a considerable increase of light at a less increase of expense. Other devices, produced by French inventors, promise well,

The inventors of electric lights seek either to produce single lights to supplement the defective illumination given by ordinary lights, or to divide the light, so as to make it take the place of gas entirely.

The apparatus devised by Messrs. Regnier and Werdele-mann and Edison, for the latter purpose, given an agreeable light; but that is only a part of the problem. The difficulty of securing an economical production and supply of electricity remains, and that equally whether we seek to distribute it so that each consumer shall use only what he needs, or to store it in reservoirs of force. Experiments which have been made upon the amount of light produced per horse power of motive force give greatly varying results.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"IN ALL MY YEARS IN THE BIOLOGY DEPARTMENT, ONLY ONE OTHER TIME DID A STUDENT EVER HAVE AN ACCUMULATED GRADE AVERAGE AS LOW AS YOURS."

FESTIVAL PLANS TAKE FINAL SHAPE

A seldom-performed play and an extended season will be highlights of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival when it bows open its sixth season on the campus of the University of Vermont this summer.

The Festival, which has in each of its first five seasons offered three plays in continuous repertory nightly during August, will this season carry its repertory over into the first five days of September.

Once again directing the Festival Company of young professionals will be Edward J. Feldner, director of drama at Vermont.

He has elected to carry on the Festival tradition of offering a comedy, history and tragedy, and this year has chosen to perform "As You Like It," opening August 1; "Romeo and Juliet," opening August 2; and the infrequently-performed "King John," which will open August 3.

Feldner said that interest in Shakespeare in this 400th anniversary year of the bard's birth has resulted in several bookings by groups which plan to make the Champlain Shakespeare Festival in Vermont's Queen City the middle leg of visits to the Shakespeare Festivals at Stratford, Connecticut and Ontario.

The Festival at Burlington, which won a regional award of the New England Theatre Conference in its first year, plays in the 250-seat Arena Theatre of the Fleming Museum on the campus of Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning.

Location in the Museum gives Festival patrons an intermission option of strolling on the Green where minstrels entertain with Elizabethan ballads, or browsing in the marble galleries of the Museum's upper levels.

The Festival has played to over 27,000 in its first five seasons, and last summer played to over 90 per cent capacity.

The Theodore Bikel concert, on the Red Lane Series, has been cancelled. Mr. Bikel will not appear on the Lane Series this year; he may be re-engaged at some time in the future. Mr. Bikel has gone into rehearsal in the leading role of a Broadway musical.

In place of Mr. Bikel, the Lane Committee has been fortunate in booking two major folk singers: Miriam Makeba, a native African, and Leon Bibb, who has previously sung twice in Burlington, once on the 1961 Lane Summer Series.

UVM STARTS SPRING DRILLS

TENNIS TEAM OPENS APRIL 24

The UVM varsity tennis team under Coach Fred Marston, opens its season on April 24, at home against Union College.

The squad as a whole should be stronger than last year's team which did quite well in the dual matches, but placed last in the Yankee Conference Championships.

One of the reasons for the squad's improvement is the fact that they have been practicing against transfer student, John Adler from the University of Florida, who is the best in this area. In addition to playing with Adler, who is ineligible this year, the team is also more experienced than last year's squad, since it has five returning lettermen. These lettermen, along with sophomore Laddie Cook will play the six singles positions.

Junior Rich Holden is slated to open the season at first singles with Laddie Cook, captain Steve Ratner, junior Jim Freedman, senior Harry Dickerson and junior Bill Newman scheduled to play the other five positions in that order.

In addition to these six starting singles players, the rest of the squad of twelve men includes Dan Behrand, Mike Fox, Al Secunda, Bill Mason, Byrne Callahan, and Barry Bloom.

The schedule is the same as last year's, with the team participating in both the Yankee Conference and New England Championships. Home matches are played at the Centennial Field courts or inside, in the Gutterston Field House, if the weather is inclement.

April 29	New Hampshire	1:30 A
May 2	Rhode Island	1:30 H
4	Clarkson	4:00 H
6	Middlebury	3:00 A
8-9	Yankee Conference

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

By Richard Rappaport

Last week the sports editor of the Burlington Free Press, Bish Bishop, criticized my column concerning the Vermont Scholarship program.

Whether the purpose of Bishop's column "Sports Scene" was to formally declare the policy of the UVM athletic department in relation to this issue or to attempt to get me to re-evaluate my position, or both, it proved to be quite ineffective.

Mr. Bishop actually brought up "a dead issue" in his column since my column from which the quote was taken is "only" a month old. However, this quick reply to the "Rappa's Roundup" in question, using old news, is not surprising for this winner of the annual award for the "best sports writer" in the state of Vermont.

Bish's story contained a mass of unnecessary details and could have been written in half the space. This is of minor importance, however, when compared to the considerable amount of name calling and mud slinging resorted to by the Free Press sports editor towards an individual whom he has never met. I, for one, will not lower myself to his level, and thus refuse to join in his type of "journalistic art."

Actually it was quite surprising to observe this sudden interest in both Vermont sports and the CYNIC by the author of "Sports Scene," fondly known as the "Great Predictor" during the recent football season. Even more amazing was the fact that he defended UVM sports instead of relentlessly attacking his alma mater as he has done repeatedly in the past.

In his column, Mr. Bishop made the following incorrect statement:

"----- as is the case with every college, any school's scouts are any one of the thousands of alumni and friends who have an interest in their alma mater and who may lead a capable person, either athletically or scholastically to Vermont, whether they think it's for the benefit of the school athletically or scholastically."

First of all, in relating this statement to Vermont the truth is that there aren't any, let alone thousands of interested alumni or friends who have enough interest in UVM to bother to aid this school especially in steering athletes to Vermont. Unfortunately, most students once they graduate from Vermont, have little or no concern for the college they left behind.

Also, other schools, especially athletic powerhouses such as the Big Ten schools, do not and cannot rely on alumni to find them ballplayers if they hope to produce winning teams. They have paid individuals either full time or part time, who do the scouting for them. The alumni may aid the school's athletic program financially by furnishing scholarships, but are definitely not the college's chief means of scouting prospective candidates.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Captain Dick Boutillier walloped a grand slam homer against M.I.T. in the Cats 7-2 scrimmage victory last Friday.... Conference foe U Conn. was ranked 30th in the country in the latest issue of the College Baseball Newspaper.... Rhode Island has recruited a 6-5, 225 pound All-American Prep basketball star from New York City.... Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans was an All-Big Ten halfback while attending Illinois.... Many of this year's outstanding freshmen hockey players came to UVM this year, relying on the promise of scholarships which they never received.... Major Leaguer Walt Dropo is the only ballplayer ever to hit the ball over the left field stands into the football field on a fly at Centennial Field.... Ken Burton turned down offers from both the Canadian and American Football Leagues because he wants to attend graduate school.... Boston Red Sox's fine relief pitcher Jack Lamabe pitched Vermont into the NCAA regionals while attending UVM.... Tennis Coach Fred Marston was the Vermont state champ for many years.... Former UVM basketball player Fred Willis had a scholarship to Duke before he eventually came to Vermont.... Last year's hurling ace Dick Cassini concluded his first minor league season last summer in the Milwaukee Braves chain playing with a Class "A" team. "Dutch" finished the campaign with a 4-4 overall record.

Football began sailing through the air at the University of Vermont this week with the start of spring drills.

Coach Bob Clifford expected to have more than 60 candidates answer the call last Tuesday (April 14) for the 15 days of spring practice that will conclude with the annual spring scrimmage game on May 2.

One of the key objectives of the period will be an attempt to find a replacement for senior halfback Ken Burton who shattered every rushing mark at Vermont during his three years. The Middlebury standout, who made just about every "All" team in New England last fall, departed holding the one game, one season and career rushing records.

Burton is one of six key seniors who must be replaced. Others are ends Al Brown, Pete Weiss and Paul Toussaint and guards Bill Davidson and Ray Bello.

Freshmen due to get long looks during the spring will be tackle Tom Burns of Bellows Falls, and Bob Florczak of Fairfield, Conn.; QB Bill Leete of Williamstown, Mass.; fullback Leo Pfeiffer of Port Washington, N.Y.; and Jack Schweberger of Weehawken, N.J., and guard Joe Soldano of West New York, N.J.

ALL CONFERENCE TEAM

Toby Kimball of Connecticut and Steve Chubin of Rhode Island are unanimous choices for the all-Yankee Conference basketball team, it was announced today. The selections were made by the coaches at the six New England state universities.

For both Kimball and Chubin, whose teams battled to an unprecedented tie for the title, it was a repeat performance as both were named to the team last season. Both are juniors.

Joining them on the first club are Pete Bernard, scrappy back court man from Massachusetts; Jim Rich of New Hampshire, the conference scoring champion, and Dennis McGovern from Rhode Island, who was runnerup to Rich in the scoring race.

The second team comprises Frank Nightingale of Rhode Island, John Gillette of Maine, Nick Mandravelis of New Hampshire, Dom Perno of Connecticut and Charlie O'Rourke and Rodger Twitchell of Massachusetts. Twitchell, an all-conference performer for two years, was bothered by injuries most of the season and had to be content with a tie with teammate O'Rourke for the fifth spot.

Honorable mention went to Dave Strassburg and Layne Higgs of Vermont, Ron Rothstein of Rhode Island and Dave Svendsen of Maine.

MULHERN AT FLETCHER

Bill Mulhern, University of Vermont track captain who suffered a broken back and a broken neck in an automobile accident during the spring vacation, has been transferred to a Georgia hospital to Mary Fletcher Hospital.

The Cedar Grove, N.J. senior will be under the care of Dr. Charles Rust, orthopedic surgeon.

Mulhern was flown into Burlington, Sunday evening. While at Mary Fletcher, he hopes to continue with his studies on a limited basis.

Makeba And Bibb Highlight Series

Leon Bibb

Miriam Makeba

On Monday, April 27, holders of Red Lane Series tickets will be treated to an evening of songs styled by Miriam Makeba and Leon Bibb.

Singing has always been a part of Miss Makeba's life. Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, her parents were members of the Swazi and Xosa tribes. She attended the Kilmerton Training Institute, singing many benefits for the institute and singing with small groups that went from town to town singing the songs of the people.

In 1958, Miss Makeba had a role as a featured singer in the controversial film that was to shape her destiny. "Come Back Africa," filmed in secrecy, proved to be a turning point in Miriam's career. She was invited by the Italian government to represent the movie at the Venice Film Festival, where it won the Film Critic's Award. Impressed by Miriam's performance in "Come Back Africa," Steve Allen introduced her to American audiences in November, 1959.

In 1960 Miss Makeba was a featured singer on Harry Belafonte's concert tours, and in 1961 she toured college campuses with the Chad Mitchell Trio.

Miss Makeba offers a richly varied program; although a large part of her programs are devoted to African songs of many dialects, included in her repertoire are Hebrew, Brazilian, Jewish, Spanish, Indonesian, and English melodies. Her versatility and vibrant personality have gained a large following of avid fans for this gifted artist.

Leon Bibb has well earned the right to be considered among the finest singers in America today. As a singer and interpreter of songs, he encompasses a broad spectrum ranging from folk songs to ballads to Broadway Show tunes.

Leon Bibb was born in Louisville, Kentucky. After two years at Louisville Municipal College, during which time he was featured soloist with the college glee club, he was inducted into the army. After his tour of duty, he went to New York to study voice and work towards a theatrical career. He has appeared in "Annie Get Your Gun," "Finian's Rainbow," and "Lost in the Stars." He appeared in a straight acting role in "Flight into Egypt," and has played a feature part in "Sandhog." In "Livin' the Life," a musical version of Huckleberry Finn, he played the role of Jim.

For the past four years, Leon has pursued a career as a concert and nightclub performer. His appearance with Miriam Makeba marks his third Burlington performance and his second Red Lane Series appearance.

Trustees Appoint Faculty At April Meeting Sat.

Peterson Will Head Commerce & Economics

Twenty-two appointments were made to the University of Vermont faculty Saturday, April 19, at the April meeting of the University's Board of Trustees. The appointments included James W. Peterson as chairman of the Department of Commerce and Economics. The Board accepted 12 resignations, four retirements, reappointed 10 emeriti, and granted leave of absence to Robert S. Babcock, department of political science, who has announced his candidacy for the Vermont Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Dr. Peterson returns to Vermont as chairman of the department where he once taught. Holding his A.B. and M.A. degrees from Ohio University and his Ph.D. degree from Syracuse, Dr. Peterson was an assistant professor of economics at Vermont from 1950 until 1952. Since 1953, he has been a member of the senior staff of the Logistics Department of the RAND Corp. in Santa Monica, Cal. He is married and has one child, a daughter.

Lawrence H. Averill, general sales manager for Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors, was elected chairman of the Board of Trustees. Averill, who had been vice chairman, replaces Neil Tolman who completed his six-year term of office on the Board in February. Robert Tracy of Barre, vice president and controller of National Life, was elected vice chairman.

Averill was graduated from Vermont in 1927 and has been associated with General Motors since, most of his career being in the sales organization. Tracy was graduated from Vermont in 1930.

The Board approved promotions for 29 members of the faculty, including four to the rank of professor, at the April meeting Saturday.

Promoted from associate professor to professor were Charles F. Bond, Robert V. Daniels, Elbert A. Nyquist and William H. Macmillan.

From assistant professor to associate professor, Betty H. Boller, Gordon F. Lewis, John H. Bryant, John Hanson, Robert E. O'Brien, Benjamin A. Ring, William H. Stahl, George W. Welsh, Jackson Clemmons, and Ted B. Flanagan.

From instructor to assistant professor, Eileen Eckhardt, Alice K. Rodgers, Marilyn R.

Stauff, George R. Howe, Richard M. Martin, Hans Murbe, Thomas J. Spinner, Jr., Hans R. Huessey, Philip C. Kelleher, Christopher P. McAree, John E. Mazuzan, Cornelius Meeker, Audrey Naylor, Ruth Preston, and Henry Doremus.

The Board accepted the retirements of Charles Doll, George Dykhuizen, Herbert Putnam, and Alban E. Rooney. Reappointed emeriti were Howard Bennett, George Dykhuizen, Paul Evans, John Forest, Alexander Gershoy, Carl Lucarini, George Nicholson, Wilhelm Raab, Alban Rooney, and Lloyd Woodward.

The Board acknowledged gifts, and grants of more than a million dollars, including $858,150 from the estate of Gertrude I. Davis of Lyndonville.

President John T. Fey reported to the Board that 28 per cent more Vermonters had applied for admissions for 1964-65 than had for the 1963-64 academic year.

Applications received to April 1 showed 679 men and 532 women from the state have applied to enter in the fall. In addition, 2566 out-of-state students have applied. The fall freshman class will have about 1050 members.

EXTRA!!

The students of UVM have won a major battle in their fight for equality in the academic world, thanks to the valiant efforts of the Burns Boys. On Tuesday, April 21, the Campus Security Force ticketed a 1962 aqua Plymouth station wagon bearing yellow sticker number 1375. The charge? The faculty member's car had violated the University's rule because it was "Parked in Student Area."

Babcock Seeks Nominaton In September Primary

Professor Robert S. Babcock announced Wednesday, April 15, that he would seek the Republican nomination for Governor of Vermont. Babcock will face Lt. Governor Ralph A. Foote of Middlebury and Representative Roger L. MacBride of Halifax in the September primary.

Babcock, a professor of Political Science at UVM, announced that his platform is designed to improve the economy of Vermont without destroying its political heritage. Babcock said that Governor Philip A. Hoff improves the state's economy, but destroys its heritage, and that the other candidates would preserve its heritage, but destroy its economy.

The major planks in Babcock's platform include enacting a limited sales tax on non-essential luxuries, reducing the state income tax, and ultimately abolishing the local personal property tax. He emphasized the need to finance increased state aid to education, which is backed by both parties.

Babcock, in announcing his candidacy, said that he is "liberally concerned about human feelings, and conservatively concerned about fiscal responsibility." He also said that "this is the age, and Vermont should be the state, not of the common man, but of the uncommon man".

This is the second time Babcock is running for the GOP nomination for Governor. He lost to F. Ray Keyser of Chelsea in 1960.

Professor Babcock and his wife have five children: Bob, aged 21; Ann, 20; Julie, 17; Peter, 13; and Martha, 10. Their pets include two dogs named Missie and Bill.

NOTICE!

Members of the Class of 1965 and 1966 who wish to make application for nomination to the Student Court elections should have their application in the Student Court box in Billings Center by APRIL 27!

The application should contain a list of student activities and a statement of the reasons for desiring the position.

JFK Memorial Library; A Living Institution

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy Memorial Library will be erected along the Charles River in Boston, Massachusetts. Reflecting the spirit of the late President, the Library will seek to inspire youth with his ideals, aiming to further "President Kennedy's continuing effort to join the world of ideas and the world of affairs."

The Library will include a Museum, an Archive, and an Institute. The Museum will display photographs, panoramas, and scientific objects in an attempt to convey the achievements and atmosphere of the Kennedy years.

The Archive will be a center for the Study of mid-century America and its basic problems in domestic and foreign affairs. Study rooms, research equipment, documentary reproduction, and the use of microfilms will be available for scholarly research.

The object of the Institute will be to enlist young Americans and youth throughout the world in the understanding and practice of democratic political life and public service. It will be a living institution. Responsive to the times, it will serve to bring intellectual and public affairs together in a diversity of ways. Lectures and seminars, meeting rooms for undergraduates interested in public affairs, fellowships for American and foreign students, visitors-in-residence, conferences, and literary and public service awards will depict the character of the Institute. Most important, the Institute will be dedicated to John F. Kennedy's spirit of free and rational inquiry. Ten million dollars, it is estimated, will be required to build the Kennedy Library. A nationwide fund raising drive will be held by students on all college campuses. The drive for all colleges in the state of Vermont is scheduled to be held between May 4 - May 10. In addition to donating money, any student, faculty, or staff member may support the construction of the memorial by signing the individual college participation book which will eventually be placed in a special student-given memorial within the Library.

SENIORS

On May 1, Honors Day, flowers will be distributed all day at the Billings Center. There will be coffee and donuts served at four o'clock in the North Lounge of the Billings Center.

C.I.T. Professor Discusses Human Thought Patterns

The members of Sigma Xi fraternity and the public were both entertained and informed at a lecture given by Professor Herbert Simon last Thursday. Professor Simon, Dean of Administration at Carnegie Institute of Technology, pursued his higher education at the University of Chicago where he earned his bachelors degree, he later attended graduate school at the University of California at Berkeley and the Illinois Institute of Technology.

He spoke on "Information processing in Computer and Man." In his lecture he informed his audience of the basic patterns of human thought. To demonstrate his points and to offer conclusive evidence, he cited numerous cases in which computers have been used to simulate human thought.

Just as it is possible to discuss computer programming without knowing anything about the basic mechanisms which operate the machine, we were able to consider the thought process without really paying attention to the physiology of the brain.

Because of the extensive work which he has done in this field, Professor Simon has become one of the few experts on this topic. In correlation with his work at the Carnegie Institute he is presently a consultant to private industries and Federal Government.

What Is The Shape Of An Idea?

By Ged Sharff

On Tuesday, April 14, 1964 Mr. Paul Aschenbach spoke at the final lecture of the Men's Residence Hall Lecture Series in Marsh Hall. His topic covered sculpture in general as well as his sculpture in front of Bailey Library.

Mr. Aschenbach began with the importance of emphasis in sculpture. The artist concerns himself not only with what his work is to be, but also with its technical aspects. One step leads to and modifies another. Thus, the problem is given a formal solution.

The problem facing Mr. Aschenbach as he planned the sculpture which has evoked so much criticism from the general community, was basically a problem in shaping an idea.

"What is the shape of an idea? Sculpture should be a building in which an idea lives.

Art itself implies the invention of a self-definitive alphabet." Therefore, Mr. Aschenbach tried to create such an alphabet. He did research on forms of all shapes. Each form gave rise to a new form and every new form became metaphorical. We are not expected to regard the sculpture specifically, for example as education.

"What is education? What is a university? What is its core? In this work, I tried to move from the familiar to the unfamiliar." We may see our own ideas reflected in his work. The chairs, perhaps, suggest education; Their position on top of the piece suggests the classical sense of university. The upward effect may suggest movement and action.

But Mr. Aschenbach emphatically pointed out that we can never reach the essence of the work.

"A multiple statement can never have a core. If something is easily read, then it is a fraud. If we understand it then what is its point? We have already reached that particular level of understanding. It is the job of the contemporary artist to state his general philosophy of things. Any man who is worth his salt ought to further his field." Mr. Aschenbach's personal thoughts on the sculpture reflect a trusting and reaching motif. He encouraged us to decide what it is for ourselves.

"Talking about my sculpture is never an apology for it," said Mr. Aschenbach during his talk. "It would be idiocy to say that there isn't a mistake in it, but the principle is true." The principle is manifested in the work which is real and which is there for all of us.

Haile Speaks On Cold War

The featured speaker at the annual meeting of the Vermont Council of World Affairs said here Wed. he believed "a stalemate of power between ourselves and Russia makes a nuclear war far less probable," but he forecast "a dangerously overcrowded earth in which freedom and democracy cannot exist unless we take all possible steps to control its present explosion of population."

Dr. Pennington Haile, an international relations specialist, told Council members meeting at the Alpen Inn in Waitsfield that "all who are informed know that the patterns of hostility and friendship in our world are changing with bewildering rapidity and that the dominant opposition of two monolithic blocs of power is ending."

"The 'Cold War' may not be over, but it is being and will be fought very differently. A stalemate of power between ourselves and Russia makes a nuclear war far less probable — though I fear not 'impossible,' as President Johnson said recently — and the struggle is now more in the economic and propaganda fields."

"But," said Dr. Haile, "the patterns of our thinking change far more slowly. In Washington, at the Pentagon, at Cape Kennedy, vast sums are appropriated and spent for the development of fighting the cold war as it is no longer to be fought. At the same time expenditures for economic, cultural and 'persuasive' methods of contest are hard to secure. Our goals may remain the same — to protect the security of our country by preserving peace in the world, but we need to abandon the paths suitable ten years ago for those that now must be followed."

"Instead we should trade as widely as possible with all nations except perhaps in a small number of strategic items. If the traditionalist France of De-Gaulle can trade with China, if Catholic Spain can trade with Cuba, what are we proving by refusing contacts with Peiping and Havana," he asked, adding, "the surest way to blunt the edge of Marxian socialism is to fatten up — not attempt to starve — the socialists."

"In finding the new paths we need we must always try to look realistically at the world as it is and as we can see it will be. We must accept the facts of the future as well as those of the present. Our earth is going to be one in which a few white peoples of western Europe — of which we are an extension — can no longer dominate as they have for 400 years."

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: DICK KNORR

It takes 37 craft employees, 4 foremen, and 2 clerks to maintain high-quality telephone service in Pittsfield, Mass. And the entire management responsibility for this team and their work rests with New England Telephone's Outside Wire Chief, Dick Knorr.

Dick (B.S.C.E., 1957) joined the company in 1962 and, in less than a year, rose to Outside Wire Chief.

How Dick handled his earlier assignments certainly speeded his promotion. For instance, the professional job he did as Wire Chief in North Adams, the precise workload forecasts he made in Pittsfield, the thorough way he scheduled work while Control Board Foreman in Pittsfield.

When his latest opportunity came, Dick's experience and demonstrated ability cinched it!

Dick Knorr, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

VOL. 82 APRIL 23, 1964 NO. 7

A D.C. DILEMMA....

A very interesting development was reported in this week's George Washington University Hatchet:

University Students last week approved, in school-wide referendum, a plan that leaves the question of fraternity and sorority discrimination in the hands of the Inter-Fraternity and Panhellenic Councils. The plan, put forward by the fraternities and sororities themselves, passed by 108 votes, 1,025 to 917.

Voters at the same time said no to the first two proposals on the ballot, which would have requested the administration to enforce anti-discrimination affidavits signed by all campus groups.

The winning proposal would require each social fraternity to submit an affidavit that it does not discriminate "in a written or constitutional manner" on the basis of race, color, national origin or religious creed.

If a groups national constitution contains discriminatory clauses, it does not sign, but, must take unspecified "constructive steps" to end discrimination. The Inter-Fraternity Council or Panhellenic Council may ask the University to withdraw recognition if the group fails both to sign the affidavit and to take constructive steps.

Although many of GW's liberal students, who center their civil rights activities around the GW United Christian Fellowship, were disappointed and somewhat sceptical as to the future of the issue now left in the hands of the IFC and Pan-Hel (many wore black arm bands saying "Birmingham, Cleveland, George Washington University" ... and perhaps with reason considering one GW fraternity's playing of "Hitler's national anthem"), one fact must be kept clearly in mind --- Ten years ago George Washington University excluded Negroes entirely from attending GW: today GW students are seriously discussing whether or not a University recognized organization should be tolerated which discriminate in the selection of its members and they are taking concrete steps to resolve the issue.

AND AT UVM...

In 1954, UVM's Board of Trustees ruled that within seven years each fraternity and sorority at UVM would be required to submit a letter declaring that their organization did not discriminate as to race, color, etc., in the selection of members. In 1961 (at the end of the time period) every sorority and all but two fraternities submitted the required letter. The two houses which did not comply with the Trustees' ruling, did so because of "wasp clauses" in their national organizations' constitutions. However, upon their requests to the national organizations, each received a special "waiver" enabling them to comply at last with the ruling. Thereafter, no action was taken against these houses on the grounds that the "wasp clauses" still remained in their charters.

A careful look at UVM's Greek letter organizations reveals that, with few exceptions, the membership of these individual organizations in no way reflects the the proportional representation of the various ethnic, racial, and religious groups which make up the hetero-

Letters Septic Sceptic

To the Editor:

Without a doubt the Sceptic column of April 17th was a classic piece of vulgar japey. Personally, I don't mind a little ribaldry on occasion, but that wasn't it. Lenny Bruce is both funny and dirty; the column wasn't funny. Would it be to much to ask that in the future the shy pornographers who write that column sign their name to it? I realize that in their other published works -- scratched desk tops, library chair arms, and the walls of George's mens room -- they manage to maintain a comfortable anonymity. On the other hand, all of the exposeurs I have ever heard about do provide their own flashlight.

UNH President Assures Freedom

Nearly 700 cheering UNH students heard President John W. McConnell guarantee "the right of faculty and students alike to invite outside speakers to the campus."

McConnell spoke at a rally, reaffirming to students his stand of the speaker policy established here in 1950.

He also authorized "the Dean of Students to approve, with no strings attached, the request of the Socratic Society to invite Mr. Jackson."

Jackson is editor of The Worker, a New York Communist newspaper. He was invited here several weeks ago by the No Time for Politics Committee. The invitation was withdrawn last week under protest by the NTFP.

The text of McConnell's speech follows:

"I wish to reaffirm my support of the basic policy of the University guaranteeing the right of faculty and students alike to invite outside speakers to the campus. I will see to it that it is administered effectively.

Giving effective leadership to a university in these complex times is not easy, and satisfactory administration is virtually impossible if outsiders continually harass the students, faculty and administration for real or imagined shortcomings. The University is not beyond criticism. If such criticism is fair and honest, it will be welcome. But criticism of the University for political reasons or to serve the purpose of special interests may well destroy one of New Hampshire's most important resources.

The University of New Hampshire will undoubtedly survive the lives of all those presently connected with it. If it is to continue to be a great university able to make a significant contribution to the well being of the state and nation, it will need the cooperation and goodwill, not only of its students, faculty, alumni and trustees, but of the citizens of the state generally. I will continue to work to establish and maintain this kind of cooperation and good will, in a university worthy of the highest respect of teachers and students everywhere, but not at the expense of the basic purposes of the University.

This statement has the full support of the vice-presidents, of the academic deans, and the Dean of Students.

In additional remarks he said: During the past two weeks there has never been any question of the right of James Jackson to speak at the University of New Hampshire at the invitation of a recognized group of students.

THE SCEPTIC

"Punishment is a sort of medicine" - Aristotle,

"Nichomachean Ethics"

This weekend is Parents' Weekend and we of the Sceptic staff would like to welcome all you wonderful parents. You have, of course, been replaced by other daddies and mommies exemplified in the Dean of Men and Dean of Women. All those duties you held, a few years back, have been passed on to bureaucratic geniuses--experts in their fields. Mom, remember when your little girl asked you "how long can I stay out Mommy?" Dad, remember when your son asked you if he could have your bottle of Four Roses? Yes, all at UVM are protected from the outside world. Everything your child needs is provided adequately - with one exception, perhaps your child's health.

Health, at UVM, is under the auspices of the Wasson Infirmary - a building you might have noticed to the south of the Waterman Building. We have come upon a few cases in which the effectiveness of the Infirmary was put in doubt. Since we believe that you parents have a right to know how your little child is treated and where your money is spent, we present these cases.

Case No. One - A girl was treated by the Infirmary for a sprained ankle by placing a salve on the ankle and then taping. The girl's skin soon afterward began erupting with large blisters. The infirmary staff said it would disappear - they DID NOT TREAT IT. After the girl's mother talked with infirmary officials, they moved the girl to Mary Fletcher Hospital. The girl was treated by a dermatologist who correctly diagnosed the condition as an allergy to the salve. After immediate treatment, the condition showed signs of improvement. But, because of complications, she was forced to stay in the hospital and miss ten days of vital school work.

Case No. Two - This student went to the Infirmary at 1:30 P.M. complaining of a severe pain in his chest. The nurse said that medical school interviews were being held and the Doctor couldn't see him till 8:30. He could not get medical aid for seven hours.

Case No. Three - A student entered the infirmary complaining of severe stomach pains. After one day he was dismissed. He went to the hospital for an examination and they found that his appendix was rupturing. Because of time spent in the hospital, and away from school work, he is no longer in school.

Case No. Four - went to the Infirmary complaining of pain in his arm pit. He was discharged after one day of observation. He went to the hospital where they immediately admitted him. They operated and found a serious infection within his lymph nodes. If this was neglected, the consequences would have been none too pretty.

Case No. Five - was admitted to the Infirmary after she complained of incessant back pains. She was released after observation. She alternated in and out of the infirmary for a month with the terrible pain. One night, in the infirmary, a nurse asked her how many exams she had coming up. The girl had three exams. No tests were taken of this girl's condition. Nothing was done for her. Finally, the pain became incessant and the girl literally, "cried for her mother." She had to sneak to the phone and call her mother who came immediately and forced the Doctor to admit the girl to Mary Fletcher Hospital. The ailment (as you might have guessed) was a gall bladder attack. A Mary Fletcher Hospital doctor operated and the girl was told that if the operation had been put off two more days, the consequences could have been fatal. Upon being questioned about why action wasn't taken quicker, a member of the Infirmary staff said that the girl told a nurse she had three exams the next week and that they have to watch out for fakers.

The point to be made, dear parents, is if your child gets a cold, or feels under the weather, the Infirmary is a perfect dispensary. However, if perhaps your child is one of three thousand or more students who, odds would indicate, might develop a serious disease or illness, then the Wasson Infirmary only might not be the perfect place for your child to go. We do not mean that sending your child to the Wasson Infirmary is similar to sending your child to the butcher shop. But if you wish to put little Johnny or Janey on the chopping block.....

Not all the fault lies with the infirmary itself. Your child has probably more than once gone to the Infirmary searching for a medical excuse from ROTC drill or an exam. The staff is constantly troubled with sifting hypochondriacs and fakers from real ailments.

Another problem is size. We have come upon a few cases where a student with a disease (with measles, a high fever, etc.) was told by the infirmary that it was still considered contagious, and was sent home because there was no room.

The staff of an infirmary should be trained to recognize a serious disease - like a gall bladder attack. The girl who suffered the attack was put on a soft-blend diet (custard, etc.), an extremely harmful diet (as you probably know) for gall stone victims.

If your child, dear Mother, is to put some faith in a health service, why not see that she gets an adequate one? Dear Child, you too could do something...

Mother, you could write to the proper administrator, demanding information.

Child, you can write to the "CYNIC" (and get your name in print) about your dealings with Wasson.

Mother, there is another "illness" spreading on campus: thievery. A girl's handbag is taken...a motorcycle is stolen...a girl's wallet is picked up...and the "Best Dorm of the Month" award is missing, stolen from the lobby of Simpson Hall (presumably, the best dorm of the month). The Dean of Women, rumor has it, is very angry. What, the question arises, are we going to give next month's best Dorm of the Month, lollipops? We, of the Sceptic staff have searched our souls for an answer, and, in a fit of passion came upon the answer - an all night open house. This kills two birds with one stone. First, nobody could steal it. Second, it would guarantee that the same dorm wouldn't get the award two months in a row. Blah, Blah.

QUESTIONS FOR THIS WEEK

- 1) President Fey, when your children become ill, what Doctor do you use?
- 2) Whom do the laws against sodomy protect? The sheep?
- 3) How many girls will sign "pink" cards out? Why?
- 4) What is the status of the "Save Votey Hall Committee?"

Yale Chorus Enthralls UVM

by Robert Lampke

On Sunday, April 19, 1964, the UVM faculty and student body along with members of the Burlington community had the privilege and pleasure of listening to the world famous Yale Russian Chorus. This concert was sponsored by the SCOPE cultural committee and was held during the afternoon in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The singing of this very talented group, comprised of graduate and undergraduate students and faculty, ranged from rich melodious tones to deep and somber liturgical music, from very spirited and quick paced folk music to solemn and sentimental songs of love. Some of their songs ended very spiritedly in a quick "Da" or "Hey", while others drifted off into nothingness, producing a saddened effect.

Their first group of selections was Folk Music from Central Russia and included songs about the peasants and common workers, about lovers and their loved ones and about those in mourning over the loss of their loved ones. In the song "You-step so wide; You-Volga so deep we are warned not to walk too close to the river, while the eagle is warned not to fly too close to the earth". The song started off as a soloist number by one member of the chorus, with accompaniment by the rest of the chorus. The soloist rendered his part so well, especially in his deep-toned recitation, that he very much sounded like a cantor or High Priest chanting Holy Prayers.

Their next selection consisted of European songs. One of the well-received songs was from Macedonia. This was the story of Jamie and how he was warned not to marry Prima because the wise men say there is that remote chance that she may be his sister. The audience found this comment on the amusing and light side. The song began in very rich tones, reverberating throughout Ira Allen and sounding like soldiers singing on a march.

The chorus leader's arm-motions as he brought his hand forward and back gave one the deep feeling of the spirit present both in the marching soldiers and more so in the singing chorus. The chorus responded to the soloist's lines by sounding as though they were saying "Don't Marry Her, Don't Marry Her".

The next group of songs came from Russian Composers and the most famous and most beautiful of these was "The Song of the Volga Boatmen". Here the chorus sang in a steady and deep-toned voice, producing in one's mind a visual picture of the boatmen pulling the boats down the canal banks of the Volga. We even sense them straining at their positions as they struggle to move the boat a little further down the canal. This beautiful chanting continued throughout the whole song and produced a very pleasant and enjoyable effect.

Their last selection consisted of Soldiers' Ballads and most of them very very spirited marching songs, starting out slowly and picking up speed till they ended in a quick burst of speech.

The audiences' response was so enthusiastic towards this very vibrant and dynamic group that the chorus agreed to perform two extra numbers. Much to the audiences surprise this very versatile group sang two popular Negro Spirituals - "Joshua Won the Battle of Jericho" and "I'm going to Ride that Chariot in the Morning, Lord, Getting Ready for the Judgement Day". Not only were these two songs sung very well, but they also brought back memories of the Grandison Singers who sang similar songs at the recent Kake Walk Jazz Concert.

The response to the "Group that has put American Idealism into a form that is wholly appreciated by all" was overwhelming. At the same time, it served as a small appreciation for all that this group is doing to strengthen United States' relations on both a cultural and personal level with other countries of the world.

Coffee House Is Just That

by ELSIE GILMAN

There seems to be much misunderstanding over the name of the newly-opened "Saint" coffee house. Because of the name, many people think that this is a religious activity at St. Anselm's Chapel. Those who attended the opening night last Friday know that "The Saint" is far from this. It is an informal coffee house, a place where everyone may come on a Friday evening, to have coffee and doughnuts or just to sit around the open fireplace (on cushions) and listen to music.

read poetry, or gab with friends. Candlelight and music make "The Saint" an ideal place to relax.

Why is "The Saint" so named? First of all, because it is located in the library of St. Anselm's Chapel. Secondly, because it provides a "saintly" service - it's close to the girls' dorms, close to the S.A. Movie, and it provides good coffee and relaxation every Friday night.

P.S. If you meet Father Boyer or Reverend Leibold at "The Saint", don't run away; they're the sponsors, but THEY'RE relaxing, too.

It's Spring again, and 15 fraternities and 7 sororities are zealously looking forward to formals. It's Spring - and only the last traces of some very sturdy snow sculptures are left. It's Spring - and the second set of hour exams are underway. It's Spring - and the temperature has dropped 20°. Oh, joyous season in the Queen City!

Many things are new on campus - contrary to popular opinion WSGA has ruled that your boyfriend's mother is your friend, the latest is spiced peach cards, those unique rubber raincoats have come out in different colors - oh, progress. And from the looks of things, many couples are making progress, too:

First, congratulations go to transfer students who have been accepted at their escape schools.

Alpha Gamma Rho is planning a dessert hour with Alpha Epsilon Phi.

Phi Delta Theta's Bill Robinson, '66, is pinned to Elaine Little, '66, - best of luck.

Phi Sigma Delta's Car Wash was washed out, but it was a good idea for the season. Maybe a rain check? (This Saturday, I hear.) Sigma Nu's spaghetti dinner was a success with over 200 people swimming in sauce!

Congratulations are in order for Tau Epsilon Phi's Henry Mandel, '66, and Cheryl Hebel, '64, on their engagement. An August wedding is planned.

Other Tau Epsilon Phis in line for congratulations are Buzz Tarcher, who pinned Sandra Elle of Louisa, U., Mike Kimmel, '65, lavalliered to Jackie Shapiro of Long Island, Bill Perlow, engaged to Barb Anger, and Jeff Robinson engaged to Harriet Congrats to the Phi Delta also on their new pledges, Dennis Dusko, Ken Quintana, Fred Gates and John Wilburg.

Editor's Note: Our Mixes and Matches editor, Sandi Elstein has been pinned to AEPi's Jim Freedman. Congratulations!

Sport Coupes above: Corvette Sting Ray, Chevy II Nova, Corvair Monza, Chevelle Malibu, Chevrolet Impala.

5 different ways to make a big splash!
without going overboard on price

It's get-the-cottage-ready time. Put-the-boat-in-the-water time. Baseball time. Trade 'N' Travel Time at your Chevrolet dealer's. Time to get out of that wintertime rut, into one of Chevrolet's five great highway performers.

Now it's easy to go on vacation first class—without paying a first-class price. In a luxury Jet-smooth Chevrolet, for example. This beauty rivals just about any car in styling, performance and comfort. Or try a totally new type of travel in the youthfully styled Chevelle. Lots of room inside—yet nicely sized for easy handling.

Now thrifty Chevy II has hill-flattening power. Unique Corvair offers extra power that accents its road-hugging rear engine traction. And the exciting Corvette speaks for itself.

Yes, right now is new car time. T-N-T Time. Time to get the most fun from a new car. To get a great trade on your old one. To get a big choice at your Chevrolet dealer's. Come on in!

The Campus Heard-From

by Kim Boritskin

I fully agree with Jean Camp's letter in last week's CYNIC. However, I would like to make a small addition to it. Instead of just writing to Vermont's two Senators and the Senators from your home state, write to Senator Everett Dirksen, too. If this very necessary bill is to pass, the filibuster must first be broken. The liberal Republicans and Democrats have a majority of votes, but not the two-thirds necessary to invoke cloture. If Dirksen were to come out for cloture he would swing about ten votes with him, which is all that is needed. However, he says that the mail he gets is about ten to one against the bill, which means that he might as well be against cloture too. It is therefore necessary to tell him that other people, even if they are not from Illinois, are for cloture, and the bill in general. So write to your Senators, Vermont's Senators and Senator Dirksen. And do it now.

Senator Prouty, by the way, is generally assumed to be ready to vote for cloture at any time. Senator Aiken has said that after three weeks of debate he will vote for cloture too. Also, in the last filibuster, against private ownership of the satellite communications system, Aiken, Prouty and Dirksen all voted for cloture.

Last week's "Sceptic" was, in my view, excellent. It was, to be sure, rather brutal at times -- like trying to light a cigarette with dynamite or seduce a girl with a martini -- but it made several very cleverly put points. The CYNIC needs the "Sceptic" anyway. It is probably the only thing everyone reads, and happens to be making some points that need to be made. The fact that it is being so poorly received only shows that its point is being missed by those whose oxen haven't been gored. One gets the feeling that the anti-Sceptics are just antiseptic.

James M. Worthman's letter about the "Sceptic" was incisive satire that was every bit as good as the "Sceptic's." If I didn't think that Worthman was a serious satirist, I'd say that the "Sceptic" wrote the letter himself.

When will the United States Congress, the Vermont Legislature, WSGA and the UVM Student Association be made honorary lifetime members of Actor's Equity?

Last week's CYNIC brought out one more "Item" that should have been in my "Studentes." The Dean of Women and WSGA are more concerned with how virginal our women look to the general public than they are about any realistic standard of honesty about the women and their morals. Public relations, anyone?

Last week's editorial makes a very good point, if the basic assumption is true, namely that we know what George Lincoln Rockwell stands for. In general, we know the outlines of his beliefs. But how many people have ever heard them, or seen them expounded? (Last week's article was well off the foundations of his basic beliefs, so don't come out with that line.) All that 95% of the people know is what they read in a press whose veracity and competence is not nearly what it pretends to be. As the editorial says, perhaps a few students aren't acquainted with his views, but most are only acquainted with them. An acquaintance with those views is about as good as nothing at all. He should have come, for our own protection if nothing else.

While on the subject, why doesn't S.A. cut the nonsense about the six hundred dollars? Everyone, including S.A., knows that the money was just an excuse not to have him here. Why don't they just say "We're scared," or "We don't really want to hear anyone if we don't agree with him." We won't like to hear it, but it will certainly be refreshing to see some honesty around here.

Most obscene commercial of the last year: "Luckies separate the men from the boys, but not from the girls."

For all you New Yorkers and other people who intend to see the Fair, here are a few things you might like to know. Robert Moses, former slum clearance chief of New York City (remember the Title II scandals a few years ago, cave-dwellers?), is president of the World's Fair corporation. He has, in the past, publicly hedged about how little use he has for the democratic system he tries not to work within. He has also gotten twenty-four million dollars from NYC for the Fair (which will not, it is apparent, be repaid in full), refuses to have his books audited (just on principle, or is he hiding something?), will not let school children in for 25¢ (it will cost money for the Fair, he says, if a few dozen kiddies are admitted at that price; if they pay full price the Fair will make scads of loot, he says), and has publicly told the City to mind its own business (but not its $24 million business). Oh, yes; the name of the official song of the Fair? Somehow they came up with "Fair Is Fair." Have fun at the Fair, UVMers, but be careful elsewhere in the city, especially in parts of Manhattan. And don't worry if you hear anyone screaming somewhere downtown; it's only one of the rats the city has no money to exterminate, chewing on a baby.

The Huntington, Long Island, branch of Macy's Department Store is located in the "Walt Whitman Shopping Center." Those strange sounds you hear are old Walt turning over and screaming in his grave.

Many of you have been reading of Lenny Bruce's legal troubles in Playboy, or may have heard about his arrests for narcotics or obscenity from other places. (He was just arrested twice in NYC for obscenity in his night club act.) If the criterion for whether obscenity is permissible or not is the "redeeming social value" of its context, then in the public view Lenny Bruce should be a saint. After all, he gives the cops something to do.

BE PREPARED! Do your part to help curb the population explosion.

The basic policy of the University on outside speakers, established in 1950, establishes this right.

Communism as an economic system has been completely discredited; as a political doctrine it is anathema to all Americans. James Jackson has nothing to contribute to the intellectual life of the University. Nevertheless, under our policy, as I understand it, even speakers as objectionable and as unsubstantial as Jackson may come, if properly invited.

I have, therefore, authorized the Dean of Students to approve, with no strings attached, the request of the Socratic Society to invite Mr. Jackson."

Bayanihan Dancers Close Red Series

The Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company from Manila is now touring the United States to coincide with the New York World's Fair. Their appearance at the close of the 1963-64 Red Lane Series on April 30, will offer Burlington a preview of the program they will perform in New York. The attractive company of thirty young dancers and musicians made dance history at the Brussels World's Fair in 1958.

The program is divided into five distinct parts: "Dances of the Mountain Region," which features primitive religious - ceremonial tributes to deities of war, victory, the harvest, etc.; "Fiesta Filipina," showing the cultural influences of European countries on the Philippine arts; "The Muslim Suite," presenting the Arabian influence on the culture of the southern Mohammedan Filipinos; "Regional Variations" in which imitations and reflections of nature provide the mode for worship; and finally the "Rural Philippines Suite," dealing with the planting and harvesting of rice.

geneous student body of UVM. This condition would seem to stem from one of two causes:

One. The students of UVM have, on an individual basis, voluntarily chosen to segregate themselves in their selection of which fraternity or sorority they wish to join. If this is the case, it presents a serious consideration in the formulation of our ideas regarding "clannishness" and inter-group relations, and, furthermore, presents a more vital question concerning the feasibility of an integrated society in other than a homogeneous population.

Two. Certain fraternities and sororities do, contrary to their declarations, practice discrimination in the selection of their members, either directly or by the slightly more subtle application of the almost proverbial "quick rush" (Hello... Since you're not interested in our house anyway, I'll just show you around... See you!) If this is the case, then the Board of Trustees' ruling has not been lived up to in its intended spirit, despite the submitted written declarations concerning discrimination and further action is required by the Administration.

Many students would support this second explanation for imbalances apparent in the membership of various fraternities and sororities, and the CYNIC must join them in their contention that some Greek letter organizations at UVM practice one or more various forms of objectionable discrimination.

George Washington University is beginning to face this problem today; the University of Vermont has not finished with it yet (despite the actions in 1954 and 1961). Some action is demanded by the present circumstances.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

While the UVM baseball and football teams are given a vast majority of the publicity this time of the year, the track team, under coach Archie Post, goes through its schedule with very little recognition and without any financial aid to its participants.

Last year this squad had only a fair record, but from all recent indications this season's edition could be one of the best in the last few years.

The trackmen opened up their 1964 campaign in impressive fashion by upsetting heavily favored Bowdoin 71-69 who defeated Vermont last year by a wide margin of thirty-six points.

The meet was even closer than the score indicates. Originally the final outcome was announced as a deadlock at 70 apiece, but a double check of the figures revealed that Don Mayland had won the high jump instead of only tying for first place. The reason for Mayland's victory was the fact that he had one less attempt than his opponent Ek Dahl. Thus Vermont gained a point with this discovery, while Bowdoin lost one, resulting in this two point difference.

One of the reasons for Vermont's unexpected success in this meet (only the second Cat victory in over fifteen years against Bowdoin) was the inspirational leadership of captain Bill Mulhern. Although his entire back and neck were in a cast he attended the contest staying throughout, even at great physical discomfort to himself, urging his teammates to victory. Carl Frattini, in the relay, and Vinnie DeCesaris, in the 440, will attempt to replace Mulhern for the outdoor season, and judging from Saturday's results (in which they both won) they will do a fine job.

During the recent indoor campaign, numerous cage records, both at UVM and at various other New England schools, were established by many members of the Catamount track team.

Leading the pace is sophomore ace Don Mayland, who usually competes in three or four events at each meet. However, he is best known for, his specialty, the pole vault. In this event he has established new indoor records at three schools in addition to Vermont, M.I.T., Bowdoin, and Maine, with his best performance of 14 feet 4 inches accomplished at Bowdoin. On Saturday Mayland set his second vaulting record against Bowdoin, when he broke the UVM outdoor and Centennial Field record, soaring to a height of 13 ft. 3 in.

In addition to Mayland's feats, captain Mulhern tied the UVM cage record for the 600 in the contest against New Hampshire in the time of 1:16.2. He then improved this time to win the Yankee Conference meet in the school record breaking time of 1:13.8. Mulhern also anchored the relay team to a Conference triumph as they set a new Catamount record in the excellent time of 3:28.6.

Other UVM records established during the indoor season included the discus throw of 134 feet 3 1/2 inches by Ken Burton, Tom Whitaker's 48 foot 6 3/4 inches toss of the thirty-five pound hammer and Larry Perlmutter's time of 5.6 in the fifty yard dash which matched the best Cat indoor dash time.

The team in the next few weeks will face Union, Trinity, Williams, and Norwich, in dual meets, and will also participate in both the Vermont State and the Yankee Conference meets. There is a possibility that a few outstanding UVM trackmen will attend the New England meet on a voluntary basis, but their participation will depend on their performances the remainder of the season and their grades since this meet will occur during final exams.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Soph "Lefty" Harrington is filling in for the injured Deane Kent at flanker back during spring football. Kent has a pinched nerve in his back which will require an operation this summer, on which the continuance of his career will hinge.... Purdue quarterback Ron DiGravio's older brother played freshmen football at Vermont, a few years ago, but left school during his first semester.... Freshmen football halfback John Capron is quite versatile, besides athletics Capron is the lead singer in the band known as the Night Raiders.... "For a change" both of next year's scholarship basketball players, who are about 6 feet 3 inches tall, are from New Jersey.... Vermont has recruited a fine All-Met second team halfback from Westchester County for next season.... In addition to Strassburg, league scoring champion Jim Rich also was awarded honorable mention on the Academic All American team.

Golfers Face UMass Friday

The University of Vermont golf team opens its 1964 season with a three-match weekend trek to western Massachusetts.

Ed Donnelly's team, its prospects the best in several years, will meet the University of Massachusetts and American International on Friday afternoon at South Hadley, Mass., then move over to Williamstown on Saturday for a match with Williams College.

Making the trip will be Capt. John Donnelly, Ed Gallagher, Jim Nixon, Bob Opaleski, Steve Slack, Bob Whitman, and Joe Zickerman. Donnelly, Opaleski and Zickerman are lettermen.

The younger member of the Donnelly family has made quite a collection of golfing honors during his undergraduate days. Now a senior, "Big John" reached the semi-finals of the New England College championship last year and took part in the NCAA tourney in Wichita where he was selected as a representative of the 12-man East squad in a special match against the West. A former Vermont State Amateur champion, John finished second in the ECAC event as a sophomore.

Gallagher, another top-flight linksman, returns after a year's absence and will strengthen the team. With an additional year's experience under their belts, Opaleski, Nixon, Slack, Whitman and Zickerman should all be improved over last spring.

Other matches on the schedule include St. Lawrence and Clarkson at Canton, N.Y., on May 4, Norwich on May 5, at Middlebury on May 6, the New England and Yankee Conference on May 8-9 at Rutland, St. Michael's on May 11, and the state meet at the Burlington CC on May 13.

Soccer Now Twelfth UVM Sport

Soccer became the newest intercollegiate sport at the University of Vermont Saturday, when the Board of Trustees gave approval for the start of a program.

The University fielded an informal soccer team last fall. The first official team is expected to play about eight or ten matches in the fall, under Harold Grieg who will handle the coaching duties.

Soccer brings to twelve the number of intercollegiate sports at Vermont. Others are cross country and football in the fall, basketball, hockey, swimming, skiing, rifle and indoor track in the winter, and baseball, golf tennis and track in the spring.

Ralph Lapointe is expressing his dissatisfaction with the umpire's call but to no avail.

The University of Vermont baseball team opens its bid for 1964 Yankee Conference honors Friday and Saturday with a two game series against the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

The Catamounts finished third in the conference race last season, one-half game behind runner-up New Hampshire. The Cats got off on the wrong foot in 1963 Yankee play with four straight losses, but rallied for five wins in the last six games. Vermont was Yankee Conference champion in 1962 with an 8-2 mark and 21-6 overall.

The 1964 edition of Catamounts has many question marks. Much hinges on the pitching of right-hander Charlie Foster, slated to open against Mass. Friday, and portsider Carl Martin, who gets the nod Saturday. If both hurlers come through consistently, the Cats could challenge favored Connecticut.

The Vermont infield consists of a slick fielding quartet along with some big offensive sticks. Junior John Tartera is the first baseman and showed plenty of power on the southern trip with a .350 average and three home runs in the six game jaunt. Captain Dick Boutillier of Windsor hit .261 along with a home run on the trip, in which Vermont compiled a 2-4 record.

THE BIG SURPRISE in the infield has been the hitting of sophomore Bobby Cronin. Cronin, a Richmond native, hit at a .346 clip and looked good defensively. Another Richmond product, Mike Benway, is handling third base well and is off to a great start at the plate with a .333 average. Sophomore Jim McKinnon of Rutland has also been looking good in the infield after making the switch from catcher.

VERMONT'S OUTFIELD has been looking good on defense, but is still hoping to help the attack with some key hits. Bob Johnson of Barre, Steve Morse of Burlington and Pete MacDonald are the starters.

Mike Behan and sophomore Tom Blanchard of Winooski have been sharing the catching duties for Ralph Lapointe's nine.

Backing up starters Martin and Foster this weekend will be ace reliever Bill Christie. Christie, a Spaulding High product, looked very good on the southern trip. Junior Hardy Merrill of Bellows Falls and Jim Brennan will be starters later in the season, but will be set for long relief stints in the Mass. series.

Intramural Sports

by MEL BLOOMENTHAL

Competition has been completed in seven tournaments in the Intramural Sports Program since Kake Walk, while the softball season is now underway.

In the Paddleball Doubles Tournament, the Independent duo of Jim Howe and Bob Sheriff edged out Jim Simpson and Arlie Economou, also Independents, by a score of 21-9, 21-12. Pointwise, Phi Sigma Delta led the competition with 48 points. Sigma Phi Epsilon followed with 45 points.

The Handball singles tourney was completely dominated by Phi Sigma Delta. In the finals, Phi Sig's Dick Melrowitz beat out fraternity brother, Mike Fox, in a closely contested match, 16-21, 21-17, and 21-8. Phi Sig totaled 96 points in the tournament, followed by Sig Ep, who tallied 44 points.

Delta Psi's relay team of Layne Higgs, Roger Stone, Jim Foley, and Vinnie DeCesaris ran their way to victory in the Indoor Relay Meet. Runner-up was the team from Wills Hall, followed by Sig Ep, with Sigma Phi taking the fourth spot.

In the Track and Field competition held in the Gutterston Field House's indoor track, Delta Psi again emerged victorious, garnishing 37 points. Buckham Hall was runner-up with 30 points.

Sigma Nu took a third with 18, followed by Sig Ep - 12, Phi Sig - 7, Theta Chi - 5, Tau Epsilon Phi - 4, and Sigma Phi - 3.

In the recent foul shooting contest, Sig Ep barely nipped Sigma Phi in team competition, 79-78. Sigma Phi's Jay Mandeville sunk 23 out of 25 hoops to win the individual honors, outshooting finalists Pete Gross of Sigma Phi, Tim Madison of Theta Chi and Pete Joslin, representing Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Sig Ep added more points toward their climb for the All-Sports Trophy by coping the Open Swim Meet. Sig Ep totaled 41 points, edging Sigma Nu's 38 point total. Delta Psi took a third, followed by Phi Sigma Delta, Alpha Epsilon Pi, and Tau Epsilon Phi.

Delta Psi ended Phi Sig's domination of the Volleyball tournament, by defeating Sig Ep in the fraternity finals. Delta Psi went on to win the all-campus championship by downing the Phi Sigma Delta B team, the Independent winner.

Coming events in the Intramural Sports program are the Open Tennis doubles tourney, and the Badminton singles and doubles tournaments. Plans are being made for a possible open wrestling tournament. Watch the CYNIC for further details.

Fey Resigns Presidency Will Head University Of Wyoming

University of Vermont President John T. Fey will leave this Green Mountain institution he has served since July of 1958 to accept the presidency of the University of Wyoming.

At Wyoming, he will succeed Dr. G.D. Humphrey, who is retiring this June after 19 years of service to Wyoming's only four-year institution of higher learning.

Dr. Fey's resignation from the presidency at Vermont will be effective August 1, 1964, and the Board of Trustees has named a committee to begin the search for his successor. The action came in executive session at the April 18 meeting.

Born in Hopewell, Va., Dr. Fey is the 17th President of the University of Vermont, and was the first southerner so to serve.

In his six years at the University of Vermont, President Fey carried forward a vigorous program of University development.

Perhaps most apparent is the progress made toward completing the post-war physical plant development begun under his predecessor, Dr. Carl W. Borgmann.

Under President Fey, the University carried to fruition a program which originally was expected to have required 15 years. Included was the Bailey Memorial Library, the Patrick Gymnasium with the Guttererson Field House and Forbush Pool, new residence halls for men and women, the new Votey Engineering Building, a new home management house, the horticultural field laboratory, completion of the second phase of the medical building program, renovation of Williams Science Hall and Billings Library.

Most of this was accomplished from sources other than state funds, though the Votey Engineering Building was an outright gift from the State, the first non-agricultural building at Vermont to be provided by the state, and only the fifth major building provided by the state in the history of the University.

Planning is also underway for a life sciences building, and the University's College of Medicine is currently carrying out a fund campaign seeking $8.7 millions for the third phase of its post-war building program.

But President Fey is known to have considered plant development less significant than the academic development of the University.

Under his leadership, the University has given increasing encouragement to the development of the Graduate College, where doctoral programs have been established in eight departments of the University.

The University has also developed new programs in sociology, in foreign service in agriculture, psychiatry; and programs in research have been expanded under a policy which seeks to make research a partner to the teaching and learning environment. city, but has been used by business and government of the state.

Under Dr. Fey, the University has also achieved substantial salary increases for faculty and staff, accompanied by expanded fringe benefits and inauguration of a sabbatical leave program.

Concluding "six very pleasant and productive years in the service of the University of Vermont" President Fey said that the decision to leave Vermont to accept the presidency of the University of Wyoming "was not easily made."

He said "these first years of the 1960's have been eventful years for education in Vermont -- for the University and the Vermont State Colleges and for elementary and secondary education."

"I believe we have made significant progress in establishing a sound educational structure in Vermont. The greatest problem ahead is that of providing adequate financial resources with an inadequate tax structure. The needs of education call for early attention to this financial consideration."

He told members of the Board of Trustees in an executive session (continued on page two)

"Students For Babcock" Join Campaign

A "Students for Babcock" group has been formed on the University of Vermont campus. Led by a nucleus of Vermonters, the group will include all interested students who wish to work for Prof. Robert S. Babcock.

Prof. Robert S. Babcock is a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

The major planks in Babcock's platform include enacting a limited sales tax on non-essential luxuries, reducing the state income tax, and ultimately abolishing the local personal property tax. He emphasized the need to finance increased state aid to education, which is backed by both parties.

At a meeting held last Friday evening at the candidate's home, the group formulated a three point program with the endorsement of Babcock which will be effective immediately. The program calls for a campus organization to head up the student campaign. Also the group plans to recruit all interested UVM students who wish to do volunteer campaign work. This will include passing out campaign literature, ringing doorbells and licking stamps. Finally, the group plans to set up similar organizations at other Vermont colleges.

The student group will circulate a petition which they urge all interested students to sign. The petition will include the student's summer address, so, if necessary Prof. Babcock can call upon these people to do work in their respective local areas during the summer months.

The group has in the offing a series of rallies and hopefully a debate which will include the three candidates, Lt. Governor Ralph Foote; Roger MacBride, Rep. from Halifax; and UVM Prof. Robert S. Babcock. The debates are planned to air the candidates views on key issues which are vital to Vermont's future.

Don Eaton of Woodstock and Richard Spokes of South Burlington were elected co-chairmen of the student group. Stephen Terry of Windsor was named publicity director; Dennis Morriveau of Burlington, secretary,

Petitions Circulating For Civil Rights

Faculty

Initiating active statewide participation of university faculty members in the Civil Rights cause, Professor John Engels of St. Michael's College has had circulated throughout all Vermont "Institutions of higher learning" a petition in the form of a letter, to Senators Aiken and Prouty, firmly asking that they vote for cloture in the current Civil Rights Bill debate.

Assistant Professor of English, Harry Orth, acting as Professor Engel's sponsor here at the University of Vermont, has, to date, received at least 100 affirmative replies from the faculty. Faculty members have written their own letters in support of the Bill.

Following is the text of the letter being circulated:

"We, the undersigned, Free-men of the State of Vermont, ask that you vote in favor of the motion for cloture, soon to come before the Senate.

"The debate of the Civil Rights Bill has been extended unreasonably by a group of Senators, whose strategies have been undertaken cynically, and whose aims in contravention of justice and the will of the people have never been in doubt.

"We feel that the need for this legislation is unquestionable, and (continued on page two)

Students

Indication of student support of the Civil Rights Bill was demonstrated on Wednesday, April 22, when the SA gave final approval to the wording of its Civil Rights Petition to be circulated on campus. The petition states:

For nearly two centuries, America has sought in vain to give real meaning to Jefferson's famous contention that all men are created equal and enjoy certain unalienable rights. Now in the halls of the United States Senate, an attempt is being made to give legal expression to this basic concept of the American Creed.

We, the undersigned students of the University of Vermont, respectfully urge the earliest possible passage of the lively and effective Civil Rights Bill of 1964.

This petition, requesting each student to sign his name and home state, will be circulated throughout the campus along with a paraphrase of the Bill itself. Upon completion, the petition, plus a list of the Senators who represent the home states of the students, will be sent to Senator Hubert Humphrey, Senator co-ordinator of the Civil Rights Bill.

Student Guides Conduct Informative Tours Of UVM

By Richard Berk

A little known, yet nevertheless valuable organization on campus is Student Guides. Under the leadership of their president, Larry Miller, the members of the organization provide prospective UVM students with tours of the campus, and answer any questions they may have about the various aspects of college life.

There are currently about fifty student guides working under six supervisors, one in charge of each of the days of the week on which interviews are held. These supervisors are responsible for having guides at the admissions office at the times scheduled for tours. They represent a variety of backgrounds and in this sense at least, are in accurate reflection of the UVM student body.

The newly elected supervisors are:

Nancy Tarnsworth, a junior in the School of Agriculture and a sister in Alpha Chi Omega. Nancy was also a supervisor this past year.

Sue Taggart, a junior.

Linda Sharfstein, from Staten Island, N.Y. Linda is majoring in elementary education and is a sister in Alpha Epsilon Phi.

Andrea Beebe, a sophomore from Portsmouth, N.H., is in the School of Education and Nursing.

Betty Fuchs is a sophomore from Rutland, Vt. She is an English major and News Editor of the CYNIC.

Al Lipkin is a junior majoring in sociology. He is a brother in Alpha Epsilon Phi and his home town is West Newton, Mass.

Larry Miller, president of Student Guides, is a sophomore from Chestnut Hill, Mass. He is pre-med., a psychology major, and managing editor of the CYNIC. Larry is also a brother in Alpha Epsilon Phi.

The importance of Student Guides is often underrated. A high school student visiting the campus for the first time will get his impression of the physical plant simply by seeing it. The facilities speak for themselves. But a factor equally instrumental in the choice of a college is the student body. The student guide embodies the spirit of the students as far as the visiting high school student is concerned. For this reason any interested students, other than first semester freshmen, are urged to contact Larry Miller.

President Fey

sion, "I feel that we have made substantial progress in the advancement of higher education—progress that will stand for future administrations to build upon," and he praised the "energy and enthusiasm of this Board in making that progress possible."

Dr. Fey also expressed gratification for "the help and support given to me and to the University by so many in the Vermont Legislature."

He praised the "enlightened relationship" between the state and the University, and said it resulted from the fact that the Legislature and the political leadership of Vermont "historically have honored the need of education in a democratic society to be free from political restraint."

Dr. Fey said that all Vermonters "may take pride in their University. It is one of the truly fine small universities in a nation where many colleges and universities attain the excellence for which all must strive."

He said that he reached his decision to come to Vermont six years ago "because I felt the future of education in our country is of particular importance, and because I felt I could make a contribution to the University of Vermont."

"Thanks to the support of the faculty and staff and the many friends of the University, I feel that the major part of that contribution has now been carried out here."

"After very careful consideration, I have decided that the invitation offered to me by the University of Wyoming offers the same kind of stimulating challenge and opportunity which induced me to accept the invitation tendered me six years ago to come to Vermont."

Dr. Fey completed his pre-law studies at Washington and Lee, received the LL.B. from the University of Maryland, the MBA from Harvard, and the Doctor of Juridical Science from Yale.

Peace Corpsmen Visit UVM

A Peace Corps team from Washington, D.D., is scheduled to visit the University of Vermont from May 6 through 8.

The purpose of the visit is to interpret a record number of opportunities for Peace Corps service, as well as to supply general information to students and faculty, a Peace Corps official said.

Plans are being made to set up a Peace Corps Information Center at Billings Student Center on campus, to be manned by Peace Corps staff members, day and evening during their stay.

The Peace Corps team will also administer the non-competitive Placement Test several times daily during their visit. Peace Corps Questionnaires must be completed before taking the test, said the Peace Corps official. Those thinking of applying should fill out a Questionnaire now and submit it to the Peace Corps representative upon taking the test. Questionnaires may be obtained in advance from the Peace Corps liaison on campus, Jack Little, Director of Resident Instruction. They are also available at most Post Offices.

UVM's President, John Fey, has issued the following statement in conjunction with the Peace Corps team's visit:

"It is a pleasure, indeed, to salute the Peace Corps and to designate the week of May 4 to 9 as Campus Peace Corps Week.

"I think it is significant that a majority of those who are giving unstintingly of themselves in dedication to this cause which demonstrates a mature side of our society, are themselves youthful.

"To those who are disarmed by the frivolities which the youth of every generation invent or reinvent, the Peace Corps stands as proof of what most wise adults know -- that the youth of our free society are ready, able and eager to bend their marvelous and privileged energies to the serious purposes which make our time a vitally challenging one in which to live."

Any organization, group or club wanting to have a Peace Corps representative speak and answer questions, may make arrangements by calling Mr. Little at UN 4-4511 ext. 256 as early as possible.

While this special information effort is primarily for college Juniors, Seniors and graduate students, it is also aimed to provide general information to all interested persons in the community. The Peace Corps plans to train over 5,000 Volunteers this summer to serve in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Civil Rights

that the welfare of our country ought not to be subordinated to a concern for the welfare of a parliamentary device traditionally employed to obstruct the ends of social justice.

"We do not ask that the rule of unlimited debate be abandoned or drastically curtailed, but, merely that you recognize the moral imperative which has informed this bill. We feel that in this instance a vote for cloture is clearly in the best interests of the Senate, your office, the State of Vermont, and the United States of America..."

When the petitions have been amassed from every Vermont college and university, Professor Engels will then forward the letter to Senators Aiken and Prouty, both of whom have already indicated to Professor Engels their intention to vote for cloture, for the Civil Rights Bill, and against any crippling amendments which are proposed.

Mr. Orth especially urges every UVM student to individually write his own Senator in support of the Bill. He points out that the students themselves should realize that it is their generation who, as citizens and leaders, are going to be most affected by the Bill's provisions, and thus should be most concerned with its passage.

CLASS OF '65

This could happen to you. It is April, 1965, and the Ariel office is swamped with calls from irate parents, complaining because their dear little sons' and daughters' pictures will not be appearing in the 1965 Ariel.

Lane Series Features International Singers

by Betty Fuchs

"Exciting" is the best way to describe Monday's Red Lane Series concert by Miriam Makeba and Leon Bibb.

Miss Makeba opened the program with an African song, throbbing with rhythm, that immediately warmed the audience toward her. From then until her encore, she was in complete control of the hall.

Miss Makeba showed herself amazingly versatile, singing in several South African dialects, English, and Hebrew. She put herself entirely into each song, whether it was to take the audience on a lion hunt - "kill him! Kill the lion before he kills you!" - to plaintively cry out in hunger, to muse that love tastes like strawberries, or to plead for equality. Miss Makeba included several novelty numbers, the most famous of which is a wedding song of her tribe that English-speaking Africans call the "click" song, because of the clicking noise of some of the words. Miss Makeba explained that the click is in her language, a sound impossible for us to make.

Accompanying the talented performer, were Bill Salter, bass violinist; Sam Brown, guitarist; and Archie Lee on conga drums, and as Miss Makeba put it "everything else." After the Burlington performance, Miss Makeba and her accompanists left for singing dates in Los Angeles, Paris, Denmark until June, when she returns to do a summer tour with Harry Belafonte.

Leon Bibb, a slight man with a tremendous voice, made up the second half of the concert. Mr. Bibb walked on and began singing as though he had been doing so all his life. His powerful voice completely filled the room, but there was no audience contact until he broke the barrier between stage and aisle with a contemporary folk song called "Ticky-Tacky."

From that song on, Mr. Bibb gave a powerful performance. His program included folk songs, show tunes and spirituals. Without the aid of microphones, he sang a chain-gang song that reached every listener. He could caress gentle songs with the same ease. Obviously a polished performer, Mr. Bibb showed that polish doesn't mean indifference to lyrics. When he sang "Sing Hallelujah," everyone in the room was ready to sing. And sing they did in a civil rights group song.

Mr. Bibb and his accompanists, Bill Lee on bass violin and Stuart Scharf on guitar, were called back for two encores by an obviously pleased and appreciative audience.

CYNIC Salutes ... Dave Strassburg

Dave Strassburg, a UVM senior from Essex Junction, Vermont, has achieved a rare degree of athletic and scholastic success. A pre-med student, with a major in Math and a minor in Chemistry, Dave will attend the UVM Medical School next year. This year, he was captain of the basketball team, and a member of Boulder Society, the senior men's honorary.

Speaking about sports, a subject with which he is thoroughly familiar, Dave expressed his pleasure in the sports expansion over the past few years. This growth has been particularly substantial in football, where student interest and attendance has increased considerably in the past two years. Still, Dave feels, students could and should turn out in greater numbers for some of the lesser attended sports activities, such as baseball and basketball. He feels that school spirit plays a very large role in the success of any team, but he expressed the conviction that the student body is not overly enthusiastic about attending games where it is not probable that the UVM team will win. Since his father is a member of the Physical Education department, Dave knows that the coaches definitely favor student body support in all sports.

Dave has had much opportunity to meet with President Fey; through being in the Boulders Society. When asked about the President's resignation, Dave replied, "I hate to see President Fey leave. I think he is a very stimulating influence on the campus. I think his strength lies in his robust character."

Dave has always lived very near to the UVM Campus. When asked how this affected him, he replied that he really felt part of UVM only when he moved into Delta Psi fraternity house in his sophomore year, after having lived at home during his freshman year. Of the fraternity, Dave says, "It brought out the good and the bad in me."

On campus and fraternity life, Dave commented, "For the most part, the people on the campus are very genial, and, except for a few rough spots between certain groups of individuals, I think that there is quite a bit of cohesion in the student body. I'm talking about fraternities, more specifically, and I certainly hope that fraternities are not taken off the campus. I think they have a very important part in the University. I think that the student, indirectly, through his fraternity, acquires more competitive enthusiasm towards the school. He meets future business ties, etc., that are invaluable. Since the group, for the most part, is of similar interests, many interesting future developments may come from these friends."

Earlier this year, Dave was nominated for a Rhodes scholarship. He considered this opportunity the highlight of his life. He found the people he met fascinating, both the Rhodes scholars who interviewed him, and his competitors, were extraordinary people. Dave went to Boston, where he met the eleven other candidates for scholarships. The respect for them, which was inspired in him by a realization of all they had achieved took a lot of the hardness out of losing a scholarship. Of Professor Babcock, who encouraged him to apply for a scholarship, Dave says, "He certainly was a guiding light for me during this time."

Blackball The Cynic ?

Wednesday night occasioned another fascinating, intelligent gathering of our illustrious Student Association Senators. Among the topics of dissection was UVM's beloved hebdomadal periodical - the CYNIC. We would like to relate some of the sagacious comments proffered.

When the suggestion of slicing the CYNIC's budget 60% or in toto was offered, one smug young man sat back on his derrière, hands in pockets, head self-righteously lifted, and proposed that this newspaper be discontinued entirely; that, in effect, such action would instantaneously spur the perennially enthusiastic student body to protest indignantly, write thousands of letters in response. Bolting from his seat in support of this ingenious masterpiece of conceptual thought, another Senator delightedly added that student response would be so great that consequently hundreds upon hundreds of UVM'ers would be literally pounding the doors at Lower Billings, screaming, clamoring, for the rare opportunity to write for the CYNIC, to bring it back to an even greater era of laudability and magnificence than e'er before.

Amidst the ensuing excitement and bustle caused by this proposal, a sober-faced fellow, renowned and respected for his conservatism, solemnly arose to speak his mind. Immediately, the room hushed, cigarettes were hastily extinguished and knitting was momentarily abandoned, as every Senator raised his head in awesome admiration. "I propose," began the brilliant Senator, in a doubtlessly brilliant beginning, "that we give the CYNIC one last chance to exonerate itself. Allocate funds sufficient to finance the newspaper for one additional semester. It is the sole responsibility of the Editors to prove that the CYNIC contributes significantly to the University of Vermont, that it measures up to the strict standards of excellence upheld by every organization on this campus, an excellence manifested most ostensibly by its principal representative organ, the Student Association Senate." Barely had the Senator completed his discourse, when the previous silence burst into fervent cheers, hand-clapping and finger-snapping by the Senators in obvious acquiescence to their learned colleague.

"Order, order," bellowed the SA President, who although equally enthralled, felt compelled to restore parliamentary procedure. Turning to a meek, trembling little girl who cowered in her seat, the President of the Senate requested her, as the CYNIC's representative, to arise and please comment on the situation. Struggling to her feet, gripping the rim of the chair in front of her with hot, nervous palms, her scorched throat choked up in anger and frustration, the little girl could force herself only to utter a whimper. Gathering her books in her hands, she turned from the congregation, and slowly, dejectedly, mechanically, she shuffled her way out.

The moral of this story kiddies, is that if you want a CYNIC the way you wanted a CENTAUR, then obviously you don't want a CYNIC. We know that kids like things easy at UVM ("Herbie", "Stainless", Love and Marriage), so here's the easy way out for all you "Ban the CYNIC" fans. At the bottom of this column you'll find a black ball and a white ball. Simply choose the one you like and drop it in the "Black-ball the CYNIC" box outside our offices in Lower Billings. Literacy is no requirement for this survey, so we expect broad response from the student body.

Letters Sceptic On Sceptic

To the Editor:

Alas, the sociology department seems fated not to love the Sceptic! In your last issue, a sociologist called the author of the Sceptic column on illegitimacy a "pornographer." The sociology department has strong feelings about libel, as I have reason to know. I assumed, therefore, that this accusation was based on sound evidence, and I hurried back to the column to see what I had missed. Try as I might, however, I could feel only disgust at the consequences of irresponsible sexual indulgence. It's a delicate matter, I realize, but I'd like to ask the Sceptic's accuser to be more specific about the pornography he found. By what parts of the column, I wonder, was he excited sexually?

Let me close, not so irreverently as it may seem, by quoting a stanza of advice recently given to teachers by W. H. Auden:

Thou shalt not answer questionnaires

Or quizzes upon World-Affairs,

Nor with compliance

Take any test, Thou shalt not sit

With statisticians for commit-
A social science.

Sceptic I

Parent For Sceptic

To the Editor:

Vulgar jape? Shy porno-grapher? Dirty? By no stretch of the Dictionary definitions do these words characterize for me the Sceptic column of April 17th. I don't know anything about Lenny Bruce so I can't understand that allusion, but the overall effect of your letter, Dr. Scheans, bewilders me.

While I have no background in Sociology, I am a concerned parent. To me the column was a lucid satire which exposed certain follies connected with sex. I thought it might challenge students to think more clearly about their own standards in this vital area.

Martha Kennedy

Director Disheartened

To the Editor:

As an avid CYNIC reader since the Fall of 1940 when I entered the University as a freshman and particularly since 1955 when I came back to the University and have been giving copies to prospective students visiting our campus, I am deeply disheartened and sorry that the April 17, 1964 copy was ever printed.

Back, Blacks!

To the Editor:

Can I, a northern white, join the Black Muslims? If not, why should a southern Negroe join my fraternity?

Maybe I like negroes.

Maybe the Black Muslims like me.

But are we going to like ourselves any better if they become house brothers?

Why don't the fraternities choose who they want and the Black Muslims choose who they want? Then everybody would be happy, and more things would get done.

C.C. Boardman

THE SCEPTIC

By Robin Schore, Miles Wortman, in conjunction with George's Men's Room

"Beware the jabberwock, my daughter."

- Louis Carroll with help.

Dear Ida,

Your father and I were very unhappy about your last letter. What are you doing at school with all that hard earned money that your father has slaved for and I have taken in wash for? We have so much trust in you and now you've disappointed us. Why are you going out with a Jewish Negro?

We love you, Ida, and have devoted our whole elderly years to your happiness and here you go turning around and twisting the aged bones in our gnarled arms. We always gave you everything you wanted. When everyone else bought a green rubber raincoat, we gave you a green raincoat. We also gave you purple knee-length socks and an aqua blue skirt, when you said you had to have it to get into the sorority. We even bought you that Sting-Ray, much as we had to mortgage our three tenements in Montpelier. But no, that wasn't enough for you. You have hurt us very badly.

We thought the March on Washington was fine for the people in Washington, when you said it was a good thing. We thought it was fine for you to picket Woolworth and the World's Fair, but aren't you going a bit far, I mean, think of your children. We understand your wanting to rebel. Both your father and I thought woman suffrage was a good thing, but there is a limit to revolutionaryism. Where have we gone wrong?

Do you remember the church social your senior year of high school, when you went with that nice Smith boy? You know, the guy with the blonde crewcut and blue eyes, six feet tall. You were so happy then and he was such a nice boy. He now has a very good job in the gas station and makes at least $48 a week. He still asks about you when giving us green stamps. Why are you going out with a Jewish Negro?

I remember when you came home for your first vacation at the beginning of your freshman year. You had nice short blonde hair and were so friendly and clean. Why did you have to let it get long and greasy? Why did you buy those black leotards? And where did you find that Jewish Negro?

Perhaps there's a few things you don't know about Jews. I just talked to Parson Pibbles last week, and he proved to me beyond a doubt that the Jews killed Our Lord. He also suggested that some of these Jews might have also been Negroes. He also told us about the first Negro, Ham. Ham saw his father Noah, drunk and naked and laughed. You wouldn't do this to your mother and father, so how could you go out with someone who has ancestors who did that?

Aren't you proud of your ancestors? We have sat around the stove at home many times when you were young as I told you the story of the first American in our family. She was also named Ida, and came over on the Mayflower as a bond servant to become happy in the free New World. She was a good, strong woman and very wealthy in her land dealings with the Indians. With all this in your blood, do you still want to introduce this impurity to our family? Doesn't your new boyfriend smell funny? I've heard Negroes have a funny smell from Mrs. Pibbles, who went once to Boston. Of course I didn't tell her that you had anything to do with a Negro, because I'd never be able to go to Thursday Night Bingo at the church after that. You have put us in a very unfortunate position and after all we've done for you.

Sometimes when I think how much we have taught you and loved you and think of this present betrayal, I begin to cry. Do you like to hear that your mother is crying, that you have brought pain to that old gray head? Your father and I sometimes just sit in front of the television and while Ed Sullivan is on, we can't see the show through the foggy tears in our eyes. We're sort of old folks and television and you are the only two joys we have left and your present actions are dampening both. If you continue your present behavior we may just pack up for St. Petersburg, Florida, and leave you without a cent. Now, we are not trying to pressure you, we told you that you could do whatever you wanted, within reason, but, I think that this time we know what is best. A Jewish Negro is definitely out of the question.

We want you to sit down and really think about what you are doing. We realize fully, the impetuosity of youth and how once in a while they do things without sufficient thought. Your extreme rebellion is not showing the maturity and understanding that we expect of a girl your age. We thought you could possibly be in the Miss Vermont pageant this week and really make us proud of you, but we think that what you are doing is not in the style of the truths that Miss Vermont would mean to us and we are quite relieved actually, that you didn't make us ashamed of you in public.

When I was young, things were different. Children didn't get away with the things we see going on nowadays. But we decided to live with the times, to show you how much we had faith and respect for you, to keep you from having any of the neuroses that so many inhibited youngsters have these days. But I guess we let you go too far. I can't go on this way Ida, I'm starting to cry again. We're going to die soon, your father and I, and before I close my eyes for that last great rest, I'll see that you mend your ways my dear girl. That's all for now except we're taking you out of school and if you're not a virgin, we'll certainly make some trouble for that Jewish Negro friend of yours. We don't mean to be hard on you child, but we really do know what's best.

Your loving mother,
Virginia

The Campus Heard-From

by Kim Boriskin

The following has been read and approved by censor #L-43719. Last week everyone heard, from either the Free Press or the radio, that President Fey had resigned to become president of the University of Wyoming. There were many reactions to this announcement, but the most common by far was that he would be missed.

President Fey has always been a topic of conversation on campus. He has been criticized because he supports compulsory ROTC; kidded about his Sting Ray (Contrary to popular belief, its license plate is not "Fey"; it is one of the licenses numbered below 100 that are available to high state employees, of which the president of the state university is one.); dubbed Smilin' Jack; and generally discussed in connection with a variety of subjects. Indeed almost a whole issue of the CYNIC (April Fool issue, 1963) was devoted to kidding him, and a story on the front page was no more than an editorial criticizing his refusal to allow UVM to appear on "College Bowl," although it was disguised as a report of how we fared on that program. Last spring, when a possible tuition increase was announced for 1964-65, the consensus on campus was that he had not really tried to keep the tuition down. However, going into the situation a little deeper, it was evident that he did try everything to keep the tuition down, but that the task was hopeless.

If there was anything wrong with President Fey's six years here it is that he was too ambitious for UVM. He tried to accomplish too much for the finances available to UVM. He was the victim of a state that did not have enough money for all its enterprises, and decided that UVM was one item they had less than enough money for. However, despite the handicap of no money, he nonetheless managed to accomplish an awful lot. There are several new buildings (at least one of which is more of a showpiece than an educational facility, although that is minor), better faculty salaries (Other schools have been passing us by in that area, but for the money available to UVM, I think our professors are doing reasonably well.), an expanded graduate school, a winning football team(!), and many other, smaller things. Who knows but that by July 31, when Pres. Fey serves his last day here, East Hall may finally have been subjected to urban renewal.

Nobody wants to criticize or kid a bad president, and not many miss him. But John T. Fey was criticized and kidded — and praised. He was an excellent president for UVM, and he will be missed. One can only hope that the University of Wyoming appreciates their new president.

Yes, I know that Pres. Fey has three more months to serve, and that I therefore used the past tense improperly, but his three months will probably be similar to the two and a half months the President of the United States has after election day. (Maybe I'm wrong; I hope so.)

I hope that the little dissertation above didn't sound like a eulogy, because it wasn't meant to be.

Finally, while on the subject, I hope the people responsible for finding a new president work good and hard; they will have to if they hope to find anyone resembling Pres. Fey, and they will look awfully bad by comparison if they don't find someone comparable.

The title of this column is only a second choice. The title I wanted was "Signs Along The Cynic Route," but I was unable to use it. I was ready, and even eager, to put in a statement saying that the column had nothing whatever to do with the CYNIC, but that the "Cynic" (no extra caps, notice) in the title was meant for me only. The editor of this august journal, an erstwhile, bright-eyed lad, refused permission to use the title because of unwanted associations. He seems to feel that nobody can be cynical but the CYNIC, which isn't.

The Free Press, you will recall, was quite vociferously against G.L. Rockwell visiting UVM (which was none of its business). However, if one were to use the logic often displayed in that same sheet, perhaps one might come to the conclusion that it has Nazi leanings. I shall explain.

Rockwell, a few years ago, sent General Douglas MacArthur a letter telling him that he was the only one who could save the country, and asking MacArthur why he didn't run for President. Instead of saying that he couldn't possibly take such a question from a person like Rockwell seriously, the General only said that his business (he was president of Remington Rand at the time.) took all his time. Later, when Gen. MacArthur died, the Free Press had nothing but praise for him, and used the word hero any number of times.

Now, applying the Free Press logic, it follows that anyone who doesn't repudiate Rockwell is at least a Nazi sympathizer. Anyone who praises such a person upon his death is therefore also a sympathizer. MacArthur did not rebuff Rockwell properly, and was therefore a Nazi sympathizer. The Free Press called MacArthur a hero, so they are sympathizers too. Q.E.D. (Or is it just that the Free Press could use a refresher course in logic?)

Everyone knows that Rockwell is a jerk and that Nazism is evil. Now that Rockwell has had his say in the CYNIC, does anyone care to repudiate his arguments logically and in detail? God knows that we have as well as a few Nazi sympathizers, plenty of experts — qualified, self-proclaimed, lay and otherwise — on this campus who know all about the evils of Nazism. We have the anti-anti-Semites, the scholars, the professional Jews and a few others. Where are they? Do they believe that answering Rockwell is giving him arguments underserved dignity? Then we must assume that they are either not doing their jobs as teachers, or that they think so highly of the intelligence of UVM students that they believe no explanation is really necessary. If the former is the case, a reform of the faculty is in order. If the latter is the case then they must abandon the argument that America can become another Germany. Either way, why the silence?

This University is approved by Faculty, Administration, Students, CYNIC, Church, Post Office and the New Frontier. GUARANTEED 100% STERILE.

The drive will be held at UVM on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 5th and 6th, at Billings, and Waterman. A major portion of the money collected at UVM will go toward a special student section of the Library. The signature sheets signed by the contributors will be on permanent display in the room. The UVM S.A. Senate recommended that each person contribute one dollar to the drive. (Credit: Scott, S.P.S.)

Fey Follows In Footsteps

When Dr. John T. Fey resigns from the University of Vermont presidency he has held six years, he will mark the second successive UVM president to have served that tenure.

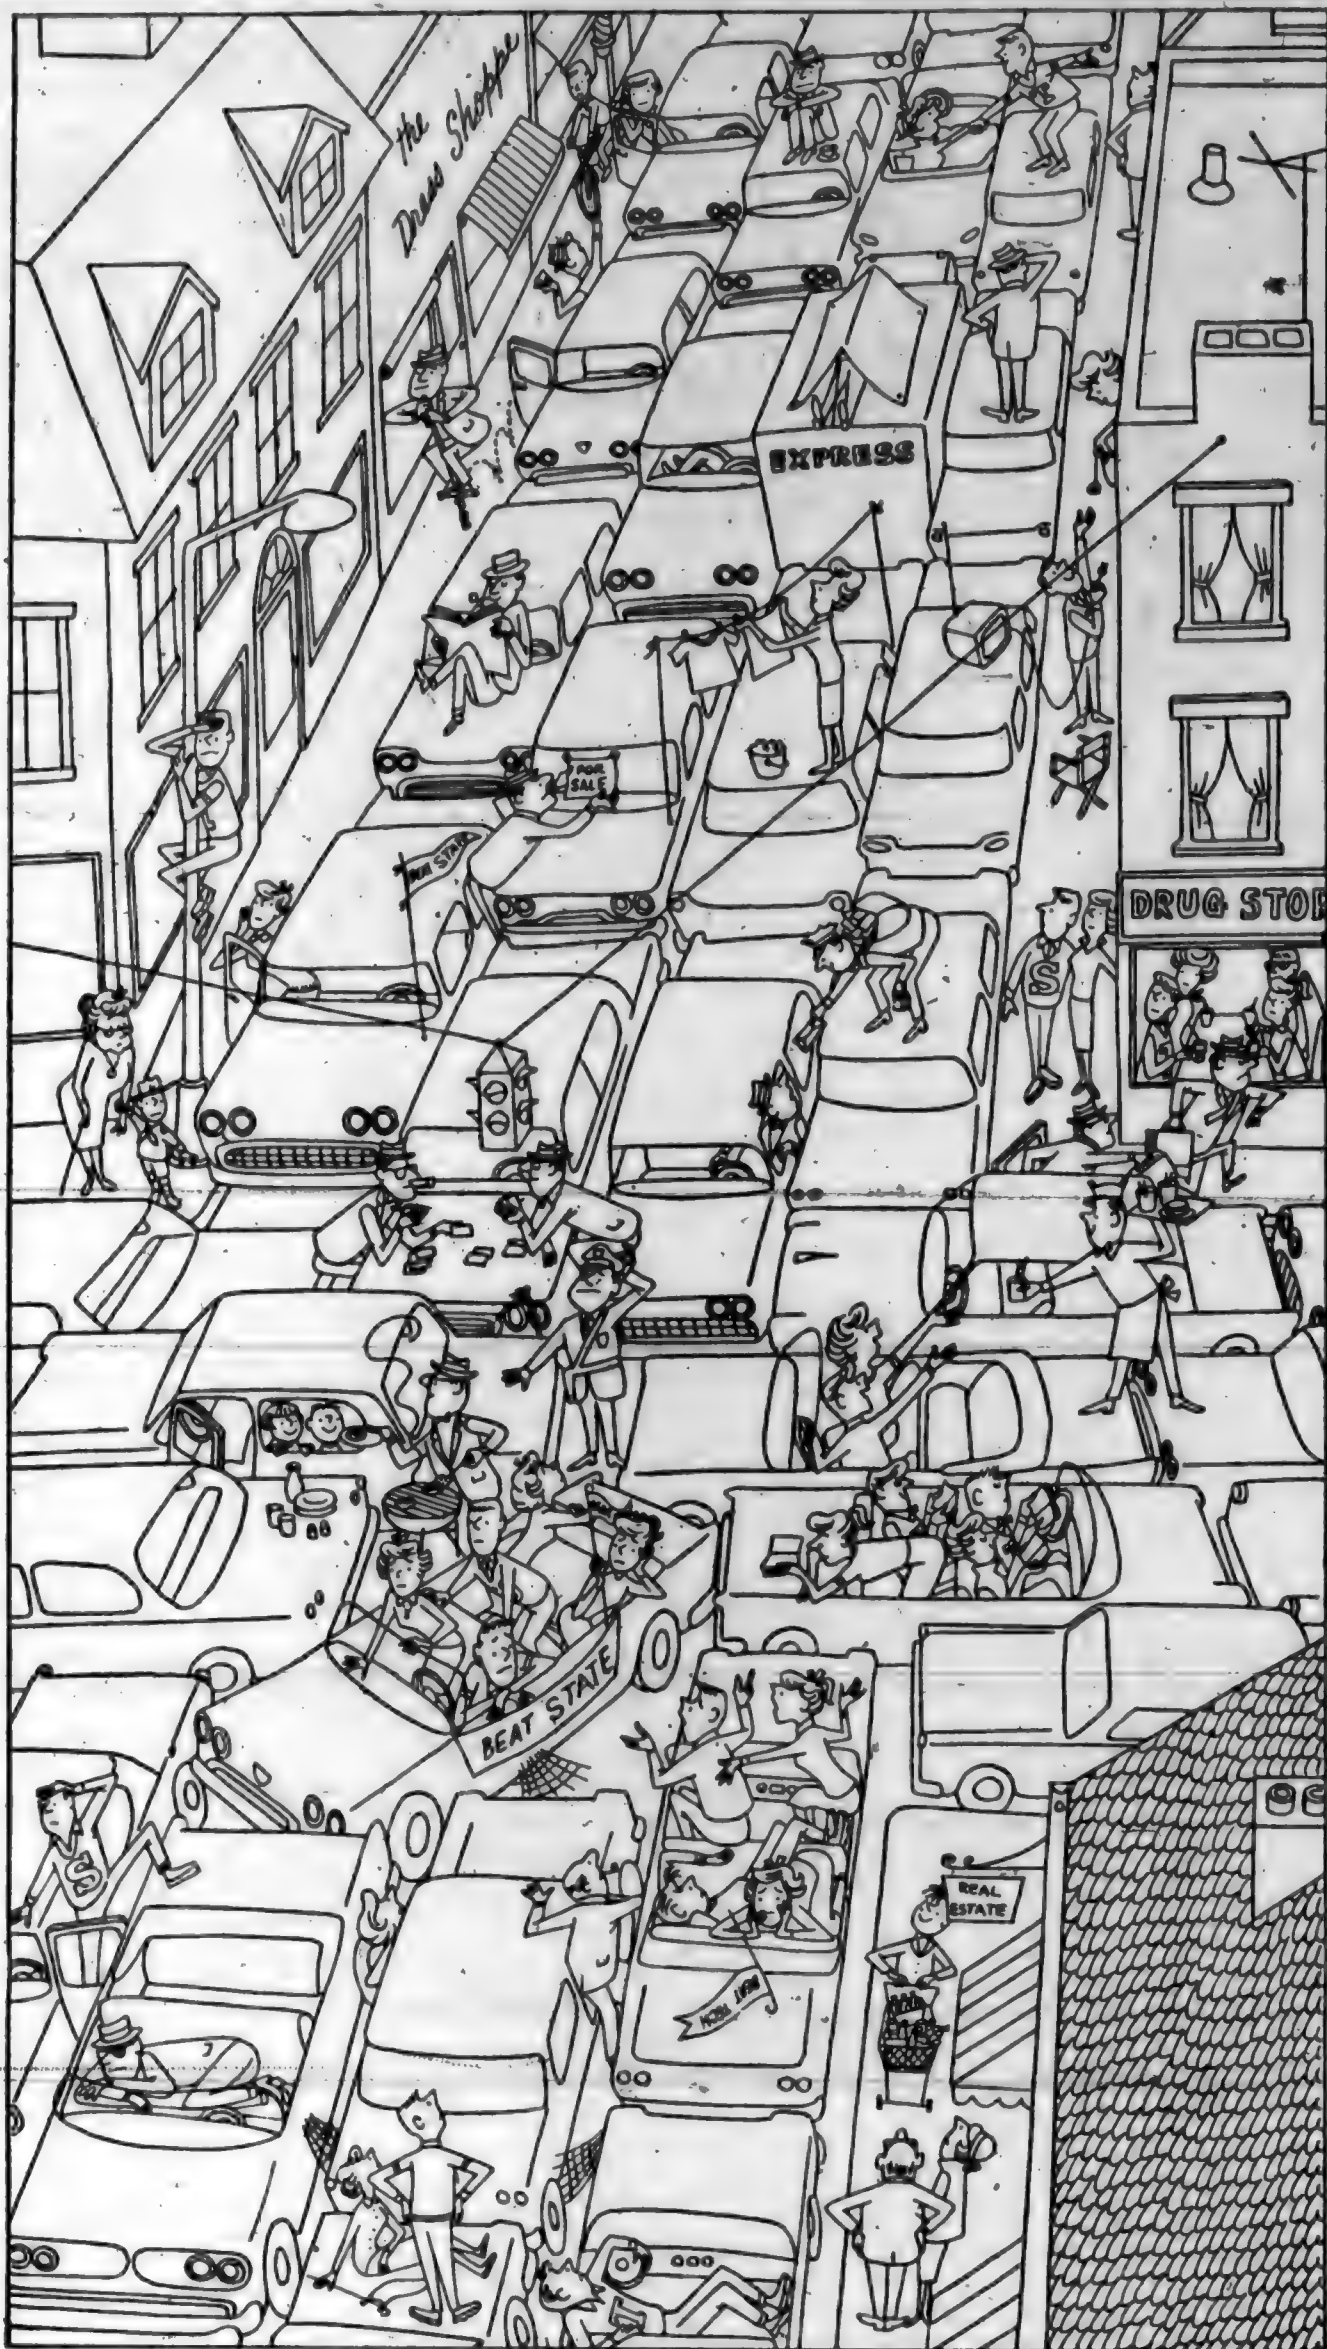

The 17th president of this oldest Vermont higher education institution, Dr. Fey succeeded Dr. Carl W. Borgmann in 1958, when the latter resigned to direct the newly-created Ford Foundation Division of Science Engineering. Dr. Borgmann served at Vermont from 1952-58.

When Dr. Fey assumes the presidency at the University of Wyoming, he will join two other former University of Vermont presidents who are presiding over other universities. John S. Millis, president at Vermont from 1941-49, has served as president of Western Reserve University in Cleveland, O., since leaving Vermont. William S. Carlson, who succeeded Dr. Millis and preceded Dr. Borgmann at Vermont, is currently head of another Ohio seat of learning, the University of Toledo. Dr. Carlson served from 1950-52.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"WELL, DID YOU FAST TALK HIM INTO CHANGING THAT GRADE ON YOUR TERM PAPER?"

Can you avoid living in "Jamsville"?

It won't be easy. By 1980 most Americans will live in 40 large metropolitan areas—each with more than a million population. To keep your community from becoming a "Jamsville" will take people with ideas—ideas that can help cities move more traffic swiftly, safely and economically.

Some of the ideas come from the men and women of General Electric who, in effect, form a "Progress Corps."

In major cities, they're helping to develop balanced transportation built around rapid rail-transit systems . . . and they're providing advanced equipment to power and control the trains. They're also developing a TV monitoring system that enables a single engineer to control miles of auto traffic . . . a jet engine that speeds commuters in a hydrofoil ship over the waves . . . and another jet engine to lift travelers over traffic via turbocopter at 150 mph.

Traffic is only one of many problems General Electric people are working on. Their numerous projects, in this country and around the world, demand a variety of talents: engineering, finance, marketing, law, physics and many others.

If you'd like to join the "Progress Corps" after graduation, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified young people begin their careers at General Electric.

Burlington Couple Heads Family Associates Of UVM

The Family Associates of the University of Vermont have named a Burlington couple, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyman, to serve as presidents of the parents organization for the coming year.

They will take over the reins in September from Mr. and Mrs. E. James Flood of Yonkers, N.Y.

The Lymans are serving this year as vice presidents of the Family Associates. Dr. and Mrs. Roy Neumeister of Brattleboro, are also serving as vice presidents and were re-elected to that office at a weekend meeting on the Vermont campus.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roney, Burlington, were also elected to serve as vice presidents of the Family Associates next year. Mr. and Mrs. William Cronin of Richmond were elected secretary; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oliver of Burlington, who served as secretary to the organization this year, were elected treasurer for the coming year.

The election came as more than 100 parents turned out for a weekend planned for them by their fellow parents of the Family Associates.

The Family Associates, which this year has given sets of encyclopedias for use of students in the men's and women's residence halls and at Billings, where a selection of magazines has also been given, Saturday voted a gift of $2500 for the University's annual giving program.

Under the program, 50 per cent of each gift will go to help build an endowed faculty chair fund; 25 per cent to help build an endowed scholarship fund; 10 per cent for library enrichment; 10 per cent for the President's Fund; and five per cent to help provide graduate fellowships.

The Associates last year gave a gift of $4500 to the University. This year's gift will be made at Commencement. It brings to $7,000 the total gifts to the University by the Associates, not counting the special gifts made to enrich student life.

Fleming Museum Holds Fine Arts Festival

Patrons on hand for the start of the ninth annual Festival of Fine Arts at the University of Vermont on Sunday (May 3) will be able to span four centuries without ever leaving the Fleming Museum.

The opening of the Festival on Sunday afternoon will find the marble court the scene of a recital of Elizabethan and Baroque Music while in another area, a large exhibition of avant garde painting and sculpture will be on display.

Other events in the festival include Moliere's play "Tartuffe," presented by the University Players on May 7-8-9 in the Arena Theatre, the opening of the student art exhibit of painting, sculpture, and crafts in the Billings Center on May 10, a panel discussion on May 14 on "Art Now," the theme of the avant garde display, and a recital of modern dance on the Redstone lawn on May 17. The recital will be presented by Norma Albert, instructor in dance, and her students.

Highlights of the recital of old music will feature Miss Nola Marberger at the harpsichord and tenor Roland Patzer.

"Art Now" is an exhibition selected from the current New York scene with 16 painters and sculptors represented by 24 works: non-objective, college, hard edge, abstractionist, abstract expressionist, junk sculpture, new realism, and "Pop Art."

The exhibition will continue through May 24.

mont basketball player, now a sports writer in Stamford, Connecticut, has helped recruit a fine football player for UVM from that area. This player is 6 feet, 2 inches tall, weighs 195 pounds and is an All-State tackle who'll probably be converted to guard at college. Although John "Moose" Donnelly has been receiving all the publicity, his younger brother Joe "Don" is also an outstanding performer on the links. Vermont hoop rival St. Michael's, with the return of stars Richie Tarrant and Ed Kryger have added a formidable opponent for next season. Their new foe is Long Island University of Brooklyn, who have four sophomores back from last year's fine club, including former All-City, Columbus High School star 0-4 jumpingjack, Albie Grant.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

By Richard Rappaport

Last Monday evening, coach Robert Clifford and his wife saw the comical English film "Tom Jones."

While this movie was extremely hilarious, I am quite sure that the coach agrees with me when I say that there is nothing comical about any of his Vermont football squads, especially this year's.

The appointment of Clifford as coach in the spring of 1962 marked the conclusion of a long era when Cat games did unfortunately often resemble comedy movies, with tragedy replacing humor, and UVM receiving the brunt of the unpleasant results.

Clifford's squads play smart, hard-nosed and fairly conservative, but effective football. This year's squad will be no exception and could be one of, if not the best UVM team in the school's history.

This Saturday afternoon, spring practice comes to a close with the annual intra-squad at Centennial Field. In this contest the entire squad of over fifty men will be divided as evenly as possible, and will face each other under game conditions, such as referees, etc. with the exception of kickoffs.

Films will be made of the game and will be carefully studied by the coaching staff. The individual performances in this contest will have a considerable influence on the selection of next fall's starting unit.

Familiar faces to UVM football fans who will be missing from this game include halfback Ken Burton, who is graduating, his running mate Deane Kent, who has a bad back which will be operated on this summer, and captain Ron Hertel who is recovering from a knee operation. Sophomore guard John Sullivan broke his leg in practice, and of course will not see action. Quarterback Dick DeFeo transfer from Northeastern, who is not very well known to most college fans, has unfortunately left school permanently, which is a great loss to the team.

This game should be quite an exciting and bruising contest and should give Cat fans an answer to such important questions in many peoples' minds, such as, can Ken Andrade adequately replace Burton? and will the Cats find the ends they need so badly?

I'm sure the answer to these questions will be in the affirmative, but to make sure, why don't you attend the game yourself. It starts at 2:30 Saturday afternoon at Centennial Field.

Also this weekend, don't forget to watch the baseball team attempt to get back into the Conference race when they meet defending champions, the University of Connecticut Huskies on Friday at 4:00 p.m. and Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

Turning from the Vermont baseball scene we go to the major leagues and a UVM first semester senior, who has an extremely interesting and unique hobby in relation to this sport. This individual is Bill Sosnowitz of Stamford, Connecticut, who memorizes baseball schedules.

Bill began this hobby in 1959 when, due to his interest in baseball he committed the Dodgers' complete schedule of games to be played that season to memory. In addition to the Dodgers, he also began memorizing the complete schedules of the Yankees in 1960, the Mets in 1962, the Red Sox in 1963, and the Cardinals and the Giants this year.

Besides baseball schedules "Diamond" or "Wild" Bill, as he is called by his friends, while in high school, also learned the New York Knickerbocker schedules, but he has not continued to memorize them while in college.

He related to me, that before each season begins, he spends one weekend committing the schedules of the teams (there are six this year) to memory.

Not only does he learn schedules, but he can relate the highlights of almost all Yankee, Dodger and Met games since he began memorizing their schedule of games.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Holy Cross is the highest nationally ranked New-England collegiate baseball team, gaining thirteenth place in the College Baseball Weekly's poll. Connecticut, although sporting a weak record of under .500, received honorable mention ranking, which would place it in the top forty.... Fred Willis, Former Ver-

Scrimmage Saturday

When the University of Vermont football team concludes spring drills on Saturday afternoon with the annual scrimmage, Bob Clifford will have at least four full units available for action but he'll also have almost a full "non-available" unit.

The injury bug, which on the whole stayed clear of Vermont last fall, has claimed a letterman and a highly promising freshman this spring. Both John Sullivan, a guard, and Bob Florczak, an end, are sidelined with fractured ankles. Florczak has impressed the coaching staff with his end play, a position where Vermont does not have a single player returning who has ever caught a pass in a varsity game.

In addition, Capt. Ron Hertel has had to pass up spring drills because of a knee operation, while Deane Kent, leading pass receiver last fall, is missing both track and football this spring because of an ailing back.

Several other squad members are nursing a variety of minor injuries, but hope to see at least limited action on Saturday.

Tennis Team Topples Union

The University of Vermont tennis team made an impressive debut in its season opener Friday, defeating Union College, 8-1.

Dr. Fred Marston's Catamount netmen turned in the near sweep on the indoor courts at Al Gutterson Field House after being rained out on the outdoor courts.

Vermont's No. 1, junior Dick Holden, started the landslide by defeating Short, 6-2, 6-0. Holden then combined with UVM's No. 2, George Cook, to defeat Powell and Disheim in doubles, 6-3, 6-0.

The complete results are as follows: Holden (UVM) def. Short (U), 6-2, 6-0; Cook (UVM) def. Rowell (U), 6-1, 6-4; Dickerson (UVM) def. Disheim (U), 6-4, 7-5; Ratner (UVM) def. Lessor (U), 7-5, 6-0; Freedman (UVM) def. Apter (U), 6-2, 6-4; Howritz (U) def. Behrend (UVM), 6-2, 9-7.

Doubles: Holden and Cook (UVM) def. Rowell and Disheim (U), 6-3, 6-0; Ratner and Freedman (UVM) def. Short and Lessor (U), 6-8, 6-1, 6-2; Dickerson and Callahan (UVM) def. Unterbert and Walker (U), 5-7, 6-0, 6-0.

Freshman Win

The UVM Frosh opened their track season with a 88-34 win over Lyndon Institute Saturday at Centennial Field.

Keith Keiderling scored a double victory in putting the shot 45-7 and the discus 143-4. Another double for UVM was picked up by Doug Kibbe, running the mile in 4:43.5 and the half mile in 2:07.1.

Dave Matthews won the 100 in 10.1 and the low hurdles in 21.9.

Other Vermont winners - Fyles pole vault 10-5, Ferriter 440 in 52.1, Hagar high jump 6 1/2, Nolan 220 in 25.1.

For Lyndon, Herbert won the broad jump 20-8 1/2, and Buzzi the high hurdles 16.4.

Junior right-hander Al Foster, shown here, is scheduled to face Connecticut Friday in the opener of a two game series. (Credit: Scott, S.P.S.)

This past weekend, the University of Vermont baseball team made an unsuccessful trip to Amherst, Massachusetts, to open their 1964 Yankee Conference schedule against U. Mass. The Cats dropped a heartbreaking decision, Friday, 3-2, and then were shut out, Saturday, by the score of 4-0.

In Friday's contest, junior left-hander Carl Martin hurled a splendid three-hitter until the ninth when he became tired, and had to be replaced by Bill Christie with men on second and third and one out.

The three Mass. runs scored almost immediately after that, on a bloop single, a steal home, and a passed ball which resulted in the loss being charged to reliever Christie.

Vermont had opened the scoring in the fifth inning when right fielder Pete MacDonald hit a single up the middle scoring first baseman Mike Benway who had walked, and had taken second on Martin's sacrifice.

The Catamounts scored their final run in the ninth on Jim Brennan's walk with the bases loaded which forced MacDonald in from third with the second run.

The outstanding hitter for Vermont in this game was third basemen Bob Cronin with four hits and Pete MacDonald with the other two out of the team total of six.

On Saturday, coach Ralph Lapointe sent his ace right-hander Al Foster to the mound to face the Redmen.

Foster ran into difficulty in only one inning, the fourth, but, it proved to be quite sufficient as his teammates gave him little offensive support.

In that inning, U. Mass. scored its four runs on a single, three walks, and a pinch double which cleared the bases.

The Cats had a threat in the second and sixth innings, but they were effectively squelched by U. Mass. starter Ron Corey.

The Mass. pitcher walked the first two men to face him in the second inning on eight straight pitches. After a sacrifice bunt put runners on second and third with only one out, Corey bore down and retired the next two Vermont hitters to end the inning.

Center fielder Bob Johnson and first-baseman John Tartera, (who missed Friday's game due to a twisted ankle), both recorded their second hits of the contest to lead off the sixth inning. After Corey disposed of the following two batters, Blanchard walked to load the bases. However, the threat ended when Mike Benway flied to center field to conclude the inning.

Vermont's five hits were registered by Tartera and Johnson, who had two each, and Benway, who had one.

UVM now 0-2 in the Yankee Conference will be out to even its league record when it opposes the University of Connecticut this Friday and Saturday afternoon at Centennial Field.

U. Conn. last year's Conference champions are having a very shaky start this season with a 1-3 overall mark. In league play the Huskies have defeated Mass. 3-1, while losing to Rhode Island 6-1 and twice to Maine last weekend 5-3 and 5-4. However, one should not be fooled by the Huskies weak beginning, since they are always one of the toughest teams in the league, as evidenced by their outstanding overall record in Conference play during the last few years.

While their opening two contests were a little disheartening, the Cats should realize that they are far from being out of the league race. This is due to the fact that this year's race is a very close one and a record of 7-3 should be good enough to win the title.

Without a doubt the most significant series in the Conference will take place this weekend when the two leading teams, Maine and Rhode Island clash for undisputed possession of first place.

VOL. 82 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, BURLINGTON, VERMONT MAY 8, 1964 NO. 9

Fleming Exhibition Features "Pop Art"

"Art Now", an exhibition of avant garde painting and sculpture, is on display in the Fleming Museum on now, running through May 24.

The exhibition is a part of the ninth annual Festival of Fine Arts at the University of Vermont.

Sixteen painters and sculptors are represented by 24 works, including non-objective, collage, hard edge, abstractionist, abstract expressionist, junk sculpture, new realism, and "Pop Art."

The big piece of the show is a 10 x 16 foot canvas in four parts by "Pop" artist Tom Wesselman. Called "Still Life No. 35", it offers super-lifesize cola bottles and a loaf of supermarket bread. Another "Pop" artist, Robert Indiana, is represented by his now famous six-foot "Eat" and "Die" canvases. Big as life is Wayne Thibaud's picture of a beplumed show girl.

"Pop Art", the biggest thing to hit New York since the advent of abstract expressionism, has been widely published as the "New Art" of the 1960s. Thibaud's recent New York exhibit was given a color spread in Time.

Contemporary abstract painting is represented by Sally Drummons who covers canvases meticulously with small dots of color; the late Morris Louis whose "Pogo" is a long narrow picture of a few brilliant stripes of color; Raymond Parker paints great lozenges of pure color against the bare canvas. There are also collages in cut and riveted sheet aluminum by Conrad Marca-Relli, and quilt patterns painted on old quilts by Ann Wilson. One of the latter is called "Euclid In Vermont."

Another work of particularly Vermont interest is "Baba Yagga," an abstraction of chevron stripes by Kenneth Noland who teaches at Bennington College, and "Cool Summer," a canvas with billowing clouds of color by Helen Frankenthaler, a former Bennington student. Irwin Tutti, whose work has appeared in several Fleming Museum exhibits, and who summers in Waitsfield, is represented by a huge oil painted in three parts. Great thick strands of pigment weave across the canvas.

In sculpture there are Barrie McDowell's heads, "like empty eggs opened at one end, and Richard Stankiewicz' famous figurative pieces built up with bits and pieces of junk-yard steel and iron. "Pop" artist Andy Warhol's two "Brillo" boxes are just that, but made of wood instead of cardboard. Roger Bolomey's monumental sized "Mahopac No. 2" in polyurethane, though completely abstract, may appear straight forward and reassuring in contrast.

The works in the exhibition have been loaned by New York galleries, private individuals, and the Bundy Art Gallery in Waitsfield, Vermont.

Negative Nod To Nudists

MOUNT CARROLL, ILL (CPS) — The president of Shimer College, who wants to rent out the campus for the summer, said last Friday that he plans to reject the offer of a nudist group.

"Our campus fronts right on two busy highways and I just don't think it would be appropriate," said Dr. F.J. Mullin. He added that there is no protective shrubbery.

"We don't like to discriminate against anybody, but I think a nudist group would just be out of place on our campus," he said. "Besides, we're right in town."

Roger Clogher, executive secretary of the Perfect Christian Divine Way Inc., Holy City, Calif., said that the group wanted to rent the campus for seven weeks.

He said that nudists from all over the nation would attend the gathering and it would be "somewhat nudeworthy."

Falls' Address Highlights Honors Day Convocation

Gregory A. Falls addresses University faculty and students on "Shakespeare — A Way of Thinking" at last Friday's Honors Day Convocation. (Credit: Scott, S.P.S.)

The statues of Ira Allen and Lafayette donned their traditional academic robe Friday as the University of Vermont observed Honors Day, the time when students are honored for scholarship and leadership and the University observes the birthday of its founder.

New members of class honor societies were introduced as were those students elected to membership in national honor societies. Individual award presentations were made to students for outstanding scholarship and service.

The Alpha Lambda Delta award for the senior with the highest average for four years went to Susan L. Krokow of Long Island City, N.Y. Fredric H. Weisberg of Stamford, Conn., received the Kidder Medal, given in memory of Dr. F.T. Kidder, Class of 1880, as the senior man ranking first in character, leadership, and scholarship.

Jean Lawson of Irasburg was the recipient of the Mary Jean Simpson cup as the senior woman best exemplifying the character, service, and constructive influence which Miss Simpson, former Dean of Women, strove to develop in undergraduate women. Miss Simpson made the presentation.

Gregory A. Falls, executive director of the School of Drama at the University of Washington, delivered the Honors Day address, "Shakespeare — A Way of Thinking." Falls was a member of the Vermont faculty prior to going to Washington and founded the University's Champion Shakespeare Festival.

He said that Shakespeare "epitomizes the word phenomena. He was a wonder in his own day and he is a phenomena of our time. His plays are seen every year in all major theatrical centers of the world. Yet, I wonder if we haven't oversold the great man. Is his reputation too formidable, is he too untouchable? Are we afraid of his intellectualism?"

Falls went on to say that the present mode of thinking about intellectualism is too limited and he used Shakespeare as his example. "Art, and this includes all forms, is as inadequately understood today with its signs and symbols as science was 80 years ago. Yet, today, science is regarded as the great area of intellectualism."

The written word, Falls said, is only part of the play and taking the written word as the whole, we have seen Shakespeare incompletely.

"To understand language, we must understand through the senses. The greatness of Shakespeare is from the playing of his plays in the theater and what they encompass. Those who fear his intellect are being too objective and analytical in their reading of him. They must see and hear his plays."

"Playing is the thing", he concluded.

Top-Seeded Debate Team Ends Fifth Out Of 1000

On the weekend of April 25th, the top-seeded University of Vermont debating team ended in fifth place in the 18th National Intercollegiate Debate Tournament at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, New York. Approximately 1,000 colleges and universities participate in intercollegiate debate.

UVM Debaters Elaine Zak of Burlington and Michael Cronin of Richmond defeated defending champion, Dartmouth, in the first round of the sudden-death finals on Saturday morning before they were defeated, 3-2, by Boston College in the quarter-final round.

B.C. went on to win second place in this World Series of intercollegiate debate after suffering a defeat at the hands of the new champion, the University of the Pacific of Stockton, California, in the final round.

Dr. Robert Huber, Chairman of the Speech Department and coach of the debate team, announced that Miss Zak and Mr. Cronin were seeded first after the eight seeding rounds, having lost only to Baylor by a 2-1 decision. The 7-1 record in the seeding round was the top record ever established by a UVM team in the seeding rounds. UVM won the national championship in 1950.

Cronin and Zak met and defeated the new champion twice this past year — the last time in the seeding rounds at the West Point Tourney. They have also defeated Georgetown University which was third, and U.S. Naval Academy which placed fourth.

The group spoke to classes, showed a film and administered the Peace Corps admission test several times during their visit. (Credit: Davidson, S.P.S.)

Ringgg---Hi-Al!!!

Who said there's no spirit in the dorms? It's a well known (the pun was unintentional) fact that the inhabitants of the freshmen dorms supply the campus with the spirited acts of rebellion that enliven the mundane academic life of UVM. Well, now there is a new "esprit de dorms" coming from the upperclassmen dorms. This new "spirit" is embodied in the greeting, "Hi-Al."

"Hi-Al" is all you hear on Austin third, the floor where this soon to be universal greeting originated. When floor member passes floor member, they don't just pass with heads lowered if they don't know each other, they say "Hi-Al" to each other. When floor member meets floor member in the bathroom in the morning, they don't say "Good morning," they say "Hi-Al." Why even when they answer the phone it's not "Hello" that they say, it's "Hi/Al."

They have even gone as far as to present a "Hi-Al Award" weekly to that member of the who (reading from the award proclamation) best exemplifies those qualities intrinsic to the three true Als on our floor:

Al Johnson for perseverance in academic endeavors. (He Studies all the time.)

Al Secunda for joviality in his social and academic endeavors. (He's a jolly good fellow.)

Al Lillen for silence in his social and academic endeavors. (He's our Harpo.)

Past winners of this comparatively new award have been Joe "Al" Andreas, Ron "Al" Hertel, and C. "Al" Lee Noyes.

The award, a loving cup with the inscription, "World's Best Hi-Al" on it, is given out at eleven-fifteen on Thursday (or Friday) night. The whole floor assembles around the bulletin board as the tense moment nears. When the winner is announced the floor members start chanting, "For he's a jolly good Al, etc." Then, after sufficient reflection, a flood of congratulatory notes cover the bulletin board. Some of these notes take the form of mock telegrams from LBJ and Khrushchev. Some come from other Floors and there's always one from room 312, the "House" keeper.

This "Hi-Al" spirit is not only confined to the floor, it is carried out onto the playing field. Austin third, the "Hi-Al" floor, is currently leading the MAT complex softball tournament with a perfect record.

Next time you pass Austin third, stop and look at the bulletin board and check the telephone list. It reads:

Stop by, and don't be afraid to say "Hi-Al" to any Al on the floor. Get to know your fellow floor mates. Start a "Hi-Al" on your floor.

UVM Graduates Serve As Peace Corpsmen

UVM graduate, Mark C.W. Schroeder, now a Peace Corps Volunteer, works on an experimental farm at Polshara, in Western Nepal. Here he looks over one of the farm's rice fields with Nepalese farm manager.

Since the Peace Corp's establishment just 3 short years ago, The University of Vermont has had eighteen of its graduates volunteer for service.

Earlier this year three corpsmen from UVM completed two years of service in the Philippine Islands: Phyllis Flattery, Charlotte J. Hough and Anne H. Wilson.

Among the remaining fifteen who are still serving, four had maored in Agriculture at UVM: John R. Ward and George S. Talbot, who are currently in Tunisia; Mark C. Schroeder, who is in Nepal; and Erwin Macy Davis Lemmon, who is in Pakistan. English majors Dorothy Anne Isham and Sheila F. McGinley are Corpsmen in Ivory Coast and the Philippines respectively.

UVM's ambassador Corpsmen to Latin America is Douglas G. Palin, working in El Salvador after receiving his degree in Education.

Other former Catamounts located on the African Continent are: Richard B. Burgess, who, after majoring in French, is now working in Sierra Leone; Daniel F. Doheny, an Economics major, and Electrical Engineering major Peter G. Snow, both of whom are hard at work in Nigeria; and Daniel J. Vigorone, currently in Ethiopia.

Peace Corpsmen who graduated from UVM include as well: Alice F. Battles, a General Science major, in Pakistan; Peter H. Prindle, in Nepal; Georgene E. Walter, who is serving in India after receiving her B.S. as a Mathematics major; and Roger H. Madon, a Biology major working in the Philippines.

Oct. 3 Slated For Homecoming

Vermont and those who have ties to her will mark the University's annual Homecoming Weekend for 1964 on the weekend of October 3, when the Catamounts of the Green and Gold will host the football Black Bears of the University of Maine at Centennial Field.

In announcing the choice of October's first weekend for Homecoming, President John T. Fey said he has asked Larry Van Benthuyssen, director of public relations, to serve as chairman and handle publicity for the weekend; Emil Spees, director of student activities, to serve as coordinator for planning of Homecoming Weekend events by and for students; Mrs. Constance Zolotas, alumni secretary, to serve as coordinator for planning of events by and for alumni; and Mr. E.J. Flood, president of Family Associates, or his representative, to serve as coordinator of events by and for parents.

Let's say for a minute, this is you.

Once you wear the gold bars of a second lieutenant in the United States Air Force, what's in store for you?

Well, you may fly an aircraft entrusted with a vital defense mission. Or you may lead a research team tackling problems on the frontier of knowledge. You'll be helping to run an organization that's essential to the safety of the free world.

Sounds like you'll be called on to shoulder a good deal of responsibility, doesn't it?

But when you come right down to it, that's what your college years have been preparing you for. You've got ability and a good education. Now's the time to put them to work!

You'll have every opportunity to prove your talents in the Air Force. By doing so, you can put yourself and your country ahead.

If you're not already enrolled in ROTC, you can earn your commission at Air Force Officer Training School—a three-month course that's open to both men and women college graduates. To apply, you must be within 210 days of graduation.

House Slashes Education Bill

(CPS) -- Higher education last week suffered a $297.9 million defeat at the hands of the House Appropriations Committee.

The House, acting at the committee's request, slashed the $297.9 million in supplemental appropriations for 1964 in approving money bills for the college facilities act and other programs aimed at helping U.S. colleges and universities.

Approved, however, by the House was a $493 million appropriation for the facilities act including $230 million for undergraduate college construction; $60 million for graduate facilities grants; $169 million for academic facilities loans and $3.9 million to help enact the program.

But the appropriations only apply to fiscal 1965 -- the year beginning this coming July 1.

Congress had authorized an additional $266.7 million for the college construction act alone. The extra authorization was submitted in a supplemental appropriations bill for the current fiscal year which was killed by the Appropriations Committee.

Other supplemental money requests denied by the committee affecting higher education during the current year were:

-- $30.4 million to implement the health professions educational assistance act. It provides loans and grants for building medical and dental schools as well as loans to medical students.

-- $1.5 million to fill vacated fellowships under the National Defense Education Act (NDEA).

The complex result of the House action, if left untouched by the Senate and its appropriations committee, looks like this:

Until July 1, 1965 (the beginning of the fiscal year 1966), funds for the college construction act will be limited to $230 million instead of $460 million authorized for undergraduate facilities grants; $60 million instead of $85 million authorized for graduate facilities grants; and $169 million instead of $240 million authorized for college construction loans.

Exact language of the college construction act provides that amounts authorized, but not appropriated, for fiscal 1964 for undergraduate building construction ($230 million) and for construction loans ($120 million) may be added to 1965 or 1966 appropriations. But the House did not see fit to add it to the 1965 appropriations bill.

However, the $25 million authorized, but not appropriated, for graduate facilities grants may not be added to later appropriations bills.

Committee members said they disallowed the supplemental appropriations for the college facilities act because they lacked evidence that colleges and universities would be able to use the full amount of funds that could have been appropriated.

They stuck to this, despite prodding from the American Council on Education (ACE) that higher education is running $700 million a year behind on construction needs.

Other money bills approved for fiscal 1965 by the House -- but without the above mentioned supplemental requests -- were:

-- $85.8 million for the health professions educational aide act. It was the full amount asked, including $75 million for construction grants and $10.2 million for student loans.

-- $278.8 million for the NDEA. It was an increase of $37 million and included $136.5 million for student loans and $22.8 million for fellowships. Disallowed and lost forever was a $5.1 million supplemental request for the current year to fill the growing void in funds available for student loans.

-- $15.8 million for cooperative research -- a $4.3 million increase.

-- $18.6 million for the Office of Education -- a $3.8 million increase and a victory for U.S. Education Commissioner Francis Keppel.

-- $11.95 million for land-grant colleges, the full request.

-- $1.5 million for foreign language training and area studies. It was the full request and permits short-term study abroad to improve teaching of modern foreign languages and area studies.

Haugen Plans To Study As Fulbright Scholar

A University of Vermont senior who will be graduated in June will spend the next academic year in Norway, studying as a Fulbright scholar.

William Haugen of 35 Kingsland Terrace, Burlington, is the recipient of a Fulbright scholarship and plans to spend a year at the University of Oslo in Norway, pursuing independent study in chemistry.

"I'm not sure just what my exact program will be but it will be in the areas of theoretical chemistry (physical and organic)," says young Haugen whose father, Rolf Haugen, is a professor of political sciences and director of the Government Research Center at the University.

Haugen leaves for Norway in early August for a special orientation program with the fall term starting at Oslo on Sept. 1. While there, he will study the Norwegian language. He doesn't expect the language barrier to present much of a problem since English is spoken quite extensively in the city of and at the University of Oslo.

As an undergraduate, he has been a member of the Gold Key and Key and Serpent honor societies, of Sigma Xi, scientific honorary, a dean's list student, the University Players, the student guides, and of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He has been responsible for all of the lighting arrangements for the last three Kake Walks and designed some special systems. During his senior year, Bill has been conducting special research and working with the electron paramagnetic resonance spectrometer, studying molecular structure.

Haugen's father will be on sabbatical leave during the spring semester of the 1964-65 academic year and will be in Europe so there should be a family reunion taking place next spring. Before returning to the United States, Bill hopes to spend a couple of months travelling.

Then it's back to the U.S. to work for his Ph.D. degree.

CYNIC Salutes ... Ralph D'Altillia

By Janet Hadda

Ralph D'Altillia is a junior at UVM; in three years, he has made a very impressive name for himself here.

Ralph is president of the Junior Class, was a member of Key and Serpent and Gold Key, honoraries, and was an assistant Kake Walk director this year. In addition to these distinctions, Ralph is next year's captain of the basketball team. He commented on this, saying "I was very pleased and very honored when I was elected captain. We should have a good year -- we have a good ball club. I hope I can help the club."

Ralph, who lives in Union City, New Jersey, is an Economics major, who holds minors in Political Science and Speech. After graduation, he intends to go to graduate school. He would like to work in the field of management and sales and, therefore, will obtain his Master's degree in Management.

Being somewhat of an expert in athletics, Ralph has this to say about the program at UVM: "The school is expanding in every direction; it seems that the athletic program should be expanding with the school, but it isn't. Many people at the University criticize the athletic program, but they fail to realize that the athletic program here does not have a big enough budget to compete with the other teams in the Yankee Conference. Many more people should get out and give the teams more support. This would help the teams a lot more than criticizing them would."

Ralph feels that, out of all the activities in which he has participated on this campus, he has gotten the most out of being on the Kake Walk committee. The experience of working with others was valuable to him, as well as the satisfaction gained from putting work into the weekend, and then seeing successful results.

Ralph is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He firmly believes that the fraternity is necessary to help get the individual into the stream of university life. He feels that the fraternity has helped him to be a well-rounded person. He is more aware of living with different types of people. The importance of fraternity life on this campus is something which Ralph considers both good and bad. Ralph feels that a person who wishes to be active on campus, is literally pushed into joining a fraternity, because only through a group of this sort will he be well known enough to really branch out into campus organizations. This, of course, is bad for the independent who doesn't feel that he will fit into a fraternity. Fraternity is good, however, because it offers a wide range of experience and is the main strength of University social life.

Because Ralph is in the advanced ROTC program, he will attend army summer camp this year. He considers the advanced program a good one; he believes that if one has to serve anyway, it is to serve an officer than as a non-commissioned officer.

Of his coming to UVM, Ralph said: "I don't come from this state. I have a scholarship at UVM and I am very grateful for this since it gave me a chance to go away to school."

Why pay less than $10 for a canvas shoe?

Frankly, the Sperry Top-Sider canvas oxford is the most expensive you can buy. But it's worth every penny. The famous, exclusive anti-slip safety sole has made it the only shoe for men and women who know boats. (Great tennis favorite, too.) And the rest of the shoe makes it perfect for all casual wear: The non-chafe loose lining, that relaxes your foot. The double-deep heel cushion. The tailored looks. So why pay less, when you could wear fashion's famous Sperry Top-Sider canvas oxford for $9.95?

Thievery

In retrospect of the semester's events, a primary subject for discussion has been the prevalence of apathy on the UVM campus, an apathy revealed by students, faculty, and possibly the administration itself. Fostering debate of the various nuances of this topic, we feel we have offered the CYNIC as a forum for stimulating opinions which we hoped would prove enlightening and perhaps prompt intelligent response from our too-often lethargic readers. Pertinent to this discussion are two issues which as yet remain outstanding.

First, there is the issue of thievery, the incidence of which has been alarming this year. Comparatively large sums of money, expensive jewelry, clothing and bicycles seem to be among the most desirable and vulnerable articles. Statistically, there just couldn't be so many kleptomaniacs on campus, nor, practically, could one or two individuals be so unostentatiously concealing such an enormous amount of booty. But whether the stealing is being done by ten, twenty or one hundred students seems to be immaterial when the causes themselves are examined. Once again it is apathy which appears as the true criminal. A student is apathetic and shirks his responsibilities if he fails to put a lock on his bicycle, if he leaves valuables lying carelessly around his room, if he doesn't lock his door when going home for vacation, and, if need be, lock his door when he goes to classes in the morning and doesn't expect to return for several hours.

Granted, preventive measures can go just so far without impinging on one's social respectability. Sure - who wants to be known as being stingy or even anti-social? And, of course, it's not necessary to frisk a friend who's leaving your room after an hour's chat, nor is it necessary to give the third-degree to a guy who's standing innocently enough in the hall outside your room while he finishes a cigarette. But, what is that all of us become more aware of ourselves and of our moral responsibilities. A crime is committed not only when something is stolen from us, but also when we leave it around to be stolen, when we neglect to report it, when we, as witnesses, turn away from it; in short, when we fail to do anything at all about it except shake our heads and say, "Those are the breaks."

Parlez OÙ?

Also apropos of the apathy situation is the Dean of Women's recent decision to discontinue the French Dorm on Redstone Campus. Begun as an experiment last September, the French Dorm seemed to start off well with about 25 supposedly interested girls who either were majoring in French, or else were including the language as a significant part of their college curricula. How nice it was back in the Fall when, upon dialing extension 448, a caller could be greeted by a cheery "Bonjour". Unfortunately, enthusiasm waned; the girls, who at first were no doubt determined to speak and live French as much as possible, eventually abandoned their efforts. The once-promising French Dorm reverted to Robinson Hall, in effect, no longer distinguishable from Coolidge or Patterson or Mason or any other dormitory. When the time came to gather another 25 girls for next September's French Dorm, the task just couldn't be fulfilled. A few souls bravely exerted themselves, but in vain. Too many girls didn't care. And when Dean Harris declared the moribund experiment officially defunct, barely one protest could be heard.

Give

The drive for the JFK Memorial Library Fund began at every Vermont College campus May 4 and will culminate May 10. We are pleased to learn that SA has voted to recommend a contribution of one dollar per student. We, too, would like to urge every UVM'er to make his personal contribution to this worthwhile and honorable cause.

Letters To The Editor Jewish Conspiracy?

To the Editor:

As a member of that notoriously subversive urban minority group, it was with the greatest amusement that I read George Lincoln Rockwell's expose of the Semitic race as a communist front organization. It is certainly reassuring to see that the editors of the CYNIC recognize the need for injecting an occasional note of levity into an otherwise generally sober publication. And when the comic relief is supplied by such outstanding members of the entertainment world, what more can we ask?

Rockwell makes a few good points in his "World Race War." In fact, his major assumption is basically sound for first and foremost he assumes the stupidity of his audience. However, there are also one or two apparent contradictions in his article. For example, as diligent, enterprising communist leaders the Jews must necessarily be applying all their genius to the overthrow of the American government. Yet this would appear to be inconsistent with the common knowledge (at least in Vermont) that we already hold a controlling interest in the American economy. Why then are we trying to subvert our own economic interests?

And what about this world race war nonsense? There's no race war in Vermont. Everyone who lives here loves everybody else who lives here. There are no Negro hordes up here. If there were, things might be different. Hillel could open up a watermelon concession in Billings from which we would organize these black masses into goon squads. Having accomplished this they would be sent out to kidnap a few hundred WASPS for use as slaves on our halvah plantations in Flatbush. But, as I said, there aren't enough Negroes at our disposal here so what's the use of dreaming. It's just not like home. You see, the folks down home -- in Brooklyn, are in a position which Mr. Rockwell would no doubt find more to his liking. It's really quite beautiful! The Italians hate the Negroes, the Negroes hate the Puerto Ricans (who resent being considered black and hate the Negroes in return), the orthodox Jews hate the conservative Jews, the conservative Jews patronize the musically talented Negro who probably finds us equally entertaining. In short, we all live together in a wonderfully wholesome atmosphere of mutual hostility. But that sort of situation could never exist here.

Finally, readers, I urge you to write to the editors of the CYNIC demanding that they offer you more of the sort of thing that decorated page five on April 17. It's unconditionally guaranteed to stimulate -- or double your ignorance back.

THE SCEPTIC

"Communism is against the American way of life." - Al Capone

Here we are at the 1989 New York World's Fair. The crowd today is estimated to be around three million people. We are now walking down the John F. Kennedy Memorial Walk. Over to your left is the industrial exhibitions. You will notice the symbol of the fair, built by the United Steel Cartel, the triangle and periscope. The triangle stands for the trinity (which all civilized nations believe in) and the periscope stands for eternal vigilance against all unknown things. To your right is the states' area which most imposing attraction is that Granite mountain, an exact copy of Mount Mansfield. You will notice the maple tree in the middle of the mountain while an American flag flies on top. Loudspeakers to the side blare out "Moonlight in Vermont." To the left of the Vermont exhibit is the Mississippi pavillion featuring a display of African culture.

We are now entering the nations' section of the fair. Various enemies of the United States have chosen not to exhibit for political reasons. Noticeably absent are China, Brazil and Germany. Over here is the American pavillion which we shall enter.

The American pavillion is divided into several sections. First, by area, the South, North, East, West and Canada. The main theme of the pavillion is great Americans - George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Franklin Roosevelt and Lester B. Pearson. In the background are immigrant groups to the United States who overcame the handicaps of their race, creed and religion to become great leaders. For instance, here in the Italian section are busts of Lucky Luciano, (American-Italian immigrant) Johnny Dioguardi, and the Anastasia boys (Al and Tony, who worked their way from the docks to the barbershop). Across the way in the Irish sections are busts of Father Coughlin (also representing those of the Catholic faith), Joseph Kennedy and J.D. O'Hara (famous columnist of yesteryear). Represented in the Jewish section are Dutch Schultz, Lepke Buchalter and Jack (Ruby) Rubinstein (who went from cabaret owner to nationwide headlines in one shot). The German section is represented by only one great American, that great scientific genius. During the war, Werner Von Braun. Other great Americans fill up the floor, Gen MacArthur, Joseph McCarthy and Richard Nixon. Let us now proceed to the second floor.

On the second floor of the U.S. pavillion is represented a quaint little American village taken from West Virginia, piece by piece. Notice the quaint little out-house and the quaint little people asking for food and money. To the right in the industrial section of the pavillion is a row of varied and assorted electric chairs, the product of American ingenuity-death without pain. Isn't it wonderful what they can do nowadays.

Let us now continue down the promenade for there is yet more to come. At the food pavillion, one can get an assortment of food-pills to pep you up. In the amusement section a varied amount of fun and games awaits the casual visitor. The movie playing at the pavillion today is the "Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," the award winning comedy from England.

If you are spiritually tired and the days affairs have left you discomfited, we invite you to the spiritual section where a priest, rabbi, or advisor awaits you. The Christian, Jewish-Moslem and Agnostic churches of America have contributed much to make your life happier. The Christian church has loaned many pieces of art to the fair. Among them the famous Aschenback "Tre."

We hope you enjoyed your visit to the fair. You may exit by taking a left at the "free-Cuba" Batista memorial auditorium and pass under the Josef Stalin Memorial Arch. See you in 25 years.

Reasoning is a strange and wonderful process. We are amazed by it. Some people can reason, others cannot. In this case our thinking is directed towards the governing student body, the Student Association and its tyrannasoreus Rex brawn (i.e. it gives a big impression, but, oh, how small). Specifically, we are referring to the current controversy over the student newspaper, CYNIC. It seems that the people in this governing council (and we use the term loosely) are preparing to cut CYNIC monies in half. The reasoning goes if the newspaper is published once every two weeks, the quality will be twice as good.

Following this reasoning, it seems obvious that if we have one-half as many administrators, the efficiency will be twice as good. If we have one-half as many teachers, education will be twice as good. If we have one-half as many exams, they will be twice as easy. Of course if we pay one-half as much tuition we will get twice as many courses. And so on ad nauseum.

But to return to the issue at hand it is quite obvious that CYNIC funds are needed elsewhere immediately. The Student Association is in such need of funds it is scraping the bottom. Its varied program, which has increased in such great dimensions in the last few years, is drawing fantastic bills. We'd list the varied activities of the S.A., but space prohibits it. Maybe if S.A. dues were cut by 50%, it would be twice as active.

The problem, as we see it, from here is the badgering, money-conscience leadership of the student organization who are so aware of the student needs. The students, of course, don't care. Thus, the solution lies not in cutting CYNIC funds in half but shutting down the paper entirely. Equally, the Student Association should be abolished with all of its additional activities transferred to the Interfraternity Council. Eventually, these activities will be cut in half, and then wither away.

The point is obvious. University life is becoming a shell, a mere replica. Students move through four years of school looking collegiate, acting intellectual, and vegetating. Someday in our utopia, Student life will be cut in half to two years and everyone will be twice as happy. Blah, Blah.

QUESTIONS FOR THIS WEEK

1. What is the status of the "Let's take God out of the Chapel and put him in the coffee house where he belongs" movement.
2. Why did they call the new engineering hall, "Votey Hall," for elections?
3. Is it true that the sheep will be assigned peach cards next semester?

The Campus Heard-From

by Kim Boriskin

"Answer irreverency through absurdity." - M. Zpod

In this day and age of culture, gentility and refinement, it has come to pass that nobody really has it made until they have their picture on, of all things, a sweatshirt. Thus it is that in the Oregon Presidential primary Barry Goldwater was campaigning by selling Goldwater sweatshirts.

Now that there are Goldwater sweatshirts and Goldwater trading stamps, perhaps we could market several other items. One would be Goldwater gloves, but with each pair having only right-handed gloves. (Thank you, Dr. Strangelove.) The left-handed gloves could go to Adlai Stevenson. Another idea would be to put Barry's picture on every Welch's candy bar and every can of H.L.H. vegetables. Finally, someone should put out Barry Goldwater shovels for piling the you-know-what you-know-where.

Goldwater fans have been quietly doing their work of making America a colony of Heaven while the pinker elements among us sleep. Now, if you bother to listen to a TV station leave the air, you will not only hear the first verse of the "Star Spangled Banner," but the last verse as well. O, loved righteousness, we shall purify these heathen pinkies yet! Hallelujah, brethren.

Patriotism is supposed to be love of a person's country. Isn't it amazing, though, how a subtle change has come over our patriots recently? Now, instead of loving the United States, these whoopers and hollerers just hate everyone else a little more than they hate America.

The "Septic" has been accused of being pornographic; it is not (was not). The CYNIC probably will not be so accused, but one of the pictures of "Spring" last week sure came close. More power to the CYNIC.

The last two times Legn Bibb came to Burlington he came as a substitute for someone else. The earlier time it was for Josh White, and this last time for Theodore Bikel. Isn't it about time Lane Series brought him here as a regular feature, not as a substitute? Leon Bibb is one of the best singers around, and has a magnificent voice. He thrilled everyone who saw him last week. He certainly should be invited here as a main attraction.

Whatever happened to the "Fifteen Hundred Is Too Damn Much" Committee?

Next time any of you go to admire the Adirondacks from Battery Park, or whatever else it is that you do there, you might notice that there is a statue of Major General William Wells in the park. His claim to cast iron immortalization? He was a pioneer in the patent medicine field, and his Burlington factory was the home of Paine's Celery Compound. What a fitting companion to the Friendship Fountain, if any of the townies or seniors remember that particular fiasco.

Whose war cry was "Today the Playboy Club, Tomorrow the World"?

If there is anyone out there who knows how to react, an excellent book is John Howard Griffin's Black Like Me. It is the story of a white man who died his skin black and went through several Deep Southern states posing as a Negro. His story is one that must be read (despite the sensational advertising it has been given) if one is to get an idea of the South without actually going there. The story is both fascinating and disgusting, and one that certainly should be widely read.

Now, for a real Hollywood first, wouldn't it be something if a picture were made of the book? (Who knows; a musical comedy version is probably being planned this very moment.) I can see UVM's tuition going down before that ever happens.

Ex-Editor Praises Cynic

To the Editor:

Congratulations, dear Editor, to you and your staff for once more breathing a little fire into the tired, old CYNIC. Each of the recent issues has been a little spicier than the one before -- deee-lightful!

The new Septic, or Board of Sceptics, or whatever is the most consistently accurate column of pointed satire that I've seen in any college newspaper. I assume the anonymity serves the function of keeping the scalpel sharp, but I'd like very much to know the author's names. Maybe if it/they could be sent to me in a plain wrapper...

The editorial concerning fraternity discrimination at George Washington U. and UVM was very much to the point. The "Letters to the Editor" column indicates that intelligence may be staging a comeback on campus, and the comments of your correspondent, Mr. Boriskin are usually up to date and interesting. Yes, and I liked your front page handling of fraternity probation, especially in that it named names and dealt with real facts.

I came to NYU Graduate School in Greenwich Village, 10014 New York from UVM expecting to step from the political isolation of Winoski into a hotbed of radical student action and intellect. Instead, I found a campus paper which should be properly called The Status Quo, a security force which calls the cops when anybody gives a speech in favor of civil rights, and gum chewing girls who tease, or bend, or something their hair to spectacular heights. Oh yes, and Deansmanship is very big here too. The Status Quo (actually the real name is appropriate enough; it's called the Square Journal) has been running a for-real series on the Dean of Students which is now in its eleventh week. One dean, and I kid you not, is quoted as favoring, "...the teamwork of culture and business, through co-operation without compromise."

Yeah, so--uh-- keep up the anti-authoritarian hell raising, think angry, and put a comma between "What" and "Me Cynical."

Thanks, Students

Letter to Emil Spees,
Director of Student Activities

Dear Mr. Spees:

May I take this opportunity to extend thanks to you and through you to the students who helped to make the just completed parents weekend of the Family Associates a success.

As you know, this weekend was deliberately designed to be a weekend by parents for parents, and we think in general it worked out fairly well. I know that several of the residence halls arranged open houses, and that these proved a most popular part of the weekend for some of our parents. In addition, I know that many parents took advantage of the fact that our program left the dinner hour free for them to have dinner with their sons or daughters and I hope that this proved as pleasant for students as for parents. In addition, I know that many parents enjoyed a snack at Billings Saturday evening.

Will you relay the thanks of the Family Associates to all students who helped to make the past weekend a very pleasant success. Many thanks.

Sincerely,
E. James Flood
President, Family Associates

SA Reports... Club Evaluations

by Robert S. Lampke

Chairman S.A. Club Evaluations Committee

It is the purpose of the Club Evaluations Committee to "continually evaluate the functions, purposes, objectives and goals of all campus organizations that are recognized by the Student Association Senate and the Director of Student Activities Office, in an attempt to efficiently coordinate their efforts.

To help them accomplish this, evaluation sheets are sent out to all active organizations on campus that are currently receiving Student Association funds. This sheet is divided into three sections - membership, financial, and Club's value. Also the Club is asked to include when, then return the evaluation sheet, a breakdown of expenses and income so far for the year, along with a schedule of past and future special events, meetings and occasions.

Under membership the club is asked to list its present membership and also its membership during the past three years. They are asked what they attribute this increase or decrease in membership to and if they are satisfied with current membership. It has been found that most organizations are satisfied with membership that are small, provided they are of good quality and are hard-working and dedicated members.

Under the financial section of the form, the clubs are asked whether or not they collect dues and if they do, how much. They are also asked whether they have other forms of income other than Student Association funds and if so, what they are. The final question in this section is whether the organization feels that the S.A. Senate has been fair in its disposition of money for the particular club. Realizing that there are individual differences of opinion, it is possible to say that most organizations feel that the S.A. Senate has been fair in its disposition of money.

The final section is titled "Club's Value" and here the organization is asked to reply what they feel their club contributes towards its members future goals and ambitions. Here the replies vary depending on the nature of the organization, ranging from an insight into journalism that can be gained from working on the CYNIC of Ariel staff, to worthwhile knowledge about certain fields of engineering that can be gained by being a member of say, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Another question in this section is what does the club feel they contribute to the student body and the university as a whole. Ideally, clubs should contribute something not only for their members, but also for the students who may not be members. It often happens that certain clubs and organizations have limited benefits and appeal to students other than their members. These clubs and their methods of approach have to be re-evaluated.

The final question is what the organization feels can be done to improve itself of the whole. Replies range from the usual ones such as "more student interest and support, more members who are willing to work for the organizations, and more faculty support" to more specific ones such as "more and better photography equipment and more students who have had past experience in photography and journalism.

Once these self-evaluation reports are received, a member of the committee is assigned to write a report on the particular club, commenting on its weak and strong points as seen not only from the organization evaluation reports, but also from extra knowledge gained by attending a function of the organization or by reading about the club in the CYNIC.

These reports are also used by the Finance Committee to aid them in determining a club's budget. The reports are especially helpful because they present in concise form, what the particular club is out to accomplish and how it is performing and accomplishing these goals.

It is also the function of the Club Evaluations Committee to determine the status of clubs as defined in the Green Pages of the Datebook. Recently the Committee reorganized the status of all campus clubs, by determining those which are active and those which are inactive, as well as those who should lose their recognition because of inactivity over a period of time. This reorganization was approved and voted on by the S.A. Senate in a recent meeting and will be published shortly in the CYNIC.

Another function of the committee is that of recognition of new clubs. The new clubs submit a petition for recognition along with copies of their proposed constitution. These are discussed by the committee and are then brought up to the Senate for approval and recognition. Along with this, the committee is also responsible for seeing that all recognized organizations have adequate and satisfactory constitutions for according to S.A. Constitution, all clubs must have approved constitutions.

Like all S.A. committees, Club Evaluations are open not only to Senators, but also to interested students who may not be on the Senate. From being on Club Evaluations, one gains a knowledge and understanding of the many organizations and club soon campus. These contribute in their own special way to the extra-curricular atmosphere of the campus and provide valuable experience to its member's college years.

Year-round College Is Present Trend

(CPS). — An increasing trend towards year-round college operation was noted in a paper recently presented before the Association for Higher Education (AHE).

"There is good reason to believe that year-round campus operation will expand steadily in the years immediately ahead," state the writers of the paper, W. Hugh Stickler and Milton W. Carothers — professors of higher education at Florida State University.

Professors Stickler and Carothers believe the year-round calendar will "provide a better vehicle for dealing with the vast numbers of students" included in what is termed the "tidal-wave" of increasing college enrollments.

As a result of the trend towards year-round operation, Stickler and Carothers stated, aggressive efforts are being made to upgrade summer sessions.

Students at year-round institutions, the authors said, exhibit a greater seriousness of purpose. Extra-curricular activities at these schools seem to be receiving less student participation due to the intensified academic program of the year-round operation.

Stickler and Carothers see the emergence of two systems of equitable faculty pay which will operate with the development of the year-round operation. These are: "(1) 12-month salaries with provision for regular leave from teaching duties; or (2) adoption of the principle of equal pay for equal periods of faculty time."

The two educators recognize several problem areas arising from year-round operation. "Without doubt the most difficult administrative problem," they state, "is that of getting faculty members to go to school during the summer months."

Faculty problems, they said, include recruitment, pay scales, and a decision as to what constitutes "an adequate and appropriate work load for a faculty member."

Within the area of student problems, the professors cite difficulty in arranging transfers between junior and senior colleges, and between one senior institution and another. Another difficulty in the student area, they said, is the effect of the intensified pressure of year-round operation on the student. Increased financial problems for students and schools may also result from the full-year plan.

"The unhurried academic life of yesteryear grew out of an agrarian society," Stickley and Carothers said. "That leisurely way of doing things interspersed with long vacations can no longer be justified."

WSGA Joint Conference

The Spring session of Joint Conference will be held Tuesday, May 12, at 6:30 p.m., in the North Lounge of Southwick. WSGA Council urges all interested women students to attend. This conference is convened expressly to give all a chance to get together with the faculty and administration. Representatives from both groups will be present. You can bring up anything you want for discussion. So if you are interested in helping to determine policies or merely voice agreement or disagreement, come to Joint Conference.

CATS CAPTURE THIRD STRAIGHT

Coach Clifford gives last minute instructions to his team late last week in preparation for the intra-squad game held last Saturday. (Credit: Scott, S.P.S.)

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

This past week was quite a successful one for the UVM football, baseball and tennis teams.

In the annual intra-squad scrimmage game, which concluded this year's fine spring practice, the white unit (which included the first and third teams) routed the green unit (the second and fourth teams) by the score of 33-0. White team touchdowns in this contest, held last Saturday, were scored by Kenny Andrade with three and "Lefty" Harrington and Richie Reynolds with one apiece.

The principal reason for the lop-sided score was that three probable starters captain Ron Hertel, center Rusty Brink and half-back Deane Kent along with second team members Joe Soldano and John Sullivan did not participate in this scrimmage. Thus many positions on the Green unit were filled by third stringers which weakened that team considerably.

Also, it might have been a wise idea if the teams had been divided a little more evenly, mixing both squads with experienced and inexperienced ballplayers. Instead the coach set up the opposing teams so that the game resulted a rout, as could have been expected, by the White unit veterans over the Green team newcomers.

The baseball team, after a slow start, bounced back by scoring consecutive victories last weekend over Connecticut 6-3 and 6-0, and against Middlebury 5-1 on Monday afternoon, to even their overall season record at 3-3. The Cats pitchers continued to do a fine job, while the hitting improved a great deal over the previous three contests. Leading the hitters was UVM's outstanding first baseman John Tartera, who had six hits in seven official at bats in the two games against U. Conn., and also chipped in with two more against Middlebury. Vermont is only one game down to New Hampshire and Maine in the loss column which puts them right back into the thick of the Conference pennant race.

While these two teams, football and baseball, receive most of the publicity during the spring little attention is given to the tennis team which has gotten off to a fabulous start this year.

The undefeated UVM netmen were sporting a 4-0 record through last Monday's match with Clarkson having scored impressive triumphs in all their matches.

After opening with an 8-1 victory over Union, they followed it with wins over New Hampshire 9-0, Rhode Island 7-2, and Clarkson 8-1.

Vermont has two matches remaining with Middlebury, and one with St. Lawrence, in addition to the Yankee Conference and New England tournaments. UVM's chance of finishing the regular season undefeated will depend on the two contests with Middlebury, the first of which took place on the Panthers home courts on Wednesday afternoon.

The Cats chances in the Yankee Conference championships are undoubtedly much better than last year when they came in sixth. The New Englands, however are much tougher and prospects in that tournament are much less inviting.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Sophomore center "Rusty" Brink underwent a knee operation last Tuesday, but is expected to be in fine playing condition once practice opens in the fall. Connecticut has expanded their basketball schedule to twenty-five games next season adding Harvard and American University, while dropping strong Syracuse. The Huskies will face UVM on January 9, at home and on January 30, at Burlington. The freshmen baseball team has one of, if not, its best pitching staffs ever, with 7 players at this position. There is a good chance that UVM will lose many of its outstanding hockey players unless they receive financial aid next year.

Andrade Excels In Scrimmage

UVM Coach Bob Clifford may take down the "Help Wanted" sign for the position opening created by Kenny Burton's graduation.

In Saturday's intra-squad scrimmage, the wind-up of UVM's 15 day spring football drills, hard running, hard-nosed Ken Andrade looked like the boy who will wear Burton's Catamount cleats next fall at the slotback spot.

While no one is predicting Andrade will wipe away the records written last year by Burton, the husky junior could be hard to handle when the Cats open their '64 schedule against AIC here in September.

Clifford had a number of impressive performers among the 47 gridders suited up Saturday. Andrade carved his star for the scrimmage by carrying eleven times for 77 yards, scoring three touchdowns making good on two extra points from placement, playing outstanding defensive football. Other standouts for UVM were junior quarterback Scott Fitz who hit four of seven passes for 79 yards, faked beautifully all afternoon and played well at defensive safety position.

Richie Reynolds, who battered the middle for better than four yards per carry, Frank Foerster, looking good when the Green team was able to get him outside, and Carl Ettlinger, who carried for an average of 3 1/2 yards. The two Green team quarterbacks, Bob Price and Bill Leete completed five of 20 passes but were pressured all day by Tom Mongeon, Ed Fugit, Tom Burns and George Oelze, who recovered two fumbles.

DEFENSIVE stalwarts for the Green were Keith Keiderling, Fred Boese, and Mike Ingham. Dick Hebert playing his very first college game, picked up good yardage for the White team. The Whites picked up 14 first downs to 10 for the Green.

In the second period the White team, after holding on fourth down on their own 23, went 77 yards in 12 plays. Andrade scoring from the eight on a pitchout from Fitz. Andrade's kick was wide, at halftime the score was 6-0.

In the third period Reynolds carried three straight times for the TD. Dale Scribner kicked the extra point to make it 13-0 for the White team.

Late in the third period a bad punt gave the Whites the ball on the 44 where they went the necessary yardage in six plays. The big play was a 17 yard touchdown run by John Harrington on a nicely executed trap play. Scribner again kicked the extra point making the score 20-0.

The next White touchdown was scored when Bill Leete fumbled on his own 44. Fitz again took charge and eight plays rolled out past the line of scrimmage, pitched to Andrade who went in for the TD on a play covering 18 yards. Andrade split the up-rights to make it 27-0.

The final TD came when Terry Lynn intercepted a Bob Price pass, returned it to the Green 23 and three plays later Andrade on a very strong effort bulled his way 15 yards for the touchdown. Andrade's attempt for the extra point was blocked. This was the final play of the game, the score ended 33-0.

Vermont's rejuvenated baseball team parlayed four singles, two walks, an error and a stolen base into four runs in the fifth inning Monday to defeat Middlebury College, 5-1, at Centennial Field.

The victory evened up matters for the Cats on the record books. It brought them to a 3-3 season record and put their State Series ledger at 1-1. On the other hand, the Panthers suffered their fourth loss in seven outings, and first in state play.

Charlie Foster went the first six and one third innings for the Cats and was lifted in the seventh after the Panthers had scored their only run and it appeared Foster was weakening.

Foster had been in trouble earlier, particularly in the fourth when Middlebury got men to second and third, but he got out of it. In all but the first and third he had men on the bases, but part of it was poor defensive work on the part of Vermont.

Bill Christie who has been Ralph Lapointe's chief relief pitcher this year, came in for Foster. The chunky righthander put out the fire in the seventh with Panthers on first and second, and then proceeded to turn the Panthers back without a hit for the final two innings to preserve the win for Foster.

In all Middlebury had seven hits and they had the only extra base hit of the game, a double down the third base line by Wayne Hallwell in the seventh.

As expected, Middlebury sent Newt Baker against the Cats, but he was hit hard and often until he was finally lifted after six innings.

Vermont got its first run in the second when Dick Boutillier and Tom Blanchard had back to back singles. Blanchard was out on a fielder's choice at second, Steve Morse struck out, but Foster lined a single to left scoring Boutillier. Cronin struck out to end the inning.

In the fifth Bob Johnson started the way toward the four-run uprising for Vermont with a walk after Pete MacDonald had grounded out to the pitcher. John Tartera followed with his second hit of the day making him 8 for 10 in three games to that point. Boutillier drove a single through second scoring Johnson and Tartera. Boutillier then stole second and sent to third on the catcher's throwing error and scored on Mike Benway's single over the bag at first.

Morse drew the second walk of the inning and Foster scored Benway with a single through third with his second hit and second RBI on the day. Cronin ended the batting-around melee by grounding to second.

Tom Clark of Winooski took over for Baker in the seventh and held the Cats hitless and scoreless the rest of the way.

The Conference baseball standings as of May 5th were as follows:

Maine	3-1	.750	--
New Hampshire	2-1	.667	1/2
Rhode Island	3-2	.600	1/2
Massachusetts	3-2	.600	1/2
Vermont	2-2	.500	1
Connecticut	1-6	.143	3 1/2

Tennis, Golf Teams In Action

The Vermont golf and tennis teams are involved in championship competition this week. Fred Marston's net men seeking Yankee Conference honors over at Durham, N.H., on Friday and Saturday while Ed Donnelly's golfers were taking part in the Yankee Conference and New Englands in Rutland on Thursday and Friday.

Losers of only four matches in their first four outings, the tennis team could make its best showing since tying for Yankee Conference honors in 1960. Prior to that, the Catamounts took the Conference title in 1958.

Vermont opened with an 8-1 win over Union, followed with a 9-0 whitewashing of New Hampshire, stopped always powerful Rhode Island, 7-2, and Monday of this week breezed past Clarkson, 8-1. The Catamounts had a match at Middlebury on Wednesday.

Rich Holden has continued undefeated in dual match competition while sophomore George Cook has done likewise in holding down the No. 2 spot. The pair combine in doubles.

Massachusetts has won the past three YC titles, mainly through the efforts of their great basketball star, Rodger Twitchell. Twitchell has won the past two singles titles and last year teamed for a doubles crown. Maine also figures in the running for team honors this spring.

The Yankee Conference golf championship is being staged in conjunction with the New Englands at the Rutland Country Club. Rhode Island has taken the top spot for the past two years while Connecticut is defending New England kingpin.

The Cats don't figure to be a serious threat in the New Englands but should improve over their past showings in Yankee play. Last year, Capt. John Donnelly was third medalist in the YC with a 155 and was beaten in the semi-finals of the New Englands, two-up on the 18th by the eventual champion.

Donnelly has gone undefeated on the links this spring and earlier this week sank a hole-in-one in the match against St. Lawrence-Clarkson.

Senior Week Begins As Final Exams End

by Carolyn Seigel

The executive board of the senior class has announced its plans for Senior Week, June 3 to June 7.

A beach party on Wednesday night, June 3, will be the first all-senior activity of the week. It will start at 8 o'clock, and will feature the Newlanders, a popular singing group. The location will be announced at a future date.

On Thursday, a picnic and barbecue at the Sand Bar State Park will take place, starting at 2 o'clock. The Night Raiders and the Green Mountain Boys, a folk singing group will provide the entertainment. There will be a 25¢ admission charge for the activity, since the park is owned and maintained by the state. In case of rain, the picnic will be held in Patrick Gym. All facilities will be open to seniors.

On Friday night, seniors will attend the annual Banquet and Ball. It is to be held at the Basin Harbor, a resort in Vergennes, Vermont. Guests or dates who are not seniors will have to pay $2.00 to be admitted to the Ball. The dinner, which will start at 7 o'clock is unique in that there will be individual tables seating a few couples, instead of the usual formal banquet set-up. Also, the dinner will be served buffet-style.

Night club entertainment is promised to the seniors at their banquet. Kenny Hamilton, who has appeared at the Town and Country in Stowe, Vermont, and Anita Ortez, who will appear at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal this summer, will sing all types of songs for the affair. Musical accompaniment will be provided by the Nat Raider orchestra. There will be two floor shows.

Saturday morning, seniors will participate in the annual Class Walk. All seniors are urged to wear their caps and gowns. They are to meet at Billings Center at 10 o'clock, where they will be addressed by President Fey, among others.

Saturday afternoon, Class Day Exercises will take place on the campus green. Again, seniors will meet at Billings in caps and gowns. At this time, it is customary to have members of the class deliver orations on such topics as class history, class poem and boulder. All parents are invited to attend the Class Day exercises.

On Sunday, June 7, the Baccalaureate exercises will take place. The speaker will be Dr. Fred Berthold, Jr., Chairman of the Religion Department of Dartmouth College. Commencement will be held at 2 o'clock P.M., Sunday afternoon. The speaker then will be Dr. James E. Webb, Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In the event of rain, the exercises will be held in the gym.

Tickets for all Senior Week activities have been available since May 11. Students must have paid senior dues of $10 in order to get a ticket. Directions for getting to the beach and picnic sites and the Basin Harbor will be posted at Billings and Lower Waterman.

Serkin, Belafonte, Baez Highlight Lane Series

For 1964-65 the Lane Series, celebrating its Tenth Anniversary Season, will again offer two series of concerts - the Red and the Blue. Each series will contain six outstanding artists and group attractions of world-wide reputation.

In celebration of its Tenth Anniversary, the Lane Series Committee has deliberately brought back several old favorites. Joan Baez, the Queen of the Folk Singers, will return for her second Lane Series appearance. In 1962 she completely enthralled the University and the entire State of Vermont. Also appearing for the second time will be the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Jean Martinon, the French conductor who in 1963 succeeded Fritz Reiner.

Second time engagements will be those of Isaac Stern, America's virtuoso of the violin, and of the Stratford Festival Company from Canada. The latter will present Gilbert and Sullivan's rollicking operetta, "H.M.S. Pinafore."

Returning for his third Burlington concert is Rudolph Serkin, the pianist of whom the Times has said "Piano playing and music-making of sheer grandeur." In its ninth appearance on Lane Series, the New York City Opera will present "Die Fledermaus," a comic opera by Johann Strauss.

But there will be Lane Series debuts in the 1964-65 season also. The most exciting folk singer in the world, Harry Belafonte, is booked for a concert October 19. Edward Albee's award-winning drama, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," will appear December 12.

Lending an international flavor to an already stellar list of performers are the Japan Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in its first American appearance, the Royal Welsh Male Choir, also in their first tour of America, and Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, Canada's newest classical ballet company. A twelfth attraction, to be announced, will probably be a play.

Division of the concerts into Red and Blue Series will be made public in late August. As is customary, UVM students will get ticket priority. During the month of August, brochures containing ticket applications, will be mailed to all UVM students at their home addresses. The students must mail back their orders in the special colored envelopes enclosed with each brochure.

Graduate students may bring their orders to the Lane Office (54 Waterman) when they return in September. Students bear ticket priority through Monday, September 14, the first day of classes.

The Tenth Anniversary Lane Series Committee is headed by Chairman Juliette Bundgus, '65. Her committee includes Production Manager Barry Messinger, '65, assisted by Robert Katz, '67; Treasurer Richard Michelman, assistant, Janet Hadda, '66; Publicity Director Richard Pearson, '65, assisted by John Senning '66; House Manager Virginia Cassava, '65, assistant Geri Sharff, '66; and Secretary Alice Becker, '65, assisted by Judy Allard, '67. There are in addition four apprentice numbers: Joanne Cilley, '65, Craig Nelson, '66, Wilson McGinley, '66, and Esther Sundell, '67.

ROTC Honors Cadets

The University of Vermont ROTC unit staged its 96th annual military review Friday afternoon at the Ira Allen Chapel and honored 19 cadets for outstanding military achievements.

Cadet Colonel Theodore Jzyk, Jr., of Manchester, brigade commander, was the recipient of the Wadsworth Ramsey Smith trophy, a saber given to the outstanding senior cadet. Gov. Philip H. Hoff made the presentation.

Three Burlington area students captured top honors as outstanding ROTC cadets in military and academic proficiency. David J. Keller and Herbert D. Safford, both of Burlington, were named top cadets of the senior and junior classes respectively while Michael Caggiano of South Burlington was named the top sophomore. Theodore A. Schulz of Saugerties, N.Y., won honors as the top freshman.

This year's review was the first for Col. Leonard G. Robinson who became commanding officer of the unit last summer following the retirement of Col. Weston L. Blanchard.

The colors were presented by Barbara Campbell of South Burlington, honorary cadet colonel and a junior at Vermont.

Members of the reviewing party were Governor Hoff, Major General Francis W. Billado, adjutant general, state of Vermont; Col. John P. Connor, Headquarters, First United States Army; Col. Robinson, Lyman S. Rowell, dean of administration, and Clinton D. Cook, dean of faculties.

Award winners:

The Wadsworth Ramsey Smith Trophy: Saber to the outstanding senior cadet of the Army ROTC, Theodore J. Jzyk, Jr., of Manchester.

The Army Reserve Officer's Association Medal: Medal to the Army ROTC cadet in the senior class who has shown the greatest versatility and participation in the ROTC program, Fredric H. Welsberg, of Stamford, Conn.

The Colonel Weston L. Blanchard Trophy: To the cadet commander of the ROTC battalion adjudged to be the most proficient during the year, George D. Fraser of Norwich.

The American Legion Award: Plaque and medal to the cadet commander of the ROTC company adjudged to be the most proficient during the year, William S. Bedford, Jr., of Wellesley Hills, Mass.

La Societe Des 40 Hommes Et 8 Chevaux Award: Medal and certificate to the cadet of the senior class for the highest academic achievement throughout the advance ROTC course and who intends to accept a regular Army commission; George D. Fraser of Stowe.

The Professor of Military Science Award: Books of military significance to cadets of the senior class for their outstanding contribution to the ROTC program, Roger A. Kline of Lowell, Mass., and Paul E. Toussaint of St. Johnsbury Center.

TARTUFFE TOUCHES ON SUCCESS

It seems to be a harder task to review a play that has been well done than it would be to review a bad one. Such is the dilemma, if it is a dilemma, of this reviewer of Moliere's Tartuffe, which the University Players presented last weekend. The cast is to be congratulated for their performance. Michael Bonneau was as malevolent a Tartuffe as can be imagined. He did a superb job of portraying the hypocrite. His presentation of the character was consistent throughout the play, and he did not fail to impart the humor of his character to the audience. John Martin did a good job of portraying Orgon. He seemed truly taken in by the piety of the hypocrite, and astounded to discover the real character of his 'friend'. The third person who deserves particular mention is Ann Abbot, who played the part of Dorine the maid. She is a very vivacious actress and lent an air of impishness to the part that was very well received. She brought out the true wit and wisdom of the maid and created her as a charming character. Moliere's characters are known for its one-sidedness; however, these three actors gave them an air of vitality and humor which made them come alive.

Although the performance of the other actors and actresses was not up to that of Mr. Bonneau, they are not to go unnoticed. Pamela Robertson and Judy Ruskay did well as Orgon's wife and mother respectively. Burt Tepfer was an amusing Damis, and Don Coscina did a good job in the role of Cleante. Donna Kristiansen, Marlane, worked herself into her role during the course of the play. Errol Selsby and Robert Collier gave adequate performances of their small parts. Most memorable were the marvelous facial expressions donned by Robin Schore in the last act of the play.

Moliere's cynical conception of his society was clearly presented. We could not fail to see these characters as part of the twentieth century also. Although the play is a comedy of manners, there is a serious message that is not to be overlooked. The hypocrisy and bigotry of Moliere's society has certainly not diminished with the passage of time.

Webb of Nasa Will Address Commencement

BURLINGTON, Vt. -- James E. Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will deliver the commencement address at the University of Vermont on June 7. Dr. Fred Berthold, Jr., chairman of the religion department at Dartmouth College, will be the baccalaureate speaker.

Webb and Dr. Berthold will be among seven recipients to receive honorary degrees at the University's 160th commencement.

CYNIC Salutes ... Ronald Guttman

Ronald Guttman is one senior who has had four "full" years of college. In his freshman year, Ron was corresponding secretary of the Scope Committee and, he also originated, organized, and headed the Student Guide Committee. In his sophomore and junior years, Ronald expanded his extra-curricular activities to include: S.A. representative from his fraternity, Phi Sigma Delta, business manager of the CYNIC, and president of the Young Democrats' Club. Presently, Ron is president of the senior class and state chairman of the drive for the Kennedy Memorial Fund.

Ron has a double major, history and political science. After service in the Army, Ron plans to attend law school to obtain a background for his future profession in politics. Ron believes

Film Library Is Enriched

The Champlain Valley Teachers Association has presented nearly $500 worth of films to the Vermont Film Library which is housed at the University of Vermont.

The film library was designed by the State Department of Education and by UVM to make educational films available to grade and high schools throughout the state. The library today has more than 1600 prints available and circulates on an average close to 250 prints a week.

Mahlon Farman, president of the Champlain Valley Teachers Association, presented four films to the library.

WRA Holds Dinner; Plans Awards Picnic

W.R.A. held its annual dinner at the Harbor Hideaway on Tuesday, April 28th. In attendance were Miss Betty Willis of the Physical Education Department, Miss Barbara Cochran, faculty advisor for W.R.A., and both old and newly elected officers of the organization.

Headed by the new President for the coming year, June Collins, '65, the following new officers attended the dinner: Vice-President Jan Slack, '65; Secretary, Cheryl Lunn, '66; Treasurer, Kathy Kurdeka, '65; Assistant Treasurer, Dina Hackett, '66; Sports Co-ordinator, Pat Thompson, '66; Publicity Chairman, Nancy Waldron, '67; Social Chairman, Diane Meyer, '67; and Membership Chairman, Nancy Nelson, '67.

The W.R.A. Board members have been busy planning the forthcoming Annual W.R.A. Awards Picnic. It will be held Tuesday, May 19th at 5:30 P.M. in front of Southwick. In case of rain the event will be moved to the Patrick Gym. Girls are reminded the picnic is only open to W.R.A. members with no charge made to those with SAGA meal contracts.

We'd like to say some nice things about America's young adult drivers

And we think we've got good reason! Last January, we selected twenty 18- and 19-year-old young men and women through the Junior Achievement program to drive our team of Chevrolets in the Mobil Economy Run, April 3-9. It was the first time any company had relied entirely on drivers with limited experience in this exacting competition.

We brought these young adults—most of them college students, some from the business world—to Arcadia, California, in late February. For six weeks, our expert teachers trained them in the skills of economy driving.

Then, on April 3, they set off on the Run, 3,243 miles from Los Angeles to New York.

We were going against the grain. It takes high proficiency to win the Mobil Economy Run. Competition is tough. Why did we rely on drivers with such limited experience?

Chevrolet wanted to give the Chevy Teen Team a chance to prove in front of the nation that they and the 6.5 million licensed drivers in their age bracket are safe, sane people behind the wheel. We felt the Run offered a splendid chance.

The Corvair, Chevy II, Chevelles and Chevrolets driven by the Chevy Teen

Team in the Mobil Economy Run did remarkably well compared with the class winners in overall miles-per-gallon figures. The final results are a tribute to the high degree of driving skill displayed by the Chevy Teen Team representing the youth of America.

No wonder we're proud of America's young adult drivers. We couldn't have a better reason.

Peace Corpsmen Relate Experiences

by Ken Klonosky

Last Thursday night a very enlightening and inspiring movie was shown by some volunteers on The Peace Corps. A campaign promise of the late President Kennedy, it is slowly evolving into an American way of life.

The Peace Corps serves "a world living on the threshold of survival." This is not in reference to hydrogen bombs but to hunger. The hard fact is that 85% of the people in this world earn less than $450 a year. The Corps does not try to remedy this situation by sending astronomical sums of money but by sending the future leaders of this country to these underdeveloped nations.

The accomplishments of this project have been tremendous. The United States is slowly beginning to win the confidence and support of the Latin Americans. Even the Africans can see, by our integrated Corps, that America is not a land of complete racial intolerance. More tangibly, diseases have been partially checked and agricultural practices have been greatly modernized.

The reason for these accomplishments lies in the unselfish nature of the Corps. The Volunteers live in the same squalor as the people they aid. They share in their triumphs and failures, their births and deaths, and their languages and customs. However the most important reason for the Peace Corps' success is its "leadership that lies in the refusal to give orders." The leaders of our country have finally realized that what underdeveloped countries accomplish they must accomplish, for the most part, by themselves. Their desire for education is strong and their will for a better life is now more driving than ever.

All people are eligible for the Peace Corps. However a fairly rigorous test keeps the major percentage of volunteers as college graduates. Whether one's curriculum is Liberal Arts, Business Administration, Medicine, Education, or Phys. Ed., the opportunities in the Peace Corps are quite numerous.

Are UVM students ready to forego the material comforts of life for two years in order to participate in this program? Some have already decided that the satisfaction of owning a new automobile or motorcycle does not surpass the satisfaction of seeing "the smile on a child's face who has just learned something." If you are one who feels this way then the Peace Corps offers you a fine place to test these beliefs.

Remember that graduate research fellowships and tuition scholarships are being offered to returnees at ever-increasing rates. Business executives are now searching for men with this type of experience. Opportunities for political and government careers are greatly enhanced by this work. To conclude, it is good to remember the oft-quoted words of our late President: "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

Recognizing the need for "upgrading and improving" the dress standards of UVM women, last week Dean Harris presented suggestions to be upheld for the remainder of the semester. At the Joint Conference convocation Tuesday evening, Miss Harris was no doubt surprised to discover the great opposition which had arisen as a result of her action.

When asked to pinpoint the exact nature of her suggestions, Miss Harris finally admitted that they were regulations, which, if not observed in the dining hall, would mean expulsion, that is prevention from eating (the legitimacy of which is certainly debatable).

Probably influenced by the ostensible grumblings of of the women students and rumored possibility of demonstration, Dean Harris released, Wednesday morning, a revision of her suggestions; which, among other things, now permits the wearing of neat, clean bermudas to Saturday night dinner.

We are pleased by this manifestation of flexibility on the part of Dean Harris, and consider it a healthy step toward maintaining an atmosphere of cooperation and respect between the women of UVM and the Dean of Women's Office. However, we deem it necessary to clarify the issue, in conjunction with its implied principles.

Although Dean Harris seems to feel that the girls were upset because they were being told what to do, we believe this is only a half-truth. UVM coeds were reacting in a spirit not of petulant adolescent rebellion, but rather of expanding growth toward maturity and responsibility.

UVM women, fully realizing dress standards need improvement, object not to the fact that bermudas or set hair are considered inappropriate attire on campus and in the dining halls, but to the fact that these regulations were promulgated without any consultation of the women students themselves.

WSGA has always handled this problem, which perhaps has remained a problem because of WSGA's traditional debilities. But, we have reason to feel that the new WSGA truly possesses strength and character, and is thus deserving of the opportunity to deal with the dress standards once and for all. Compounded with this factor is the actual structure of WSGA itself; there is no reason why, through smaller representative bodies (House Committees and Dorm Councils), that open discussions could not have been held, with suggestions ultimately brought to WSGA Council where they could have been compiled, and approved by the Dean of Women. What did happen was indeed unfortunate: Dean Harris, reputedly, for reasons of expediency, overrode WSGA attempts, removing the situation entirely from their hands, and issued regulations of her own making.

No further action is expected concerning the problem of dress standards. However, since Dean Harris' regulations are effective only through the end of the semester, the situation will again arise in September, with the fundamental question being: Under whose jurisdiction will dress standards lie? We would sincerely like to see the question resolved in favor of WSGA and the women students, who, given the fullest advantages, will surely prove their capabilities and maturity.

Robinson Hall Replies

To the Editor:

You know you can try just so much to get anything done on this campus. Last year, by some stroke of magic, we managed to get 25 girls interested in French and willing to work to improve their speaking ability by living in a French House.

At the beginning of the year, we were all excited; we spoke French, we invited the French faculty over to Robinson, and we were receiving a series of slides and films from FACSEA, for which we only had to pay handling and mailing. What happened? We spoke French; then we realized that we weren't progressing, because, having no one in the dorm to correct us, we found that we were simply repeating the same mistakes over and over again and developing bad habits rather than good ones. The department came when we invited them, but they couldn't live with us. Furthermore, they left the French House completely within our hands and never took any initiative on their own.

One day we found out that the University was charging us more for the audio-visual equipment than the films themselves were costing. We were astounded because we naturally assumed that being part of the University, we would be able to obtain these educational aids for free. Certainly, we thought, our tuition was enough to cover the little cost of maintaining a projector and screen that seemed to be breaking the University at the time, especially since we transported and operated them ourselves. Only 25 of us simply could not afford the high fees charged us. We went to see Dean Rowell and he kindly informed us that we were no different from any other dorm; if we got the equipment for free, then Hamilton, Mason, Wright, Christie, etc., would also, for some ungodly reason, want it for free too (to show home movies perhaps). So we had no films, no French, no support.

Tell us, dear editor, what were we supposed to do when we were being defeated on every side. We tried, but there is not a French House in the United States that exists without the support of the institution.

Hypothetical Dilemma?

To the Editor:

This letter is not meant to be funny.

Suppose you were driving a car in which I was riding. I hear an odd noise. I say to you, "Hey, you dumb cluck, I don't know anything about cars, but I think there's something wrong with one of your stupid tires." We are going 60 m.p.h. You can do one of these things:

a) You can say, "shut up or I'll throw you out of the car."
b) You can say, "because you're rude and have no technical knowledge, I refuse to listen to you."

c) You can say, "Your unproven accusation tends to lower public confidence in my car. Withdraw it at once or I'll sue you for libel."

d) You can say, "You're rude and mechanically incompetent, but you may be right. I'll stop the car and check."

I assume that any sensible person would choose alternative d. Who wants to die young? But this story is a metaphor; in the real

THE SCEPTIC

"We'll Remember Always, Graduation Day..."

Yes it's time again when the school year comes to a close. Seniors leave the hallowed grounds of the old university, juniors start thinking about what they will do when they become seniors, sophomores start thinking about their future role as juniors and freshmen quickly tell everyone that they are sophomores after a whole year of embarrassment. After this reshuffling of identities what happens to the different classes in their new roles? Actually nothing happens to them, they have already fallen into their miserable rut of idiocy, but superficially the changes are amazing (or disgusting.)

We'll start with the youngest, the campus babies, our happy dumb freshmen. After a tortured and tortuous year, the little fellows have finally found out which the gut courses on campus are, who the easy teachers are, and how to get the best marks with the least use of their sub-size cerebral cavity. Socially, they can look forward to lauding it over incoming freshmen, grabbing up the freshman girls from their sophisticated, upper class height, and generally remaining as obnoxious as they were the first year. They stop using most of the cliches of their former status, lose a bit of interest in their social organizations (just enough to appear above it all), and go on to contribute their part to the healthy and rigorous activities of campus living.

What do the sophomores do as juniors? Sophomores as juniors do nothing! They are neither at the top nor the bottom. They are still glad that they are not freshmen and they have sharpened to a keen point their ability to absorb nothing and still maintain an in-school average. There just aren't any stereotypes to describe university juniors. Maybe they don't exist.

As we near the top of the medieval campus pyramid of classes, we come to the potential seniors. What will they do? They do all the things they never had enough bravery to do before they had reached this pinnacle that is so close to freedom from the bonds of studentry. They quit their fraternities, they adopt a pose of aloofness from the general slime below them. The boys get to move into grownup apartments and the girls get put into advisory positions so they can aid the incoming freshmen with the biases and cowardliness they have learned in their previous three years. Seniors are ghastly creatures, but then we must understand them because they have the worries of the world to look forward to, the real world, not just the university womb. This threat of the real world brings us up to the most important subject for our contemplation, those obnoxious people who are about to leave the ivy, who are graduating now who have gotten nothing out of four years of a wasted but socially necessary excuse for education, our future alumni.

What are the graduates going to do? The majority will continue to be bums, living off their parents or perhaps they marry wealthy and live off their spouse's parents. For those who aren't so fortunate, they go into private business - a little known but popular objective. For those who are least fortunate, they become members of that austere profession of teachers and become the Mickey Mouse professors of tomorrow.

However, there must be another group of graduates with other futures awaiting them after they have listened to an impossibly dull graduation address, suffered the gifts and affections of that old witch of a grandmother who came up especially from St. Petersburg, said farewell to their friends of four years, and finally gotten that precious parchment. It is suggested that those people who haven't fallen into the previous categories cry a lot. Where are they going to go? Who's going to take care of them? It was tons of fun while they were students and could pretend to be preparing for their existence as mature, well-rounded and self-sufficient human beings, but now that they don't have Mommy and Daddy, the Dean of Men and Women and their Oedipal and Electra syndromes are still unsolved, things are real scary. Why couldn't they stay in school just a little longer, please.

NO! Your 72.5 average won't get you into graduate school. Anyway, that would just be postponing the inevitable for three years. Son (daughter), you've got to face reality, find out what life really is, discover the essence of existence. However, you never discovered the meaning of the word "essence" while in school so you don't know where to look and, gee, aren't things a mess now. It was so easy in school.

Well, we of the Sceptic staff would like to help you. We realize that obviously after four years of college you are completely unskilled, naive and an idiot, so we shall present to you the following, a list of careers open to the mediocre majority that emerge from the campus cacoon:

Suicide, assassin, CIA work, shining shoes, selling narcotics, police, subway conductor, union organizing, political office, Deanship, buying land from the Indians, selling land to the Puerto Ricans, mugging, folk singer, powder room attendant, and the wide open spaces of administrative bureaucracy in that same university that gave you the same liberal education that put you in the same position that you are in now.

Congratulations to you graduating senior slob, our sympathies.

The Campus Heard-From

by Kim Boriskin

"Onanism is the mother of invention." - Mark Twain

Although most people are unaware of its existence, there is a course given called Sociology 001, Study of Campus Types. We will now drop in on a session of Soc. 001, held in a room on Waterman second. The professor is addressing the class.

"Since this is our last class before finals, I thought it might be a good idea to leave the books and put our studies to the test. So why don't we take a walk over to the Dean and observe the local fauna as we go.

"There, at the end of the hall, is Benny Bnaibrith. That glow over his head is no ordinary halo, but a Star of David, which he wears as a challenge to all who do not believe in the Promised Land and the Chosen People.

"That bright flash from the direction of the President's office is not a flashbulb, but the light bouncing off Pres. John Tuition Fee's brilliant smile. You will recall that last year he and Governor Foulup H. Huffpuff had a small altercation over some money. (That was during the Governor's first year in office, when he was still learning how to write a check.) Fifteen hundred is still too damn much.

"Following Pres. Fee around like a puppy is a journalist, rather yellow in color, from the Free Press. The CYNIC could get stories this way too, but they are too busy defending themselves to S.A.

"Here, from the fountain, we can see the offices of the English Dept., where we will find J. D. O'Salingara, who Writes. (Every campus has to have one person who thinks he is a Salinger, and UVM is no different.) He subscribes to the Realist, but will undoubtedly cancel his subscription when he finds out that Boriskin has one too. To paraphrase something Beaudelaire once said, 'When one spends one's life teaching sophomores one runs the risk of becoming sophomoric oneself.'

"As we enter Billings Center, where we can observe all the avid mass debating, we see, over on the left, Sam Celeb. His claim to fame is that he has been 'CYNIC Saluted.' Nobody is quite sure just what he does or who he is, or why. Speaking to Sam is Mr. Able Specious, Official Officeholder. He has a nice smile, ingratiating manner and everything else that makes a good administrator. Nobody is quite sure what he does either.

"We now enter the Den and see, directly in front of us, Walter Waspish and Gary Gonad. They are wearing the red uniform jacket that marks their fraternity, Kuppa Smegma, and keeps them a breed apart. If playing football, occasionally playing zoo and burning mattresses is the One True Way, then Walter and Gary are, as they believe, the Coming Generation.

"Progressing around to the right we find two pairs of pinnates, Norman Nothing and Naomi Nebbish, and Frankie Frat and Sally Soror, two independents and two dependents. They are all majoring in either English or Liberal Arts (the two refuges for the Great Unaimed), sex and talk. They will graduate into jobs or spouses they hate and spend their lives getting back at the rest of us by writing ads telling us which cigarette is best (worst). When asked if they believe the sheep should be made to sign peach cards, Sally and Naomi will answer, "Baaaa."

"Here, by the coffee, are Solomon Suave of Phi Stigma Gelta and Joanie Jewish of Alpha Delta Lambda. She worships, as do all the ADL sisters, Benny Bnaibrith, money and Solomon. Solomon worships money, comfort and himself; He and his frat brothers are the campus organizers and politicians. Sitting with them is Fearless Firestone, editor of the CYNIC. He is cocky, bright-eyed and for real, the last being hard to believe.

"Another pre-med at the table is reading a letter to the Free Press by Darrell Lewandeddy. You will never find Darrell in the Den since he is an American and the Den's occupants are notorious liberals. He believes he is the incarnation of Joseph McCarthy, but when he gets a little older he will realize that he is only a figment of the Free Press's editorial imagination.

"Sitting not too far away is Greasy K. Stuph, who is also reading the Free Press. He believes that it is a pretty good paper (since he sees only the sports page), but denounces it, good liberal that he is; anyway. His car 'Thinks TUP'; it is not known what, if anything, he thinks.

"As we approach the door we come to the corner table, where we will find the Campus Intelligentsia, they tell us. Here we see Peter Player, who plays everything cool. He is an 'Innie.' Sitting near him is a friend, Dirty Shirt. He shaves only for ROTC and Allan Ginsburg's birthday, and is deeply hurt if accused of wearing clean clothes. He tries awfully hard to be Beat. Everybody knows this, but lets on that he succeeds anyway.

"At another table sits Mike Bonnet, Intellectual. He is reading Hugh Hefner's 'Essay on Suicide as a Transcendental Experience.'

"Just walking in are two cohorts, Furlongs Worthman and Robin Sure, who recently shaved off his symbol of masculinity and/or rebellion. They are both sceptical types, and are looked upon by most as subversives because their views are not liked. They are firm in their sympathy for the infirm. They are founders of the Fair Play for Sheep Committee.

"Also walking in are two creative types. First there is Sir Francis Callbarn. He deals in Art; this gives UVM Culture. The other is Pall Ashandbock. He deals in trees, we are told. They also give us Culture, and one of them helps fill the void in front of the library (as opposed to the void inside the library).

"Finally, we see Boriskin. He is considered by most as idiotic, a complainer, or not considered at all. He likes the 'Sceptic,' does not like O'Salingara (Robin Sure's hero), and is quite amused by the inanity of the world in general and UVM (especially her teachers of English) in particular, although he doesn't sound it in print. He has a lifetime subscription to the Realist. It is amazing that anyone in the class is still around; Boriskin is supposed to be a good insect repellent. Ho-hum.

"Class dismissed."

Flagellation is its own reward!

case at issue, the administration has chosen alternatives a, b, and c. Discussion of the matter has been cut off, even in the student newspaper.

Perhaps some administration spokesman can be persuaded to explain why alternative d has been rejected. I suggest that you students sign the petition asking for such an explanation. At one time I was in a real car under the circumstances described above. The driver did stop; the tire was defective.

Neat To Eat

To the Editor:

Once upon a time and not too long ago, a rule was put into effect by the Dean of Women, the Saga food service representatives, and several other noble and all-powerful Entities. This rule said: "Thou shalt not dress sloppily at dinner on Saturday night. If thou art man, thou shalt wear tie and jacket; if thou art woman, thou shalt wear dress or skirt."

Because of poor communications between the Entities and the students, some poor unfortunates appeared at the doorway to Saga and were turned back because of inappropriate dress. "You may not be seen in Our Dining Hall," said the little green man at the door. Those poor unfortunates were not the infantile imbeciles that the little man had expected. They said, "Listen, we pay for our meals and we expect to get them. We don't eat here because we love you and the food so much; we eat here because we had to pay for it and this is a free country and we might as well get what we had to pay for."

The little green man whimpered, "Please don't hit me," and scampered off. He soon came back, scowling once more. (Somebody must've patted him on the back and said, "Go to it, Tiger.") He growled, "You shall have to eat in the back room" And they did, because they were very hungry and of course did not want to offend those who were Living Graciously in the dining hall.

Everyone did not live happily ever after. The Entities relaxed their iron grip. Oh, everything is fine and elegant on Saturdays, but somebody up there missed a point. At 5:45 every weekday evening, the odor of unwashed male bodies permeates the dining hall. People faint. The food begins to moulder. Unidentified fungi appear on the ceiling and walls of Saga.

There is nothing wrong with the smell of the male human animal if it remains in the gym, on the ballfield, or on the tennis court. But when it starts dripping into the food....

Please, all you Powers that Be, give those odoriferous but otherwise gentlemanly gentlemen time to shower before they grace us with their presence.

The moral of this story is: Clothes do not make the man when one can't get close enough to see them.

Why Not, Fey?

To the Editor:

In view of President Fey's leave, why is it that he is not able to find time to speak before the student body? Is it because he has nothing to say, or that no one is interested in hearing what he might say or that the President of a university is only a dignitary? I suspect the answer lies in the last reason.

"FOR SOME STUDENTS, GETTING A COLLEGE DIPLOMA REPRESENTS A STRUGGLE RIGHT TO THE BITTER END!"

Another important varsity winter sport, which was recently introduced on the UVM campus two years ago, is ice hockey. This past season the squad played its first regular intercollegiate schedule, finishing with a 5-3-1 record. The team composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores was expected to do quite well next season, but now the squad's prospects for the coming year are clouded with doubt. The reason for this doubt is the fact that many of these individuals came to UVM depending upon grants-in-aid, which Coach Ruffer had promised them they would receive after their freshman year. However, they have recently discovered that there have never been, or are, at the present time, any hockey grants-in-aid at all, and none are planned for the immediate future. Thus there is a good chance that many of these individuals will be forced to leave school since they are unable to pay all their expenses for three more years.

Regardless of whether these individuals remain in school or not, the team will again have the same problem they faced this year. This is the lack of planned team plays which are so necessary in order to have a winning hockey team. While Vermont was fortunate to get by this year playing "free-lance" hockey, this will not be possible next year when UVM's expanded schedule includes better and more experienced teams.

The baseball team will be battling Maine this weekend for first place in the Yankee Conference race. This entire team will return next year with the exception of captain and second baseman Dick Boutillier, shortstop Mike Benway, and center fielder Bob Johnson.

In addition to the return of this large number of lettermen, there are seven outstanding hurlers on the freshman team and an eighth, who will become eligible next year, who will greatly strengthen the squad.

Thus with this pitching depth and the return of so many veterans, the Cats should win, or at least, be near the top of the Yankee Conference standings next spring.

In addition to the eleven varsity sports on the Vermont campus this year, a twelfth, soccer, under Coach Harold Greig will be inaugurated in the fall.

Outstanding individuals in other sports to watch next season include ace pole vaulter Don Mayland, golfer Joe "Don" Donnelly who is expected to follow in his brother Moose's "footsteps", and the former number one tennis player at the University of Florida, transfer student John Adler, who is expected to head what should be Vermont's strongest tennis team of all time.

The past few months as sports editor of the Vermont CYNIC have been far from dull ones for me. During this period I was able to withstand a blast from the renowned sports editor, of Vermont's "largest" newspaper, Clarence "Bish" Bishop who exhibited his fine ability to be used by the UVM athletic department as a means of expressing their ideas on a certain topic. In addition I had to overcome some highly disparaging remarks about my personal character and the content of my writing by the football coach, and some of his players, who unfortunately weren't able to take in stride some unfavorable, but valid criticism. Using my weekly column, I attempted to accurately describe what I believed were the good and poor aspects of UVM sports; the coaches, their recruiting and their players. Whether I failed or succeeded in any way remains to be seen, but I must say that a majority of the people, including players, I have talked to at this school, have agreed with my viewpoints even on controversial issues.

I sincerely hope that next year's sports editor, whoever he may be, is not afraid to print what he feels is the truth, no matter what outside pressures he may encounter. I also pray that more UVM students take a personal interest in the CYNIC, and the sports page in particular, and offer their services to the new sports editor who will succeed me in the fall.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Vermont's defeat of St. Michael's 5-2 in golf Monday was the Knights first loss in thirteen dual matches.... As of last Tuesday, former UVM baseball player, Levi Brown, now in the Milwaukee Braves chain, was the third leading hitter in the Class "A" Northwest League with a fine .429 batting average... Senior Jerry Sack roomed with All-Conference and New England UConn basketball star Toby Kimball while they were both in prep school.... Last week history repeated itself when last year's UVM captain Dick "Dutch" Cassini outpitched, as usual, former Norwich rival Fran Kasheta in a Class "A" N.Y.P. League game. Cassini's in the Braves chain, while Kasheta's with the Giants organization.... The total ERA of the Vermont pitching staff is approximately 1.38 runs a game.

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

I should like to devote, this, the final column of my sports writing career for the CYNIC to a preview of next year's UVM sport schedule, and how each of the major varsity teams will fare.

In the fall, Coach Bob Clifford should field one of the strongest Vermont football teams in the school's history. However, in order to successfully do this, he will have to overcome four major obstacles: overconfidence, injuries, grades, and last, but not least, the principal barrier to an undefeated season, the University of Massachusetts.

Being cocky or overconfident is something which UVM has rarely ever had the opportunity to become in the past. However, with a large number of returning veterans from this year's squad which finished with a 6-2 record, this could be a problem. However, I am quite confident that Clifford will keep the team on its toes at all times, and due to the depth of the squad, any cocky first team member can be adequately replaced, if necessary, with little or no loss in strength at that position, resulting from such a change.

Another question mark is the fact that a few key ballplayers have suffered injuries, which must completely heal over the summer in order for them to play efficiently next season. If the operations on Rusty Brink's and Ron Hertel's knees, and the one on Deane Kent's back (to be performed this summer) are not successful, their absence will greatly hinder the team's chances for the upcoming season.

There is of course always the problem of grades, especially among the freshmen, and a few sophomores. The difficulty does not only involve players staying in school, but also is concerned with their having to make a 72 average in the second semester. This is necessary in order for them to keep their grants-in-aid, without which most of them would be unable to afford college. Fortunately, however, this problem is not as serious as it has previously been.

The last difficulty, U. Mass., is definitely not the least important since it will probably be the most serious obstacle in the Cats' path to the Yankee Conference title, and an unbeaten season. I believe that the Catamounts will not be able to overcome this barrier and should conclude the year with a 7-1 overall record. The score of the contest with the Redmen should, however, be much closer than last year's 41-0 rout, due to Vermont's greater depth, and their home field advantage, but U. Mass. is still a little out of Vermont's class.

Turning from the football squad we now take a look at the basketball team which should be improved over last year's surprisingly fine 11-10 ledger. The team has three returning starters, captain Ralph D'Atilia, Layne Higgs, and Milt Goggans from this year's squad along with key substitutes Steve Ross, Joe Gannon, and Kenny Spalter. However, the brightest note for next year is the return of freshman star Bobby Hillas, who played a semester on the same team with Higgs and Goggans, and then was forced to leave school. Although he will not be eligible until the end of the first semester, in late December, he and Higgs will give the Cats one of its finest backcourts in many years.

The Catamounts will again be led by the veteran "white haired wizard" coach, John "Fuzzy" Evans, a member of Basketball's Hall of Fame. While Evans has a fine career coaching record, he has been plagued during the past few years (excluding last season) with losing records due to two primary factors. One is the lack of scholarships, and the second is the fact that the Cats have been using virtually the same basic plays for over twenty years. Recently the other teams in the Yankee Conference have had such a vast knowledge of UVM's set patterns, that they are often able to anticipate, and thus break up many of Vermont's plays. In fact, a few years ago, in a run-away victory by Rhode Island over Vermont, a Cat player went the wrong way on a specified play, and he was graciously corrected by the Rhody player guarding him. It is hoped that possibly some of Vermont's plays will be revamped, and a few new ones originated for next season by Coach Evans, often kiddingly called the "Senator" by some of his coaching colleagues.

Donnelly Victorious

John Donnelly, 1962 Vermont amateur champion, won the individual title in the combined New England and Yankee Conference collegiate golf competitions Friday with a 36-hole total of 147.

Donnelly, son of the University of Vermont athletic director and golf coach, fired a three over-par 73, low score on the Rutland Country Club course.

Ken Pocius of Connecticut was runnerup with 149.

Williams, trailing by five strokes at the halfway point Thursday night, won the team crown with steady overall play. Its low winning score of 612 was determined by taking the best four scores of its five-man team.

Runnerup Connecticut which posted a 617 won the Yankee Conference title. Vermont had 624, New Hampshire 642, Rhode Island 644, Massachusetts 662 and Maine 698.

John McNabb of Colby finished third among individuals with a 150. Walter Sharis of St. Michael's had a 151 while Tom Klug of Williams, teammate Bill Chapman and Steve Travis of Rhode Island had 152s.

Final team scores:

Williams 612, Conn. 617, WPI 622, Vt. 624, St. Michael's 634, N.H. 642, Bates 643, R.I. and Wesleyan 644, Hartford 648, Trinity 650, BC 651, AIC and Middlebury 653, Babson 657, Tufts 658, Bowdoin 659, Northeastern 660, Mass. and Springfield 662, Providence 664, MIT 665, Amherst 667, St. Anselm's 673, BU 686, Norwich 691, Maine 698, Clark 702, Lowell Tech 708, Suffolk 734.

Vermont, Yankee runnerup, found its overall finish the highest in the school's golfing history. Four players shot sub-80 golf to help Donnelly get the school a fourth place finish in the New England.

Steve Slack shot a 73 in the final round while Bob Whitman came in with a 77. Ed Gallagher of Burlington posted a 78.

Donnelly's fine finish came a year after he was knocked out of the running in a semifinal round on the 18th hole. A runner-up in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference tourney as a sophomore, last spring he played for the East in a special NCAA East-West match at Wichita, Kan.

His finish Friday assures him of a berth in this year's NCAA tournament which will be held in Colorado.

Cats Lose 5-4

Middlebury College barely eked out a 5-4 tennis victory over the University of Vermont Monday at the Centennial Field courts.

It was the second meeting of the two this season and Middlebury also took the first match, 7-2. Vermont now has a 4-2 record.

The summaries:

Singles: Holcombe (M) def. Holden (V) 6-1, 6-2; Cook (V) def. Weld (M) 6-4, 6-4; Holmes (M) def. Dickerson (V) 6-3, 6-4; Stetson (M) def. Ratner (M) 2-6, 7-5, 6-3; Freedman (V) def. Branch (M) 6-4, 6-3; Newman (V) def. Gillespie (M) 6-2, 6-4.

It was as though all the tenseness of the past seven games suddenly fell flat on its tantalizing face Tuesday afternoon at Centennial Field.

In the first two innings the University of Vermont baseball team scored more runs than in any full game this season—seven—and then coasted to a 9-1 State Series victory over Norwich, during which nearly everything happened and about everyone played.

It was not only Vermont's seventh straight victory of the season against three losses, but it put the Cats in a good position to take the Vermont Conference title. With a 3-1 record, it appears Middlebury, at 2-1, has the only chance of catching the Cats.

Six pitchers—three for each team—saw action before Tuesday's Centennial Field parade was over, but in Vermont's case it wasn't by necessity.

Carl Martin went the first six innings for the Cats, got credit for his third victory against a single defeat, contributed a hit, an RBI and mounted his string of scoreless innings to 24.

Martin was in no trouble when he left, but with a 9-0 lead, it gave coach Ralph Lapointe a chance to use most of his bench.

Michael Shea followed Martin and in his first action of the year didn't do too badly in two innings although he gave up the only Norwich run in the eighth on two singles.

Hardy Merrill got his chance in the ninth and all his outs were strikeouts. He gave up one hit.

The most dramatic moment of the otherwise dull game came in the second when Barre's Bob Johnson tied into a Bill DeMayo pitch and sent it to deep right center. The ball rolled clear to the fence and Johnson came in with a grand slam homer, accounting for all of Vermont's runs in the inning. Mike Benway, Martin and Bob Cronin scored ahead of him.

After that blow and Vermont's three first inning runs, it sounded the bell for Cadet starter DeMayo. Next in line was Bill Rollins. He lasted through the seventh, but did a better job.

Jim Rymsha came in to finish up in the eighth, but the damage had been done early.

Vermont collected 10 hits for the game, with Cronin the only one able to get more than one. John Tartera had one hit in three trips, but he lost ground in his batting average from .572 to .548 on 17 hits for 31 times at bat.

Babcock Seeks Nomination In September Primary

Professor Robert S. Babcock announced Wednesday, April 15, that he would seek the Republican nomination for Governor of Vermont. Babcock will face Lt. Governor Ralph A. Foote of Middlebury and Representative Roger L. MacBride of Halifax in the September primary.

Babcock, a professor of Political Science at UVM, announced that his platform is designed to improve the economy of Vermont without destroying its political heritage. Babcock said that Governor Philip A. Hoff improves the state's economy, but destroys its heritage, and that the other candidates would preserve its heritage, but destroy its economy.

The major planks in Babcock's platform include enacting a limited sales tax on non-essential luxuries, reducing the state income tax, and ultimately abolishing the local personal property tax. He emphasized the need to finance increased state aid to education, which is backed by both parties.

Babcock, in announcing his candidacy, said that he is "liberally concerned about human feelings, and conservatively concerned about fiscal responsibility." He also said that, "this is the age, and Vermont should be the state, not of the common man, but of the uncommon man."

Serkin, Belafonte, Baez, Stern Highlight 64-65 Lane Series

For 1964-65 the Lane Series, celebrating its Tenth Anniversary Season, will again offer two series of concerts - the Red and the Blue. Each series will contain six outstanding artists and group attractions of world-wide reputation.

In celebration of its Tenth Anniversary, the Lane Series Committee has deliberately brought back several old favorites. Joan Baez, the Queen of the Folk Singers, will return for her second Lane Series appearance. In 1962 she completely enthralled the University and the entire State of Vermont. Also appearing for the second time will be the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Jean Martinon, the French conductor who in 1963 succeeded Fritz Reiner.

Second time engagements will be those of Isaac Stern, America's virtuoso of the violin, and of the Stratford Festival Company from Canada. The latter will present Gilbert and Sullivan's rollicking operetta, "H.M.S. Pinafore."

Returning for his third Burlington concert is Rudolph Serkin, the pianist of whom the Times has said "Piano playing and music-making of sheer grandeur." In its ninth appearance on Lane Series, the New York City Opera will present "Die Fledermaus," a comic opera by Johann Strauss.

But there will be Lane Series debuts in the 1964-65 season also. The most exciting folk singer in the world, Harry Belafonte, is booked for a concert October 19. Edward Albee's award-winning drama, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," will appear December 12.

Lending an international flavor to an already stellar list of performers are the Japan Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in its first American appearance, the Royal Welsh Male Choir, also in their first tour of America, and Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, Canada's newest classical ballet company. A twelfth attraction, to be announced, will probably be a play.

Division of the concerts into Red and Blue Series will be made public in late August. As is customary, UVM students will get ticket priority. During the month of August, brochures containing ticket applications, will be mailed to all UVM students at their home addresses. The students must mail back their orders in the special colored envelopes enclosed with each brochure.

Fey Resigns Post After Six Years To Head U. Of Wyoming

John T. Fey

(Credit: Scott, SPS)

University of Vermont President John T. Fey will leave this Green Mountain institution he has served since July of 1958 to accept the presidency of the University of Wyoming.

Dr. Fey's resignation from the presidency at Vermont will be effective August 1, 1964, and the Board of Trustees has named a committee to begin the search for his successor. The action came in executive session at the April 18 meeting.

In his six years at the University of Vermont, President Fey carried forward a vigorous program of University development.

Perhaps most apparent is the progress made toward completing the post-war physical plant development begun under his predecessor, Dr. Carl W. Borgmann.

Under President Fey, the University carried to fruition a program which originally was expected to have required 15 years. Included was the Bailey Memorial Library, the Patrick Gymnasium with the Gutterson Field House and Forbush Pool, new residence halls for men and women, the new Votey Engineering Building, a new home management house, the horticultural field laboratory, completion of the second phase of the medical building program, renovation of Williams Science Hall and Billings Library.

Most of this was accomplished from sources other than state funds, though the Votey Engineering Building was an outright gift from the State, the first non-agricultural building at Vermont to be provided by the state, and only the fifth major building provided by the state in the history of the University.

Planning is also underway for a life sciences building, and the University's College of Medicine is currently carrying out a fund campaign seeking $8.7 millions for the third phase of its post-war building program.

But President Fey is known to have considered plant development less significant than the academic development of the University.

Under his leadership, the University has given increasing encouragement to the development of the Graduate College, where doctoral programs have been established in eight departments of the University.

The University has also developed new programs in sociology, in foreign service in agriculture, psychiatry; and programs in research have been expanded under a policy which seeks to make research a partner to the teaching and learning environment. Establishment of a computer center at the University, but has been used by business and government of the state.

Under Dr. Fey, the University has also achieved substantial salary increases for faculty and staff, accompanied by expanded fringe benefits and inauguration of a sabbatical leave program.

Concluding "six very pleasant and productive years in the service of the University of Vermont"

President Fey said that the decision to leave Vermont to accept the presidency of the University of Wyoming "was not easily made."

He said "these first years of the 1960's have been eventful years for education in Vermont -- for the University and the Vermont State Colleges and for elementary and secondary education."

Born in Hopewell, Va., Dr. Fey is the 17th President of the University of Vermont, and was the first southerner so to serve.

Dr. Fey completed his pre-law studies at Washington and Lee, received the LL.B. from the University of Maryland, the MBA from Harvard, and the Doctor of Juridical Science from Yale.

Middlebury and Alma Colleges have awarded him honorary degrees.

He practiced law in Cumberland, Md., served in the Maryland Legislature and also as attorney to the Allegany County Board of Commissioners. He was named to the faculty of George Washington University as Professor of Law in 1949, becoming Dean of the Law School in 1953.

In 1956, Dr. Fey was appointed Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States. When he resigned in 1958 to assume the presidency at Vermont, his was only the third resignation from the post in the history of the Supreme Court.

Vt. Conference Stresses Vt. Role In Rights Struggle

James Farmer: Won't Give Up

by James L. Sealy

It was a rainy, solemn Tuesday, Nov. 12, 1963, which ushered in the 1st day of Vermont Conference. It almost seemed as if the weather had recognized the significance of the event about to take place, and decided to set the proper atmosphere. This was the conference so many people had been waiting to see and this was illustrated by the shy, solemn, inquisitive, facial expressions of the students and townspeople of Burlington as they entered Ira Allen Chapel at 7:15 on this Tuesday evening.

The topic of the conference was "Pride and Prejudice, the Negroes' struggle for equal rights" and as Dr. Babcock stated in his opening address before the conference, "the Negro has a vehemence of pride and they are venomous towards prejudice." Dr. Babcock introduced Mr. Farmer, National Director of CORE, the audience clapped and then a silence permeated the whole chapel as the audience listened in rapt attention to the words of this man, a leader of both black and white man, who had important things to say. Things which the audience so desperately wanted to hear.

Mr. Farmer stated, "we'll take hitting, kicking, spitting, even death, and we will keep coming until we can eat, sleep, ride, work, sweat and love from place to place and coast to coast." Mr. Farmer held the audience spellbound with stories about the Negro's dedication to the cause of civil rights in the face of brutal actions by the vicious, neurotic law enforcement agencies of the south. The Director of CORE traced the growth of strength of the civil rights movement from the Montgomery bus boycott to the March on Washington and other developing events. He called for all Americans (Vermonters included) to get involved in the civil rights struggle, which he called the central domestic issue of the times.

Mr. Farmer stressed the economic aspect of American life for it is the most significant field in the Negro's drive for equality. The disparity of incomes between Negroes and whites can no longer be overlooked by Americans, not only because it is morally wrong, but because America is losing 18 billion dollars a year. This loss is due to the unproductive stagnant position the Negro holds in American society. Mr. Farmer called for special affirmative action to insure that significant numbers of Negroes are hired by American employers. He did not call for

Mr. Farmer was a man speaking with a vision, a vision of Negroes fighting for and finally acquiring equal rights. He spoke of prejudice as being irrational, pernicious, and wrongfully emotional. He asked for our help in aiding the Negro to realize the American dream of freedom, democracy and liberty. You must choose sides. Are you American whites going to yell in unison "Run, nigger . . . run", or are you going to wake up from your apathetic position and ride the Negro's cause in every way possible? The choice is yours and when you make it you either destroy this country or you create something beautiful and with this enigmatic creation you free yourself and the Negro. What is your choice going to be and when?

Louis Lomax: Humans First

by Carolyn Seigel

Louis Lomax said in a speech Wednesday night that Negroes and whites are "inextricably bound together." He added that one race cannot rise without the other and that we must save each other to save ourselves. Lomax said that he is trying to involve us, as individuals, in some phase of the Negro's struggle for equality. He said that one half of the job of getting people involved in the struggle is getting them to realize what is going on today, and why. He attempted to provide the audience, comprised mostly of students and faculty, with some philosophic mean from which it could make its own decisions.

Mr. Lomax started by giving examples of how hate and racism pervade the world today. He cited the cities of Havana, Cuba, Berlin, Germany, and Birmingham, Alabama, in his attempt to put discrimination in a world-wide perspective. He said that in the United States, the whites have remained silent while Negro hatred persists, and that America is going to be in trouble because the whites have been guilty of constant bigotry and exploitation. Lomax said that we need a universal concept of brotherhood in order to achieve the moral and social evolution that the philosopher Henri Bergson says we must.

Lomax followed this with an attack on the "uncommitted" person. He said that in the civil rights struggle there can be no such individual, and that the struggle is not for one's self alone, but for everyone. But how can people become uncommitted in the struggle, Lomax asked. He answered this by saying that people "either believe in truth, justice, and right or don't." He added that the world has a great deal of bright people who avoid moral commitment or moral concern. In order to become a committed person, Lomax continued, people must start with themselves in their search to do something for civil rights. People can give or donate money, time, and effort. He added that he is not asking people to do anything he has not done himself.

Lomax went on to criticize the white population of America by saying that people are more concerned with being Jews, Catholics, and Protestants, than with being human. He would like people to sublimate their tribalisms, and make them much lower than their dedication to Americanism. Lomax said that America is too good not to be better, and it is up to the young men and women to take hold to make a better America, and a better world. He added that Negroes only want basic rights, that they don't want to socialize with whites. They want the chance to "go to school, use facilities, make top money." Lomax said that he speaks not in anger, yet with determination, not innocently, yet firmly.

The struggle, Lomax told the audience, is not black vs white, but right vs wrong. He said that the burden has fallen on the Negro to sound the note of moral redemption in Western Civilization, and that whites can't do it because they've "been white too long." He said that whites haven't had the experiences; they haven't been insecure.

Lomax ended his speech by making a final plea to the audience and to all individuals to "serve where you can, where you are, and do what you can. You alone must decide, he said; you alone run the risk."

John Lewis: Non-violence

by Joan Klonosky

On Thursday evening, November 14, the final speaker for Vermont Conference was John Lewis, who, at only 25, is the youngest leader of a major civil rights organization in the United States (SNICK). Although Mr. Lewis has "felt the pain of anguish and disappointment", his speech was one of optimistic and idealistic ambitions.

According to Mr. Lewis, the march for justice and freedom is universal, and, in the U.S., has already reached the revolutionary stage, wherein everyone is involved. In 1960 the American Negro was concerned for his image as a dignified human being; today, his role has become more active as manifested in his efforts "to get the job done and solve the problem." In what Lewis terms the second American Revolution is a fervent desire of the Negroes to become part of the "mainstream of the American way of life." Seeing a need for basic changes to effect his goal, Lewis asserts that we must destroy the political structure (which in Alabama prohibits voting rights), and economic structure (which prevents equal employment opportunities and pay): "we must destroy such a system," he states, "one which has been created by both Negroes and whites, and which must be destroyed by both Negroes and whites."

To clarify the dynamic realities of the civil rights struggle, Lewis selected Mississippi as a case study. Among 400,000 Negroes of voting age in the state only 20,000 are registered to vote; it has the highest rate of illiteracy in the country; its income is the lowest in the country; the double school system forces Negroes not only to attend separate schools from whites, but also to seek higher education outside the state; and there is no equality before the law, nor is the right to peaceful assembly allowed the Negroes. "Maybe we are guilty," Lewis half admits, "for disturbing the peace" in states such as Mississippi. "But let's discuss peace," he continues. "If we take peace as the maintenance of law and order, then there is no peace, since in the South, there is no maintenance of law and order."

In discussing the Negro method in the civil rights struggle, Lewis advances the theory of non-violence as both a technique and a philosophy of life, by which he intends to teach the world a lesson. The non-violent movement provides the Negro with a new sense of dignity, pride and hope, and "has made them better citizens of the U.S. and the world with a broader perspective of both." Besides, Lewis believes, violence is impractical, "like committing suicide", and is immoral as well. Moreover, "the struggle is not between white and Negro, but between forces of justice and injustice, right and wrong, good and evil, light and darkness."

For Lewis and his followers the ultimate goal is not for a separate state or haven, but for the "beloved community" entrenched in the dynamics of the present. The end must be caught up in the means — both are inseparable. In sum, "love intertwined with non-violent action" will facilitate the goal of a community of love, brotherhood, good will — a "redeemed society."

Rocky Addresses 3500 At Patrick Gymnasium

Governor Nelson Rockefeller as he spoke to some 3500 in the Patrick Gymnasium. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

by Joan Klonosky

As an aspirant to the Republican nomination for President of the United States, Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, addressed about 3500 students from UVM, Champlain College, St. Michael's College and Trinity, on Thursday afternoon, March 27 in Patrick Gymnasium.

In a cursory speech, the Governor skimmed several vital issues. Concerning his accomplishments in office in New York, Governor Rockefeller emphasized his educational program which, through scholarship opportunities, has provided for an enrollment of 72,000 in the State University of New York, truly a commendable achievement. Recognizing that such favorable conditions are not prevalent in other areas of the U.S., the Governor stated the need for Federal aid to education, an often-debated topic.

In the field of international relations, Governor Rockefeller stated his position as against the admission of Red China to the United Nations. Not commenting upon his rationale for this position, he instead briefly discussed his opposition to Senator Barry Goldwater's proposition that the U.S. should withdraw from the UN if Red China is admitted.

"The UN symbolizes the need for world unity, the forces of freedom, human dignity and peace," Rockefeller asserted. In withdrawing from the UN we would lose contact with the communist world and abandon the very democratic principles of the UN, principles which we have helped design and foster.

In attacking the Johnson administration, Governor Rockefeller decried the current leadership gap and the seemingly obsessive concern for expediency. He did not elaborate. In addition, he denounced the Government's "lack of purpose, goals and plans to carry out goals," as well as "the serious deterioration of relations with other countries."

Governor Rockefeller's speech contained, as well, mention of the employment problem in our economy, of the need for care to Senior Citizens, of the efficacy of Vermont Senator Austen's efforts toward building a basis for U.S. security today, of the various secretarial positions he has held, and of the challenge awaiting America's youth today in this "exciting time to live" wherein "we must have faith in the future."

Students Elect Badger To SA Presidency

On Friday, March 6, the students of UVM elected the new officers who will head the Student Association for the coming year.

The new President is Theta Chi's Dick Badger. This member of the Class of '65 has been affiliated with SA since his Freshman year, when he was SA residence hall senator. As a sophomore he became Sub-Treasurer of the organization and this past year he has been Treasurer. Obviously he has a tremendous familiarity with the Association's workings. Furthermore, he has been occupied this year with the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee, the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, and as Representative on the Inter-Collegiate Council. Certainly Mr. Badger is an active and valuable member of the University of Vermont.

Walter Meyer of Alpha Tau Omega is SA's 1st Vice President. This hard-working sophomore has been in the Association as a Representative, a chairman of the Elections Committee, and as a member of the Central Research Committee. Furthermore, Walter worked as Editorial Research head of the CYNIC and was a University Player in the fall of '62.

Pi Beta Phi's Karen Preis is the new 2nd Vice-President. She has been Public Relations Chairman of WSGA council this past year and a member of the Sophomore Aids. Last year, as a freshman, she was Representative and Secretary of Patterson Hall's Intra-Dorm Council, President of her pledge class, and a Student Guide Club member.

Helen Keith of Kappa Alpha Theta takes over as Secretary of SA. For the past year she has been Sub-Secretary of the Association, UVM Representative to the Inter-Collegiate Council, and a member of the Catalina Club. Last year she served as Vice President of her pledge class and as a Freshman Representative to WSGA.

Susan Gorman, SA's new Sub-Secretary, is also a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and the Class of '66. At Patterson Hall she has served as SA Senator, WSGA House Committee Representative, and social chairman of her floor. Moreover, she held a post on the SA Elections Committee.

The difficult job of Treasurer is now held by sophomore Dave Matte. This past year he served as SA Senator from Tupper Hall and became a member of the Finance Committee. As a freshman he was a Residence Hall Assembly Representative.

Helping Dave as Sub-Treasurers will be Diane Meyer of Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon's John Bradley. Diane, the only freshman officer of SA, is social chairman of Claggett House, censor of her pledge class, WRA Representative, and a member of the girl's swim team. Mr. Bradley, a sophomore, is the Executive Officer of Newman Club and an active member in his fraternity.

67th Kake Walk; SAE Takes Honors

Lechnyr Cup Goes To SAE

By Ken Klonsky

Kake Walk number 67 is now history. From the moment the big band of Count Basie struck its first note until the Sunday morning dizziness, the students and alumni of UVM witnessed yet another great spectacle. The most thrilling part, as always, was the inter-fraternity competition.

The most coveted prize of the Kake Walk was awarded to Sigma Alpha Epsilon when they ran off with the Lechnyr cup. This trophy is presented annually to the fraternity which best lives up to the spirit and traditions of Kake Walk.

The first event was the skits. Both Friday and Saturday nights Sigma Alpha Epsilon broke the ancient domination of the Borgman Cup by Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi. Their "Boulder War" was from the judges' and the crowd's point of view unquestionably the top skit. Phi Sigma Delta came in second Friday night with "Aorta Be in Pictures" and Tau Epsilon Phi grabbed the runner-up spot Saturday night with "Moon Spots".

The spine-tingling and traditional "Walkin' Fo' De Kake" was next. The 7000 some-odd people were treated to colorful costumes and some fantastic acrobatics. The first truly fine walk of the weekend came on Friday night when Steve Schulte and Pete Leavy of Tau Epsilon Phi dazzled the crowd with their amazing synchronization. However Friday night had three fraternities surpass this fine performance. In third place came Frank Willis and Nick Morrill of Phi Delta Theta. Second was Sigma Phi Epsilon's Steve Bloom and Perry Cabot. First prize went to Alpha Epsilon Pi's sharply coordinated well practiced team of Steve Frankel and Ray Haas. Saturday night saw Phi Delta's Willis and Morrill clearly asserting themselves as the top walkers of the weekend grabbing the coveted first prize. Bloom and Cabot of Sig Ep showed rare consistency in taking second again. Bob Whitman and Norm Bone of Sigma Nu, took a commendable third. In fourth place was the determined duo of Dick Bass and Paul Krupp of Phi Sigma Delta.

Concert Stars Highwaymen

by Lois Allison

Perpetrating an important part of the Kake Walk tradition, UVM came through with another generally fine jazz concert this year. Presented on Friday afternoon, February 21, in the Patrick Gymnasium, the concert met with generally consistent audience approval.

Starting off things with a burst of spirit were the gospel group, the Grandison Singers. Utilizing harmonic technique and an infectious sense of rhythm, the Grandisons soon had the audience clapping and singing along to their gospel renditions. Several encores attested to the popularity of the group.

Following the gospel group was the inimitable Dizzy Gillespie with his jazz group. After a preliminary bantering session with his musicians - ranging from false introductions to the Ku Klux Klan - Gillespie proceeded to demonstrate his exciting artistry on the trumpet. His unique pop style had a captivating effect on the audience, however, too much of a good thing worked to ultimately detract from the performance. An unexplained time extension of Gillespie's act caused audience patience to wear somewhat thin.

Finally, the audience got what they had long been anticipating - the headline group of the concert, the Highwaymen. Warming quickly to the harmonic, smooth-flowing style of the five collegians, the audience registered enthusiastic approval for such folk hits as the "Gypsy Rover," "Cotton Fields," "Praetoria" and, of course, "Michael".

AND NOW A GIRL IN ROTC!!

It finally happened. A girl was enrolled for the Military Science course offered as part of the R.O.T.C. program at UVM.

Freshman co-ed, Alexa Rose from Forest Hills, New York, received her enrollment card last week with an added course on it - M.S. 2. She attended the first class and was told that there must be some mistake. There was.

Just last September, the CYNIC praised the efficiency of the new IBMized enrollment procedure.

Pat and Steve Reign at Ball

By Betty Fuchs

Royalty was the byword Thursday, February 20. In a regally decorated gymnasium-turned-ballroom, hundreds of couples watched a Count crown a King and Queen. The occasion was the annual Kake Walk Ball and the royalty involved were the inimitable Count Basie and the King and Queen of Kake Walk '64.

The beginning of the Ball officially initiated the Kake Walk weekend. Count Basie and his fifteen musicians began to play at 9:00 P.M., in a pink and gold court ballroom setting. Twinkling lights from a large gold and white chandelier spotlighted the dancers.

At 10:00 P.M. the King and Queen were presented. After being crowned by the Count, Queen Patty Russell, Pi Phi's "Breath of Spring", and King Steve Abbott, AGR's Knight in Shining Armor, ascended the throne. The music began again as the King and Queen led the next dance.

Shortly after 11:00 the musicians began their jam-session. It was a roof-rocking sensation featuring a five-minute solo by the drummer.

At 1:00 A.M. the band played its last song. As the last few lingering couples left the musicians packed up their instruments and boarded their bus for the trip to their next engagement. And when Friday afternoon's jazz concert came around, the gymnasium-turned-ballroom was just a gymnasium again.

On October 9, 1963 the Inter-Fraternity Council issued the following statement:

"After extended deliberation and discussion, the Inter-Fraternity Council and its constituent fraternities have decided that there are certain aspects of Kake Walk which could be construed as being offensive to some members of our community. Although these aspects were never intended to be, in any sense, derogatory, the Inter-Fraternity Council, in its meeting of October 8, 1963, has voted to eliminate the use of blackface make-up and kinky-haired wigs from the costume of the walkers, who represent the sixteen UVM fraternities."

To meet members of the UVM community this decision of the IFC appeared to put an end to a controversy that had been going on for some fourteen years. A great deal of the arguments expressed appeared in the letters column of the CYNIC. Some students were strongly opposed to this move by the IFC. Their letters claimed that there was nothing offensive in Kake Walk, that Negroes on campus and in the community were being "over sensitive", and that to eliminate blackface from Kake Walk would be to destroy an almost sacrosanct tradition.

Reaction to the IFC decision was almost as intense and varied as the arguments which preceded it. Again these opinions saw expression in the letters column of the CYNIC as well as that of the Burlington Free Press. Although, with the sixty-seventh Kake Walk approaching, these foregoing events have faded into the background, the CYNIC invited various religious leaders, faculty members, and members of the community to comment on them. On this page appear a few of these comments.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont

VOL. 82

SUMMER, 1964

NO. 11

The issue of The VERMONT CYNIC which you are now reading has been prepared especially for students who will be entering UVM this fall as the Class of 1968 and for the many parents who have accompanied their sons and daughters to the Summer Orientation Program. By and large, it consists of articles and other materials which have appeared in the CYNIC during the past year. It is intended to introduce you to both the CYNIC and to some of the many activities and events which are a part of UVM.

The CYNIC is UVM's official student newspaper and is now in its 82nd year of publication. The purpose of a student newspaper is to provide comprehensive coverage of all campus news and events and to act as a forum for campus opinion. The CYNIC is the only such forum available on this campus and as such plays a significant part in the lives of the students of the University.

The elimination of the use of blackface at Kake Walk was the climax of a long controversy which had its origin in a letter to the CYNIC from a concerned student. In the months leading up to the Inter-Fraternity Council's decision, arguments both for and against the use of blackface appeared in the Letters column of the CYNIC. In our issue which preceded the IFC decision we said in our editorial column:

In the opinion of the CYNIC, the blackface, kinky hair, and speech used in Kake Walk act to perpetuate an incorrect image of the American Negro which is insulting and materially and psychologically detrimental to him. Accepting this to be fact rather than opinion, we see no other alternative than the abolition of the use of these objectionable items as part of Kake Walk.

When SCOPE (S.A. Cultural Activities Committee) announced that they had extended an invitation to speak at UVM to George Lincoln Rockwell, Commander of the American Nazi Party, the CYNIC was flooded with letters opposing and supporting the visit of the Nazi. After some three weeks of arguments back and forth (much of which appeared in the CYNIC) the Student Association Senate voted not to appropriate the funds that were requested for Rockwell's visit. In a subsequent issue, the CYNIC published an article by Rockwell entitled "World Race War" for the benefit of those who had expressed a desire to "find out what Rockwell and the American Nazi Party stand for."

These are just two of the many issues which were debated in the pages of the CYNIC during the past year. Others included the compulsory ROTC program at UVM, the meaning of art (inspired by the placing of the controversial Aschenbach statue in front of the Bailey Library), and University imposed dress and behavior regulations.

The CYNIC is sponsored by UVM's Student Association and every student at the University receives each issue at no cost. Parents of students and others interested in what is occurring on the campus and in the minds of UVM's students may subscribe by simply sending their name and address along with $4.00 check or money order to: The VERMONT CYNIC, Business Manager, Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. A subscription insures the receipt of every issue of the CYNIC with its extensive news and opinion coverage.

Rockefeller Disappoints Students

by Joan Klonsky

Governor Rockefeller did not impress me; I would not vote for him or any candidate, Democratic or Republican, who so presented himself. I will grant the Governor that he has been campaigning hard, travelling much, and making numerous speeches. I will also grant him that, in reality, the students of UVM, St. Michael's, Champlain and Trinity, who will vote in November, will have no effect upon the outcome of the election. However, I object to an attitude of condescension apparent in the speech of the Governor, who must have failed to realize that college students are generally more intelligent and better informed on current national and international issues than the population of the country as a whole.

I am pleased for the Governor that his educational program in New York has been so meritorious, and that he has held umpteenth positions as Secretary of this or that. But I would have been so much more delighted if he had devoted his wasted half hour to a more specific discussion of a more worthwhile nature: Why is the Governor opposed to Red China's admission to the UN? What particular program would he offer for Senior Citizens? Where has the leadership gap in the current administration occurred and how has it proved detrimental? Why should or should not the U.S. continue aid to South Viet Nam? How would the Governor improve the Alliance for Progress? or even: Why should the Governor be the Republican nominee for President of the United States as opposed to Nixon, Scranton or Goldwater?

As one of 7000 college students employed in Washington, D.C. last summer, I heard many speakers in a seminar program, including Senators Humphrey and Kuchel, Edward R. Murrow, John Glenn, Attorney General Robert Kennedy and the late President John F. Kennedy. Senator Humphrey spoke on politics and international issues, Robert Kennedy spoke on civil rights, John Glenn spoke on the aeronautics program, to cite a few; following his talk, each speaker answered questions posed to him by members of the audience.

What has left me with an indelible impression, however, was the ability of each speaker to establish immediate rapport with the audience, composed exclusively of college students. It was a rapport based not so much on capacity for articulation, but on overt expression of sincerity; that when a speaker tells the youth of America that the future rests upon them, he tells them with confidence in their intelligence and their potentialities, not as a trite utterance of sham idealism.

EXTRA!!

The students of UVM have won a major battle in their fight for equality in the academic world, thanks to the valiant efforts of the Burns Boys. On Tuesday, April 21, the Campus Security Force ticketed a 1962 aqua Plymouth station wagon bearing yellow sticker number 1375. The charge? The faculty member's car had violated the University's rule because it was "Parked in Student Area."

THE SCEPTIC

by J. D. O'Hara

"E was white, clear white, inside"
- "Gunga Din"

Vermont Conference is nearly upon us, gang, and there's always the chance that us WASPs (white Anglo-Saxon Protestants) might get involved in it if we don't look out. Dates being the demanding, idealistic little creatures that they are, even the most wholesome all-American frat-clubber might find himself obliged to be cool and assured at some Conference-connected function. By popular demand, therefore, we have prepared a list of okay remarks. Clip this column out and carry it with you for the next week or so. You'll have no trouble handling even the most awkward situation.

The remarks have been broken down into three groups for the three most probable emergencies. Let's begin by assuming the worst: your date not only insists that you take her to hear one of the speeches, but she has arranged for you to meet the speaker ahead of time. No need to stammer, blush, or faint. Step boldly up to him and deliver in your sincerest manner (one hand in pocket; cigarette held casually in the other) one of the following sure-fire announcements:

1. "I've always been very interested in your problems. In high school/prep school I wrote an essay on the subject, and I interviewed some real Negroes about it."
2. "I never notice what color a person is."
3. "I'd like to help, but frankly I don't care for lunch-counter food."
4. "My parents taught us not to use words like nigger; they said it sounded prejudiced. We always call you darkies."
5. "Some of my best friends are Negroes."

Now let us imagine that you have shone brilliantly at this meeting, and you have sat successfully through the evening's speech. Question period—and your girl wants to know that you've been giving the subject some serious thought. Take your pick:

1. "How do intelligent Negroes feel about Kakewalk?"
2. "Now that the Jews are all going to Israel, why don't the Negroes go back to Africa?"
3. "Well, if they aren't naturally measy, why do they always live in the slums?"
4. "Do you know any good spirituals?"
5. "Isn't it true that Lena Horne is really an Italian?"
6. "What you've said is okay in principle, I suppose, but how would you feel if your daughter wanted to marry Governor Wallace?"
7. "Isn't all this fuss about high-paying jobs awfully materialistic?"

8. "Well, if you're not in the pay of the International Communist conspiracy, why are you always making trouble?"

Having passed through the question period with flying colors, you can relax. All you have to go through now is a sincere discussion of the Conference at the Mast & Anchor. You'll probably want to use more than one remark from this group (especially if your girl has taken an overnight). A few relevant memories have been included for those who have none:

1. "If they don't like it in America, they should go away."
2. "They're really lovable people, actually. Irresponsible, of course, but fun-loving and musical and always laughing."
3. "Yes, I was interested in the subject when I first came to UVM, but the fellows at the house made me realize what a waste of time it is."
4. "I think it was pretty nasty what they did to Kakewalk."
5. "We have Shakespeare; all they have is James Baldwin."
6. "We had a Negro in our school, but no one really liked him much because he never came to the dances or ran for student offices or hung around the right people. He was sort of sullen, actually."
7. "In high school my gang invited a Negro to one of our parties, and he said that he had a good time. He was just trying to get on our side, though; we watched him all the while he was there, and he didn't actually have much fun."
8. "Well, all right, so we didn't hang around with them. So what? They didn't hang around with us, either."
9. "None of my best friends are Negroes."
10. "The way I see it, education is preparation for life; and if we're nice to them now, they won't be prepared."

Know Who And What Your Enemies Are

To the Editor:

In the Realist several months ago, there appeared an interview with George Lincoln Rockwell. Several subscribers cancelled their subscriptions, saying that by printing the interview the Realist, despite repeated disclaimers, tacitly endorsed Rockwell's line, and lent support to him by giving him a public forum (despite the fact that circulation was under 20,000 at the time, mostly among people who had no love for Rockwell).

In fact, however, the interview showed Rockwell to be the demagogue and fool that he is. The interviewer (editor Paul Krassner) asked obviously leading questions, and Rockwell stepped right into them. It would have taken a fool as big as Rockwell to believe him to be anything but sick after that interview.

Now that Rockwell wants to speak at UVM, the students here can get an unequalled opportunity to see this man in action. He is a rabble-rouser, to be sure, but hopefully the students at UVM will not be aroused, as his pet target, rabble, would be.

The arguments that are bound to be raised against his speaking here are themselves extremely narrow. To say that, while Rockwell didn't kill six million Jews, supporting the murders is just as bad, has some truth to it. But to say that he should not be allowed to speak here for that reason is not a valid argument. To deny a man his right to free speech because of his political or sociological views, perverted as they may be, is as undemocratic as many of Rockwell's own ideas.

Another argument is that, as intelligent as an audience is supposed to be, a rabble-rouser like Rockwell can still have a bad effect on them, is an insult to the intelligence of every UVM student. This man must be brought before the public as often as possible and be showed up for what he is: a sick man and a demagogue of the worst sort. If the people in the audience fall for this vicious material of his, then it shows a predisposition on their part for that kind of thinking, and keeping Rockwell away won't change their natural inclinations one bit. If he can persuade any decent number of people — more than the inevitable few who are sick enough to sympathize with him anyway — then I have vastly overestimated the intelligence of UVM's students, and we might just as well close shop, since a university should combat this type of inclination and gullibility. If, over the population as a whole, he gains any kind of following through his rabble-rousing, then the whole United States might just as well turn the government over to Rockwell right now, for our Constitution and the spirit behind it will be meaningless.

However, I have enough faith in the student body here, and in the United States, to believe that continued public exposure and debate with other speakers or with the audiences will spell Rockwell's undoing. (Even without the debate his line should be so repulsive as to make debate unnecessary.) For this reason I urge the students here to support an invitation to George Lincoln Rockwell to speak at UVM. And if that invitation is extended — as I hope it will be — I further urge the students to fight any and every attempt — and attempts will be made — to have the invitation withdrawn, either by those who extended it, or by some higher authority.

Only if you know what kind of fool Rockwell is can you effectively fight him and his kind, and only by exposure can you begin to know what he is like. One cannot combat an evil if he does not know what the nature of the evil is, even if he has an army to help him fight.

One final word. In the editorial on Rockwell it said, "Plus he puts on quite a colorful show, Nazi uniforms, swastikas, and the whole bit." A word of caution about this is necessary: that is no show. If a Rockwell should ever get powerful enough those same bodyguards who put on the show would be another Gestapo.

In the interest of knowing who and what your enemies are and of self-preservation, let Rockwell speak!

Say No To Nazi!

To the Editor:

Re Rockwell's visit I would like to be on record as strongly opposed to it on the ground that a Nazi leader does not deserve to be honored with a forum at the University of Vermont. It seems to me that some people confuse right with privilege. Thus, while Rockwell has the right of free speech, he has no right to occupy a speaker's platform on our campus; the latter is a privilege which originates with us. No abridgment of free speech is, therefore, involved in his case at all. Whoever wishes to listen to the Nazi leader is free to invite him any time and any place, yet off campus. However, the University of Vermont has no obligation to extend its facilities to a person who is glorifying one of the most horrendous systems of our time.

Impediments, such as lack of police protection, are immaterial and are really evading the basic issue: the distinction between right and privilege, between a decision to refuse and to bestow honor.

I hope that I, for one, will be spared the insult of lecturing from the same UVM rostrums as Mr. Rockwell.

What Is The Shape Of An Idea?

To the Editor:

I was delighted to read M. Heller's thoughtful and provocative strictures on my somewhat Philistine opinions of Mr. Aschenbach's alleged sculpture.

I am truly sorry that M. Heller credits me with the possibility of making him the butt of my humor. I have never and do not now intend to resort to the argumentum ad hominem. It has been said that one may be careless in choosing his friends, but should exercise the utmost discretion in picking his enemies. I account it an honor to have the perceptive M. Heller an "enemy" of my ideas and shall certainly do nothing to jeopardize that relationship.

To join the battle, I must, of course, take exception to my colleague's thesis that satire and laughter are inappropriate responses to modern art. Philosophers, writers and critics have been having dead cats into sanctuaries with gales of laughter since time began. Why should this piece of work be a Sacred Cow? Nor can I accept the argument that derision and ridicule destroy creative thought. Creativity which springs from elemental sources is as immune from scorn as is great art itself.

M. Heller further states that is is inappropriate for a teacher to employ cynicism and mockery. These may indeed be inappropriate in the classroom. But I was not addressing myself to the issue as a teacher in the classroom where I would have an unfair advantage over a captive audience, but in news media where anyone is free to take issue with me.

The basic trouble in discussing contemporary art is that the ground has been cut out from under criticism by a lack of any sort of standards. Because something is "honest" or born of "sweat and tears and joy" — to employ M. Heller's somewhat flamboyant phraseology — is no guarantee of authenticity or of greatness. Mental patients produce all sorts of creative products conceived and executed in the depths of despair or in transports of maniacal joy. But such work, even by today's depressing standards is not art.

M. Heller further argues that I ought to try to "understand" the iron tree and not laugh at it. Laughter, M. Heller, comes from understanding, and is not an evasion of it. Rabelais, Anatole France, Rostand, Voltaire, and all the others who have howled at the folly and pretentiousness of their fellow man understand him — indeed perhaps better than those who debate endlessly with solemn faces and labored phrase. We hold it truth that he who laughs at his fellow man must do so with understanding or his laughter is hollow and unworthy. I think I understand Mr. Aschenbach's "sculpture." He says it is symbolic of higher education. I have said it is a monstrous hoax. I see nothing inconsistent in these two points of view. It will be said of him that he builded better than he knew. Or did he?

On Tuesday, April 14, 1964 Mr. Paul Aschenbach spoke at the final lecture of the Men's Residence Hall Lecture Series in Marsh Hall. His topic covered sculpture in general as well as his sculpture in front of Bailey Library.

Mr. Aschenbach began with the importance of emphasis in sculpture. The artist concerns himself not only with what his work is to be, but also with its technical aspects. One step leads to and modifies another. Thus, the problem is given a formal solution.

The problem facing Mr. Aschenbach as he planned the sculpture which has evoked so much criticism from the general community, was basically a problem in shaping an idea.

"What is the shape of an idea? Sculpture should be a building in which an idea lives.

Art itself implies the invention of a self-definitive alphabet." Therefore, Mr. Aschenbach tried to create such an alphabet. He did research on forms of all shapes. Each form gave rise to a new form and every new form became metaphorical. We are not expected to regard the sculpture specifically, for example as education.

"What is education? What is a university? What is its core? In this work, I tried to move from the familiar to the unfamiliar." We may see our own ideas reflected in his work. The chairs, perhaps, suggest education. Their position on top of the piece suggests the classical sense of university. The upward effect may suggest movement and action.

But Mr. Aschenbach emphatically pointed out that we can never reach the essence of the work.

"A multiple statement can never have a core. If something is easily read, then it is a fraud. If we understand it then what is its point? We have already reached that particular level of understanding. It is the job of the contemporary artist to state his general philosophy of things. Any man who is worth his salt ought to further his field." Mr. Aschenbach's personal thoughts on the sculpture reflect a trusting and reaching motif. He encouraged us to decide what it is for ourselves.

"Talking about my sculpture is never an apology for it," said Mr. Aschenbach during his talk. "It would be idiocy to say that there isn't a mistake in it, but the principle is true." The principle is manifested in the work which is real and which is there for all of us.

Votey Hall Opens

The long-awaited opening of the new engineering building has finally arrived (a result of which will be the even longer-awaited destruction of East Hall). Votey Hall is the new, three-story home of the University's mathematics department as well as the departments of civil engineering, electrical engineering, and mechanical engineering.

However coldly modern Votey Hall may seem on the outside, the interior is bright and comfortable. It is surprising to discover that the windows, mere slits of glass to the outsider, are more than unique identifying devices. The colorful materials used throughout the building also add to this brightness.

The outstanding features of Votey Hall include private offices for the instructors. The lecture room, however, is perhaps the most interesting feature of the building. This acoustically designed room, which is now in use, can seat 250 people. One of its most intriguing aspects is a wall of revolving blackboards. This room also has facilities for showing films.

Some other interesting features of Votey Hall are the reading room, for which definite plans will soon be made, and the mechanical engineering room containing a large flow tank which is used in hydraulics. There is also a sound-proof laboratory containing a wind tunnel.

Yale Russian Chorus Thrills UVM Audience

The Yale Russian Chorus which appeared here this spring. The group's visit was sponsored by the SCOPE committee.

by Robert Lampke

On Sunday, April 19, 1964, the UVM faculty and student body along with members of the Burlington community had the privilege and pleasure of listening to the world famous Yale Russian Chorus. This concert was sponsored by the SCOPE cultural committee and was held during the afternoon in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The singing of this very talented group, comprised of graduate and undergraduate students and faculty, ranged from rich melodious tones to deep and somber liturgical music, from very spirited and quick paced folk music to solemn and sentimental songs of love. Some of their songs ended very spiritedly in a quick "Da" or "Hey", while others drifted off into nothingness, producing a saddened effect.

Their first group of selections was Folk Music from Central Russia and included songs about the peasants and common workers, about lovers and their

The chorus leader's arm-motions as he brought his hand forward and back gave one the deep feeling of the spirit present both in the marching soldiers and more so in the singing chorus. The chorus responded to the soloist's lines by sounding as though they were saying "Don't Marry Her, Don't Marry Her".

The next group of songs came from Russian Composers and the most famous and most beautiful of these was "The Song of the Volga Boatmen". Here the chorus sang in a steady and deep-toned voice, producing in one's mind a visual picture of the boatmen pulling the boats down the canal banks of the Volga. We even sense them straining at their positions as they struggle to move the boat a little further down the canal. This beautiful chanting continued throughout the whole song and produced a very pleasant and enjoyable effect.

Their last selection consisted of Soldiers' Ballads and most of them very very spirited marching songs, starting out slowly and loved ones and about those in mourning over the loss of their loved ones. In the song "You-step so wide, You-Volga so deep we are warned not to walk too close to the river, while the eagle is warned not to fly too close to the earth". The song started off as a soloist number by one member of the chorus, with accompaniment by the rest of the chorus. The soloist rendered his part so well, especially in his deep-toned recitation, that he very much sounded like a cantor or High Priest chanting Holy Prayers.

Their next selection consisted of European songs. One of the well-received songs was from Macedonia. This was the story of Jamie and how he was warned not to marry Ptima because the wise men say there is that remote chance that she may be his sister. The audience found this comment on the amusing and light side. The song began in very rich tones, reverberating throughout Ira Allen and sounding like soldiers singing on a march, picking up speed till they ended in a quick burst of speech.

The audiences' response was so enthusiastic towards this very vibrant and dynamic group that the chorus agreed to perform two extra numbers. Much to the audiences surprise this very versatile group sang two popular Negro Spirituals - "Joshua Won the Battle of Jericho" and "I'm going to Ride that Chariot in the Morning, Lord, Getting Ready for the Judgement Day". Not only were these two songs sung very well, but they also brought back memories of the Grandison Singers who sang similar songs at the recent Kake Walk Jazz Concert.

The response to the "Group that has put American Idealism into a form that is wholly appreciated by all" was overwhelming. At the same time, it served as a small appreciation for all that this group is doing to strengthen United States' relations on both a cultural and personal level with other countries of the world.

Petitions Circulating For Civil Rights

Faculty

Initiating active statewide participation of university faculty members in the Civil Rights cause, Professor John Engels of St. Michael's College has had circulated throughout all Vermont "Institutions of higher learning" a petition in the form of a letter, to Senators Aiken and Prouty, firmly asking that they vote for cloture in the current Civil Rights Bill debate.

Assistant Professor of English, Harry Orth, acting as Professor Engel's sponsor here at the University of Vermont, has, to date, received at least 100 affirmative replies from the faculty. Faculty members have written their own letters in support of the Bill.

Following is the text of the letter being circulated:

"We, the undersigned, Free-men of the State of Vermont, ask that you vote in favor of the motion for cloture, soon to come before the Senate.

"The debate of the Civil Rights Bill has been extended unreasonably by a group of Senators, whose strategies have been undertaken cynically, and whose aims in contravention of justice and the will of the people have never been in doubt.

"We feel that the need for this legislation is unquestionable, and that the welfare of our country ought not to be subordinated to a concern for the welfare of a parliamentary device traditionally employed to obstruct the ends of social justice.

"We do not ask that the rule of unlimited debate be abandoned or drastically curtailed, but, merely that you recognize the moral imperative which has informed this bill. We feel that in this instance a vote for cloture is clearly in the best interests of the Senate, your office, the State of Vermont, and the United States of America..."

When the petitions have been amassed from every Vermont college and university, Professor Engels will then forward the letter to Senators Aiken and Prouty, both of whom have already indicated to Professor Engels their intention to vote for cloture, for the Civil Rights Bill, and against any crippling amendments which are proposed.

Students

Indication of student support of the Civil Rights Bill was demonstrated on Wednesday, April 22, when the SA gave final approval to the wording of its Civil Rights Petition to be circulated on campus. The petition states:

For nearly two centuries, America has sought in vain to give real meaning to Jefferson's famous contention that all men are created equal and enjoy certain unalienable rights. Now in the halls of the United States Senate, an attempt is being made to give legal expression to this basic concept of the American Creed.

We, the undersigned students of the University of Vermont, respectfully urge the earliest possible passage of the lively and effective Civil Rights Bill of 1964.

This petition, requesting each student to sign his name and home-state, will be circulated throughout the campus along with a paraphrase of the Bill itself. Upon completion, the petition, plus a list of the Senators who represent the home states of the students, will be sent to Senator Hubert Humphrey, Senator co-ordinator of the Civil Rights Bill.

SOCCER IS NOW 12th UVM SPORT

Soccer became the newest intercollegiate sport at the University of Vermont Saturday, when the Board of Trustees gave approval for the start of a program.

The University fielded an informal soccer team last fall. The first official team is expected to play about eight or ten matches in the fall, under Harold Grieg who will handle the coaching duties.

Soccer brings to twelve the number of intercollegiate sports at Vermont. Others are cross country and football in the fall, basketball, hockey, swimming, skiing, rifle and indoor track in the winter, and baseball, golf tennis and track in the spring.

Rickover Blasts Education Here

When the Burlington-Lake Champlain Chamber of Commerce and the University of Vermont Lecture Series invited Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover to speak on education, they asked for dynamite.

They got it Thursday evening when the controversial critic of the nation's educational system and author of "Education and Freedom" addressed a captive audience at Ira Allen Chapel.

"We have a philosophy of education that simply does not work, and an educational establishment that has too many administrators and researchers who boss the teachers, and teachers whose educational and professional qualifications are inadequate," he said.

"I readily admit that as places for fun and games American educational institutions are unsurpassed in the world.

"We are the only Western nation where precious school hours are wasted teaching children how to make fudge, twirl batons, drive cars, budget income, handle the telephone, catch fish and become 'likable, lovable, and datable,'" he said.

Rickover said American education fails to live up to the needs of our society.

As signs of this failure, Rickover said that each year medical schools graduate one quarter less than the number the United States needs; that although America requires 72,000 new engineers annually, it graduates less than 40,000; that America has too many unskilled workers and too few skilled workers.

"In Europe," he said, "the situation is exactly the reverse. England's working force is 50 per cent skilled, 12 per cent semi-skilled; Switzerland has to import virtually every unskilled worker.

"Educational inefficiency hurts our children and it hurts the nation. It also makes ours the most expensive school system in the world," he said.

"We spend more money to carry a child to a given level of scholarship than any other country."

What can be done to improve education?

Rickover suggested lengthening the school day; eliminating subjects which could be learned elsewhere; "improving teacher qualifications; bringing them up to the level existing abroad, and you could then put the educational enterprise under the supervision of our best teachers."

Rickover said he was convinced that a "really effective reform program" could not be put through without a national standard. "We are the only advanced nation without a national scholastic standard."

What does he mean by a national standard?

"It is simply an optional criterion for determining the value of an act or accomplishment," he said.

He referred to the high school diploma when he spoke of a standard with which to judge graduates.

"The high school diploma has so shrunk in value that in many cases it represents no more today than did grammar school graduation half a century ago."

First, said Rickover, a "National Standards Committee" would have to be created to determine what America's needs were.

"This would be a small committee composed of men of national stature and eminence - trustworthy, intelligent, scholarly, and devoted to the ideal of an American education second to none," said the man who has been called the "father of the nuclear submarine."

He said the committee would act as a watchtower to determine national needs that would keep us competitive with other advanced countries.

Rickover was quick to point out that the standard, as established through examination, would not be forced upon local administrators, but offered as a guideline.

Students who took and passed this examination would receive a certificate.

Would this open the door for federal control of education?

Rickover says no. Like the problem of water pollution, education now requires federal assistance to local and state administrators, he said.

"Let me make it crystal clear that nothing in my proposal would violate the constitutional separation of power between federal and state governments, nor go counter to our tradition of control of schools by the local community," Rickover said.

"I envisage the rendering of a service; not regulation in any way, shape or manner."

Rickover said that when enough people want school reform there will be government action.

He ended: "For if the public schools fail in their purpose it will not be possible to develop in adequate number the brain power and consequent innovation on which you must depend for your major capital development in the future - on the development which this community must depend for opportunity, employment and happiness."

Ex-Editor Arrested For Picketing In N.Y.

A twenty-three year old alumni of the University of Vermont has been convicted of disorderly conduct arising from his picketing activities protesting racial discrimination. Jules Older, '62, former Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC, has been sentenced to thirty days imprisonment but has been released on $500 bail pending appeal.

Older is Employment Chairman of Downtown New York CORE. In this capacity he was in charge of the picketing carried out by CORE this August at Manhattan's Rutgers housing project. The demonstrations were in protest against alleged discrimination in craft unions supplying labor for the project and against the fulfillment of city contracts with segregated labor.

According to Older, "As a picket captain, I've been threatened with arrest several times. Since there were no legal charges against me they made one up. I was supposed to have assaulted a police sergeant in the leg with a cardboard sign --- I didn't do it. Picketing was over and I was leaving and I was arrested."

My assault on the officer was supposed to have occurred while I was dispersing the pickets. It's a frame-up and I was sand-bagged."

To the charge of third degree assault was added that of disorderly conduct and Older was also accused of endangering the lives of several children (strongly denied by Older). He was released on $1000 bail pending his August 10 hearing. The assault charge was dropped but he was found guilty of disorderly conduct. The penalty for this offense is up to six months imprisonment, but Older was only sentenced to thirty days. This is still one of the severest penalties imposed for such an offense under such conditions. Older expects his appeal to be heard "some time around November."

Older served as Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC from February 1961 to February 1962. He was a brother of Phi Sigma Delta. A psychology major, he is continuing his studies at the New York University graduate school of psychology. If his appeal is lost his conviction will necessitate a temporary stoppage of his studies.

Former Editor-in-Chief of the CYNIC, Jules Older, is shown here leading a student demonstration from the stairs of Waterman. He recently said that he got his start in protest movements in "the days of protest against the old dean of men's paternalism."

RAPPA'S ROUNDUP

by Richard Rappaport

I should like to devote, this, the final column of my sports writing career for the CYNIC to a preview of next year's UVM sport schedule, and how each of the major varsity teams will fare.

In the fall, Coach Bob Clifford should field one of the strongest Vermont football teams in the school's history. However, in order to successfully do this, he will have to overcome four major obstacles: overconfidence, injuries, grades, and last, but not least, the principal barrier to an undefeated season, the University of Massachusetts.

Being cocky or overconfident is something which UVM has rarely ever had the opportunity to become in the past. However, with a large number of returning veterans from this year's squad which finished with a 6-2 record, this could be a problem. However, I am quite confident that Clifford will keep the team on its toes at all times, and due to the depth of the squad, any cocky first team member can be adequately replaced, if necessary, with little or no loss in strength at that position, resulting from such a change.

Another question mark is the fact that a few key ballplayers have suffered injuries, which must completely heal over the summer in order for them to play efficiently next season. If the operations on Rusty Brink's and Ron Hertel's knees, and the one on Deane Kent's back (to be performed this summer) are not successful, their absence will greatly hinder the team's chances for the upcoming season.

There is of course always the problem of grades, especially among the freshmen, and a few sophomores. The difficulty does not only involve players staying in school, but also is concerned with their having to make a 72 average in the second semester. This is necessary in order for them to keep their grants-in-aid, without which most of them would be unable to afford college. Fortunately, however, this problem is not as serious as it has previously been.

The last difficulty, U. Mass., is definitely not the least important since it will probably be the most serious obstacle in the Cats' path to the Yankee Conference title, and an unbeaten season. I believe that the Catamounts will not be able to overcome this barrier and should conclude the year with a 7-1 overall record. The score of the contest with the Redmen should, however, be much closer than last year's 41-0 rout, due to Vermont's greater depth, and their home field advantage, but U. Mass. is still a little out of Vermont's class.

Turning from the football squad we now take a look at the basketball team which should be improved over last year's surprisingly fine 11-10 ledger. The team has three returning starters, captain Ralph D'Attilia, Layne Higgs, and Milt Goggans from this year's squad along with key substitutes Steve Ross, Joe Gannon, and Kenny Spalter. However, the brightest note for next year is the return of freshman star Bobby Hillas, who played a semester on the same team with Higgs and Goggans, and then was forced to leave school. Although he will not be eligible until the end of the first semester, in late December, he and Higgs will give the Cats one of its finest backcourts in many years.

The Catamounts will again be led by the veteran "white haired wizard" coach, John "Fuzzy" Evans, a member of Basketball's Hall of Fame. While Evans has a fine career coaching record, he has been plagued during the past few years (excluding last season) with losing records due to two primary factors. One is the lack of scholarships, and the second is the fact that the Cats have been using virtually the same basic plays for over twenty years. Recently the other teams in the Yankee Conference have had such a vast knowledge of UVM's set patterns, that they are often able to anticipate, and thus break up many of Vermont's plays. In fact, a few years ago, in a run-away victory by Rhode Island over Vermont, a Cat player went the wrong way on a specified play, and he was graciously corrected by the Rhody player guarding him. It is hoped that possibly some of Vermont's plays will be revamped, and a few new ones originated for next season by Coach Evans, often kiddingly called the "Senator" by some of his coaching colleagues.

Another important varsity winter sport, which was recently introduced on the UVM campus two years ago, is ice hockey. This past season the squad played its first regular intercollegiate schedule, finishing with a 5-3-1 record. The team composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores was expected to do quite well next season, but now the squad's prospects for the coming year are clouded with doubt. The reason for this doubt is the fact that many of these individuals came to UVM depending upon grants-in-aid, which Coach Ruffer had promised them they would receive after their freshman year. However, they have recently discovered that there have never been, or are, at the present time, any hockey grants-in-aid at all, and none are planned for the immediate future. Thus there is a good chance that many of these individuals will be forced to leave school since they are unable to pay all their expenses for three more years.

Regardless of whether these individuals remain in school or not, the team will again have the same problem they faced this year. This is the lack of planned team plays which are so necessary in order to have a winning hockey team. While Vermont was fortunate to get by this year playing "free-lance" hockey, this will not be possible next year when UVM's expanded schedule includes better and more experienced teams.

The baseball team will be battling Maine this weekend for first place in the Yankee Conference race. This entire team will return next year with the exception of captain and second baseman Dick Boutlier, shortstop Mike Benway, and center fielder Bob Johnson.

In addition to the return of this large number of lettermen, there are seven outstanding hurlers on the freshman team and an eighth, who will become eligible next year, who will greatly strengthen the squad.

Thus with this pitching depth and the return of so many veterans, the Cats should win, or at least, be near the top of the Yankee Conference standings next spring.

In addition to the eleven varsity sports on the Vermont campus this year, a twelfth, soccer, under Coach Harold Greig will be inaugurated in the fall.

Outstanding individuals in other sports to watch next season include ace pole vaulter Don Mayland, golfer Joe "Don" Donnelly who is expected to follow in his brother Moose's "footsteps", and the former number one tennis player at the University of Florida, transfer student John Adler, who is expected to head what should be Vermont's strongest tennis team of all time.

The past few months as sports editor of the Vermont CYNIC have been far from dull ones for me. During this period I was able to withstand a blast from the renowned sports editor, of Vermont's "largest" newspaper, Clarence "Bish" Bishop who exhibited his fine ability to be used by the UVM athletic department as a means of expressing their ideas on a certain topic. In addition I had to overcome some highly disparaging remarks about my personal character and the content of my writing by the football coach, and some of his players, who unfortunately weren't able to take in stride some unfavorable, but valid criticism. Using my weekly column, I attempted to accurately describe what I believed were the good and poor aspects of UVM sports: the coaches, their recruiting and their players. Whether I failed or succeeded in any way remains to be seen, but I must say that a majority of the people, including players, I have talked to at this school, have agreed with my viewpoints even on controversial issues.

I sincerely hope that next year's sports editor, whoever he may be, is not afraid to print what he feels is the truth, no matter what outside pressures he may encounter. I also pray that more UVM students take a personal interest in the CYNIC, and the sports page in particular, and offer their services to the new sports editor who will succeed me in the fall.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: Vermont's defeat of St. Michael's 5-2 in golf Monday was the Knights first loss in thirteen dual matches.... As of last Tuesday, former UVM baseball player, Levi Brown, now in the Milwaukee Braves chain, was the third leading hitter in the Class "A" Northwest League with a fine .429 batting average... Senior Jerry Sack roomed with All-Conference and New England UConn basketball star Toby Kimball while they were both in prep school.... Last week history repeated itself when last year's UVM captain Dick "Dutch" Cassini outpitched, as usual, former Norwich rival Fran Kasheta in a Class "A" N.Y.P. League game. Cassini's in the Braves chain, while Kasheta's with the Giants organization.... The total ERA of the Vermont pitching staff is approximately 1.38 runs a game.

History Dept.

Is Publishing Four Books

History, by definition, is a recording of past facts and events. Using this definition as a yardstick, members of the University of Vermont history department are doing a lot of measuring of past facts and events. Currently, four members of the department have books at various stages of development — ranging from waiting for the finished product to arrive from the publisher to applying final touches to manuscripts. Vermont's "recorders of events" are Wolfe W. Schmokel, Robert Daniels, Jeremy Felt, and Samuel Hand.

Dr. Schmokel's book is "Dream of Empire: German Colonialism, 1919-1945" and is the first full treatment of Nazi plans for the creation and administration of an overseas empire. The book also examines the British and French pre-Munich policy and the conflict between Hitler's plans for expansion to the East and the salt-water imperialism of other Nazi leaders. Much of the material in the book is from official German archival sources. The book is published by the Yale Press, is 232 pages, and is scheduled for May publication.

Samuel Rosenman, who was associated with Franklin Roosevelt as a speech writer and advisor for nearly 20 years, is the subject of a biography by Dr. Hand.

Rosenman served as Roosevelt's main speech writer from the time FDR ran for governor of New York until his death in 1945. He was responsible for coining the "New Deal" slogan. Rosenman, who edited a 13-volume publication of Roosevelt's works, served as a special counsel to Harry Truman until retiring in 1946 and was the principal draftsman of Truman's 21-point program.

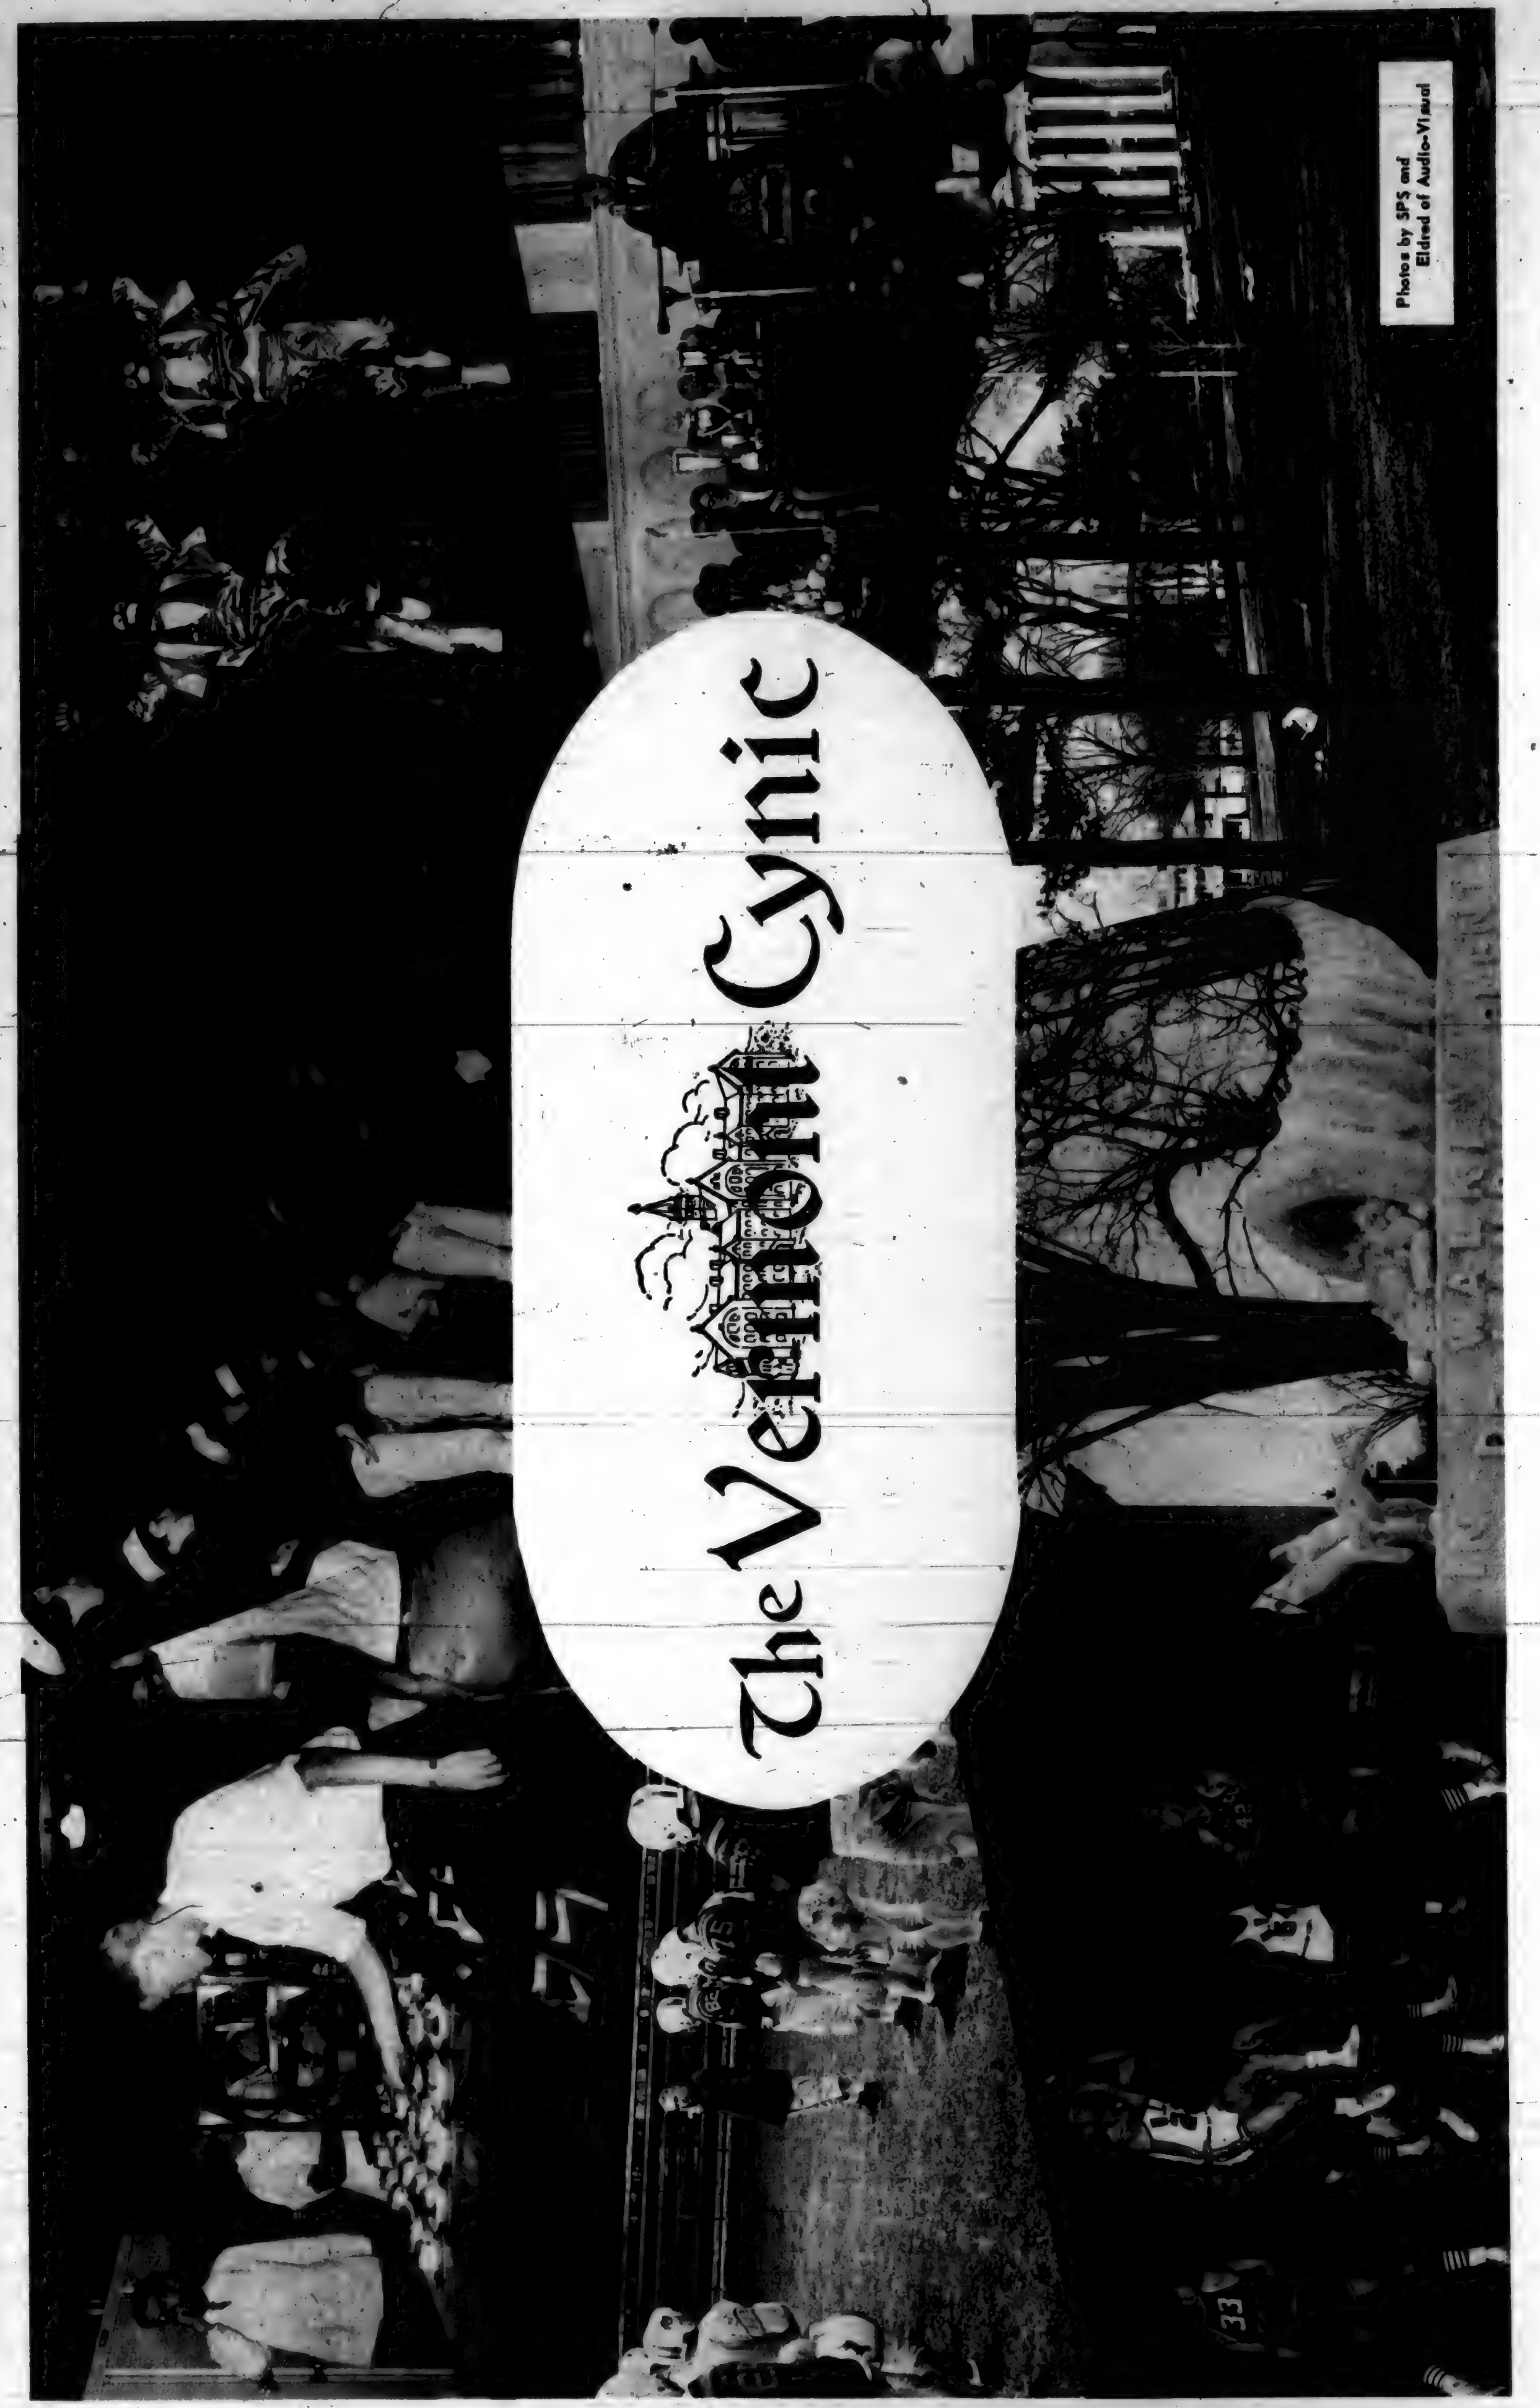

Dr. Hand hopes to finish his draft, which is an expansion of his Ph.D. dissertation, by the end of the summer and figures it will run about 350 pages.

"A Short Text on the History of Soviet Russia" is the title of Dr. Daniel's latest work. Already the author of four books about Communism, this latest effort is part of a new series being published by Prentice Hall, "The Modern World in Historical Perspective." The first three or four books in the series are expected to be out this fall.

Dr. Daniels said his book is intended as a supplement to college freshman or advanced high school courses designed to introduce students to Russian history. The book will be about 150 pages with maps.

Dr. Felt's first book is a study of child labor in New York since 1880. Expected to run between 250 and 300 pages, the book deals with how New York State formulated its child labor code, how effective the code was, and what part this code played in the national fight to ratify the child labor amendments to the Constitution during the 1920s and 30s.

Four Freshmen To Star In Greek Concert

The Four Freshmen who will be performing at UVM during Greek Week.

Greek Week is for Greeks — and for everyone else on campus. It is the freshmen's first formal glimpse of the fraternity-sorority system in action, and the upperclassmen's first social function of the year. Greek Week is presented through the cooperation of the fraternities and sororities of the university, a cooperation that has yielded, for the enjoyment of the entire student body, the four Freshmen in concert.

The Four Freshmen are not merely performers, they are entertainers in the true sense of the word. Their unique style has been described as a "modern, inventive concept in vocal music." As entertainers, the Four Freshmen do more than just sing, for they provide their own musical background (between them they play a total of seven different instruments), and their performances are seasoned with a brand of humor that has made them especially popular at night clubs and campuses throughout the country.

Individually, the Freshmen are Bob Flanagan, the lead voice, Bill Comstock, who sings the second part, Ross Barbour, the third voice, and Ken Albers, who sings bass, Bob, an ex-basketball star, is a bass player as well as an excellent trombonist. Bill plays guitar and has written more than half a dozen songs that have been recorded by the Freshmen. Ross, too, who plays trumpet and drums, is a composer who has been co-worker on several songs including the Freshmen theme, "And So It's Over." The Freshmen versatility is also possessed by Ken, "the big guy," who plays bass, mellophone, and a fine jazz trumpet.

The Four Freshmen concert will be held on Friday, September 25, from 8:00-11:00 at the Patrick gymnasium. Tickets will be on sale for $2.00 at the University Book Store beginning September 16th.

Greek Week begins on September 23rd with the sorority-fraternity exchange dinners and officer workshops. The queen candidates will be judged on the 24th by a panel of judges. The Greek games will be held on the 26th at Centennial Field. Greek Week will be discussed in more detail in a special Greek Week edition of the CYNIC. In the meantime, however, DON'T FORGET THE FOUR FRESHMEN they're a group well worth our support.

Rowell Addresses UVM At Opening Convocation

The acting president of the University of Vermont, in a state of the University address made at the University's opening convocation last Thursday night, gave faculty, students and invited guests a report on the University which encompassed faculty salaries, enrollment, the budget, the "surplus", and a plea for the growth of the spirit of free inquiry.

Lyman S. Rowell, speaking in the University's Patrick Gymnasium paid tribute to Dr. John T. Fey, who served as president at Vermont for six years before leaving Aug. 1 to assume the presidency of the University of Wyoming. "A committee has met regularly to screen more than 150 candidates for the position of president. Now they have reduced this number greatly and have begun the task of obtaining more information about the best qualified."

"But the demands of the time, the process of education and the needs of an institution such as ours do not permit the luxury of marking time in an interim between presidents... our former president has built a functioning structure, and it is our responsibility to keep it functioning."

ON THE BUDGET

Speaking on the subject of the budget, President Rowell said that department chairmen, deans and administrative heads have been reviewing programs and needs during the summer looking to the two years of the 1965-67 biennium. "We are now translating our philosophy of education into a budget and this budget is being shaped to try to meet the salary demands and programs of the University."

ON THE SURPLUS

He said that "during the past summer both the University ...

conducted by John Samuel, on February 12; and Joan Baez, folk singer, who is scheduled to come in March.

All seats are reserved, and only season tickets are sold. Prices are for one season ticket to one series, which includes six concerts. Seats are available for $16., $13., $10., and $6.50. Checks should be made payable to the University of Vermont, and if paying by mail, enclosed should be a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Mail checks to The Lane Series, UVM, Burlington, Vermont.

and the State Government in Vermont found that their actual income exceeded their estimated income. For a time, it almost appeared that to have a so-called 'surplus' was as great a crime as to have had a deficit. Our extra revenue had been generated by enrollment, increases in grants, increased receipts from auxiliary enterprises, returns on temporary investments, and payments of a nonrecurring nature. Our costs were increased as well, but there was a net gain."

"We adhered to the principles and philosophy of the budget," he said, "and did not use these funds for changes in operation which would have reflected increases in the budget for the next year. Rather, we have allocated this money to be spent for nonrecurring items."

ON THE FACULTY

President Rowell told the convocation gathering "we are proud of the group of scholars that have been employed. It is no small accomplishment to bring together and hold such a group under present circumstances." He said "it is true we have had staff members leave us during this year ... for places such as the Universities of California, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Arizona, and of course the University of Wyoming. At the same time, we too have been procuring new staff members ... from such institutions as Johns Hopkins, Texas A & M, and the Universities of Illinois, Rutgers, and Notre Dame."

ON FACULTY SALARIES

Referring to the call of President Eisenhower's Commission to colleges and universities to double salaries in 10 years, he said that the Dean of Faculties "reports to me tonight that with two years to go we are less than 13 percent from the goal of doubling average salaries over the 10-year period from 1956-66. I believe this an excellent accomplishment," he said, adding "it does not mean we can rest on our laurels. Other institutions have done as well or better; and in order to compete in the national market, we must continue to press for salary improvement for outstanding faculty." Average 1964-65 salary for all ranks in undergraduate colleges at the University of Vermont is $9200, he said, "slightly above the national average for public institutions of our size, but lower than average for the northeast region."

ON ENROLLMENT

He reported current total enrollment of about 4100, and predicted an annual increase of 100 students a year so that "by 1966, we expect to reach 4300-4400."

ON GRADUATE EDUCATION

He touched on the advantages to the University of development of a strong graduate program and said "yet, on occasion, one hears it said that a graduate program is too expensive for an institution such as the University of Vermont. It is my contention," he said, "that it would be too expensive for the University not to have such a program," and he cited figures which he said showed that "financial grants which these programs brought to us reduced our costs in relation to the increase in both the undergraduate and graduate education."

ON SERVICE TO STATE

He reported on a meeting of state university presidents at which President Lyndon B. Johnson "stated his hope that state universities would take a more active role in cooperation with state governments to plan and

A C S Awards Research Grant

The American Cancer Society has awarded a $15,000 institutional research grant to the University of Vermont, the fourth such grant awarded by the ACS, according to Dr. James Woodruff of Randolph, president of the Vermont Division of the Cancer Society.

Such institutional grants are intended "to stimulate the integration of effort on cancer research within the institution, and to provide readily available support for testing of new and venturesome ideas for cancer research," Dr. Woodruff said.

Dr. William H. Macmillan, dean of the Graduate College at the University, who administers institutional grants at UVM, said such grants "often make it possible for an investigator to follow up a hot lead for which research funds might not be available."

The grants also help new, young investigators get started in their research careers, Dean Macmillan said.

He said that any UVM faculty member engaged in cancer research is eligible to make application for support from this latest Cancer Society grant, and noted that awards were made to 10 faculty members from a similar institutional grant last year.

Dr. Woodruff said that support given the Vermont Division of the American Cancer Society helps make possible grants such as this latest grant to the University.

Pep Rally

UVM's first Pep Rally will be held on Friday evening, September 18 next to the Patrick Gymnasium. During this week, banners and shakers will be sold in Waterman and Billings Student Center. Ronnie Hertel, the football team's captain, will welcome all other available noise-makers, including enthusiastic UVM voices. The cheerleader's captain, Lynn Godshall, will lead the yells assisted by her cheering squad: Donna Christenson, co-captain; Nancy Hall; Carolyn Pratt; Judy Claypole; and Dottie Ward.

Outing Club Plans

New Ski Dormitory

The Board of Trustees has given approval to the Outing Club to plan a $50,000 fund drive to build a ski dormitory on land in Jeffersonville the Outing Club purchased and has given to the University. The ski dormitory will also become the property of the University. The Outing Club will seek to raise the fund from alumni and friends interested in the development of skiing.

Tickets On Sale For HOMECOMING

Tickets will be sold for the Homecoming Dance, $3 per couple, to be held on Friday night, Oct. 2, Monday through Friday in Lower Billings and Waterman, the week before Homecoming, Sept. 28 - Oct. 2, from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. The Dance will be held in the Patrick Gym.

Vermonters Plan Dinner For UVM Medical School

Citizens from several Vermont communities outside the Burlington area are helping the University of Vermont College of Medicine plan a Sept. 18 dinner and tour of medical college facilities.

Dr. Robert J. Slater, dean of the medical college, said the dinner and tour are aimed at "enlisting the interest and support of prominent citizens in the University and its College of Medicine."

He said the University is "very grateful" for the help given in planning the Sept. 18 program by citizens both in and outside the Burlington area who have served as members of an arrangements committee.

Committee members include John Burgess and Robert Gannett, Brattleboro; Mr. and Mrs. Hilton A. Wick, Burlington; Luther Bridgman, Charlotte; Lawrence J. Doolin, Isle La Motte; Carleton Howe, Manchester; Dr. Charles Leach, Newfane; Sanford Partridge, Proctor; William Franke, Rutland; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Janeway, South Londonderry;

Harold S. Billings and Albert L. Gutterason, both Springfield;

Also Charles Black, Dr. Henry Doremus, D. Trowbridge Elliman, Denning Miller, Sepp Ruschp, and Mrs. Henry Simoneau, all of Stowe; Mrs. Harlow Carpenter, Waitsfield; Edward Bench, Waterbury Center; Franklin Billings, Jr. and Walter C. Paine both Woodstock.

Dr. Slater said the College of Medicine, in "close cooperation" with physicians, hospitals and others within the medical profession, has been "increasingly concerned with the need to bring people from outside the medical profession into our thinking and planning." The Sept. 18 tour and dinner have been planned as a result of suggestions from citizens who have become interested in the medical college and its planning for the future, he said.

The tour and dinner program will be concerned "primarily" with a report on the University's medical building program and its relationship to medical education and service within the State.

The University is currently seeking to raise $8,700,000 for the major or third unit of its three-unit postwar medical building program. The College's 1500 alumni, together with business, industry and friends in the Burlington area have raised $1,000,000 of the $4,500,000 needed to win federal funds expected to be available on a matching basis. An additional $700,000 has been provided toward the third unit cost by "some of the same private and foundation philanthropy which matched alumni giving and federal matching grants to make possible completion of the first two units of the medical construction."

Dr. Slater said the University is now planning approaches to foundations and to interested citizens beyond Vermont's borders, and seeks also to find "key" support from elsewhere within the State, seeking to raise the $2,800,000 needed to fully match federal funds expected to be available.

Speakers at the Sept. 18 dinner will include Dr. Slater and Lyman S. Rowell, who is acting president of the University.

THE National Security Agency is a totally unique organization

... and offers creative research opportunities in the art and science of sophisticated communications

There is absolutely no other organization like it . . . no other organization doing the same important work, or offering the same wealth of opportunity for imaginative thinkers in the Liberal Arts, as well as the Physical and Engineering Sciences.

The National Security Agency is a major research arm of the Department of Defense, but its influence and responsibilities are far broader. It works closely with many industrial and research institutions; it has special access to scientific information at universities and other Government laboratories; and it enjoys close consulting arrangements with scientists of commanding stature. NSA staff members enjoy all the benefits of Federal employment without the requirements imposed by the Civil Service system.

What does NSA do that warrants this unique stature?

NSA approaches the subject of sophisticated communications from these original standpoints:

1. Creating secure communications systems and equipments unknown anywhere else, and devising special refinements for computers & edp systems that will increase our handling capabilities. This means that Communications Engineers, Computer Design Specialists, Mathematicians, Programmers, and Systems Analysts, all contribute to the design of antennas, transmitters, receivers, and terminal equipment . . . to experiments using new semiconductors, magnetic film, superconductive devices, etc., resulting in new logic circuits and memory units, better high-gain arrays for UHF radio systems, higher-capacity data handling terminal equipment, more effective speech band-width compression . . . and scores of similar advances.

2. By the very nature of "secure" communications, assuring the continuing invulnerability of U.S. communications through cryptologic procedures and techniques. Because cryptology and its cryptographic counterpart are not taught elsewhere, mathematicians, scientists—and all others with appropriate intellectual curiosity—will be taught this challenging new discipline right at NSA. Work in this field may involve specially-designed computers, television, computer-to-computer data links, and edp programming. (Even music, philosophy, or the classics may be useful prerequisites for cryptology!)

3. Translating written data, and presenting the crux of the material in meaningful form. This is the home of the linguistics expert and the languages graduate—enabling the talented graduate to make the most of his or her particular gift, and quickly expand familiarity with other tongues.

In all that NSA does, there is seldom any existing precedent. Only NSA pioneers in secure communications on this broad a scale, so only NSA offers the college graduate the best chance to make immediate use of his disciplined thinking . . . without years of post-graduate experience. All these features— together with its well-instrumented laboratories, libraries, and professional staff of specialists in amazingly varied fields—provide a stimulating academic atmosphere for individual accomplishment.

On-Campus Interviews for Mathematicians and Engineers will be held later. Consult your Placement Office for dates.

NSA is located in expanding facilities at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland—halfway between Washington and Baltimore. It is handy to transportation facilities, the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins, suburban or rural living (in-town living, too, now that the new circumferential highways are completed) . . . and the Chesapeake Bay resort region.

LIBERAL ARTS SENIORS: Your PQT Application must be mailed before October 14th

This is most important: To apply for an NSA position, all students EXCEPT Mathematicians, Engineers, and Physicists must take the PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATION TEST scheduled for Saturday, October 24th. Stop in at your Placement Office and ask for the NSA Professional Qualification Test brochure . . . fill out and mail in the application card enclosed inside . . . and bring to the test the ticket you will receive by mail.

Even if you are not sure of your career interests yet, get the facts on NSA opportunities now.

Editor's Corner

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

As the first order of editorial business, we of the CYNIC extend our official welcome to the Class of '68, and a welcome back to upperclassmen.

The beginning can be an advantageous position: for you freshmen, it's the opportune moment to effectively start your college career; for you upperclassmen, it's just the proper time to amend last year's errors and continue last year's successes.

For the CYNIC, the beginning means not only a newly-numbered volume for the newspaper, but, more significantly, a reappraisal of last year, resulting in a desire to improve our overall quality, to provide fuller coverage of campus news and events, and, in this active year of national and international affairs, to broaden our scope by commenting on vital issues.

Since the CYNIC supposedly reflects campus opinion, it follows logically and reciprocally that campus interest is mandatory. Hence, we cannot encourage you enough to write letters or columns if you have something pertinent to say, to inform us of imminent activities, and, of course, to read the CYNIC as a means of keeping yourselves informed.

LANE SERIES

For its Tenth Anniversary season, the 1964-5 Lane Series promises to be the best ever produced. We feel congratulations are in order for Professor Jack Trevithick and his hard-working committee for contracting a truly amazing array of artists. If as yet you have not purchased tickets, we urge you to do so, and, if you have already bought your tickets, we urge you to take utmost advantage of a wise investment.

THE RISING COST OF BOOKS

The University of Vermont is distinct in being one of the most expensive state universities in the country. Coupled with the realistic demands for higher tuition and board, is what we consider the unrealistic situation concerning book expenses. It seems absurd that a student should have to pay $10 or more for a new book, only to discover much to his dismay that, when he tries to resell it at the end of the semester, the book has depreciated in value to $2 or, possibly, is totally unresalable. Other schools (e.g. Harvard) have solved this problem by forming co-ops: each student contributes a nominal initial fee as part owner of a cooperative book store, and he secures his books at a reasonable discount. Surely, there must be some way to ameliorate the situation here at Vermont.

SA ORGANIZATIONS

As you will doubtless notice, contained in this week's CYNIC is a map-out and explanation of all activities and organizations related and subordinate to Student Association. The product of conjoined efforts by the SA and the CYNIC, this outline is intended as a service both to freshmen and upperclassmen. In attending Club Carnival Saturday night, it is advisable and beneficial to familiarize yourself with the various clubs. For every student we are sure there is an organization to which you might constructively contribute your skills. Remember that fulfilling academic requirements is not the sole requisite to the completion of a successful college career.

Resolution

In Memoriam

The Board of Trustees has passed a resolution in memoriam honoring Neil Tolman, who died July 10.

The resolution paid tribute to his "distinguished service to the University as alumnus, as president of the Alumni Council, as a member of the Board of Trustees and as its chairman for the past two years."

The resolution said "In an age where increasing complexities increasingly narrow specializations, he achieved not one but several careers, and found the physical and intellectual energy to carry on in each of them even after he suffered serious illness several years ago."

The Board marked his success in his chosen profession of law, in the political arena, in business, and in service to his country as an officer in the Army, but noted that "it was in his service to education that Neil Tolman took special pleasure and affection... a good and constant friend, Neil Tolman brought with him to the tasks he chose great energy, keen mind, and lively humor, and these served well throughout his life."

A special item of business for the Board of Trustees at the August 1 meeting was the acceptance of a portrait of John T. Fey, the 17th president of the University who was attending his final meeting. Dr. Fey has assumed the presidency of the University of Wyoming. The portrait, done by Prof. Francis Colburn, chairman of the art department, shows Dr. Fey seated at a desk with a winter ski scene in the upper righthand side of the picture and a Morgan Horse in the left background. The work will hang in Memorial Lounge.

At the close of the meeting Dr. Fey formally thanked members of the Board "for the opportunity to serve the University, and for the help and support you have given me." The Board told Dr. Fey that the University and the State of Vermont would remain "deeply indebted to you for the service and leadership you have given us."

More than 100 trustees and former trustees and their wives had paid tribute to Dr. Fey Friday evening with a dinner in his honor.

Yale Plans New BA-MA Program

New Haven, Conn. - (I.P.) - Believed to be the first university in the country to adopt the combined Bachelor's and Master's degree program as part of the regular four-year college, Yale University's new program will provide for both the Bachelor of Arts-Master of Arts and Bachelor of Science-Master of Science combinations.

Both Dean Georges May of Yale College and Dean John Perry Miller of the Yale Graduate School have in their explanatory announcements emphasized that while the double degree program will cover a shorter time, the academic requirements for both the Bachelor's and Master's degrees will remain unchanged as far as content is concerned.

The achievements required will be identical with those of the regular students who normally receive these degrees after five years — four undergraduate years for the Bachelor's and one graduate year for the Master's.

A major stimulus for the new program came from the report of the faculty committee appointed by the late President A. Whitney Griswold to study the

THE SCEPTIC

" 'Tis a tale told by an idiot."

- a friend

Once upon a time in a little town not so far away from a little ways from here there lived three bears, freshman bear, sophomore bear and junior bear. They were related to the three monkeys who hear no evil, speak evil, and see no evil, - matter of fact, they were the no same monkeys, when they got into their monkey suits. In other words, since they not only didn't admit to there being evil around and also, as we all know, consequently left their house unlocked so Goldilocks could live there for quite awhile without paying room and board, we can see that the three bears were quite stupid, but very nice anyway.

The three bears were very happy. Every morning they got up, wash-off all their acne cream from their little jaws, brushed their little fangs and combed their fur. Putting on their best bow, they skipped merrily to their yummy non-caloric breakfasts which kept them healthy and shaped just like a pretty little bear should be shaped. After breakfast it was off to the little red school house for a day of learning. The little bears loved to go to school because that was where the three wolves went to school (freshman wolf, sophomore wolf, and junior wolf) and it was better than buying a new bow to sit and snarl sweetly at the wolves in class.

Well, one day, the three bears went to school and were particularly happy because there was just that something in the air. It was fall-out but the little bears didn't know it because they didn't know about such things. Little bears are much too sensitive and emotional to be told about those awful bothers like the third in a series of international helacausts. They walked to school contentedly combing their ears, when all of a sudden who should appear but the three wolves.

"Ooh!" said junior bear, "this area is only for bears, you're not supposed to be here." But, as we all know, junior bear was secretly pleased to see the wolves so she could show off her newly polished claws and bouffant tail.

"Oh" said sophomore bear, "you know the rules. What if we report you to our leaders, 'Bear Essential', who would surely punish you." But sophomore bear was snarling her cutest Grrr and her little pink tongue hung smartly between her teeth.

"OOOH OH EEE!" said freshman bear, "We're telling, we're telling. You keep away from us, you beasts. Help! help!" And freshman bear was so scared she could barely keep her legs together.

The wolves were very upset at this greeting because they had some important news to bring to the little bears. It seems that some relative of Goldilocks had reached a high position in something called the government and he and his best friend Jack the giant Miller had pushed a very dangerous button somewhere and the wolves suspected that they would be turned into a glowing pile of ratty looking fur in a very short time because there were lots of these buttons all over the world. Well, anyway, the reason that the wolves had stepped into the maximum security bear area was that they wanted to share a lair with a little bear before the whole world went puff.

Well, you can imagine what our little bears thought when they heard this strange request. "OH AH EEE Uh Ech", they all said in harmonious fear. First of all, they didn't even believe the wolves' story. They said, "I bet Goldilocks doesn't even have any relatives!"

"Oh yes, he has," said the little wolves, "and that relative has just huffed and puffed and blown the house down."

The little bears really were very far from being very smart, but after what was a long time (twenty twitches of a wolf's belly button) they started thinking about the strange and outlandish request of a very horrific nature that had made their noses all wet and fur itch. Finally junior bear raised her left ear and with a toss of her tongue said, "The Dean of Bears and Assistant Dean of Bears would be very angry if we mated with you."

Sophomore bear piped, "We'd all get thrown out of school and all this would be on our permanent record."

"BlbzmG" choked freshman bear, "please don't take me by force, I'll never be able to get married, and it's such a scary thing, and my mother said, there will be no future and..."

"But the world is going to go Kapowee in very near to almost now", expined the wolves who were growling impatiently.

"Nonsense", said the bears, "You are just dirty old wolves who want to go and tell your friends in the Den all about us. You keep away or we'll give you a bear hug and break every bone in your mangy bodies."

The wolves were somewhat more than unhappy after the mean and selfish bears had threatened them with matters of a violent nature. They realized that the three little bears were extremely daunted by their raising at home and school which was good and sincere, but somewhat a pain in the hind paw with the end of always arriving soon.

For forty flicks of a flicker's forehead the wolves and the bears eyed each other, circled and stared, begged and refused, explained and denied, cried and remained firm. Finally, when there seemed to be a powerful possibility of close and intimate relationship arising, a lot of noise and light and puff and smash and uch and alldmclm-dmclm took place, and, when the radioactive dust had cleared, there was barely enough bear to bear away even by the most wolfish wolf who wasn't.

Freshman Year. Their report submitted in April, 1962, presented several recommendations for advanced study opportunities in light of increasing academic achievement of entering Freshman classes.

One of these recommendations stated: "Without question the experience of a liberal arts education at the undergraduate stage should be carefully preserved... At the same time we can improve undergraduate education by the carefully introduction of more graduate training, in all its seriousness and rigor, into the undergraduate curriculum."

"In line with this we recommend that it be made possible for the thoroughly well qualified student to obtain the bachelor's degree and the master's degree at the end of four years."

The taking of graduate courses by undergraduates is not new, in fact, as Dean May points out, there has been a steady increase in the past decade in this area. In 1951-52, for example, only 49 Yale undergraduates were enrolled in one or more graduate courses; last year there were 207.

In the main, the student who will be eligible for the double degree programs and who will want to participate in it, will be the young man who is highly motivated and who anticipated his academic requirements in secondary school, thus entering Yale with advanced placement credits. He is the student who probably will go on to work for a Ph.D. degree, and thus will have saved one year in the overall training period, by earning both his Bachelor's and Master's degree in four years.

Summer Briefs

Faculty News

The Board of Trustees has approved appointment of 22 to the faculty, including two who will serve as department chairmen.

Donald G. Forgays was appointed professor and chairman of the department of psychology; and Rolfe S. Stanley was appointed assistant professor and chairman of the department of geology. President Fey also reported the appointment of two other new department chairmen on the recommendation of faculty committees, including the appointment of Blair Williams as chairman of the department of home economics, and that of Robert V. Daniels as chairman of the department of history, following the request of Harold S. Schultz that he be relieved of the duties of the chairmanship.

Dr. Forgays did his undergraduate work at Dartmouth and holds the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from McGill University. For the past seven years he has been associate professor of psychology in Douglass College of Rutgers. He will succeed Prof. James P. Chaplin, who asked to be relieved of the duties of the chairmanship.

Dr. Stanley was a National Science Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow at Yale for the past two years. A graduate of Williams, he holds the M.S. and Ph.D. from Yale. He will succeed Prof. Charles G. Doll, who is retiring after 37 years of service to the University.

The Board also approved the appointment of John F. Smith, Jr., as director of Audio-Visual and Photography Services, effective July 1, to succeed Horace Eldred, who retires this June after 10 years as head of the University's audio-visual services division. Smith has been chief photographer for the Vermont Development Department for the past 27 months. He is a graduate of Middlebury College.

In June, the Board formally accepted the resignation of President John T. Fey, together with the resignations of four other staff members — Bennet B. Murdock, Jr., professor of psychology; Richard M. Martin, instructor in psychology; James S. Bentley, Jr., associate director of the World Affairs Center, and advisor to foreign students; and Paul C. Dunham, research associate in political science.

Leaves were approved for Herbert L. Schultz, assistant professor of music; Kerr L. White, professor and chairman of epidemiology and community medicine; Howard M. Smith, Jr., coordinator of research and professor of electrical engineering; and Richard J. Hopp, professor of horticulture.

The Board also added the name of Deniz Gulyas to the ranks of faculty members receiving promotions for the coming year — from instructor to assistant professor.

Physics Institute A Success

With the completion Aug. 14, of the three-year sequential program of the Physics Institute at the University of Vermont, the number of high school science teachers who have participated in the National Science Foundation sponsored program was brought to 400.

The University has included a Physics Institute for high school teachers in all but one of the past eight Summer Session seasons, making it the oldest NSF institute on campus.

Prof. Howard M. Smith, the University's research coordinator, praises institute director Nelson L. Walbridge for "a remarkable job" of organizing the first institute in 1956. His work served as a pilot program "which paved the way for additional institutes."

The mathematics department applied for and was awarded funds for an NSF institute in 1957, and since 1958 mathematics and physics institutes have been presented simultaneously during the University Summer Sessions. An NSF sponsored Summer Research Participation Program, enabling a select number of high school teachers to work with University faculty on research projects in science, was added to the Summer Session agenda in 1959, and the Earth Science Institute was offered by the Geology Department for the first time in 1964.

The National Science Foundation has made funds available to the University for the special programs which are designed to acquaint high school teachers with new developments in their field. The teachers selected to attend the summer institutes receive stipends and travel allowances.

Smith, who is also director of the Research Participation Program, said the institute program at the University "developed out of the need to keep high school science and math teachers abreast of the rapid advances in their field."

"The high school teachers themselves," he added, "have been tremendously enthusiastic. Each year there are more than 10 times as many applicants as we can accept. Many of the teachers could probably make more money at a summer job, but they are interested in improving their professional ability and the stipends provided for teachers by the NSF funds are a real help in making summer study possible."

Dr. Walbridge said the 50 teachers who participated in the three-year Physics Institute "have acquired the equivalent of almost a solid year of nothing but physics. They are prepared to teach physics at the highest level we have in high school."

Fee Approved

The Board approved a recommendation that a $10 fee be charged all students who apply for admission to the University. President Fey noted that such a fee is charged by other state universities and by the Vermont State Colleges. He noted that the University admits, as a matter of policy, every qualified Vermont student who applies, and said the fee — now charged only nonresident applicants — would help defray increased admissions office costs resulting from substantially increased numbers of applicants.

Renovation Set For Waterman

The Board of Trustees also authorized expenditure from unassigned plant funds of up to $250,000 for a major reassignment of space and facilities in the Waterman building.

In outlining the project, acting president Rowell noted that it had been planned at the time approval was given by the Legislature for construction of the new Votey Engineering Hall. Engineering departments moved into Votey in the spring semester leaving 12,000 square feet of space free in the basement of Waterman, in addition to classroom and office space on the third floor of the building which was the early 1940-gift of an alumnus.

He reported that the University's new language laboratory has already been installed on the third floor and that the nursing department has also been assigned new space on the third floor.

The project will provide increased space for the University's Computer and data processing center, and for the business offices; and new classroom and office space, the latter principally on the first or main floor of Waterman.

A major aspect of the renovation will see the present dining facilities on the lower level of Waterman re-located in the basement area which formerly housed the electrical engineering laboratory. A stairway to the new dining facilities will be added at the south entrance of Waterman.

Expanded space for the computer center and for business offices will be provided in the present dining hall area on the lower level.

The total major renovation will be accomplished at an estimated cost of about $10 per square foot, or as has been noted "less than half of what it would cost to build new facilities."

ROWELL ADDRESSES

carry out improvements in education, economic development, and recreational opportunities," and Rowell said the University was already participating in state planning in a number of areas. "In order that we may more fully determine, direct and coordinate the University's activities in the state and federal areas, I shall presently appoint a planning committee with members from all areas of the University. This committee shall concern itself with the impact of federal and state programs on the University, and with the University's resources available for such programs."

ON MEDICAL BUILDING PROGRESS

President Rowell noted that the University's fund drive for the $8.7 million third unit of the three-unit postwar medical building program has currently achieved $1.7 million, and needs yet to raise $2.8 million to match federal funds of approximately $4.5 million expected to be available for the project.

ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM

He charged his convocation audience with responsibility for preserving academic freedom "not only for ourselves, but for the institution. In the coming year I hope we will see the spirit of free inquiry grow on this campus as never before, practiced by the community of teachers and students who recognize that freedom from bigotry, conformity, and fear does not imply license and disregard for the opinions of others."

Mixes and Matches

Welcome to the Class of '68 — things have changed! No Freshman Week, two big weekends in one month, and then nothing for two and a half months! The upper class men already know the freshman record backwards! Everyone's already looking forward to Christmas vacation — and how fortunate we are: ours overlaps with just about every school in the country!

No doubt there was much going on in the romance department this summer. But, no word as yet from fraternity and sorority social chairmen — please hand in all Mixes & Matches material to the CYNIC office in lower Billings by Sunday night.

LANDSCAPING PLANNED

BURLINGTON, Vt. Aug. 1 — A tree-shaded green for the East campus of the University of Vermont, in the planning stage almost as long as East Hall stood as a "temporary" building, was moved closer to reality in August when the Board of Trustees approved expenditure of up to $75,000 from plant funds to begin grading, seeding and planting of the East campus.

The area is bounded on the north by the Fleming Museum and the old engineering building which now houses and is named for geology on the south by the Bailey Library and agricultural science, dairy and home economics buildings; on the east by Buckham, Chittenden and Wills and the new phases of UVM, medical construction; and on the west by the Ira Allen Chapel, Billings, Williams Science Hall, and the Old Mill.

The northern half of this inner area was until recently the site for East Hall, a former naval wartime hospital pressed into "temporary" service when the University made room for a flood of returning veterans who tripled its enrollment after World War II.

With the removal of East Hall, the area will be regraded to improve drainage in the area, seeded and treed in accordance with a campus development plan recommended by nationally-known landscape architect Dan Kiley of Charlotte, who was retained by the Board of Trustees to plan development and use of the University's campus land resources.

The plan for development of the East campus also envisions a central reflecting pool to form an inviting study spot for spring or autumn days and the linking of the planting of the area with the development of an arboretum in the area between Hills Science Hall and upper Main Street. The arboretum will serve the research and teaching purposes of horticulture, botany and forestry, according to Lyman S. Rowell, who coordinated development of the planning for the area as Dean of Administration. He took over the reins of the University from Dr. John T. Fey, having been named by the UVM Trustees to become acting president on Aug. 1, the date Dr. Fey's resignation to assume the presidency at the University of Wyoming took effect.

Rowell said the University has long been considered to have one of the most beautiful campuses in New England. "The beauty of a campus," he said, "is important to the environment for learning. Furthermore, it is an important factor in the lives of our community and state neighbors and visitors. That is why our Board of Trustees has insisted that plans for new buildings must encompass plans and funds for landscaping."

With grading and seeding begun this summer, planting of trees will follow in the spring. Development of the pool and extension of the planting to begin the arboretum must await finding of funds.

Funds for the project come from income from right of way contracts and sale of property assigned by the Board to plant funds.

Bennett Machanic of Burlington, Vermont, weighs a chemical for testing in blood clotting research as part of his summer training at Lederle Laboratories, pharmaceutical division of American Cyanamid Company in Pearl River, N.Y. Mr. Machanic, a senior chemistry student at the University of Vermont, and a brother in Alpha Epsilon Pi, is participating in the company's annual Summer Career Training Program for outstanding students. Now in its eighth year, the program is designed to supplement the students' academic studies with practical experience, and to encourage top students to consider permanent careers with Lederle.

Student Association Invites

On Saturday, September 19, the Student Association is sponsoring its annual Club Carnival and Variety Show to be held in the Patrick Gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. This year's program, unlike those held previously, has been planned to be of interest and entertainment not only for freshmen, but also for all upperclassmen.

The program will be divided into two parts, with the Club Carnival taking place first from 7:30-9:00 p.m. During that time, approximately three-fourths of the University's clubs and organizations will participate at individual booths by explaining their functions and purposes and encouraging new members.

Club Carnival will be followed by a variety show which will run until 10:30. This show will consist of our own students displaying their original talents. Some features will be folk singing, skits, and also an exhibition of kake walking in full costume.

Both programs of the evening, the Club Carnival and the Variety Show, headed by Betty Gloria and Karen Price respectively, promise to make the night informative, interesting, and definitely entertaining -- surely an evening not to be missed.

Campus Organizations play a great role in contributing to one's total education while at University of Vermont. Not only do they provide a pleasant diversion from one's scholastic studies, but they also help in shaping one's personality towards a more mature relationship with other people. Campus Organizations invest in one a sense of responsibility, for each organization needs capable and qualified leadership to best accomplish its goals and purposes. Another very important contribution of Campus Organizations is the derived feeling and benefits of working with other students, with faculty members and even with townspeople as often is the case. As we all know the key to successful living, whether at school, in the business world or around the dorms is through better human relationships with one's associates. UVM's campus organizations can give one all of these benefits and many more, but it is important to remember the old statement that "you will only get out of something what you put into it" and this applies to clubs as well as to your studies.

We of the Student Association suggest that you the Class of 1968, become familiar with the various campus organizations.

For your convenience and also for that of any upperclassman who may not be aware of all the clubs that the UVM campus offers we have compiled this list of Campus Organizations. Approach these clubs with an open mind, seek out the ones that appeal to you and find out more about them. Many of these clubs will be represented at the Club Carnival to be held this Saturday, Sept. 19th at the Patrick Gym.

CYNIC - UVM's student run newspaper performs a good service to the university as a "Forum for student ideas and expression". Its weekly issues contain not only campus news coverage, but also departmental notices and news of coming events and attractions to the campus. In addition to these there are also articles of national and international interest. For those interested in journalism and writing, this is a very worthwhile organization to belong to.

Ariel - While CYNIC records events of a weekly basis, Ariel, UVM's year book, records the year's events and festivals in a neatly bound volume. It is the job of the Ariel staff to assemble and organize the many pictures and articles that go into making the final issue of the yearbook.

WRUV - In today's fast paced society living, weekly newspapers cannot hope to cover all the news of a university such as UVM or a community such as Burlington, and this is where UVM's campus radio station comes in. Operated by students of the University, WRUV has weekly programs of campus news coverage in addition to daily news and music programs and special live concerts of famous orchestras. WRUV has no restrictions on membership, but is looking for students with a good speaking voice and a good vocabulary, and who are interested in working with other students in running a campus radio.

Student Guide - This important organization could be called UVM's Public Relations Club, for its purpose and function is to guide prospective students and their families around the campus. This club works closely with the Office of Admissions in arranging the tours. Because a knowledge of campus buildings and procedures is necessary, it is not open to first semester freshmen.

University Players - For those who are dramatically inclined and enjoy working with others in producing plays and shows they should find out more about the Players by contacting the Players c/o Billings.

UVM Band - UVM's Marching Band is a very fine way for one to continue musical participation while still at college. The band plays at all home football games, at Kake Walk, Military Review and at Commencement. In addition to going on exchange concerts with other bands.

Women's Recreation Association - With physical fitness becoming very important nowadays, women students who are interested in receiving more exercise then WRA has programs for your individual needs. Women may find varied programs of sports and activities offered and arranged by WRA.

Religious Organizations - Religion is a very important part of one's college education combining with scholastic and social interests to bring out the total person in a college student. The religious organizations at UVM have very complete programs that take in everything from religious services to social affairs and inter-faith get-togethers. It is recommended that each freshman become familiar with his respective religious organization so that his religious needs may be best served. At UVM the following Religious Organizations are represented: Christian Science College Organization, Episcopal Choir, Hillel Foundation, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, and Newman Club.

Special Interest Clubs - In addition to the many clubs of honorary, scholastic, journalistic and religious nature listed above, there are at UVM many clubs of a more specific nature. These clubs that are active at UVM are as follows:

Catalina Club - For women students interested in water ballet and swimming, this is the club to become associated with. Besides providing exercise and enjoyment, one can also join with other girls in learning about water ballet.

Dance Workshop - This is the club for those male and female students interested in the finer techniques of dancing, especially ballet.

Ethan Allen Rifles and Pershing Rifles - These are the Advanced ROTC and Basic Course Military Honorary Fraternities respectively. Membership in Pershing Rifles is open to those Freshmen and Sophomore men who want to receive more training in military matters and receive an introduction to trick drill. Prospective members go through a pledgship similar to that of fraternities. Ethan Allen Rifles is for Senior Advanced ROTC cadets who are elected on the basis of their past ROTC record. Both groups have meetings, overnight trips and social and service functions such as marshalling the football games.

Goodrich Classical Club - The Classical Club meets regularly with faculty members of the Classics Department to discuss problems and questions of a classical nature. Comprised primarily of students of classics, it is open to all students.

Home Economics Club - This organization is for those girls interested in furthering their interest in and knowledge of home economics. Meetings are held and members learn new skills and advances in home economics.

John Dewey Club - Named in honor of the great philosopher who once attended UVM, this is a philosophy club which this year will run a series of approximately 4 lectures with well-known speakers lecturing on specific topics of interest. These lectures will be open to the university. Those students interested in joining with other students of philosophy in having regular meetings to discuss philosophical questions, should contact members of the Dewey Club or the Philosophy Club for further information.

Outing Club - The Outing Club sponsors weekly trips to either mountain campsites in the fall, ski slopes and ranges in the winter or hiking trails in the spring. The OC as it is referred to is able to offer its members reduced rates for ski trails during the winter. In addition to these off-campus weekly events there are also weekly meetings with either speakers, movies or slides shown.

Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club - This is one of UVM's few campus organizations that has consistently through the years accumulated a very creditable winning record. In fact, they have made the National Debate trials a number of times and were once National Winners a few years ago. The Debate and Discussion Club has a very active schedule during the school year that takes them to many other campuses to debate with other schools. For students looking to develop qualities of self-confidence and powers of organization and persuasion and who enjoy speaking before groups of people this is the club.

Student Photography Staff - The SPS as it is known performs a great service to the University by taking all the many pictures needed by both the Ariel and CYNIC for publication issues.

Membership in SPS is open to all students with an interest in photography and who want to serve the campus in this capacity.

Men's Honoraries - Membership in UVM's men's honoraries is given in recognition of outstanding qualities of "Scholarship, character, leadership and accomplishment in extracurricular activities". The men's honoraries contribute to the university by running many campus projects such as the Directory and many campus events such as Homecoming. Gold Key is the honorary for Sophomore Men, Key and Serpent for Junior Men and Boulder Society is for Senior Men.

Women's Honoraries - Like the men's honoraries, the women's honoraries also have rigid standards for membership. Members must confirm to certain scholastic standards in addition to possessing certain outstanding qualities. They are also service organizations like the men's honoraries and perform a great service to the campus during the year through their campus projects. Sophomore Aides is for Sophomore women; Staff and Sandal for Junior women and Mortar Board for Senior Women.

Scholastic Honoraries - In addition to the class honoraries there are many other honoraries that recognize academic excellence on the UVM campus. Their members meet frequently to discuss advancements in their respective fields. In addition to the National Honorary of Academic Excellence - Phi Beta Kappa, UVM also has: Alpha Lambda Delta (freshman women), Alpha Zeta Fraternity (Agriculture), Commerce and Economics Honorary Society, Kappa Phi Kappa (Education for Men), Kappa Delta Pi (Education for Women), Omicron Nu (Home Economics) Sigma Delta Psi (Athletics), Tau Beta Pi (Engineering - all fields), Tau Kappa Alpha (Forensic).

Professional Honoraries - The Professional Honoraries at UVM also give membership to those students who have excelled in their respective courses of instruction. They like the above scholastic honoraries also have meeting with leaders in industry and their respective fields to discuss recent advancements. At UVM we have Chapters of the following - American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE), American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME), American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE), Student Nurses' Association, IEEE (Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers).

KLUB KARNIVAL

UVM Social Scene

KAKE WALK

Kake Walk is the highlight of the University of Vermont's social year. Responsible for the long planning involved in making "the week" the success it is are three senior men who act as The Kake Walk Directors. These men in turn choose assistant directors from the Junior Class men who assist them and who will become next year's Kake Walk Directors.

This four day weekend begins on Thursday evening at the Kake Walk Ball. On Friday afternoon, there is a Jazz Concert. The first production of Kake Walk is held Friday evening as the sixteen fraternities compete in skit presentations and "walkin' fo' de kake." On Saturday night, the second presentation of Kake Walk takes place. Reigning over the festivities are a King and Queen of Kake Walk who were presented on Pop Night and crowned at the ball after a campus-wide campaign and election.

The Interfraternity Council takes the financial responsibility for Kake Walk. The profits from Kake Walk are allocated to various organizations and activities on campus through the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee comprised of selected students and faculty members.

GREEK WEEK

During Greek Week, sponsored by the Interfraternity Council, the Greek letter fraternities and sororities on campus proudly review their heritage and make plans for the future.

Greek Week officially begins with The Greek convocations. During the remainder of the week, there are fraternity and sorority dinners, selection of a Queen of Greek Week and a concert on Friday evening. On Saturday afternoon, we find ourselves in ancient Greece in the midst of Greek games. The weekend is concluded with fraternity house parties on Saturday night.

MERP WEEK

Merp Week traditionally known as The Men's Economic Recovery Project, is organized by the Panhellenic Council. During Merp Week, the women of the campus take the initiative in making the dates and assume all the financial responsibilities of dating.

Traditionally, Merp Week consists of a powder-puff football game and a Merp Week Dance. Reigning over Merp Week is a King chosen by the student body.

VERMONT CONFERENCE

Each year the Vermont Conference Committee sponsors a conference on a very timely topic. This past year the conference was entitled "Pride & Prejudice" and dealt with the negro struggle for Civil Rights. This conference consists of lectures followed by panel discussions. All interested students, faculty and townspeople are invited to participate.

The Vermont Conference Committee is comprised of faculty advisors and a student committee. The new officers of the student committee are chosen by the retiring officers. The financial responsibility for Vermont Conference is taken by the Student Association.

FRESHMAN ORIENTATION

This year an entirely new system for freshmen orientation was initiated. Both the student Association and the administration had programs for introducing the Class of 1968 to the University of Vermont. The administration orientation program which took place during the summer offered the students and parents the opportunity to become familiar with the campus itself, to meet with personal and academic deans and to pre-enroll for the fall semester.

The Student Association's program of welcoming our freshmen was handled by the Freshmen Orientation Committee which is a sub-committee of the S.A. Activities Committee. Working with funds provided from the Student Association, the members of this committee are able to sponsor the Freshmen Mixer, Club Carnival, which features booths set up by all organizations on campus which will answer any questions regarding club activities and club membership, and a variety show in which many students on campus, especially freshmen, perform.

HOMECOMING

One of the highlights of the UVM social calendar is Homecoming Weekend. At Homecoming, alumni from all parts of the country return to their alma mater.

Staff and Sandal, the Junior Women's Honorary, and Key and Serpent, the Junior Men's Honorary, completely organize this wonderful weekend. With a grant, underwritten by the Student Association, the two honoraries are able to make this traditionally Freshmen Weekend quite successful.

Reigning over the festivities are the King and Queen of Homecoming who are chosen in a campus-wide election from the members of the Freshmen class.

The weekend begins with the crowning of the King and Queen at the Homecoming Dance, on Friday. On Saturday, there is the traditional Homecoming Football game in which the Queen decides the kick-off and during which various alumni awards are presented. The weekend is concluded by fraternity parties on Saturday night.

SCOPE

Scope is an organization which contributes greatly to the cultural atmosphere of the university. Using funds provided by the Student Association, Scope regularly presents for the entire university are shows, international movies and speakers on the important and controversial political and social issues of our time. At present, Scope is looking for students who would be interested in helping to bring to the university the whole spectrum of political and social opinion which is so important in this day and age.

SA Senate Opens Committees To All

The Student Association Senate, legislative body of the Student Association, utilizes the committee system in arranging its varied program. In an attempt to give these committees a broader base in the student body, the Senate has opened up all the committees, with the exception of the Executive Committee, to memberships by any UVM student as well as S.A. Senators. Interested students are urged to contact the Student Association Office if they have any interest in these committees.

Largest of the Student Association Committees is the one concerned with activities. The sub-groups of this committee handles the DATE BOOK, the schedules of S.A. Movies, plans for the Freshmen Orientation and other all-campus events as they are proposed. The committee for Cultural Activities (SCOPE) and the Pep Committee are also part of this group.

Handling a wide area of responsibility in the area of communications is the job of the Orientation and the Elections Committees. The university has charged the Student Association with maintaining bilateral com-

Women's Student Government Association	WSGA Council: major officers elected by all women students in March. All women's living units have house presidents appointed by Council. Funds from S.A. grant and $.50 dues per girl.	Represents all women students and has jurisdiction in any area involving the conduct of women on campus. Works very closely with the Office of the Dean of Women.
Men's Residence Hall Assembly	One representative from each floor in unit is elected in September. The three officers are elected by this body. All students in unit are assessed $2.	Organized to represent all those living in Marsh, Austin, and Tupper in affairs concerning that unit. Maintains disciplinary tie with Dean of Men's Office.
Men's Residence Hall Council	Each floor in living units has a representative and these in turn select 4 officers. Budget composed of $2 fee per man.	Governing unit for all students in Chittenden, Buckham, Wills, and Converse Halls. Also maintains disciplinary tie with Dean of Men's Office.
Interfraternity Council	House president and two other men represent each house on the Council. 4 officers elected by Council. $1 per man assessed through the houses and some Kake Walk Disposition money compose budget.	Designed to organize all fraternities on campus into a body whose aim is to promote the ideals of fraternalism.
Panhellenic Council	Two representatives from each sorority and four officers elected in the spring by these representatives. Dues of $.80 per girl.	Representative group to develop cooperation among the seven sororities on campus.
Billings Governing Board	Four students and two faculty members selected by the preceding Board plus one direct representative from S.A. comprise the Committee. S.A. Senate makes budget allocation here.	Delegated responsibility from the Student Association for programing and administration in the Billings Center.
Class Officers	All four classes will elect their four officers this year on October 9. Money available through dues or budget request from Student Association.	Theoretically arrange events for the benefit of respective classes. Usually only senior class officers are active. Also utilized as monitors of student opinion.

Student Activity Fee

These figures illustrate what happens to the student activity fee which was collected from the students enrolled at the University for the academic year '64-'65. Many of the student organizations benefit directly from this fee. These organizations petitioned the Student Association Senate for funds last spring and now their accounts will be open to them. Other recipients of this fee are those accounts directly under the supervision of the Student Association Senate. Most of these accounts are self explanatory with the exception of the Business Secretary's Salary, the Accountant's Expenses, and the Contingency Fund. The B. Secretary's Salary is set aside for the person employed full time in the SA office. It is his responsibility to keep the office in order. The Accountant's Expenses are provided for the person in the Cashier's office who processes the financial dealings of the Student Association Senate and its subsidiaries. The Contingency Fund contains the money from the '64-'65 student activities fee which has not yet been allocated. This fund is drawn on throughout the year for unexpected events.

Since the figures for enrollment were projected last spring, the amount of the total income is only a conservative estimate. The total income will not be known until the middle of the first semester.

Lapointe Completes Winning Season

For the 13th straight year, Ralph Lapointe has posted a winning season as head baseball coach at the University of Vermont.

A former major league infielder with the Phillies and Cardinals, Lapointe has never suffered through a losing campaign since returning to his alma mater in 1952 to assume the controls of the Vermont baseball fortunes. This year's team was 11-6.

Lacking a hitting club, Lapointe molded an outstanding pitching staff that had a combined earned run average of 1.74, a mark that, a year ago, would have been the fourth best ERA for NCAA major colleges.

Heading the mound corps was junior southpaw Carl Martin of Wilbraham, Mass., who, in 61 1/3 innings, compiled a sparkling 1.27 ERA while winning five games and losing two. His right-handed counterpart was Charlie Foster, North Andover, Mass., also a junior, who had a 2.03 figure and a 2.2 record for his 48 2/3 innings of mound work. The third member of the brilliant junior pitching triumvirate was Bill Christie of Barre. A relief artist, Christie had a .43 ERA, giving up only one earned run. This run came in his only start when he outdueled New Hampshire ace John Strobel, 2-1 to clinch a second place Yankee Conference finish.

John Tartera, a junior from Staten Island, N.Y., paced the club in hitting with a .367 mark and had the most hits, 22. Bob Johnson of Barre, one of only three seniors on the team, batted .328, had 21 hits, and had the most extra base blows, five.

As a team, Vermont batted only .238 but its great mound staff muffled the opposition's offensive attack to a "silent" .193 and in 10 games allowed less than two runs.

With improved hitting and an entire pitching staff returning, Lapointe is looking ahead to 1965 and remembering back to 1962 when a somewhat similar team won the Yankee Conference pennant.

UVM Morgans Score In Show

For the second year in a row a University of Vermont Morgan has scored big at the National Morgan Horse Show where UVM Morgans carried home a total of 13 ribbons.

It was UVM Jason, a three-year old gelding, who made off with six ribbons, including the grand championship for geldings and reserve championships in the junior and gelding saddle stakes, blue ribbons for first place show-rings in two classes -- geldings three and under, and three year fillies and geldings saddle -- and a second place among geldings 15 and over.

He was trained for and shown at the four-day show, largest one-breed horse show in the world, by Robert Baker of Middlebury, who also trained and showed all but one of the UVM Morgans who competed at the Northampton, Mass., event.

A two-year old mare, UVM Kathy, took a blue ribbon in her class and won reserve champion honors in the junior mare competition; UVM Lauri took second among one-year mares; UVM Cantor won a third place ribbon in a harness special class; and UVM Helmsman, who won several honors at last year's National Show, this year added fifth and sixth place pink and green ribbons to the total won by UVM Morgans. Dr. Donald Balch, director of the Morgan breeding program for the University, horseman Frank McKernan, UVM student Bonnie Herschede of Essex Junction, and Tom Caissé of the Otter Creek Stables, formed the UVM contingency, with Baker, at the show.

Brink Seeks Eastern Post

The starting Catamount Battery for this Saturday's game is Rusty Brink and Scott Fitz. Here Brink is viewed over the ball as Quarterback Fitz calls signals.

When the good fathers drew up the rules for the game of football and decided to make it a contact sport, they had players like the University of Vermont's Arthur (Rusty) Brink in mind.

Now Arthur is a harmless enough tag for a young man to carry and Arthur Brink, away from the fields of battle, is a rather quiet, serious college student. He is polite, holds doors for coeds and, in general, would rather step around any insects that happen to be in his path to avoid crushing them. When he puts on his football uniform and steps out on to the field, however, a transformation takes place and this 200 pound redhead would probably tackle his own mother if she stood between him and the ball carrier.

This helps to explain why Rusty Brink, last fall as a sophomore, was the top defensive player on the Vermont team and earned second team All Yankee Conference honors. Under the system which awards points for tackles, fumble recoveries, blocked kicks and intercepted passes, the Lawrence, Mass. junior accounted for 125 points in eight games.

While Brink gives Vermont great strength at center, it is the lack of depth that worries Bob Clifford. The only letterman behind Brink, Pete Stickney of Rutland, who earned his letter as a sophomore, decided to pass up football this year.

This leaves Joe Albanese, Bob Barnaba and Martin Sweeney to back up Brink. Albanese is a 190 pounder from Palisades Park, N.J., while Barnaba goes about 220 and is from North Bergen, N.J. Both are juniors. Sweeney is a 200-pound sophomore from Harrisburg, Penn.

Stone Named Ski Coach

The University of Vermont's Board of Trustees has named Robert L. Stone of Lebanon, N.H., as the University's first full-time ski coach.

Stone will teach in the physical education department as well as coach the ski team.

An outstanding schoolboy skier in New Hampshire, Stone captained the Paul Smith's College team and also was a member of the Western State College (Col.) squad. He was a member of the FIS training squad in 1958, was a member of the U.S. Eastern championship relay team in 1959, was a member of the Olympic training squad in 1960 and served as an official at the 1960 Winter Games at Squaw Valley.

From 1960-62 he was assistant director of the Dartmouth Outing Club, coaching the freshman team, assisting the varsity coach, and directing the Outing Club ski school. Stone then returned to Western State to earn his M.S. degree in guidance and counseling. During the past academic year he taught and coached at South Royalton High School.

In becoming the first fulltime ski coach at Vermont, Stone inherits a predominately junior-senior squad that placed eighth in the NCAA championship last winter.

Stone replaces Robert Stewart who has been head coach for the past two years while doing graduate work in engineering.

Soccer To Premier At UVM

The first season of intercollegiate soccer at the University of Vermont will find the Catamounts embarking upon a seven-match schedule.

Vermont opens its season with a pair of road contests against Middlebury on Sept. 26 and Connecticut on Oct. 3 before performing before the hometown fans on Oct. 7 when St. Michael's comes across the river to do battle.

Following this contest, Vermont again takes to the road, meeting Rhode Island on Oct. 10 and New Hampshire on the 17th. The final two matches of the year are at home, Norwich on Oct. 21 and Massachusetts on the 28th.

Harold Greig, a member of the physical education department and who formerly coached soccer at Hartwick (N.Y.) College will coach the team. Greig, a graduate of Springfield College where he played varsity soccer for two years, coached at the upstate New York institution for four years then spent two years as head coach at Purdue before joining the Vermont faculty in 1962.

Vermont played soccer on an informal basis last year and compiled a 5-0 record. Greig will pretty much have to field a sophomore-junior squad this fall.

Dates Set For Law Boards

PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY -

The Law School Admission Test, required of candidates for admission to most American Law Schools, will be given at more than 100 centers throughout the nation on November 14, 1964, February 13, 1965, April 10, 1965, and July 17, 1965. The test, which is administered by the Educational Testing Service, was taken last year by more than 35,000 candidates whose scores were sent to over 100 law schools.

ETS advises candidates to make separate application to each law school of their choice, and to ascertain from each whether it requires the Law School Admission Test. Since many law schools select their freshmen classes in the spring preceding entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised to take either the November or the February test.

The morning session of the Law School Admission Test measures the ability to use language and to think logically. The afternoon session includes measures of writing ability and general background. Sample questions, registration information, and registration forms are included in a Bulletin of Information. It should be obtained six weeks in advance of a testing date from Coach Clifford preps team for Saturday's encounter with A.C.

Ready For Action

With these preliminaries out of the way the serious business of football unfolded in earnest bright and early Friday morning at 7 a.m. Two-a-day drills were on tap until classes start on Sept. 11. This year found the Catamounts embarking on pre-season drills earlier than usual because of the change in the academic calendar year which has moved up the start of classes by about a week.

Vermont opens its 63rd season at home on Sept. 19 against American International College. Last year the Cats were 6-2, one of the best seasons in history. Clifford, starting his third year at Vermont, will be keeping an anxious eye out for replacements for Ken Burton and for ends. Burton, an All-New England and All-East (small college) halfback, departed holding every major rushing mark while graduation also riddled the end department. Not a single end returns who has ever caught a pass in a varsity game. On the brighter side is the return of 18 lettermen.

Perhaps the most distressing fact for the coaching staff was the loss of Jack O'Dea. O'Dea, who shared quarterbacking duties with Scott Fitz last fall when both were sophomores, will not return to school until January.

Although Friday, August 26, was the opening day of practice, Clifford already has come up with a position change, switching sophomore Bob Florczak, Fairfield, Conn., from end to center to bolster a position already shallow of depth and further weakened by the absence of Pete Stickney of Rutland. Stickney played enough last fall as a sophomore to letter but has decided to pass up the pigskin sport this year.

Backs Look Tough

An All Yankee Conference baseball player, a sophomore who skipped freshman football, and a non-letter winning junior are staging a spirited fight for the flanker back spot that is open on the University of Vermont football team.

The members of the cast - in order of their above introduction - are Deane Kent, Charlie Foster, Dick Hebert of St. Albans, and John (Lefty) Harrington.

"The way these three have been going at it, Deane would have a heck of a fight on his hands to keep his job," says head coach Bob Clifford.

Foster is a versatile young man from North Andover, Mass. Last fall, because of a heavy academic load, he confined himself to punting only and led all kickers in the Yankee Conference, averaging nearly 38 yards a boot. In the spring he earned all conference honors as a pitcher-outfielder. As a freshman, Charlie, who also answers to the nickname of Al, was an outstanding quarterback.

Hebert earned All Northern League honors in both football and basketball while performing for BFA. A civil engineering major, he decided to forego freshman football last fall but came out for spring drills and impressed the coaching staff as he picked up 25 yards in six carries.

Standing close to the ground at only 5-6, Harrington, from Braintree, Mass., is even closer to the turf when he runs and he proved to be real tough in the spring scrimmage when he rambled for 39 yards in six tries and scored a touchdown.

Speedy Young Ends

It is no exaggeration to say that the end berths on the 1964 University of Vermont football team are wide open nor is it stretching the truth any to say that sophomores are going to have to pretty much fill the bill.

As Bob Clifford begins putting together the '64 model of his Catamount eleven he finds a glaring lack of experience at both the open and tight ends. In fact there isn't a single individual on hand who caught a pass in a game last year and if you go back two years Paul Giardi caught one pass for the grand total of five yards. That is the sum total of the offensive experience available as Vermont prep for its season opener against American International on Sept. 19 at Burlington.

Of the nine candidates for end slots, seven are sophomores, two - Giardi and Larry Rice - are seniors.

Giardi, from East Hartford, Conn., came fast at the end of last season and turned in a pair of strong defensive efforts against powerful Massachusetts and Middlebury. In this spring's Green-White game, the 6-2, 190 pounder grabbed a pair of passes for 62 yards.

Rice, from Saxtons River and a product of Vermont Academy, hasn't logged too much varsity time, most of it coming on defense. However, he did letter last fall and has shown considerable improvement in spring and early fall drills.

Giardi and Rice are on the tight end side of Vermont's flip flop offense. Other tight end candidates are Bob Florczak, 6-2, 195, from Fairfield, Conn., Myles Leeds, 6-1, 200, from Malverne, N.Y., and Mike Crotty, 6-0, 205, from Latham, N.Y.

Moving over to the open end side of the field, four newcomers are battling it out. The four are Jack Schweberger, 6-2, 195, from Weehawken, N.J., Keith Keiderling, 6-2, 185, from Flemington, N.J., Bill Van Bennekum, 6-2, 220, from Hoboken, N.J., and Dave Busick, 6-0, 175, from Slingersland, N.Y.

The coaching staff is extremely high on Schweberger and he appears to be one of a few non-seniors who will make the first two units. Jack possesses all of the equipment necessary for stardom.

Keiderling hauled in a pair of TD tosses as a freshman and hails from the same town as last year's starting open end, the now graduated Al Brown.

Van Bennekum was a standout on the 1962 freshman team but was out of school last year. His return should be a plus factor for a position that has unknown tangibles.

Busick is probably the fastest individual on the entire squad, having won the Section II 100 and 220 track crowns his senior year at Bethlehem Central.

Of the 61 passes completed by the Vermont quarterbacks last fall, ends Pete Weiss, Brown and Paul Toussaint were on the receiving end of 24 of them, four going for scores. This time around seven sophomores and a Forty-seven players began shaking out the summer's rustiness as two-a-day football drills got under way at the University of Vermont on Friday.

Actually, through the summer conditioning program planned by the coaching staff, most of the players returned in "excellent physical condition," according to Bob Clifford, head coach.

The conditioning paid handsome dividends for 35 of the 47 who were able to run the special mile in the prescribed time - 6:20 for linemen, an even six minutes for backs and ends, Leo Pfeiffer, a 185-pound sophomore fullback candidate from Port Washington, N.Y., posted the best time, 5:10. Those unable to better the set time the first day will keep running the mile daily until they do.

O'Dea Missing From Lineup

University of Vermont quarterback Jack O'Dea has been ruled ineligible by University officials for the 1964 football season.

The Jersey City, N.J., junior, who shared signal duties with Scott Fitz last fall, is one of several students not being allowed to return to school because of failure to pre-enroll. Students are required to pre-register in the spring for the fall semester.

O'Dea had not planned to return to Vermont this fall and so did not pre-enroll in the spring. He changed his mind during the summer about transferring, however, and reported back for football practice in late August.

University officials announced Thursday that because he had not pre-enrolled, he would not be allowed to return to school this semester.

pair of seniors are going to have to pick up the slack.

Tackles Brace Line

When the University of Vermont opened its 1963 football season, it had one letterman in the tackle ranks.

When the whistle sounds on Sept. 19 for the opening kickoff of the 63rd season this time the tackle ranks number four lettermen. While two non-letter winners who saw limited duty last year, and two sophomore hopefuls, give head coach Bob Clifford good depth at a vital position.

Heading the cast of returnees is burly Tom Mongeon, a former Burlington High star and now a resident of St. Albans. Twice All State while in high school, this 6-3, two-year letterman now tips the scales at 230. Last fall, Tom was the top defensive point getter on the tackle squad and his love of contact earned him All Yankee Conference honorable mention. Tom is a senior.

Three other seniors, each earning a letter last fall, are Fred Boese, Denis Blanck, and Ed Fugit. All New Jersey residents, each weighs in at around 225 pound mark and along with Mongeon help beef up the forward ranks. Boese was second in defensive points last fall among tackles while Fugit, a vastly improved performer from his sophomore days, was third.

Bob Murray, another New Jersey resident, and Laurel Husband, from Windsor, got into several games a year ago which should aid them this time around. Husband played in the 1962 Shrine Game while Murray earned all scholastic lacrosse honors in high school. Both also fall in the 220-pound range.

The two newcomers to the tackle ranks are John Conley from Bath, Me., and Dick Sparks from Colonia, N.J. Sparks goes 230 and is very strong on a straight on charge.

A trouble spot a year ago, the tackle ranks should be problems for the opposition this year.

The Year In Review

University of Vermont varsity athletic teams posted winning seasons in all major sports during the 1963-64 academic year while freshman teams compiled winning campaigns in every sport in which they compete.

Varsity highlights included a 6-2 football season, one of the best ever for Catamount elevens, capped by a 14-0 win over traditional foe Middlebury in the 500th game played by Vermont; an 11-10 basketball season, the first winning one since 1958-59; a 5-3-2 record in hockey which returned as a varsity sport after a 12-year lapse; an 11-4 baseball record, the 13th straight winning season, the 11th straight state track crown, and a fourth place finish in the New England by the golf team.

Individual standout performances were turned in by senior halfback Ken Burton of Middlebury, who earned All-New England and All-East football honors in small college ranks, and by senior John Donnelly of Burlington, who won the individual Yankee Conference and New England golf titles and took part in the NCAA tournament.

Over-all, varsity squads had a 50-46 won-lost record for a .521 percentage.

Again It's....."Go Go Greeks!"

Events Are Varied

Each year the fraternities and sororities of the University of Vermont sponsor Greek Week, a week devoted to the improvement of the Greek System through "participation and organization," the goals of this year's program as outlined by the Panhellenic Council and the Inter-Fraternity Council. Briefly, Greek Week will consist of:

Wed. 23rd - sorority and fraternity exchange dinners (5:30 and 7:30)

Officer Workshops (8:00 - 10:00)

Thurs. 24th - Queen Judging

Fri. 25th - Greek Concert (8:00 - 11:00)

Sat. 26th - Greek Games (2:00 - 5:00)

Greek House Parties (8:00 - 12:00)

Greek Week begins with the sorority and fraternity exchange dinners, after which the Officer Workshops will be held. These workshops are an important aspect of Greek Week, for they provide an opportunity for the examination of the Greek System, its problems and its aims. Workshops will be held at Sigma Nu (for presidents and vice-presidents), Tau Epsilon Phi (Treasurers), Alpha Gamma Rho (Pledge Leaders), and Delta Psi (Social Chairmen).

The remainder of Greek Week is devoted to entertainment, beginning with the judging of a Queen. Each fraternity nominates a queen candidate from a sorority, the final decision to be made by a panel of judges. The judging will take place at a tea in the Home Management House. The Queen will be crowned at the Greek Concert.

As all avid CYNIC readers know, the Four Freshmen are the stars of the concert. Tickets for the performance are still available at the University Store ($2.00). The Four Freshmen Concert is the one part of Greek Week you cannot afford to miss. Also at the concert, the intramural trophies will be awarded.

Saturday is fun day, and the fun begins at Centennial Field at 2:00 with a sorority bicycle race, an inter-fraternity tug-of-war, an inter-fraternity chariot race, and a co-ed three-legged race. Be there to cheer your favorite team.

The final activity of Greek Week is the House Parties, which will take the place of the usual Greek Week Dance.

Greek Week '64 promises to be one of the best in Greek Week history, and whether you are Greek or Independent, it's a fun week for all.

Homecoming Tuned To Soaring Sixties

Product Of Planning

The planning of this year's Greek Week has been the task of a Montclair, New Jersey junior, Joe Digeronimo, a brother of Sigma Nu fraternity, has been since last spring, chairman of the committee responsible for the arrangements for this week's events. Assisting Joe in this Olympian task has been Gamma Phi Beta's Tina Henn, a junior from Springfield, Vermont.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's Ross Fuller, has headed the group making the plans for the Greek Games, a highlight of each year's Greek Week. Two Alpha Gamma Rho brothers, Walter Rooney and James Rolly have handled the details of the workshops in which fraternity and sorority officers will participate. Publicity for the week has been the charge of Robert Ostrum of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Perhaps the most exciting moment of each Greek Week is that moment when the announcement is made who will reign as "Helen of Troy," the queen of the Greeks. The entire arrangements for the queen competition and selection have been made by the committee headed by Delta Psi's Robert Lewis and Alpha Delta Pi's Ann Ditrich. The judges who will choose this year's "Helen" are Dean of Men Roland Patzer, Assistant Dean of Men John Neuenschwander, and Jane Burkhardt, news reporter for WCAX-TV.

Chicago Symphony To Open Lane Series

Chicago Symphony Orchestra - Jean Martinon, Director.

The theme of this year's Homecoming Weekend is the "Soaring Sixties." The junior men's and women's honorary societies, Key and Serpent and Staff and Sandal, are supervising this year's events. The chairmen are Linda Riggs and Mike Fox, presidents of the societies. Aiding the chairmen are Claire Berka and Mike Sherman, co-chairmen. The various committees will be headed by Mary Jeffrey and Vincent De Cesaris (Poster), Alice Ostrove and Dave Cohen (1/2 Time and Publicity), Kathy Hentz and John Bradley (Treasurers), Karen Preis and Boyd Tomasetti (King and Queen), and Carolyn Kidd and Norm Coleman (Tickets).

The Homecoming events will begin with the election of the King and the Queen on Wed., Sept. 30 in Billings Student Center or Waterman from 9:00 to 4:00. On Friday, Oct. 2, Bert Orr and his orchestra will play at the dance in the Patrick Gym. Along with Bert Orr, the Chiffons and Little Anthony and the Imperials will entertain. Also, on Friday night, the King and Queen will be crowned. On Saturday, Oct. 3, from 10:00 - 12:00 judging of house posters will take place. At 1:30 the University of Maine - UVM football game will begin. During the half-time Mr. Oren and Dr. Felt will be the guest speakers. Also, the winners of the poster contest will be announced. From 4:30 on there will be open house at the living units and at 9:00 house parties will begin.

Tickets will be sold at the Book Store, Billings, and Patrick Gym.

VOL. 82 SEPTEMBER 24, 1964 NO. 11

The Greeks. . . did have one idea, so novel and profound that a whole new age dawned in its light. It was simply that a man's nature, even in its mortality, is the glory of creation, and that man has a noble purpose: to live at the highest possible pitch of human performance - physically, morally and intellectually."
(Life, Feb. 1963)

Theoretically, Greek Week serves a two-fold purpose: first, it's an occasion for social exercise - exchange dinners, parties, chariot races; and second, Greek Week provides the opportunity for evaluation of the fraternity system itself.

Noting the Greek Week schedule of events, it occurs to us that the social purpose will undoubtedly be fulfilled. But what of the latter, more fundamental purpose of evaluation? Surely the time allotted to Officer Workshops and athletic events cannot assume precedence over the greater necessity for a joint conference of some sort designed to eradicate the existing discrimination problem, to re-examine individual fraternity charters in letter and spirit.

Last Spring a similar proposal was made in an assertive, factual editorial, which, unfortunately, evoked no response from students, faculty or administration. Following is an excerpt from this editorial which, in lieu of this fifth annual Greek Week, may perhaps now find a more amenable audience.

In 1954, UVM's Board of Trustees ruled that within seven years each fraternity and sorority at UVM would be required to submit a letter declaring that their organization did not discriminate as to race, color, etc., in the selection of members. In 1961 . . . every sorority and all but two fraternities submitted the required letter. The two houses which did not comply with the Trustees' ruling, did so because of "wasp clauses" in their national organizations' constitutions. However, upon their requests to the national organizations, each received a special "waiver" enabling them to comply at last with the ruling. Thereafter, no action was taken against these houses on the grounds that the "wasp clauses" still remained in their charters.

A careful look at UVM's Greek letter organizations reveals that, with few exceptions, the membership of these individual organizations in no way reflects the proportional representation of the various ethnic, racial, and religious groups which make up the heterogeneous student body of UVM. This condition would seem to stem from one or two causes:

One. The students of UVM have, on an individual basis, voluntarily chosen to segregate themselves in their selection of which fraternity or sorority they wish to join. If this is the case, it presents a serious consideration in the formulation of our ideas regarding "clannishness" and inter-group relations, and furthermore, presents a more vital question concerning the feasibility of an integrated society in other than a homogeneous population.

Two. Certain fraternities and sororities do, contrary to their declarations, practice discrimination in the selection of their members, either directly or by the slightly more subtle application of the almost proverbial "quick rush". . . If this is the case, then the Board of Trustees' ruling has not been lived up to in its intended spirit, despite the submitted written declarations concerning discrimination, and further action is required by the administration.

Many students would support this second explanation for imbalances apparent in the membership of various fraternities and sororities, and the CYNIC must join them in their contention that some Greek letter organizations at UVM practice one or more various forms of objectionable discrimination.

Last week a fraternity at Middlebury College withdrew from its parent national organization and chose local independent, reputedly because the national organization charter contained discriminatory membership requirements. Such an action is to be commended: a sincere democratic thought succeeded in stimulating a courageous democratic action.

UVM'ers: it does not suffice to pay lip-service to liberalism and democracy; this is the worst sort of hypocrisy, and appears to be indigenous to us Northerners. It is time to cease applauding the passage of the Civil Rights Bill, et al, and to begin applying its principles.

We would like to see Greek Week celebrated in the true Olympian sense, fulfilling the Greek notion "that man has a noble purpose; to live at the highest possible pitch of human performance - physically, morally and intellectually."

Dear Freshmen

By Jeff Greenfield
Collegiate Press Service

Dear Freshman:

In entering college you have no doubt been looking forward to four years of immersion in the knowledge process, in which your mental horizons will be broadened, your parochial background will feel the cool breeze of social, cultural and ideological diversity, and in which you will become an individual well-educated and well-prepared for your role as community participant and good citizen.

Forget it.

Unless you are one of the rare ones, unless you are either so equipped that college will not cripple you or so cynical that you are unburdened by the illusion of Academe, these four years will be more dull grey markers on the road to comfortable mediocrity. And the sooner you realize it, the better off you will be.

Your four years will be spent in the company of little minds on both sides of the classroom lectern. You will be scribbling notes in the company of "students" whose every thought and every deed is a mockery of that term, whose capacity for questioning and inquiry ends with the material on a final examination, and whose world is bounded by clothes, sportscars, the football games and a shallow, mechanistic obsession with sex.

Your comrades are the Takers -- the generation spawned by prosperity and complacency, for whom obligations do not exist, commitment is a joke, and concern for others a waste of time.

Their lives revolve around themselves, defined as narrowly as possible, and their universe, which ends with what they can possess. The thrill of dissent, the sparks of intellectual challenge, the lust for inquiry, is absent -- because it cannot be hung from a wall, worn, driven, or shown off at a dance.

Your teachers are a breed of men too often forced to an obsession with the trivial. Plagued by the need to publish for the sake of publishing, untutored in the responsibility of offering value in what they write, the guardians of your minds are themselves men who delight in artificial constructs, in clever word games, in artful presentations of buncombe swathed in the mystical jargon of verbiage.

The classroom, for many of them, is a way-station between the library and the faculty club, a whistlestop where they cast their artificial pearls. Discussion and critical inquiry are a bore, a nuisance, and an interruption of the almighty syllabus.

And yet . . . somewhere in this desert of Summer Proms, Pep Rallies, Kampus Karnivals, Greek Weeks, Fall Proms, final papers, Fiji Island Romps, Winter Proms, mid-term examinations. . .

. . . somewhere a teacher will strike sparks in your mind . . . somewhere you will stay up all night and probe your own motives and goals with a friend . . . somewhere the myriad injustices of the world will set your soul on fire with indignation . . .

And somewhere you will read a book you have not read before, and wonder at a new thought fully phrased by an extraordinary thinker, and you will in spite of yourself be driven to question what you have believed all your life, and you will search . . .

And before you plunge back into the inanities of American college life you may perceive what education is about and see why men spend their lives teaching others.

May those moments in the arid wasteland you are now entering be many.

Sincerely,

An Alumnus

THE WAY WE SEE IT

We have become concerned, as of late, over a spread of propaganda that has been reaching the Burlington area in a regular flow. This cheap (ten cents) piece of political perversion, as you might have guessed, is known to you as the Burlington Free Press. The Free Press, you might not of noticed, is using a devious scheme to advance its ultra-leftist aims. Along with its consort, David Lawrence, the Free Press distorts the political picture of this country and supports policies which obviously would only aid the advancement of that vicious, inhuman movement, totalitarian Communism.

For example, The Free Press has a long record of opposition to foreign aid. Keep American money in America; cut foreign aid, they keep reminding us. Vermonters are not easily fooled. They see through this cloak of deceitfulness. They recognize that if foreign aid to underdeveloped countries is cut, these countries will only have to turn to Communist countries as a last resort for this much needed aid. Communist technicians, along with their propaganda, will soon seize control of poor countries and those Reds will soon be oppressing another part of the world. We noticed the part the Free Press played in making sure that India didn't get that Steel mill. Where else does India have to turn to? Why, there's little, old, kindly Papa Khrushchev with Mama on one arm and the Free Press under the other granting technical assistance (and we all know what that means, commie-style) to the ignorant people of the Asian sub-continent.

We see through your cloak, Mr. Milly, we see how you are supporting that Comsymp, the Junior Senator from Arizona. We know you know that this doubletalker is a college flunkout, unable to pass even Freshmen exams and thus incapable of leading the country. We see it - Get some idiot into Washington, who doesn't know his left hand from his right (or can't pass an exam on it) and then get him under your control. We recognize the motives of this animal you support, this senatorial half-pint, when he advocates abolishing the draft. Weaken the country and let those Reds walk right in; all over us, taking up residence at a vacant Fort Dix. Next thing you'll be advocating unilateral disarmament.

We saw you advocating that manned bomber plan. A weapon every sane Vermonter recognizes as obsolete. We get it, scrap the missiles, have the whole country dependent on a few planes that a few Commie missiles can shoot down and then they can walk right into Plattsburg.

We see your motives when you came out against the Civil Rights Law. We see it - let the Negroes rot in their ghettos so that they'll be ripe for Commie infiltration of Harlem. Then they'll have a base to seize control of New York and then the world. Yea, Vermonters are not easily deceived.

We see through you, Mr. McClure, when your paper advocates States' Rights. Weaken the Federal Government so that they can't even fight Communism. Next thing you'll be advocating the dismemberment of the House Un-American Activities Committee and then the FBI. Get rid of that great, brave patriot J. Edgar Hoover so that those masters of deceit can come out from hiding and take over. Get rid of all that federal power so that they can walk right into the Pentagon and take over.

When that great Vermonter, patriot and American, Warren Austin advocated and participated in the organizing of the United Nations, it was your boy from the wild west who argued against the world body. We see it - Keep America in isolation so we don't know what's going on. Let the Reds work in all around us. First, the Far East, then Europe, then Africa, then Latin America, and then, yes, even then Canada, right over our border. We're surrounded. We can't move. We'll be strangled to death!

We see the Free Press opening up the rear door to Mr. Khrushchev and Company, but Vermonters will not let this happen. Vermonters are known for their keen perception of the world. In the memory of Aira Allen, they'll slam that door right in your faces.

But maybe we're wrong. Maybe the Free Press editors are not part of this conspiracy, but were just duped. Tricked into following a line that just happened to advance Commie aims. Vermonters are not, like some people, harsh revengers. We are willing to forgive and forget that the Free Press has ever been duped, as long, that is, as they'll straighten out their political thinking.

In any case, it is our dedication to see that the Free Press does not become (or does not become duped into) the Pravda of our country and that man from the sand dunes does not become our commissar. The rugged determinism, the frontier spirit of all Vermonters will see to it that you Burlington editors, in your ignorance or deceitfulness will not, nay, must not, succeed.

Steeves Writes Education Text

A University of Vermont education professor has had his third book published.

Frank L. Steeves' latest offering is "Readings in the Methods of Education", a collection of 66 readings on method. A 337-page paperback, the book is published by Odyssey Press Inc. of New York City.

The book is divided into three sections. Part One, "Developmental Contributions to Modern Teaching Method", includes 27 readings encompassing a number of general theories and practices in teaching set forth during 19th and 20th centuries, including monitorial teaching, the Dalton and Winnetka Plans, readings from Dewey, Spencer, and other important educators.

Part Two, "Classroom Procedures: Widely-Used Activities for Teaching and Learning", is concerned with such specific classroom procedures as term papers, debates, workbooks, using magazines in the classroom, choosing a textbook, television, audio-visual materials, and other methods.

The final section, "Professional Activities and Problems", includes 12 readings, covering such areas as discipline, testing, parent-teacher conferences, team-teaching, and merit rating.

"The readings", says Dr. Steeves, "were selected because of their pertinence to the work of all teachers rather than to the work of teachers at a particular grade level or in a particular subject. Hence the emphases are neither elementary nor secondary but rather are directed to the problems, activities, and skills which, properly, are the concerns of all teachers, elementary school through college.

"An effort was made to secure a reasonable balance among historical and contemporary sources, among research reports and informed opinions, and among the many sources that sponsor professional publications in education."

Professor Steeves' other works were "Fundamentals of Teaching in Secondary Schools", published in 1962, and "Issues in Student Teaching", a casebook with related problems in teacher education, published last year.

Dr. Steeves holds his undergraduate, Ed. M. and Ed. D. degrees from Boston University and also taught there. Prior to joining the Vermont faculty in 1958, he was director of student teaching, placement and followup at Paterson (N.J.) State College.

Faculty Member Draws Red Ire

By Richard Berk

A University of Vermont economics professor has been violently criticized in an article in "Isticheski Pregled," the official quarterly historical journal of the Bulgarian Communist Academy of Sciences, in which he was referred to as a "stooge of his American masters." The attack on Dr. Lubomir Dellin, who also heads the Program on Russian and East European studies at the University, came in reaction to his chapter "Bulgaria," written for the book East Central Europe and the World.

Although the book in which Dr. Dellin's chapter appears was published in 1962 (Notre Dame University Press), it was apparently just recently discovered by the communists when Dr. Boyan Bozhinev, a member of the Bulgarian Academy, was sent to England to familiarize himself with English-language publications on the Balkan area.

Commenting on Dr. Dellin's chapter, Bozhinev wrote, "Dellin's chapter is written entirely from the position of the U.S. State Department, in the spirit of anti-communism . . .

The author does not agree that the Bulgarian people greeted with joy the Soviet liberators on their soil." Dr. Bozhinev is highly critical of the Vermont professor's conclusion that Communist Bulgaria has no independent foreign policy, but merely echoes the Moscow line.

This attack is the second on a University of Vermont author by communist authorities. Writings of Dr. Robert V. Daniels of the history department have also been the object of sharp criticism.

Dr. Dellin, whose volume Bulgaria under the Communists has won him acclaim both here and abroad, expressed the hope that Communist regimes might permit their scholars to read books written by Western authors in their own countries rather than sending chosen members to discover such well-known books on trips abroad.

"It is tragic indeed," says Dr. Dellin, "that while we in the free world follow developments of communist scholarship through their own publications, communist scholars are barred from receiving and reading non-communist books in their highest academic institutions. The fact that the communist regimes are still afraid of the printed word is the best indication of the lack of support for communism and of the yearning of captive nations for freedom."

Dr. Dellin's latest study is of the Eighth Congress of the Bulgarian Communist Party and his findings are to be published by the Stanford University Press this winter. A native of Bulgaria, Dr. Dellin joined the Vermont faculty in 1957.

"Dead" Classics Come To Life

by Judy Beeber

Students taking classics courses at the University of Vermont this fall will be able to "read" history first hand.

Dr. John Kent, chairman of the classics department, spent from January to June on leave in Greece in archaeological research and among the items he brought back with him were slides and squeezes of inscriptions. The inscriptions include data from Greek newspapers, proclaimed laws, honorary citizenships and treaties among other things. The dates of the inscriptions are determined by the lettering style and the contents of the data.

Dr. Kent explained that a squeeze is an imprint made of an inscription. Formerly done with paper, the newest method is to use latex material which, when in a liquid state, is painted over an inscription in layers and is allowed to harden. When it is peeled off, it reproduces the exact inscription and thus is an invaluable tool for archaeologists. The latex squeeze is far superior to paper, according to Dr. Kent, because it isn't brittle, doesn't crack or dry out, can be stretched, and can be viewed from either side.

The primary purpose of Dr. Kent's trip to Greece was to do research and to be brought up to date on discoveries in the classical studies in the past fifteen years. Dr. Kent's last archaeological study took place 15 years ago when he visited Corinth. Here he was given the task of clearing a piece of ground for a new museum which was to be erected on it. In the process, Dr. Kent uncovered articles from the early Greek period. Among these were wells, Roman walls, a floor of a Greek house, pottery and Byzantine coins. Based on these and many other findings, Dr. Kent has a book due to be published shortly. This work was prepared by the Vermont professor at the request of the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

During the academic year, Dr. Kent, who was formerly Dean of the UVM Graduate College will study the squeezes he brought back and will submit an article for publication on his findings in the cities of Greece. Students taking courses in the Classical Studies will benefit greatly from the squeezes and slides made available to them.

During May, in Athens, Dr. Kent had the honor of representing the University of Vermont at a meeting of European scholars in the field of humanities. Much valuable information was acquired on the contributions of Greek culture to European civilization.

Good luck to all the Greek Week candidates and all the Homecoming candidates.... is there anyone besides myself left to vote?

The Phi Sig - Delta Psi party, deemed a success -- a loud, crowded success.

Social chairmen were very uncooperative last week. Please, from now on, hand in the material.

Congratulations to TEP's Peter Hollis, '64, and Sara Beth Lipson of Boston; Henry Mandel, '66, and Cheryl Hebel, '64; and Steve Bernstein, '63 and Nancy Brigadeer, '64, all married over the past summer.

Best wishes to Mike Kimmel, '65, on his pinning of Jackie Shapiro.

The TEP's got together several times last summer, at Jones Beach and started off the fall semester with a party at Huntington Gorge.

The brothers of Theta Chi extend best wishes to Craig Buchanan, '66, on his pinning of Barb Avery of Chappaqua, N.Y.

Congratulations to AEPI's Don Sawyer, '66, and Anne Ross of Connecticut College, '68, on their pinning. Best wishes to Norm Shapiro, '65, and Barbara Goodman, '64, on becoming lavaliered.

Have a wonderful Greek Week, everyone!

Orchestra To Begin Rehearsal

The University of Vermont Orchestra will begin rehearsals for performances in November and March of the school year. Each Tuesday evening at the Ira Allen Chapel student musicians as well as community instrumentalists diligently practice to recreate the works of the masters.

Featured on the orchestra's first program in November will be works by Bach, Schubert, and Wagner.

Membership in the orchestra is open to any student of the university subject to audition and the immediate needs of the group. Students interested in the University of Vermont Orchestra or any of the University's musical organizations are invited to call the music department for information.

Graduate Exams To Be Offered

PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY -

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, required for entrance by over 100 graduate business schools or divisions throughout the country, will be offered on November 7, 1964, February 6, April 3, and July 10 in 1965. Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test, has announced that during 1963-64, approximately 24,000 students took this test.

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each business school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business and when. Since many business schools select their first-year classes during the spring preceding entry, candidates for admission to the 1965 classes are advised to take the test as early as possible.

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business is not designed to test specific knowledge in specialized academic subjects. Normal undergraduate training provides sufficient general knowledge to answer the test questions. Sample questions as well as information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

The Bulletin (which includes a registration form for the test) should be obtained six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, Box 966, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540, or 135 Waterman Building, UVM Testing Service. Registration forms and fees must reach ETS at least two weeks before the desired test administration date to allow time for completion of necessary testing arrangements for each candidate.

HOMECOMING ROYALTY

As is characteristic of the "Soaring Sixties", many new changes have occurred this year in regard to the nomination of King and Queen candidates for Homecoming 1964. In previous years, the candidates were elected on each floor of the living units by vote of the entire floor population. However, this year only Freshmen were allowed to choose the girl or boy who was to represent the specific floor. Since, with the addition of two new dorms on Redstone Campus, the number of floors to be represented was so large, each large dorm on Redstone chose two girls to represent the dorm, instead of having a representative from each floor.

The 1964 King candidates hail from as far south as Venezuela, South America and as far west as Illinois. George Czeisler, from Caracas, Venezuela represents Converse 2 East, while Curt Tobey from Kenilworth, Illinois represents Chittenden 4, Buckham 1, 2, 3, 4, is represented by Brad Raymond (Montpelier). Andy Schuyler (Midland Park, N.J.), Marc Gould (Worcester, Mass.), and Coulman Westcott (Chatham, N.J.) respectively. The remainder of the candidates are: John Hilton (Rumson, N.J.) - Converse North, Allan Clark (Rutland) - Converse 3 & 4 North, Reid Bailey (Rutland) - Converse 1 & 2 South, Jon Thompson (Cortland, N.Y.) - Converse 3 East, Tom Lackey (Exton, Pa.) - Converse 4 East, Alan Schultheis (Short Hills, N.J.) - Wills 1, Jeff Kuhman (Toledo, Ohio) - Wills 2, Hugh McLeod (Rutland) - Wills 4, Jay Weintraub (W. Hartford, Conn.) - Chittenden, John Davis (Middlebury) - Chittenden 2, and Don Fitts (Barre) - Chittenden 3.

New York State is well represented by the Queen candidates, Laurie Irvine and Renee Verrier (Port Chester and Bayside, N.Y.) are representing Mason Hall. Joan Fessenden and Jackie Kaisers (Huntington and Schenectady, N.Y.) were chosen to represent Simpson Hall. Coolidge Hall nominees are Joan Lazar and Ellen Dembrow (White Plains and Freeport, N.Y.). The other N.Y. girls are Brenda Goodsell (Chazy) - Hamilton, Barbara Montgomery (Newburgh) - Christie, Georgia Walsh (Manhasset) - Slade, and Fran Warner (Buffalo) - Robinson. The remaining candidates are: Mimi Vogt (Media, Pa.) - Hamilton, Sue Nestler (Summit, N.J.) - Patterson, Mary Morris (Milton, Vt.) - Patterson, Marjorie Morton (Riverton, N.J.) - Wright, Joanne Koledo (Springfield, Vt.) - Wright, Judy Blackburn (Wayne, N.J.) - Christie, and Joan Dennes (Trumbull, Conn.) - Redstone.

Q.

Why give your favorite student a good pen when he'll just lose it?

A.

Parker won't let him lose it.
If he does, it will be replaced*

* SPECIAL REPLACEMENT OFFER: If you buy your favorite student a Parker 45 (the $5 model) between now and October 17, 1964, he can protect it against loss for one full year at no extra cost. He registers its purchase by mailing one-half of the Parker 45 Registration Certificate to the insurance company listed on the certificate. Then if the pen is lost, the insurance company will replace it at no charge. All he has to do is mail the other half of the certificate, properly notarized before December 31, 1965 and describe how the pen was lost.

Here's why this is such a good pen for a student:

IT'S CONVERTIBLE. Load it with a cartridge or replace the cartridge with the ingenious little "converter" (95 cents extra) and fill it from an ink bottle. The 45 is the only pen that fills two ways. SOLID 14K GOLD POINT. Choice of seven widths from extra-fine to extra-broad. And we can replace points right on the spot.

VERMONT CLIPS AIC

Bob Florozak in the extreme right of this picture, watches attentively as teammates battle AIC last Saturday. UVM won the contest by a score of 14-6.

by BOB BLOOMENTHEL

The 1964 edition of the UVM football squad successfully opened the season Saturday with a 14-6 triumph over a stubborn AIC team. The Cats were forced to bounce back to gain the win, however, as the Aces played the first half as though they did not realize UVM was trying to improve on last year's 6-2 mark.

In the first half of the game the Catamounts made frequent mental mistakes which led to the half-time score of 6-0 in favor of AIC. Alan Lussier, the Aces' quarterback, took advantage of some of these mistakes while engineering his team to a first quarter touchdown.

Lussier used the quarterback option to good advantage in that drive. The last 15 yards of the drive were covered by a Lussier pass to slotback John Slomback. The kick for the extra point was blocked by big UVM tackle Fred Boese.

From the start of the second half the Cats looked almost like a different team. Apparently fired up by Coach Bob Clifford, Vermont tightened on defense and looked stronger on offense.

Midway through the third period runs by Richie Reynolds and Ken Andrade carried the ball to the AIC 34 yard line. On the next play sophomore quarterback Bill Leete fired a scoring toss to tight end Paul Giardi to cap the 60 yard drive. Andrade's kick for the conversion attempt split the up-rights and UVM grabbed the lead, 7-6.

Late in the same period, the fired up Catamount defense forced an AIC fumble which Captain Ron Hertel recovered on the AIC 34 to set up the final tally. Quarterback Scott Fitz moved the Cats on the ground to the seven and Frank Foerster carried it over on the next play. Andrade's kick was again good and Vermont was in the van, 14-6.

Greig Preps Soccer Men

Twenty-two players are working out daily for the first inter-collegiate soccer team at the University of Vermont.

Under the coaching of Hal Greig, Vermont opens its baptismal season on Sept. 26 at Middlebury.

"We expect a little of everything to happen to us in our first season," says Greig, who went through a similar experience eight years ago when he organized and coached the first soccer team at Hartwick College in Oneonta, N.Y. "There's no substitute for game experience and you can't get it until you play. We hope to improve as the season goes along. We couldn't have picked a rougher opener than Middlebury. They have a veteran club and should be among the top teams in New England this fall."

Greig's team will get a taste of battle-like conditions on Saturday morning when it scrimmages against Plattsburgh State at the UVM field off of Spear Street. "Things should crystalize a little bit better after that," says Greig. The Catamounts will be a young team this year with 14 sophomores and eight juniors. The ranks were strengthened Wednesday when Bobby Cronin of Richmond reported for practice.

Members of the team are Don Carlson, Bill Lansing, and Bill Willey, all of Essex Junction; Cronin; Jim Cunningham, Burlington; John Lindley, Springfield; Dennis Linehan, Bristol; Glen King, Northfield; Phil Russell, Hinesburg; Jack Bitter, West Hartford, Conn.; Bill Burling, Toronto; John Howe, Sudbury, Mass.; Alex Lyall, Plandome, N.Y.; Tim Madison, Windsor, Conn.; Ted Manning, Westfield, N.J.; John Neftzger, Hackensack, N.J.; George Noyes, Branford, Conn.; John Rutledge, Scotia, N.Y.; Thurston Sumner, Milford, Conn.; John Teuscher, Weston, Conn.; George Wolf, Lakeville, Conn.; and George Wrightson, Etna, N.H.

Scott Fitz (10) drops back to pass in the second period of last Saturday's game against AIC.

Sportitorials

A football team is composed of ballplayers with ability, coaches with experience, and a desire to win for a certain cause. The University of Vermont football team for 1964 is solid, well rounded squad with depth, desire, and determination. Every Saturday afternoon, from September through November, the Catamounts take the field with but one purpose in mind; to bring home the victory "take" for all their fellow students to share.

You — the Students, are the beneficiaries of the team's victories. The credit for a winning season belongs to the school. These athletes give about twenty-five hours of their study time each week. It then seems peculiar, that the UVM students fall each Saturday to repay their debt to the hardworking football team. When one thinks about the situation, the inevitable question arises. What really constitutes a winning football team? Sure, the machinery must be oiled and ready to roll every Saturday. The coaches who control these machines must be experts at their trade. But, the output of the squad, and the resistance they incur, seem minutely small when compared to the input of the University in the form of spirit and backing.

Last Saturday, the University of Vermont defeated the American International College by the score of 14-6. UVM scored two touchdowns, two extra points, intercepted a pass, and recovered a few fumbles. The cheering and rooting heard from the stands was almost like a whisper when compared to the screaming done at certain fraternity parties on campus. One name comes to mind to give you an example. Bob Price is a quarterback on the UVM squad. He wears number twenty-three on the back of his jersey. Bob's booming voice, full of spirit and desire, is never at rest when he is near the bench. Yet, his voice reverberates up through the grandstand, as if he were a spectator sitting in seat 18C. The reason for this is not that Bob's spirited voice is really so booming, but rather because the potential rooters in the stands are silent.

This week the Cats will play Worcester Tech in Worcester, Mass., far away from our own Centennial Field. The following Saturday, October 3, is Homecoming against the University of Maine. I hope the silence becomes chaos as the Catamounts emerge victorious in another Homecoming encounter.

Gridiron Goofs

On the intangible side, football is often a game of inches. On the tangible side, however, the pigskin sport is supposed to be a game for 11 players per side.

Bob Clifford, head coach at the University, has some second thoughts about the latter aspect of the game after Saturday's 14-6 triumph against American International College.

Vermont came up with its only pass interception of the day when it had but 10 players on the field. Midway in the fourth quarter, following an exchange of punts, AIC took over and players for both teams trotted on and off the field. One Vermonter too many went off, however.

AIC ran a running play and gained nothing. Next came a pass that was picked off by Charlie Foster and returned 15 yards, giving the Catamounts the ball once again.

"I've thought of some great defensive possibilities if we could use an extra man but I've never thought about using one less," says Clifford.

Another unusual aspect of Saturday's opener found history repeating itself. In the 1963 game against AIC at Springfield, Vermont's first TD came when then sophomore quarterback Jack O'Dea, on the first pass attempt of his varsity career, threw a touchdown pass to senior Paul Toussaint, tight end in Vermont's flip flop offense.

Only the faces were different this year. The Catamounts first

Three Seniors Are Promoted To First Unit

A trio of seniors received promotions Monday for the role they played in the University of Vermont's 14-6 opening season win over American International College on Saturday.

Coach Bob Clifford announced that Denis Blanck, Fred Boese and Paul Giardi have been moved up to the first unit. Blanck replaces Tom Mongeon at the short-side tackle. Boese moves into Ed Fugit's strongside tackle spot, and Giardi takes over at tight end from Larry Rice.

"It's not that we were so dissatisfied with the play of the others but you have to award and promote for a good showing," says Clifford.

Boese blocked the extra point attempt following the Aces' lone TD while Giardi hauled a 34-yard scoring aerial for Vermont's first touchdown.

Clifford announced two other promotions on defense. Sophomores Bill Leete, who tossed the 34-yarder to Giardi, and Bill Van Bennekum, an end, have moved ahead of Dick Hebert and Rice respectively.

Vermont travels to Worcester, Mass., Saturday to take on the Engineers of Worcester Tech.

six points resulted when sophomore Bill Leete, Williamstown, Mass., attempting the first pass of his varsity career, connected with senior Paul Giardi, East Hartford, Conn., the tight end replacement for the graduated Toussaint.

CAT - TRACKS

... AIC slotback Slomback who scored his team's lone touchdown was playing in his first organized football game. ... He was persuaded to come out for the team only two weeks before the start of the season.

... UVM's leading ground gainer was fullback Reynolds with 96 yards in 18 carries. ... Andrade had 66 yards in 13 attempts while Fitz gain 32 in six tries. ... Defensively Rusty Brink, George Oelze, Fred Boese and Ron Hertel led the charge. ... Versatile Charlie Foster stood out while going both ways. ... Fitz's passing hand looked a little rusty without much time to recover from his summer injury. ... Overall, the Cats had better combine two good second halves two weeks from now in the Homecoming encounter with Maine. ... The Black Bears were losers by only 6-0 against powerhouse Massachusetts and Jerry Welch.

There will be a meeting for ALL students interested in running for class officers in the Marsh Room of Billings at 4:15 on Wednesday, Sept. 30. At this meeting the elections committee will explain all procedures for the election of officers from all four classes.

Intramural Sports Program

For a number of years, the University of Vermont has held and intramural sports program with the participants being both fraternity and independent teams. This year is no exception as the program is slated to begin this Thursday, September 24, with the intramural football season.

The football rules are primarily the same as last year's competition, except that there will be field goal posts for the first time. The posts make it possible to kick points after touchdowns and also to attempt to gain three points by way of a field goal.

This semester's activities include a tennis tournament starting Friday, September 25, a handball tournament commencing on Wednesday, October 7, a paddle ball competition to kick-off October 28, a bowling league starting Thursday, October 15, and the intramural basketball tournament which commences on October 30. It is highly possible that there will be a hockey schedule arranged to accommodate boys who have their own equipment.

The teams entered in the above tournaments are competing for the campus All Sports Trophy, which is awarded to the team with the highest total point accumulation. Let's wish the best of luck to those competing in this year's intramural program, which is run by Mr. Norman Strassberg.

LBJ, Barry Vie For Vt. Votes

Republican Candidate
Barry Goldwater
(Credit: Burlington Free Press)

by Richard Berk

The past week saw the political furor which necessarily accompanies a presidential election spread to Vermont as both candidates, Senator Goldwater and the incumbent, Lyndon Johnson, appeared in the Burlington area. Goldwater spoke on Friday, the twenty-fifth to a capacity crowd at Memorial Auditorium, while President Johnson addressed an audience roughly estimated at 10-15,000 at the Burlington airport the following Monday. Governor Phillip Hoff claimed this to be the largest crowd, in Vermont's history ever to assemble at a political rally.

GOLDWATER SPEAKS

In addressing his supporters at Memorial Auditorium Goldwater, as might be expected of any candidate for a political office, began by expressing his delight at being back in the state of Vermont. He then praised Senator George Aiken (R. Vermont) and said that both the senior senator and the late President Kennedy were "close personal friends" of his. Following these introductory pleasantries Senator Goldwater's tone became somewhat more solemn as he expressed his appreciation for the growing concern with which Americans regard an overly powerful executive branch. For reinforcement of this point he cited the Bobby Baker case and said that when the executive has the power to pressure Senators into stopping an investigation, then he has exceeded his rightful authority. He went on to say that the Billy Sol Estes case is still doubtful and in concluding his reference to executive power said, "I hope that these matters will be resolved quickly so we can remove from the campaign the distasteful chore of reminding the President of his job."

In the remaining portion of his speech the Arizona Senator concerned himself for the most part with the issue of "creeping socialism." He termed Medicare "a phony issue" which "was taken out, thank the Lord, by the House of Representatives." Addressing himself to the youth in his audience he warned that if care is not exercised they will see the day when a highly centralized federal government under a democratic administration will confiscate the greatest part, if not all, of their incomes each year.

President Lyndon B. Johnson

The one other major point Senator Goldwater made came in an indirect reference to Bobby Kennedy as the senator reminded his supporters "We are at a disadvantage now and need your support to change this situation. We are a minority party and as such we are not in a position to run a candidate in a state in which he doesn't even live."

Mr. Goldwater declined to mention what he would do if his party were in such a position.

JOHNSON SPEAKS

Monday afternoon at the airport things were changed somewhat. The sentiments of the people there were different and so were those of the candidate they came to hear. But other than this the format of the President's speech was a familiar one. Like his opponent he felt it was good to be back here on his "Second annual visit to Vermont." He praised the "friendly, smiling faces" that greeted him. He, too, claimed the friendship of Senator Aiken, further stating that "no party has a copyright on patriotism and good judgement." Then, as Senator Goldwater had done, he turned to more serious matters. He made reference to the "terrible tragedy" of President Kennedy's death and pointed out that the late president had 51 bills in the congress at that time all of which have since passed.

Parents Aboard For Homecoming

There will be an influx of parents to the Vermont campus this Homecoming Weekend if the plans of the Family Associates bear fruit.

The Family Associates is an organization which all parents and guardians of University of Vermont students are eligible to join. The Associates aim is to provide a better opportunity for parents to participate in the life of the University, and to try to help enrich life for students. The organization has made gifts of silver tea services for residence hall lounges, gifts of magazine subscriptions and encyclopedias for Billings Center and for the men's and women's dorms. Though not an organization to assist University fund raising, the Associates have made annual gifts to the University's annual giving program from dues contributed by parents.

The organization has arranged a special program for parents on the occasion of Saturday's Homecoming Weekend beginning with a coffee hour and registration from 10 to noon Saturday at Billings.

Parents are being encouraged to turn out for the Homecoming football game versus Maine's Black Bears at 1:30, and have been advised that a general admission ticket entitles them to sit with their sons and daughters in the student home stands.

Feature attraction of the parents program will be a buffet supper originally scheduled for Wright at 6:30, but now to be served at Simpson Dining Hall at 7 p.m. Tickets for the buffet are $2.50 for parents and their guests. But UVM students who wish to join their parents for the buffet are cordially invited to do so and Saga is offering them a special price of $1.50 per person for the buffet.

A faculty panel discussion has been specially arranged for parents Saturday evening at Southwick, following the buffet at Simpson. Dr. J. Anthony Samenfink, professor of human relations and family development; Dr. William Woodruff, assistant professor of psychiatry; Miss Roberta Schwalb, assistant professor of nursing; and the Rev. Donald E. Boyer, Episcopal chaplain at the University; will discuss "The Nature of the College Student."

The Family Associates will also sponsor the movie, "The Four Poster," starring Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer at 9:30 in Votey Engineering Auditorium. It is free to parents and their guests and guests may include their UVM sons and daughters.

The parents program winds up with an invitation to them to enjoy a "midnight" snack in the Catamount Den at Billings after the movie.

Officers of the Associates, all parents, include Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Lyman, Burlington, presidents; Dr. and Mrs. Roy Neumeister, Brattleboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roney, Burlington, vice presidents; Mr. and Mrs. William Cronin, Burlington, secretaries; and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oliver, Burlington, treasurers.

Advisors are Deans Anna Rankin Harris and Roland Patzer, and Emil E. Spees, director of student activities and of Billings Center. L.E. Van Benthuyssen, director of public relations, is executive secretary.

Chicago Symphony Opens Blue Series

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra to perform in Burlington at Lane Series.

by Betty Miller

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Jean Martinon, will premiere this season's Blue Lane Series Concerts on Saturday, October 3, in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 P.M.

An old favorite of the Lane Series, the Chicago Symphony appeared previously in 1958 with its former conductor, the late Fritz Reiner. When the chair of command passed to Jean Martinon in 1963 after Reiner's death, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, with its 103 members, continued to be considered one of the world's great orchestras, with a heritage of over 70 concert seasons of high symphonic standards.

Founded in 1891 by Theodore Thomas, pioneer in the development of symphonic music in America, this orchestra reached maturity during the 37-year conductorship of Frederick Stock. During this era, the orchestra consolidated its position both in Chicago and on the American scene. In the two decades following the opening of Orchestra Hall in Chicago, the orchestra's endowment grown substantially enough to establish a training school for young musicians, a Civic Orchestra, and to create a Pension Fund for the retirement of its older players.

In the Fall of 1953, Fritz Reiner took over the orchestra as Music Director and Conductor. Under his direction, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra maintained and strengthened its position among the foremost orchestras in the country. In the Fall of 1960, however, Reiner's health failed, and it became necessary for him to limit his concert work. For the next few seasons he shared the podium with several guest conductors, among them, Jean Martinon. When Reiner died on November 15, 1963, the French-born conductor, Martinon, was selected to become the orchestra's next Music Director, his tenure beginning in October, 1963.

Mr. Martinon was born in Lyon, France, where he began his study of violin. Later he went to the Paris Conservatory, where he won several honors and studied composition with Albert Roussel, and conducting with Charles Munch.

Since 1946, Mr. Martinon has toured the world, making his United States debut with the Boston Symphony in 1957. In 1960 he was a guest conductor of the Chicago Symphony at the Ravinia Festival.

Jean Martinon is widely known as a composer and was awarded the Grand Prize of the City of Paris in 1945 for his "Psalm 136 -- Song of the Captives." He has conducted both his Symphony No. 3, "Hymne a la Vie," and his Concerto for Violin, No. 2, for Chicago audiences.

During his first season with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Martinon demonstrated his intention of continuing the legacy of perfectionism and "that indomitable determination to have the best" passed from its founder, Theodore Thomas.

For Saturday night's performance, Martinon has chosen as his program, "Variations of Orchestra," Opus 31, by Schonberg, "A Card Game," ("Jeu de Cartes"), Ballet in Three Deals, by Stravinsky, "Symphony No. 5 in C MINOR," Opus 67, by Beethoven.

At that time, it will be our privilege to listen to and appreciate an orchestra that has demonstrated its role as a vital asset, enriching not only the cultural life of Chicago, but also of the entire nation itself.

UVM Looks To Future

by Ken Klonsky

With a few financial breaks, chances are that the Class of '65 won't be able to recognize their own school by Homecoming 1970. The reason is that proposed changes to the campus in the near and not-too-distant future are of a far-reaching and exciting nature.

Work has already begun on the large strip of land surrounded by Votey, Bailey, Laffayette, and the Freshman dorms. A new drainage system is being installed to facilitate the planting of one to two hundred trees and the construction of a reflecting pool.

There are many building possibilities. A new Life Sciences Building near the Dairy Building and an extension of the Medical Building are almost definite. There is also an extension proposed for the Fleming Museum that is strictly in the blue-print stage. This addition would entail making the back look like an entrance, an outdoor Shakespearean theatre, and a plaza for walking and meditating.

For these changes to materialize much money is needed. An increased student enrollment of about one hundred a year will only pay a slight part of the sum needed. Acting President Rowell is counting highly on private philanthropy. The money that was obtained for initial construction is "income over estimated expenses of last year".

If these changes are made our campus will be altered to a degree never before thought possible. The University of Vermont is certainly a college planning for the future.

THE CHALLENGER

When Barry Goldwater strode onto the stage at Memorial Auditorium last Friday afternoon, he encountered an almost capacity audience whose cheering and applause for the most part drowned the heckling voices of the minority opposition.

Greeted and encouraged by ingenious signs, such as "BARRY IS A GREAT, DEDICATED SELFLESS, HONEST AMERICAN PATRIOT", the auspicious Senator from Arizona proceeded to deliver a speech of great pomp and no circumstance. Attempting to ingratiate himself with his audience, he lauded his colleagues, the Senators Aiken and Prouty, and sputtered vacuities concerning his great friendship with "George and Win".

But the greater, or perhaps the lesser portion, depending upon one's point of view, of the Senator's oration was devoted to destructive criticism of the Johnson Administration. With the single-minded intensity of a cowboy selecting and chasing his fattest cattle for slaughter, Barry Goldwater picked for dissection the juiciest, most vulnerable issues of this election campaign. Not satisfied with merely choosing his cattle, doubtlessly already familiar to the Vermont public, he insisted upon performing the slaughter himself, and, to his disadvantage, repeatedly dragged what once might have been good meat through the mud.

Everyone knows about Bobby Baker and Billy Sol Estes; and, surely, by now everyone knows how Senator Goldwater feels about Medicare and the Aged, Social Security, Income Taxes, and the strength of the Federal Government.

What no one seems to be cognizant of is how the Senator intends to compensate for proposed reductions in Social Security, or specifically how the Senator would prefer to handle the Vietnam situation, or the undeniable poverty of 40 million Americans.

Many of us were sincerely willing to listen to Barry Goldwater and attended the rally with the hope that the Presidential candidate would say something substantial. Our hopes were dashed as we listened to joke after joke, destructive criticism heaped upon destructive criticism.

What was perhaps more agitating was the implication of the constant catcalling - which indicated not only an absence of courtesy on the part of certain high school and college students, but also the inability of this man - a potential President of the U.S. - to command due respect.

... AND THE DEFENDING CHAMPION

In direct contrast with the impression created by Barry Goldwater was the effect produced by President Lyndon B. Johnson, who delivered a brief speech before 10,000 people at the Burlington Airport last Monday afternoon.

Instead of brash accusations, we heard the less articulate but much more sincere statements of the President. Instead of brutal slashes at his opponent's glaring weaknesses, we heard impassioned justification of the Administration's current policies. And, instead of sensing an air of disrespect, we felt inspired by the President's ostensible maintenance of dignity.

What struck us most was the President's emphasis of our right and privilege to vote. Mr. Johnson insisted we exercise this privilege, regardless of our ultimate political alignment. "Vote," he said, "for who you think is right".

In pleading his own cause, the President simply but eloquently said he has tried his utmost to remain above sectional differences and economic interest groups. We believe his achievements attest to this fact. In the hope of his being elected, he admitted realistically that he could make no rash promises. "But," the President asserted, "I'll do the very best I can."

One's best is the most we can ask of any individual. We prefer Lyndon Johnson's "best" to the projected "best" of Barry Goldwater whose promises of sure-fire panaceas cannot possibly be taken seriously, even by the most naive among us.

Election Reflections

Or: My Country 'Tisn't of Thee
(Thank God)

Or: It's Great to be back here in the state of Ignorant Bliss

by Richard Berk

There's already been too much said about Goldwater and Johnson by people who aren't qualified to make the required analysis, so I won't add to the ignorance which many Americans seem so ready to exchange with one another. For fear of seriously overstating my authority, I'll try to say as little about the two candidates as my own pretense of intellectualism will allow: But, I can't promise anything.

What fascinated me last week even more than the candidates themselves was the people who came to listen to them and their reactions to what was said. I found the Goldwater supporters to be the more interesting subjects, if annoyingly adamant. Those I interviewed were a pretty fanatical bunch: since I only talked with a handful, this may be purely coincidental, but if so, it is an interesting coincidence. In any event, being an out-of-stater and a snotty college punk to boot, I already had two strikes against me and their reaction to my subversive influence was understandably one of resentment. Most of them seemed to think I was another one of those Jew Communist leaders from New York or, even worse, a party shill for the local Democratic machine.

Our conversations inevitably turned to Goldwater's stand on civil rights. When one elderly woman asked me how I would like it if one of "Them" moved in next door to me, my afternoon was complete. My reply that I had been born and raised on the fringe of Bedford-Stuyvesant seemed anti-climactic and thoroughly flustered the poor woman, so I decided to move out of her neighborhood and on to greener pastures. Well, green isn't the word for it. The next round was with a UVM student who was particularly enthusiastic about Barry's views on the American racial problem. With regard to the Civil Rights Bill he said, "Barry's not afraid to call a spade a spade." He went on to qualify this statement, saying that what he really meant was that Goldwater wasn't afraid to declare certain parts of the bill unconstitutional. But the best was yet to come. As this same fellow so eloquently put it regarding Viet Nam, "Barry's either gonna pee or get off the pot." I won't venture an interpretation of this comment on the state of Mr. Goldwater's bladder. But suffice it to say that this was perhaps the most colorful interview of my short-lived career.

The rest of this particular afternoon, I am sorry to report, was not nearly so amusing. However, it was no less hectic and informative. Before long I found myself unwittingly lured into the clutches of a member of The Young Americans for Freedom, with whom argument is analogous to beating one's head against a stone wall. I just couldn't lose this character. He couldn't seem to understand that while I found him of sociological interest, his political sentiments were intrinsically worthless to me, as I had lost all respect for him the second he opened his fat, belligerent mouth. If nothing else, he taught me that the structure and form (if any) of bigotry remain basically unchanged by the object of the ignorance in which it is grounded, whether that object be race or politics.

THE SCEPTIC

by Robin Schore and Miles Wortman

"Home, Home on the Range"

It's fall, the birds are going south
We'll soon feel winter's sting,
And I have that mooshy feeling now
For tomorrow's Homecoming

Break out the bootleg beer and booze,
Clean up the old frat house,
Reserve that lurid motel room
To house this weekend's spouse.

For that nip of Fall, that hue of trees,
The girl that I shall bring
To warm sentimentalities
Of Vermont Homecoming.

Oh, football fly, Oh, Chiffons shake,
Oh, Little Anthony,
Oh, alumnus who's a boy again
And kicks that iron tree.

For the leaves do fall, the grass does brown,
The little children sing,
I feel a lump within my throat,
Oh, Boy! It's Homecoming.

Is your Mommy coming up that day
I have a little wish
She shouldn't see my import date,
She knows he isn't Jewish.

Oh, the lake is getting colder,
What will the winter bring,
Who cares, I'm filled with great delight
About old Homecoming.

Who will come the farthest here?
Who'll be the queen that crows
Which sucker football team this year
Will flatter our egos.

Oh, the warmth that thrills my frame,
I wish that I could sing,
Let's out of bed and cry a bit
Oh, God, I can't stand this wondrous passion, this overflowing feeling in my heart, this yearning in my soul to embrace the joyfulness again
UVM Homecoming.

Snoopy Says...

Hi - I'm not really snoopy, but my friends sometimes think I am, so here goes. I would like to start out in a serious vein because most of what I write can be taken straight; that is, I mean everything I say, disguised as it may be. I don't claim to be an authority. As a matter of fact, I'm highly opinionated on a wide variety of subjects, as you shall see. You'll also discover that I am YOU. I am a student, trying to express the opinions which are bottled inside the minds of apathetic UVMers. I hope that I am in the minority in some of my thoughts and that as a result, some students with the backbone and ability, will bet off their humps and argue with me, with the Sceptic, with editorial comments, and even with the world, (that doesn't take ability, just guts).

We, as students, are the future. From looking around, I find that, unless we wake up, we will be a stereotype of the adults who plague this country with their indifference and conformity. Let's live! Sure, we all need to

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

The Class of 1964 IN REVIEW: In commenting on the 1963-64 Placement Program, the writer views the year with mixed feeling. Only 63% of the Senior Class registered, i.e., filed a set of credentials with the Placement Office. On the otherhand, a greater number of Seniors and Graduate Students made use of the services, thus reflecting the overall growth in enrollment at the University.

One hundred and fifty-eight employers and three graduate schools took part in our Campus Recruitment Program holding 1,889 personal interviews, an increase of 716 over 1963. Of this group, forty-two new employers including sixteen school systems visited the campus for the first time.

In reporting on 1963-64, the recruiting season may go down as one of the more significant ones in recent years. Nationally, the salary gains reported for both technical and non-technical bachelor's degree candidates were the lowest, percentage-wise, in the past five years, as reported by the College Placement Council Salary Survey of June 1964. The increase over the previous year for non-technical students was lower than that for technical graduates, reversing the trend of the last three years. Offers to non-technical students went up 2.2% whereas offers to technicals rose 3.2%. The decreasing needs of the aerospace and electronics industries were reflected conclusively. While this decrease mainly took place in the New York and Los Angeles areas, the results were felt keenly on our campus by the Technology Seniors who averaged eleven interviews per man.

A questionnaire was sent to each registrant requesting information as to plans after graduation. Ninety-three percent responded so that the following figures concern only the majority of the 63% of the Seniors who registered and their reported plans through July:

Employed: Men 37% - Women 24%; Teaching: Men 9% - Women 29%; Grad. Sch.: Men 10% - Women 6%; Military: Men 14% - Women 1%; Undecided: Men 30% - Women 40%.

What then might be said about 1965? The trend is definitely toward greater selectivity upon the part of the employer. In the weeks ahead, this writer will attempt to keep you informed as to some of these trends, as well as to talk about the opportunities available today to the qualified college graduate.

ANNOUNCEMENT: PLACEMENT REGISTRATION - Please note that Seniors in the Department of Nursing and the College of Technology will be registered by group meeting through special arrangement.

ANNOUNCEMENT: On Wednesday and Thursday, October 7 and 8, a Navy Officer Information Team will be on Campus opposite the Book Store, Waterman Building from 9:00 A.M. until 4:00 P.M. to discuss the opportunities available to college graduates as officers in the U.S. Navy. The Information Team of Lieutenants Junior Grade Ralph W. Bieber and John C. McGlincey will have information available on the various officer programs for both men and women. Students interested in fulfilling their military obligation as a Naval Officer are invited to discuss with the Information Team, the many officer programs available in the U.S. Navy.

conform to some extent - we need three glasses of milk a day and plenty of meat and vegetables. We need 6-8 hours of sleep a night. We need a roof over our heads and clothing for warmth. That's where conformity should end and be replaced by individuality. Must all meat be hamburgers and hot dogs? Must all roofs be over houses, not homes? Must all clothing consist of "cool" sweaters, button-down skirts and H.I.S. pants? Oh, let's not forget WEE JUNS. Did anyone dare to come to college without WE JUNS? May you be forgiven.

Trite, isn't it? I agree, I'm bored just writing about us. I'd like to write about exciting people, I know that there are kids on this campus who are dying to be unique. Their only trouble is that instead of changing the world, they die away and wish this living hell on the boob who walks around thinking he is God's gift to the world.

Well, now you know how I feel and have felt since I came here. I still love UVM, I'm wild about the kids; I think there's lots of potential here. It's a shame that most of the potential will never be fully realized. I was taught in Freshman English that everything I say must be backed up with specific references. This could get touchy after a while, but for now I will try to be somewhat general and vague.

The most obvious display of potential can be realized in your school paper. The CYNIC could be a top paper. Unfortunately, the students don't care. When there are only a few people doing a job which should be done by many, the result is a one-sided, monotonous waste. I'd like to see the CYNIC filled with stories about you, the students; this would necessitate a show of interest in fields that could be considered worthy of reporting. I'm not trying to instill pep into the school, although it needs it, as we all know. Rather, I'm trying to liven you, if that's possible. Get out of the Den and into the library. Don't sit around drinking coffee, smoking, and complaining - DO something! Stop playing cards - you could be deciding what to do when your four years of waste and dreaming are over. C'mon, kids - let's show ourselves and anyone else who wants to see - we've got what it takes. Any comments?

is no apparent reason for the decrease, and it remains to be seen of President Fey is totally responsible for this decrease. What can be seen, however, is that Vermont is in a whole. Mr. Donnelly has attempted to use all possible alumni grants and profits from ball games to make up for the deficit in the scholarship fund. This money will not be enough to put our program back on its feet. As I see it, Vermont has one last resort to make the Yankee Conference's financial aid plan a reality in the immediate future.

It is interesting to note that both Goldwater and Johnson had a certain number of hecklers to cope with, although the contingent of Johnson supporters at the Goldwater rally was considerably stronger in number than was the party of Goldwater fans at the airport on Monday. The candidates' reaction to these hecklers was as different as the method of delivery they chose for their respective speeches. Goldwater effectively answered them, while the President either did not actually hear or chose not to hear his airport critics. On the other hand, while Goldwater remained more aloof, giving the impression of a college professor transplanted to a Junior High School classroom, Johnson used physical contact to best advantage, shaking hands with as many people as possible. At the same time his speech was a classic example of audience participation as he asked one question after another designed to evoke an enthusiastic affirmative response from his listeners. He seems to have adopted this approach from his running mate. Unfortunately, there became bitterly apparent at both rallies an element of mutual contempt among the supporters of each camp. A UVM girl holding a Johnson poster at Memorial Auditorium on Friday was spit upon, while another girl had pieces of crumpled paper thrown in her face. Similarly, Goldwater fans were pushed and rocks were thrown at their signs during the President's speech on Monday.

TOPESS GOLDWATER?

On the more serious side, I was privileged to obtain a one-question interview with Mr. Goldwater on Friday. I asked him if he had seen the cartoon in a recent issue of The Realist which pictured him wearing a topless bathing suit and which had as its caption, "Extremism in the name of liberty is no vice." He said he didn't think he had seen that one. My efforts to gain access to Mr. Johnson were not so well rewarded. I was, however, flattered to learn that my name had not been submitted to the press office early enough for clearance with the Secret Service. After all, Mr. Johnson is the President of the United States and not just some little senator. I've always fancied myself something of a security risk, anyway.

In conclusion I would just like to say that the various titles of this article need not be taken seriously. They are the products of a warped sense of humor and are just more on the order of the "mental masturbation" for which this paper has become notorious in recent years, and for which my analyst will, no doubt, never forgive me.

* I heard this expression some place, so if you don't like it, don't blame me.

In This Corner: Our Advisor

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The CYNIC is pleased to welcome Mr. Lawrence E. Van Benhuysen, the University's Director of Public Relations, to its staff as its advisor. A graduate of Vermont in 1951, as an undergraduate he wrote a CYNIC column called "Pencil and Poison," and served as editor of the literary magazine which was then called "Windfall." As a student, he also worked for The Burlington Daily and Vermont Sunday News, and joined their staffs following graduation, serving as a reporter and page one editor. He was appointed to the University's Public Relations Office staff as an assistant in 1953, and was named director in 1955. He is married to the former Ruth B. Moore. The parents of sons, 12 and eight, and a daughter, six, they make their home in South Burlington.

The academic year which was concluded last June was not an altogether happy one for The CYNIC or for those who count The CYNIC their own, for better or for worse.

This is not an altogether new or unique experience for The CYNIC, or for undergraduate newspapers generally.

In the first place, audiences for college newspapers are above average. In the second, major segments of their audiences are not infrequently on opposite sides of subjects college newspapers are likely to find fascinating.

In the third place, student newspapers in colleges worthy of academic freedom enjoy all the privileges of freedom of the press even though their staffs are seldom asked or required to present professional credentials. In the last analysis, there is a tidy difference between a reporter whose livelihood can be cut off if he does not measure up to or abide by the standards imposed by his editors and publishers, and one whose freedom of the press is likely to be denied only in cases of irresponsibility so flagrant as to make the need for disciplinary action by college or university officials so obvious it becomes mandatory. If one considers how easy it is for college newspapers to attract coast-to-coast coverage on the pages of their professional counterparts simply by claiming they are being censored, one should understand why most reasonably intelligent college administrations will give student editors considerable latitude before hauling them on the carpet on grounds of irresponsibility.

Surely the college or university community does have a right to expect its newspaper to be responsible; the more so precisely because the worthy education institution gives truly more literal freedom than is enjoyed by most professional journalists, and almost wholly without strings attached.

In this atmosphere of freedom, then, the student newspaper staff deserves and requires the interested and critical attention of all its constituents - student, faculty, staff, alumni, parent, friend and foe alike. Its letters column offer an opportunity for the expression of dissent as well as agreement, criticism as well as praise, and the total effect of a lively exchange of such comment can be to keep student editors alert to the sensitive and demanding nature of their responsibility.

THE ROLE OF ADVISOR

The role of the advisor to the student newspaper is one often misunderstood by those who fear for freedom of the press as consistently as it is by those who fear this freedom too easily subverted to license.

Therefore, I think it well that CYNIC readers share the understanding which exists between this advisor and the student editors he seeks to serve. First, in agreeing to become advisor, I asked that the staff agree to at least two meetings each week to plan, makeup and evaluate each issue; and to consider changes in The CYNIC constitution, including one which would make staff membership open only to students who have satisfactorily completed or been excused from freshman English; and I have asked that the editor of her duly appointed representative read all copy before it appears in The CYNIC.

I should like to state as emphatically for CYNIC readers as I have for The CYNIC staff that I neither seek nor accept the role of censor. Certainly I will read any or all copy which the editor or her representative may wish me to read, and give advice regarding its inclusion, inclusion with editing, or exclusion; but final judgment regarding such copy must rest with the student editor.

This seems as good a time as any to say that The CYNIC has begun this new year with a new editor, Joan Klonosky, a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences, from Rockville Center, N.Y. I think she's gotten The CYNIC off to a promising start.

A Poetic Thought

Frame's prisoner yells,
Muffled yells,
Sitting upon tombstones
In cemeteries in the dark
Trees shadow imitations back there
Effigies of the mind's inferno
He, too, escaped, not by sea but followed field
His shoddy sirenes of the isle
Singing, dancing noisemakers
All-night-lights - all-night-shows
Now crickets call
As I read epitaphs in the moonlight
My eyes see - Dear Patience - A Treasure lost - A treasure gained Carved in wizened stone time makes spires
And pagan images surround
With raised arms to nature's jeweled sky Envisioned in their facets are a thousand Shangri-la's
Wilful winds blow sweet hell's call
Atop mountains?

Greek Week In Review: A Ball

September 25 marked the annual Greek Concert which inaugurates the festivities for Greek Week. This year's attraction was the Four Freshmen, a well seasoned troupe of professional singers who were also proficient instrumentalists.

Their program was a well varied group of songs in the jazz idiom. They opened the performance with a fast arrangement of "Route 66" and then slowed down with "In This Whole Wide World". The appreciative audience was well attuned to the high jinks between numbers, and the novelty number, "Kiddies Jazz", was an amusing change of pace. "The Blues in the Night" and "Poinciana", always welcome additions to any program of this type, were well received.

After hearing so many folk-singers, it was refreshing, at least to this listener, to hear songs in a different style.

French Cultural Center Opens

By Lois Millen

The French Cultural Center originated by Dr. Daggett is under the direction of Mrs. Renne Swift, who was born in France and has studied in France, England, and America. The purpose of the French Cultural Center is to serve the Franco-American culture by the use of literature, art, and music. In Redstone Hall, Mrs. Swift conducts meetings with interested students on Monday, 4-8; Tuesday, 6:30-8; Wednesday, 4-8; Thursday, 4-8. Her office is decorated with posters, paintings, and maps depicting French culture. In addition, Mrs. Swift has a large library including French plays, novels, magazines, and reference books. During this semester, Mrs. Swift has an exhibit planned, concerning the life, the work, and the influence of Victor Hugo to be set up in Bailey Library. Also, two films, "Loie Valley" and "Chateaux", about the people and the life in Paris will be shown during the coming weeks.

An integral part of the F.C.C. is the language table which meets every Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 5 o'clock in Simpson Dining Hall. The language table gives the student the opportunity to converse freely in French.

Candidates

At this point any tactical similarity between the President's approach and that of his adversary ended. For here Mr. Johnson began directing his statements specifically at Vermonters, as opposed to Senator Goldwater's appeal to the general citizen and voter. He said that Vermont has always been a part of the vanguard of national progress and that "the hills and valleys of Vermont have contributed so much to the leadership of the country."

President Johnson made an implied reference to the Goldwater camp as "those who have gotten out of step and have refused to march at all." He spoke briefly of his "war on poverty," saying, "We are going to make taxpayers out of tax eaters by creating more jobs."

The Democratic candidate concluded, again on a more personal level, by saying, "If I were in your place I'd vote for O'Shea; I'd vote for Fayette and I'd vote for Hoff. And, not to get too personal, I'll tell you someone else I'd vote for." This last statement was received very enthusiastically. Mr. Johnson closed his personal appeal by saying, "If you decide that your future and your children's future will best be served by a change, there'll be no hard feelings. Then I'll have more time to spend in the state of Vermont."

Lane Series Presents Two Plays

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

by Betty Miller

The highly controversial Broadway play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," by Edward Albee, will be performed on October 6 at 8:00 as the first of the Lane Series Red Concerts.

Directed by Allan Schneider, this play is being presented by its original Broadway producers, Richard Barr and Clinton Wilder, in association with Sometimes, Inc. Starring in the play are Vicki Cummings and Kendall Clark with Bryarly Lee and Donald Briscoe.

Highly acclaimed by the critics as one of the most brilliant and exciting plays in many seasons, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," catapulted its young author, Edward Albee, into the forefront of contemporary American dramatists. Subsequently, the play during its two year run on Broadway received numerous honors, among them the New York Drama Critics' Award, the Annual ANTA Award, the Foreign Press Award, the Variety Poll and others.

Since its premiere on Broadway two years ago, the play has been translated into many languages and produced in several countries throughout the world including South Africa, Japan, Mexico, Chile, Israel, Holland, Uruguay, Italy, Sweden, Germany, and Belgium.

The action of the play takes place in a small college town and involves two faculty members and their wives who come to grips with heartbreak and frustration. While it has many scenes of high emotion and dramatic excitement, it also has humor and moments of laughter.

Vicki Cummings, the actress who plays the lead role of Martha, began her theatrical career as a lyric soprano and played romantic interest in a long series of successful musical comedies. She has appeared in several plays by Noel Coward, a few being "Blithe Spirit," "Once More with Feeling," and "Born Yesterday." Miss Cummings' most recent stage appearance was in Tennessee Williams' "Night of the Iguana." In addition to the theatre, she has played more than two hundred television roles and has made two motion pictures.

The male lead of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," Kendall Clark, first appeared on stage in support of Eva La Galienne in "L'Aiglon" and "Camille." He has had major theatrical roles in "The Taming of the Shrew," Bernard Shaw's, "St. Joan," and Shakespeare's, "Richard III."

This is his second season with "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," having toured last year in the same role. Mr. Clark is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin where he majored in English.

The Lane Series Committee takes great pride in featuring these two fine performers in Edward Albee's great play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

Mixes And Matches

Well, the week for Greeks is regrettably over; this weekend the football team will be in the spotlight along with parties which somehow always manage to crown weekends, no matter whose.

Are the rest of you girls finding living in the dorms as gratifying an experience as I? If so, just smile and say "cheese" or "decon" as the spirit moves you.

Welcome back, Alums, for the Homecoming Weekend. Two years ago, it snowed and hailed, last year we wore bermudas to the game - this year who knows? Alpha Epsilon Phi annual car wash was a sparkling (clean) success.

Congratulations to AGR's Steve Abbott and Joan Adams on their marriage and Walden Rooney on his marriage to Darla Foote.

Also, AGR welcomes eight new brothers and eight pledges.

Best wishes to Joan Jackson, of KAT, on her pinning by Tom Chapman, Sigma Pi of William and Mary. Also to Mary Ann Modarelli, of Theta on her pinning by Jim Stone, Delta Sigma Phi, of Waynesburg College.

Two Thetas were married over the summer, Carole Truitt, '64 to John Knobel, USN, and Fran Leitner, '64 to Charlie, '64, Phi Delta Theta.

The Alpha Chis have been busy socially. Karen Howe was pinned to Dick Davis of Phi Delta, Peggy Luce became engaged to Bill Hesbitt of Tufts Dental School, Andrea Beebe and Richard Smith serving in the U.S.N. were engaged, Polly Demick was engaged to Arlan Moran of Burlington, Sherry Morrill and Donald DeVries of Lambda Iota were pinned and Karen Ellingson was engaged to Harry Truehart, III of Harvard College. Congratulations, girls!

The Alpha Chis also redecorated their already lovely house and everyone is very pleased with the results.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of all non-resident students, regardless of class who are interested in running for one of S.A. Senate Member-at-Large positions on Oct. 4, 1964 at 1:15 in the Marsh Lounge Billings to discuss election policies.

All persons who are interested in running for one of the 3 member-at-large positions are asked to bring a petition with the signatures of 10 non-resident UVM students, and four 3 x 5 cards listing qualifications.

SFS will be present to take pictures of those running so interested candidates should dress to have pictures taken.

This is a mandatory meeting and if unable to attend, send a representative or call R. Lamphie, Ext. 343 or 2-7948.

"Oliver!" On Thursday Night

by Betty Miller

The Lane Series is proud to present as its second Blue Concert the smash Broadway musical comedy, "Oliver!" Appearing on Thursday evening, Oct. 8, at 8:30, "Oliver!" will be shown in Memorial Auditorium to a capacity audience of which fifty percent of the ticket holders are college students -- an achievement unprecedented in ten years of Lane Series history. New York producers Henry Guettel and Arthur Cantor will bring this rousing new musical hit to Burlington exactly as it is still being presented on Broadway.

One of the most memorable testimonials to a show in the history of opening nights on Broadway occurred the night the new musical comedy, "Oliver!" made its bow. The audience was so spellbound by the evening's entertainment they witnessed, that they kept sitting and applauding. Numerous curtain calls were not enough. Finally the curtain was kept up and the cast reprised a couple of the catchy songs with the audience joining in with singing and hand-clapping. After a while, Britain's Lionel Bart, author of the book, music and lyrics being presented on Broadway for the first time, came out of the wings and said: "You're smashers, all of you! Come again." That seemed to satisfy the audience, and only then did they get up and leave.

The newspaper fraternity, critics and syndicated columnists alike, tossed their hats in the air in appraising "Oliver!" Bob Sylvester of the N.Y. Daily News said "It ranks with 'My Fair Lady'"; Richard Watts of the N.Y. Post said, "Oliver!" is an exciting and stunningly beautiful musical"; the New York Herald-Tribune calls "Oliver!" "A real hit -- for the enjoyment of youngsters and grownups alike"; "A rousing and beguiling musical," said the United Press, "My Fair Lady", "South Pacific" and "Oklahoma", all rolled into one."

The musical is based on Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," the little orphan boy who finds a wealthy grandfather after getting involved with Fagin, that professor of thievery, and thug Bill Sikes and his moll, Nancy.

Several hit songs from "Oliver!" have swept the country, including the beautiful torch ballad, "As Long As He Needs Me," the rousing "Oom Pah Pah," the plaintive "Where Is Love?" the cheering "Consider Yourself" and the parody on polite society, "I'd Do Anything."

The stars of "Oliver!", Jules Munshin, Joan Eastman, and Christopher Spooner in the role of Oliver, join with a chorus of fourteen little boys, a full orchestra, scenery and costumes to make this musical spectacular a sure hit with the Burlington audience.

WSGA Aims For Improvements

WSGA Council has been quite busy this fall. In addition to our traditional program of workshops for House Presidents, new ideas and aims have been instituted. Our greatest aim is to better campus-wide communications. Commensurate with this is the continuation of the Council Rep system. Each House President has a Council officer to whom she can go to for advice and assistance. A new program this year has assigned each dormitory and sorority Head Resident a Council Rep also. At a Tea held Sept. 24, the Head Residents met with their Reps and were reacquainted with WSGA policies. It is our expressed hope that through a greater knowledge of each other's activities and problems, we can have a better-integrated system.

The Spring and Fall House Presidents' Workshops come under the communications heading also. Here the new House Presidents were acquainted with Administrative, WSGA and University policies and regulations. The House Committee members, when elected, will be attending meetings to acquaint them with their duties. And this year a rotation system for House Committees has been instituted. Each week, one member will attend the Tuesday evening WSGA Council Meeting.

This year the Big-Little Sister Program was re-organized. Instead of the traditional sing, there was a picnic which all Freshmen women and their big sisters attended. Here WSGA Council was introduced, and Judy Godbout, Chief Justice, spoke on Pink Cards. Then the House Presidents presented a skit on the rules and their implications.

By distributing interest blanks to all women students, WSGA Council hopes to better-integrate the women with Council activities. New committees are being formed to work on things such as Career Days. On this same blank, the students can indicate their interest in working on Rules Evaluation Committee, in holding Council office, or simply making comments on any WSGA policies.

Only by discovering the interests and suggestions of the women students, administration, and head residents can WSGA Council be a truly representative and effective body. This is the main reason for establishing communications.

Graduate Record Examinations

The Graduate Record Examinations, required of applicants for admission to many American graduate schools, will be conducted at examination centers throughout the United States on November 21. Educational Testing Service, which annually administers the test, also set these four administration dates for 1965: January 16, March 6, April 24, and July 10.

In the past year more than 80,000 candidates took Graduate Record Examinations in the National Program for Graduate School Selection.

Educational Testing Service advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take and on which date. Applicants for graduate school fellowships are often asked to take the designated examinations in the fall test administration.

The GRE tests offered in these nationwide programs include a test of general scholastic ability as well as advance level tests of achievement in eighteen different major fields of study. Offered for the first time this fall will be an Advanced Business Test, designed for candidates who have pursued a major in business at the undergraduate level. According to ETS, candidates are permitted to take both the Aptitude Test and one Advanced Test on any of the nationwide testing dates.

A Bulletin of Information for candidates, containing a test registration form and providing details of registration and administration as well as sample questions, may be obtained from college advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, Box 955, Princeton, New Jersey 08540 or 1947 Center Street, Berkeley, California 94704. A completed test registration form must reach the ETS office at least fifteen days before the date of the administration for which the candidate is applying.

UVM students may obtain registration forms in the Testing Office, Room 135, Waterman.

Home Ec Picnic

On Thursday, September 24th, the UVM Chapter of the American Home Economics Association sponsored a picnic for all freshmen in Home Economics and their big sisters. Those 125 persons who attended enjoyed, in addition to their picnic supper, entertainment by Guri Hanson and Karen Ellingson, "The —", of Alpha Chi Omega. A brief fashion show followed the singing and gave freshmen some idea of what can be made in the clothing department. At the close of the picnic all were invited to attend a meeting of the Home Economics Club, Thursday, October 1st, at 7:00 P.M. in the Vermont Room at the Home Economics Building. The topic of the meeting will be "Summer Experiences in Home Economics."

17 Enrolled In Honors Program

by Judy Beeber

The Special Honors program which has been in existence for the past five years is operating in full swing this term. All students who have an over-all average of 85 or better are qualified to participate. They are required to be in the College of Arts and Sciences or in the College of Education. This program, which is offered in the fields of Zoology, English, History, Classics, Political Science, Math and Physics enables the student to broaden his knowledge of a subject by working on an honors paper with the assistance of a professor from the department. The paper which the student submits consists of original research done over the semester. The paper is then examined by the Special Honors Committee and finally an oral exam is given to the student based on its contents.

Professor Brady Gilleland of the Classics department is chairman of the Special Honors Committee and working under him are: Professor Charles Bond of the Zoology department, Professor Jeremy Felt of the History department, and Professor Orth of the English department. Professor Gilleland commented that this type of work is especially beneficial for prospective graduate students, since both scholarships and fellowships may be obtained on the basis of one's merit. Students may also receive extra credit for participating in this program.

In the past years honor students have done papers on various topics. Last year a pupil deciphered a Latin manuscript which previously had never been touched. Other topics which have been written on are: "Ultrasonic Technique for Cell Study" (Physics); "Great Awakening in New England" (History); "Puerto Rico-Statehood, Commonwealth or Dependence?" (Political Science).

This term there are seventeen students enrolled in the Special Honors program. All students who are interested in a specialized field are urged to join this program, since much profitable knowledge can be derived. Professor Gilleland is confident that this year's program will be as successful as it has been in the past.

National Teacher Exams Scheduled

College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examinations on four different test dates each year instead of one, Educational Testing Service announced today.

New dates set for the testing of prospective teachers are: December 12, 1964; and March 20, July 17, and October 2, 1965. The tests will be given at more than 550 locations in the 50 states, ETS said.

Scores on the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts for employment of new teachers and by several States for certification or licensing of teachers. Some colleges require all seniors preparing to teach to take the examinations.

Lists of school systems which use the examination results are distributed to colleges by ETS, a nonprofit, educational organization which prepares and administers the examinations.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations, which measure the professional and general preparation of teachers, and one of 13 Teaching Area Examinations (formerly called Optional Examinations) which measure mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on which dates they should be taken.

A Bulletin of Information containing registration forms, lists of test centers, and information about the examinations may be obtained from college placement officers, school personnel departments, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

BCAM Seeks Support

A meeting of the recently organized Burlington Committee to Aid Mississippi will be held on Monday, October 5, at 4:15 P.M. in the Marsh Lounge, Billings Center. The group's leaders have urged that "all students interested in, and in sympathy with the Mississippi Summer Project and the cause of civil rights attend."

The Mississippi Summer Project "has attempted to assist Negro citizens of Mississippi who have been denied a basic constitutional right, that of the ballot." One of the group's organizers emphasized that "Because this Project is organized, staffed and maintained primarily by college students, many of whom are from the North, the leaders of the Burlington Committee to Aid Mississippi feel that there must be students at UVM who believe in the moral obligation to help rectify the appalling situation which exists in the state of Mississippi. The mere mention of the names Schwerner, Chaney and Goodman should be sufficient to remind every student of this obligation."

The Committee has already secured support from many community and religious leaders in the Burlington area as well as a significant segment of the UVM faculty. A "comprehensive plan of action" has been drawn up, and will be presented to those who attend the meeting.

It is hoped that all students who wish to "commit themselves to the cause of political and social justice for all Americans" will attend. The meeting will be held on Monday, October 5, at 4:15 P.M. in the Marsh Lounge, Billings Center.

Cats Tangle With Bears

UVM OVER TECH 41-6

by Ira Kotler

Coach Bob Clifford enjoyed what may be termed an enjoyable afternoon last Saturday, Sept. 26, as the Vermont Catamounts coasted to a 41-6 victory over Worcester Tech. UVM led Worcester throughout the game, thus enabling Coach Clifford to make substitutions early in the contest.

Although the score, 41-6, is somewhat one-sided, however, Vermont far from ran away with the game. The Cats took until 2:40 were remaining on the clock in the first period before they could achieve their first touch-down. Frank Foerster and Ken Andrade led the spirited drive from the Worcester 44 yardline. Richie Reynolds picked up the slack on the 14 where he went to the seven in two tries. Scott Fitz, the UVM quarterback, ran the ball around left end on the next play for the first score of the afternoon. Ken Andrade then kicked the first of his four conversions, making the score 7-0.

The second period was less than two minutes old when the cats scored again. A blocked Worcester punt on their own 25 yard line set up the score. Quarterback Jim Brennan handed the pigskin off to Frank Foerster who proceeded to slant off tackle for thirteen yards and another Vermont T.D.

The Catamounts tallied one more time in the first half, with precisely 11:35 showing on the scoreboard. We took over the ball from Worcester on downs, on their own 29. Dean Kent, on the third play from scrimmage, danced his way nicely for 18 yards and the touchdown. The scoring play was a fake left, run right, which was aided by excellent blocks from the tight ends. Andrades place-kick made it twenty to zip.

Worcester played its best ball of the day for the rest of the period. Driving to the Vermont six, Tech. lost the ball on a neat

At the 10:47 mark, Charlie Foster returned a Worcester punt 40 yards on an exceptional run to make it 27-6, Vermont on top, after Andrade's conversion. Kent Foerster, and Andrade teamed up to bring the ball to the one, where Foerster ran it over.

Sophomore Quarterback Bob Price worked for the Cats during the closing four minutes. Price expertly directed a 42 yard drive, as he captained the third squad. It took just five plays and was concluded when Mike Burke took the ball into the end-zone on a seven yard slant off tackle.

Looking back on the game and its highlights, several points remain in my mind. Vermont was sharp in all periods except for the third. Yet, even this brilliance was decreased greatly because of the continuous substitution. Several ball players were outstanding in the contest and they deserve mentioning. On the third team line we have Joe Soldano, Pete Ambrose, Bill Dorozenski, and Harvey Bazarian, who held the Tech. men for four plays on the Cat's seven yard line. Mike Burke and Ed Kiniry, the flanker back, both played well. Mike scored the game's final touchdown.

Four Quarterbacks were used by Coach Clifford in last Saturday's contest. Bob Price and Jim Brennan appeared to be the interception by Myles P.S.D. Leeds. Two plays later Worcester again had possession of the ball as they recovered a fumble. John Korzich, the opposing quarterback, then threw a bullet-like four yard pass to flanker back Pat Moran, giving Worcester its only score of the afternoon.

The third period was a stalemate with neither team threatening. The Cats did not look impressive at all in the third quarter, but in the final fifteen minutes, Vermont's superior manpower and depth began to tell, sharpest, with Brennan playing possibly the best game of his career. George Olze, Rusty Brink, and Fred Boese bolstered the line throughout the game. Dave Busick, Keith Keiterling, Jack Schweberger, and all the ends blocked well. Dean Kent appeared to be fully recovered from his back injury as he ran for a score and blocked well. Probably, the most enlightening factor in the game was the fact that the UVM defense was like a brick wall. The defensive team only allowed Worcester 54 yards rushing and only 7 of 23 completed passes. The Vermont victory was not only due to the first unit - it was a true team victory.

This weekend the Catamounts take on the University of Maine in the Homecoming game at Centennial Field. Coach Clifford expects a close, tough contest for this first 1964 Yankee Conference game. I hope to see everyone there, cheering for the green and gold this Saturday.

Sportitorials

The Yankee Conference was founded sixteen years ago in 1948, to bring together six small New England state universities for athletic competition. However, it has been rumored for the past few seasons that the Yankee Conference might abruptly disband, due to the increase in size of some of the schools. It appears that the money allocated for financial aid to athletes in these colleges is totally out of proportion. In an attempt to salvage our fine conference, a meeting was called during the summer months, to discuss the league's problems.

At the meeting in Amherst, Massachusetts, the Presidents of the six universities discussed the problems of financial aid to athletes. The following announcement was released by Dr. Francis H. Horn, President of the University of Rhode Island, concerning the meeting in June:

"They are deeply concerned about finding a formula for limiting the amount of financial aid available to athletes that will be acceptable to all six universities with their diversity as to enrollment, tuition rates, and emphasis on different sports in Yankee Conference competition. The Presidents considered the matter most recently at a special meeting held last month, but have not yet reached agreement on all aspects of the problem. The subject will again be a major item on the agenda for their next meeting."

When the above statement is rephrased in terms which can be understood by the student, it boils down to this: the Yankee Conference is in dire need of a standardization for financial aid. This can be accomplished in two ways: either regulating monetary scholarships or placing a ceiling on the maximum number of players which can be imported by each school. For example, let us say that the Yankee Conference decides to permit each member university a maximum of twenty athletes per year. Each university itself must appropriate the cost for the twenty scholarships. The total value of the aid program will be different in each school, but at least the league will be more evenly matched. With all that has been said, there is still one problem. The bill has been tabled until a future meeting. Thus, each school is still on its own, designating its own funds according to its own budget.

Here at Vermont we find the school slipping slowly behind the field in the major sports. This is not because schools like the Universities of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, or Connecticut have larger athletic scholarship programs than UVM. This is completely false, as this university allocates more money for athletic aid than any other university concerned. The problem is quite simple. The tuition at Vermont for out-of-state residents is $1500 per year. The fee is approximately two or three times the tuition costs of other Yankee Conference schools. Massachusetts or Connecticut for example, have the capability of uprooting many more athletes than UVM each year, on a substantially smaller budget. It appears to me that the university can turn in only two directions to find a solution. One is to increase the financial aid budget in the university itself. The other is for the President to fight wholeheartedly for a uniform aid program for all the universities in the Yankee Conference.

J. Edward Donnelly, Director of Athletics at UVM, suffered a large setback this summer when it was disclosed that President Fey cut the financial aid budget by more than one third. There Soccer...

Not Football

By T. Rowen

Football has always stolen the spotlight from soccer. However, there does not appear to be any reason for this. Soccer is definitely as tough a game as is played. By this I am not trying to imply that soccer is rougher than football from a standpoint of violent physical contact. However, soccer is much rougher on the athlete from the standpoint of physical endurance. A half back in soccer runs between 2 and 4 miles per game. Each player on a soccer team must learn to overcome his fears of heading the ball and must constantly come face to face with his opponent with only two shin guards to protect him. A soccer game takes 88 minutes to complete, and it is 22 minutes longer than a football game.

Last year Coach Greig instituted an informal program of soccer, which consisted of five scrimmages. Greig led expertly Vermont's soccer team to an impressive 5-0 record. This is soccer's maiden year as an intercollegiate sport at UVM. Coach Greig feels that our team is in "good physical condition. However, they lack game experience and depth." Last week Vermont was defeated by Middlebury 4-1. Yet, this loss was pretty much expected because Middlebury is perennially strong and is expected to be one of the best in New England. Coach Greig feels that the defensive team performed a highly creditable job.

Coach Greig hopes that this year, UVM's soccer team will achieve the valuable experience which is essential for a winning season. It appears as if the soccer team will do very well this year in the state championships. Coach Bob Stone is presently working with twenty-five fine freshmen who may in time lead UVM to No. 1 position in the Yankee Conference. Our future looks good, and the only other essential ingredient is school support.

Cross Country Opens Oct. 7

The University of Vermont Cross Country team will open its season at home on Oct. 7 against R.P.I.

Archie Post, who begins his 36th year as UVM track and cross country coach, believes that the team should better last year's record of 1-3.

All home meets will be run on the 4.5 mile course which starts and finishes on the new track behind the Gardner-Collins Cage.

Back with Coach Post this year are four lettermen from last year's squad led by Captain Walt Stowell, Rich Ashton, Bill Mulhern, and Frank Pitaniello.

This year's team includes: Capt. Walt Stowell '66 Townshend, Rich Ashton '65, Lyndon Center, Vin DeCesaris '65, Johnston, R.D., Rich Dombal '67, Garfield, N.J., Doug Kibbee '67, Saxtons River, Bob Brooks '66, Trumbull, Conn., Johnny G. Morse '67, Bath, Me., Bill Mulhern '65, Cedar Grove, N.J., Frank Pitaniello '66, Rutland, Sid Young '67, Lyndonville.

The schedule: Oct. 7, R.P.I.; 10, Union '14, at Plattsburgh State; 17, Maine '24, at Trinity; 31, Yankee Conference at Amherst, Mass.; Nov. 6, at Bowdoin; and 9, New England at Boston.

The frosh open their season at home, Oct. 3, against Bellows Falls and Waterbury High Schools.

Lapointe Coaches Fall Baseball

by Gordon Josephson

Faced this spring with a rough 16 game schedule in 19 days, baseball coach Ralph Lapointe has initiated an informal instructional workout for most returning lettermen and promising sophomores. "Due to the tightness of our schedule and the shortness of our academic year," remarked coach Lapointe, "I feel that the only way these boys will be able to get proper training and instruction will be this fall."

Of primary interest to the coach are his pitchers and catchers. Such returning pitchers as Bill Christy, Vermont's ace in the bull pen last year, and Carl Martin, a superb starter for the Catamounts, are gaining experience and know-how which will be invaluable in the spring. Charlie Foster, another hill specialist for the Cats, is not working out this fall due to his football obligation.

This fall instruction also affords Mr. Lapointe an opportunity to take a first hand look at what he calls his "very promising sophomores." Such first year varsity men as catcher Rich Aldrich and shortstop John "Bunky" Morris show excellent potential. On the hill, Bruce Bovenizer, Tim Twomey, Len Shifflott and John McCord, in an interview with this reporter, Coach Lapointe stated that these sophomore pitchers, in combination with the veteran hurlers, have provided Vermont with the finest assembly of pitching talent the coach has seen since coming to Vermont. "Although these boys will provide us with tremendous depth during our tight schedule in the Spring, the team to beat seems to be Maine (last year's Yankee Conference champs) and much of our strength will depend on our sophomore talent."

Once again, as last year, the team's problem seems to be hitting. Coach Lapointe seemed to express regret that the pitchers who normally start working out in February seem to get into shape so much sooner than the hitters. "Much of our problem", expressed the coach, "is the fact that our hitters don't really start coming around until the end of the season."

Also practicing this fall in an effort to keep the edge on the fine seasons they had last year, as well as picking up several valuable pointers from their coach, former big leaguer Ralph Lapointe, are outfielders Steve Morse, Pete McDonald and Wayne Van Ham. There are no formalized scrimmages or games this fall, but Coach Lapointe expressed the hope that next year he would be able to organize several games with other schools who are participating in the same type of fall baseball program as Vermont.

Philharmonic Makes First U.S. Appearance

by Betty Miller

The Japan Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, making its first appearance in the United States will be the guest of the Red Lane Series Concerts on Monday evening, Oct. 12, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

This group of 83 instrumentalists will be conducted by Akeo Watanabe, the orchestra's Musical Director. The soloist will be the outstanding young Japanese violinist, Toshiya Eto.

The Japan Philharmonic is one of Tokyo's first orchestra founded in 1956 by Akeo Watanabe with the encouragement of the director of the Nihon Cultural Broadcasting System, Shigeo Mizuno, the orchestra has made great strides during its eight years of existence.

The number of first performances presented by the orchestra is already quite remarkable. In addition to its commission program for works for Japanese composers, the Japan Philharmonic has become world-famous for its interpretations of classical and contemporary works by composers beyond its borders.

In Tokyo, the Orchestra makes regular weekly appearances both on radio and television. Scores of famous conductors and soloists have appeared with the Japan Philharmonic -- Aaron Copland, Igor Markevitch, Rudolf Serkin, Alfredo Campoli, to name a few.

The members of the Orchestra, all of the highest rank, are carefully selected and include musicians from all over the world. Its founder, conductor, and musical director, Akeo Watanabe, is considered one of Japan's most prominent musicians.

Watanabe attended the Tokyo School of Music where he majored in violin under Koko Ando and Alexander Maghilevski. After completing the undergraduate course with honors and winning the Koda Prize, he entered the school's graduate program.

In 1942 Watanabe began his activities as a chamber music performer and formed the Tokyo Chamber Music Society. At the conclusion of the war in 1945 he made his professional conducting debut as one of the three directors of the Tokyo City Symphony Orchestra. Two years later he was appointed permanent director of the orchestra.

In 1949 the conductor joined the faculty of the Tokyo University of Arts. During the initial stages of his tenure as conductor and teacher, Watanabe travelled to the United States and for two years studied advanced conducting under Jean Morel at the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

In cooperation with the Nihon Cultural Broadcasting System, in 1956, Watanabe formed the Japan Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. As founder of this orchestra, Watanabe assumed the leadership from the day of its coming into existence. It reflects much credit on the superior qualities of the conductor that he succeeded in the short period of eight years to raise the standard and along with it the reputation it now holds.

ETO: VIOLIN SOLOIST

Watanabe's program will include the violin soloist, Toshiya Eto. Eto acquired his early violin training by Shinichi Suzuki, who had evolved a unique method for training children too young to read music, and under his tutelage, the gifted boy soon became a skillful performer. He continued his musical studies at several academies in Japan, and then traveled to America to become a pupil of Efrem Zimbalist at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Eto has already appeared with many of America's leading symphonic ensembles.

Saturday evening, Toshiya Eto will be soloist with the Japan Philharmonic in the playing of Mendelssohn's, "Violin Concerto in E minor." Other features of the program will include William Schuman's, "American Festival Overture," Toshiro Mayuzumi's "Essay for Strings," and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major." At that time, the Japan Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra will prove to an American audience that they are one of the world's outstanding orchestral organizations today.

Board Approves Budget: No Tuition Increase Seen Within Next Two Years

University of Vermont Trustees today approved a budget based on asking the 1965 Legislature for a 1965-66 appropriation of $4,688,000, or 27.7 percent of the University's total resources.

Acting President Lyman S. Rowell said the increase being asked from the State for the first year of the biennium is $413,000 more than the current year. The biennial budget also projects an increase of $678,000 in the amount asked of the State for the second year of the biennium over the amount asked in the first year.

The 27.7 share being asked of the State is the single largest income resource in the University's budget, and Rowell noted that this has been the case since 1955 when the Legislature enacted charter changes "clearly establishing UVM as a state university."

He said the budget was also based on anticipated income of $4,608,000 or 27.2 percent from federal funds; and $4,217,000 or 24.9 percent from tuition and fees.

The budget does not contemplate an increase in tuition in the coming biennium, Rowell said, adding that the University had increased tuition effective this fall. "We are concerned," he said, "not only with holding the line on tuition as long as we can, but in finding new resources to help us assist the growing numbers of students who find college costs escaping their ability to finance four or more years of higher education."

Rowell said the budget had been prepared with a view to affecting "any and all possible savings consistent with permitting the institution to move forward with education, service and research programs oriented to quality."

He said the total 1965-66 budget of $16,953,000 reflects an increase of 8.4 percent over the current year which may be attributed to the increases in normal operating costs and salary increases to remain competitive with other institutions of higher education.

He said the budget is also based on the University's expectations that total enrollment will increase on the average of 100 students each year for the next two years, "in spite of our efforts to hold enrollment at its current level of about 4100."

He said "we shall continue to admit every qualified Vermont applicant, and still have room for well qualified nonresidents." He said, however, that "increasing enrollment pressures make it more and more difficult to predict total enrollments. In each of the past several years we have enrolled about 100 more students each fall than we expected. This coming biennium," he said, "we are building that extra 100 into our budget estimates."

BCAM Holds Initial Meeting

The first campus-wide meeting of the Burlington Committee to Aid Mississippi was held on Monday, October 5, at 4:15 P.M. About 75 students attended, in addition to the ten initial student members. At least thirty-one professors at UVM and nine religious leaders are also on the committee.

The plan of the new civil rights group has four main phases. There will be a faculty collection drive, a community collection drive, a business area drive, and a book drive here on campus. The last will probably come at the end of the semester, when students will be wanting to discard some of their books. The program right now is intended to last for only one semester. However, if it is successful, it will probably continue for the rest of the academic year.

The Burlington Committee For Mississippi is working in conjunction with the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO). Anything it collects will be sent to either Jackson, Mississippi, or Atlanta, Georgia, and will then be taken to McComb, Mississippi, the scene of recent bombings and murders, by COFO workers.

Letters are being sent to people in the Burlington area, besides those on the staff of the university. It says, in part:

"... Money is urgently needed to rebuild the destroyed churches, which are centers for social, educational, and political work and to install protective devices, such as two-way radios in the vote registration cars, so that there will not be another re-enactment of this summer's tragedy..."

Contributions should be sent to the Burlington Committee For Mississippi, % Larry Schonbrun, Fern Hall, Burlington, Vt. They will then be put into the committee's account at the Howard National Savings Bank.

Students interested in working for the committee in any phase of its program should contact Larry Schonbrun.

Former Dean Is Honored

The University will name its dairy science building to honor Dr. Joseph E. Carrigan, emeritus dean of its College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

The recommendation to do so came to the Board of Trustees today, the result of "many suggestions" to the Trustees' external relations committee to honor the man who served the University's College of Agriculture from the time of his graduation in 1914 to the time of his retirement in 1957.

Beginning his life-time dedication to the improvement and advancement of agriculture as a County Agent, he became Extension Service director in 1931, and dean of the College and director of the Experiment Station in 1942.

He holds many honors and awards, including the honorary Doctor of Laws conferred upon him by his alma mater.

The Dairy Science Building is one of three buildings built in 1949 for which funds were provided by the Legislature. The others are the Hills Agricultural Science Hall, named to honor Dean Carrigan's predecessor, Dean Joseph L. Hills; and the Terrill Home Economics Building, named to honor Miss Bertha M. Terrill, first chairman of the University's department of home economics.

Advanced Cadets Receive DMS Badges

Twelve outstanding Advanced ROTC senior cadets were recently designated as Distinguished Military Students, and were presented DMS badges and certificates by Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, Professor of Military Science, at a ceremony held on October 2, in the Gutterson Field House. Those cadets receiving honors were: Kenneth D. Bailey, Burlington, Vt.; Frederick G. Boese, Union City, N.J.; Chester B. Eaton, Burlington, Vt.; Arthur H. Garvin, Westfield, N.J.; William S. Hall, Concord, N.H.; Reid M. Knight, Barre, Vt.; Dean Linderman, Batavia, N.Y.; David D. McKnight, Plainfield, Vt.; Richard Rodbart, New York, N.Y.; Herbert D. Safford, Burlington, Vt.; R. Scott Severance, Granville, N.Y.; Tom S. Whitaker, Brandon, Vt.

The twelve were chosen out of 91 Advanced ROTC seniors on the basis of their leadership abilities, high moral character, and aptitude for military service. They must have shown themselves to be better than average students in academic standing at the University and must have distinguished themselves in military studies. Those DMS's who maintain their high standing during the year will be designated Military Graduate upon the receipt of a baccalaureate degree. This offers them the opportunity for a career in the Regular Army.

UVM Budget

ESTIMATED INCOME

TOTAL: The biennial budget approved October 3, by Trustees of the University of Vermont represents a total increase of $1,307,000 for the first year of the 1965-67 biennium - from $15,646,000 this year to $16,953,000 for 1965-66, and to $18,302,000 in the 1966-67 or second year of the coming biennium.

STATE: The total budget is based on a requested state appropriation increase of $413,000 for the first year of the 1965-67 biennium - from $4,275,000 this year to $4,688,000 for 1965-66, and to $5,366,000 in the 1966-67 or second year of the coming biennium.

FEDERAL: Largest increase in the total estimated budget is expected to be received in federal funds. A $477,000 increase is projected for the first year of the 1965-67 biennium - from $4,131,000 this year to $4,608,000 for 1965-66, and to $5,138,000 in the second year of the coming biennium.

TUITION AND FEES: Traditionally accounting for a major share of the total income available to the University, a $307,000 increase is anticipated in the first year of the new biennium - from $3,910,000 this year to $4,217,000 in 1965-66, and to $4,298,000 in the second year of the new biennium.

OTHER: State, federal, and tuition and fee resources account for more than three quarters of the income expected to be available to the University. Next largest source is auxiliary enterprises and activities which account for about 10 percent of the budget for the first year of the coming biennium. Organized activities, endowment income, private gifts and grants and appropriations from counties and other states make up the remainder of the total.

EXPENDITURES

INSTRUCTION: Largest planned expenditure increase will be for instruction, an increase of $594,000 (10%) for the first year of the biennium - from $5,944,000 this year to $6,538,000 for 1965-66, and to $7,208,000 in the 1966-67 or second year of the new biennium.

ORGANIZED RESEARCH: This will increase $300,000 (11.2%) for the first year of the biennium - from $2,676,000 this year to $2,976,000 next, and to $3,326,000 in the second year of the 1965-67 biennium.

ORGANIZED ACTIVITIES relating to departments: An increase of $17,000 (2.8%) is anticipated - from $600,000 to $617,000 in the first; and to $643,000 in the second year of the coming biennium.

LIBRARIES: An increase of $42,000 (8.8%) is planned - from $475,000 currently to $517,000 in 1965-66 and to $557,000 in 1966-67.

EXTENSION AND PUBLIC SERVICES: A $115,000 (11%) increase is anticipated; from $1,165,000 next year and to $1,238,000 in the second year of the 1965-67 biennium.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE OF PLANT: A $24,000 (2.4%) increase from $984,000 to $1,008,000 next year and to $1,054,000 the following year is anticipated.

AUXILIARY ENTERPRISES AND ACTIVITIES: An increase of $142,000 (6.9%) is anticipated, from $2,065,000 to $2,207,000 in the first year, and to $2,282,000 in the second year of the coming biennium.

STUDENT AID: A $34,000 (5.2%) increase is planned - from $658,000 this year to $692,000 for 1965-66, and to $715,000 in 1966-67.

ADMINISTRATIVE AND GENERAL: A $39,000 (3.3%) increase is planned - from $1,194,000 this year to $1,233,000 in 1965-66, and to $1,279,000 in 1966-67.

TOTAL EXPENDITURES: will increase $1,307,000 or (8.4%) from $15,646,000 for the current year to $16,953,000 in 1965-66 or first year of the coming biennium, and to $18,302,000 in the second year of the 1965-67 biennium.

SIGMA XI

The opening meeting of the Vermont chapter of the Society of the Sigma Xi at the University of Vermont is scheduled for Oct. 15.

Featured lecturer at the Oct. 15 meeting with Dr. Carroll Dodge, professor of botany at Vermont, Dr. Dodge's topic is "Antarctic Botany." Colored slides of the Antarctic will be shown by Howard C. Taylor III, of the department of pathology.

A total of eight meetings are scheduled for 1964-65 with the highlight being the appearance of Dr. Ernest Pollard, professor of biophysics at Pennsylvania State University and Sigma Xi national lecturer, on March 25.

Try-outs For South Pacific

South Pacific, the Rogers and Hammerstein musical which made theatrical history during its 1,925 Broadway performances, is coming to the Arena Theatre in December.

Try-outs for parts in South Pacific will be open to University students, and will take place in the Arena Theatre at 7:30 P.M. on Fri., Oct. 9, and Sun., Oct. 11. Scripts are available at the library - reserve desk. Scores are available at the music building.

The UVM production will be a joint offering of the Depts. of Speech and Drama, Music, and the Dance Workshop.

During its original run, South Pacific was seen by over 3,500,000 theatregoers, and won numerous awards, including the Pulitzer Prize.

At the Arena Theatre the musical will have 5 evening performances, for which there will be special group rates.

Tenth Annual Season Opens For Lane Series

The George Bishop Lane Series opened its Tenth Anniversary season by presenting the world-renowned Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Under the direction of Jean Martinon, who succeeded the late Fritz Riener, the orchestra presented works of Schonberg, Stravinsky, Beethoven, and Bizet.

The opening Variations for Orchestra, Opus 31 by Arnold Schonberg received polite approval by the audience. Essentially an atonal piece, the "Variations" showed little continuity. The music was generally bland and harmless. This was a poor piece to start with, before a relatively musically unsophisticated audience.

Stravinsky's "A Card Game" ("Jeu de Cartes"), in lively contrast to Schonberg, proved delightful. The Ballet Suite, written in "Three Deals", testifies to the greatness of Stravinsky's

New Department Chairmen Chosen

by Judy Beeber

This term, two of the new additions welcomed to the faculty are Dr. Forgays, head of the psychology department and Dr. Peterson, Chairman of the economics department.

Dr. Forgays outlined some of the innovations which are to be instituted in the psychology department at present and in the near future. Most of all, emphasis was put on research in both the graduate and undergraduate schools. In the graduate school, Dr. Forgays aspiration is to have a department which trains students in Clinical and Experimental Psychology. "Vermont is in need of Clinical Psychologists and a program is needed to train them in Vermont", says Dr. Forgays.

Pertaining to the undergraduate school, active involvement in the psychological field is being stressed. Advanced classes will be converted into lab classes where students will do individual projects in lab. Thus, they will get a direct introduction into research in motivation, perception and in other areas. Another program which is being instituted in the 'DDD' or Discussion, Demonstration and Data Collection. This class provides the student with first hand exposure to the field.

This year, the manner in which Introductory Psychology is taught has been altered from the past years. Instead of the usual term's course with one teacher, there are three professors teaching for one third of the term in their special field. At present, Dr. Forgays is instructing in scientific methodology and later in the term Mr. Chaplin will teach sensation, perception and biological and physiological problems of the organism and finally to finish off the term, Dr. Slamecca will instruct learning and memory. Dr. Forgays has instituted the change, because he feels that it is virtually impossible for one professor to keep up to date in all fields of psychology, so it is to the student's advantage to be taught by professors who are almost specialists in the different areas.

Before coming to UVM, Dr. Forgays taught at the University of Michigan and at Cornell University for two years as a visiting professor. He also worked as a Research Psychologist for the Air Force during the Korean War and for the past seven years, taught psychology at Rutgers University. Good luck in this year's endeavors Dr. Forgays!

The new Chairman of the Economics Department, Dr. Peterson, also has certain innovations he is looking forward to. He hopes to place emphasis on the importance of electronic computer in business management and planning, and to offer a course in computer use in business and economic planning (Quantitative Economics). Another plan is to have a research program in the economics of northern New England. He also plans to review the general course offerings.

Dr. Peterson has had an extremely interesting background. For the past eleven years he worked under the Rand Corporation which does research for the Air Force. He was head of the ICBM Project and did the basic planning for facilities. One of the various achievements was the institution of a new procurement procedure on the F-4 and F-111, a jet bomber. Thus, Dr. Peterson has worked on many military research projects for the Air Force. Although Dr. Peterson is now teaching, he is still keeping in touch with current problems of the Air Force.

Homecoming

by Peter Covette

Homecoming 64' began on a definite upnote with the highly successful Homecoming ball last Friday night. Bert Orr's band provided a variety of dance music in the traditional style. Their repertoire contained songs from the past such as "Varsity Drag", and "Charleston," right up to present day "Moon River". The "Billy Clark Five," appeared next, accompanying the famous "Chiffons". They enlivened the air with renditions of their famous songs such as "Heat Wave," "Hitch-Hiker," and "He's So Fine".

The next highpoint of the evening was the crowning of the King and Queen. When asked how it felt to be King and Queen, King Curt Tobey and Queen Joanne Koleda gave two short but meaningful answers. King Curt said it felt "Great," while Queen Joanne assured me that it felt "Wonderful". Soon after the crowning of the new royalty the second part of the main attraction was presented. "Little Anthony and the Imperials," admirably fulfilled all expectations. Little Anthony electrified the atmosphere with his wild, swinging stylized approach to songs such as "Tears on my Pillow," "Twist and Shout," and "From the Outside Looking In".

Everything about the ball was great this year. The decorations and lighting provided a fine romantic atmosphere. This was indeed a terrific Homecoming Ball, kicking off a terrific Homecoming Weekend.

PANHEL PREPARES FOR RUSHING

If all of the girls who attended the recent Panhellenic Council meeting for prospective sorority rushees complete the requirements for rushing, it is obvious that all seven sororities will easily fill their quotas.

Held in Southwick Hall on September 29, the meeting of approximately 250 girls was opened by Merry Rogers, president of the council, who introduced Dean Harris, Panhellenic advisor Patricia Smith, and the council members. She then spoke briefly of the main purposes and aims for which sororities strive. The remainder of the time was divided between the council members, each relating an aspect of sorority activities, sorority life, or rushing.

This year there are several changes in rushing procedures. Two casual open houses will be held November 1 and November 8 for preliminary rushing. It is hoped that by having rushing in November instead of at inter-semester the sororities will "take a little of the rush out of rushing." During second semester, the sororities will again have open house and rushees will attend the four in which they are particularly interested. Next is attendance at three invitational parties and then a final party. Since all rushing activities during second semester will take place within three weeks, there will be less interference with studies.

Following the brief speeches by council members was a question and answer period during which facts concerning expenses, pledging, time required, and various advantages and disadvantages of sorority membership were brought out.

Dean Harris then complimented the representatives on the conciseness and preparation of the speeches and stressed the point that in all colleges and universities there is too much emphasis on number averages. "Grades and scholarship," she said, "are not synonymous" and good grades are not the "gate to Heaven."

The meeting was closed by President Rogers, who invited all the girls to attend meetings with sorority dormitory representatives and to rush even if they had no intention of joining a sorority, so that the true purposes of sororities can become known to all.

The BCAM

The Burlington Committee to Aid Mississippi, although only in its incipient stages, appears to be a highly organized group which is certain to achieve its projected four-fold program within the desired time limit of this semester.

Despite the failures of two previous efforts to foster efficacious civil rights movements here at the University, we feel that the BCAM will be successful. Encouraging our optimism are two particular aspects of the organization:

As chairman, Larry Schonbrun has secured the strong support of 31 members of the faculty, in addition to 9 religious leaders in the Burlington community, in an all-out effort "to show we're a viable unit." That 31 faculty members would gladly affix their names to a letter being circulated throughout the Burlington area, and would actively support a faculty, community, business and book drive, is a welcome manifestation of professorial interest in vital affairs.

And, too, the very fact that BCAM was founded reinforces our faith in the perseverance of at least some UVM students who, simply because two attempts of this sort had collapsed, have not settled back uninterestedly and shaken this necessary burden of responsibility.

BCAM, a University civil rights movement, is similar to hundreds of other movements in the country which have developed as a spontaneous outgrowth of the Summer Project, especially and most directly symbolized by the tragic deaths of three youthful Mississippi civil rights workers, Chaney, Goodman and Schwerner.

If all proceeds as is hopefully planned, BCAM will soon begin canvassing the community. We urge all those who care to give their utmost support.

Enrollment Crisis In Europe: Part 1

"Enrollment crisis" is a term familiar to the American educational community. It is becoming increasingly familiar to the European student as well. Last year there were 216,000 students in the higher education system of Great Britain; 260,000 in West Germany; and 300,000 in France. Western Europe is taking long second looks at its provisions for educating a rapidly growing populace. The following is the first article in a College Press Service series on Higher Education and the European student. It was written in Europe this summer by CBS correspondent Rita Dershowitz.

LONDON (CPS) -- The European student today studies under conditions that differ radically from those which existed only a generation ago. Whereas American education is rooted in the relatively modern concept of mass education, the European system, reaching far back into the Middle Ages, has traditionally fulfilled an elitist and rather esoteric function.

Fifty years ago, for example, British education was designed to prepare children of the ruling class for their eventual roles in the political system. Now one of the accepted functions of the educational system is to uncover the untapped talents of the lower middle and working classes, which has the effect of weakening class lines. The most prominent guardians of the tradition, Oxford and Cambridge, are probably the last bastions of the old style, strongly and resolutely resisting the plebian onrush. But even these two old dowagers of the Ivory Tower are slowly beginning to awaken and join the national debate on university reform.

The revolution now taking place in Western European higher education rises out of many of the same pressures that American universities are feeling: the post-World War II baby boom; the demands of an increasingly industrialized society; middle-class families' clamor for higher education. And very often the response to these pressures is a democratization similar to the American system.

The question is whether higher education should be open to all students who desire it, and the problem becomes acute in the face of the rising student population. In Britain and West Germany almost 20% of all high school students are following a course of study leading to university entrance. In France the figure leaps to 60%, in Sweden 70%, and in the United States virtually all high school students have the opportunity to get into some institute of higher education. A recent series of articles on reform of the French educational system by Girodell'Ain, education editor of Le Monde, posed the question of whether educational reform "is a matter of reaching the American system in stages. No European country, either west or east, seems to have decided."

The contrast between the old and the new is most striking in Britain. The "Oxbridge" system, the oldest in England, now provides places for only 16% of all university students, as against 22% before World War II. The burden of providing higher education for an increasing student population has fallen to the "red-brick universities," dynamic institutions located in the industrial centers and originally intended to serve local needs. They have become national centers, drawing over one-third of all the university students in England. More recent expansion has centered about the younger civic universities, founded between the two wars, and the establishment of seven new universities since 1958.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor

Your article in the September 24th The Sceptic, "The Way We See It," is a classic example of innuendoes, half-truths, guilt-by-association, and other smear techniques that liberals claim the so-called "radical right" is always guilty of.

This column, apparently written by a mental vacrant who knows less than nothing about the Burlington Free Press or Senator Goldwater, in actuality clearly demonstrates that the so-called "liberals" are, in fact, running scared this election year. They dip deeply into the smut pot to try and discredit anything and anyone that they may disagree with, regardless of what the true facts may be.

We suggest that in your future attempts to write articles you utilize the truth instead of deliberately distorting the facts. Otherwise, your article will warrant nothing more than a quick toss into the wastebasket.

TV University

"Biography as History" is the title of TV University for 1964-65.

Presented by the Evening Division of the University of Vermont in cooperation with television station WCAX (Channel 3), the seventh season of TV University begins on Oct. 10. Programs will be an hour in length, running from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

Prof. Harold S. Schultz, UVM history department will be in charge of each program. Prof. Schultz will have other faculty members as his guests for each program.

Three hours of undergraduate credit may be earned for those viewers desiring to do so. Anyone who does wish to earn credit should register with "TV University", 139 Waterman Building, UVM, by Nov. 7.

The course is designed to demonstrate the various uses of biography in the study of history. Individual lives will be considered as: 1, units for convenient historical investigation, 2, subjects deserving of special study because of their presumed historical importance to society, 3, representatives or personifications of tendencies, characteristics, and ideas associated with defined periods and timeless types, and 4, subdivisions of broader historical topics, that is, as parts of greater wholes.

Such ideas as "what has been the relationship of the man of action and the man of ideas to change?", "how have certain individuals achieved fame?", and "have heroes of the past been supermen or merely incarnations of cherished values?" will be examined.

There is no single text for the course but a list of assigned readings will be sent to those who enroll and on request to others.

Dr. Schultz did his undergraduate work at Columbia and received his Master and Doctorate degrees from Duke University. He joined the Vermont faculty in 1946 and served as chairman of the history department from 1956 through 1963-64.

Notice

Faculty members have until Oct. 31 to nominate seniors for Woodrow Wilson Fellowships. Candidates should be planning on becoming college teachers.

Nominations should be made with William Macmillan, dean of the Graduate College.

In January, the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation will interview the top nominees.

THE SCEPTIC

"Ivry day th' minyit I pick up me pa-aper afther I've read th' criminal an' other pollytical news, th' spoortin' news, th' rale-estate advertisemints, th' invytation fr'm th' cultured foreign gent to meet an American lady iv some means, th' spoortin' news over again, thin th' iditoryals, I hasten to find out what th' college pro-fissor had to say yisterdah. I wish th' iditor wud put it in th' same column iv the pa-aper ivry day. Thin he wudden't have to collect many other funny column." - Mr. Martin Dooley

The Sceptic is proud to announce our first annual "Prof of the Year" award. It goes to kindly old Professor Grosch of the Department of Pataphysics here at UVM. For you few who are not familiar with our honored teacher, he is of medium height, with a funny little face accented by round beady eyes. Prof Grosch's favorite course is Pataphysics I, offered to all freshmen plus anyone else wanting an easy grade. We sat in on Pop's (as his admirers affectionately call him) course. It was quite an experience.

The kindly old man entered the classroom with that grin that has been his trademark all these years. The room held about 50 students. The back row was occupied by eight gentlemen, obviously upper-classmen, who were taking the course as an elective. Questioning soon confirmed our suspicions - they were all brothers.

Pop took the attendance - "Miss Albert (here!), Mr. Carlson (Yep.), Mr. Goldwater," - hilarity embraced the classroom, the young freshmen girls in the front row could not withhold their giggling, the laughter was punctuated by an "Awright", originating from the rear row. (The Professor later told us that humor was the secret to his success. "Ya gotta keep the kids interested or they wouldn't learn a thing. Ya gotta keep their little minds awake.")

During the 35 minute period, (Pop let out the class early ("if ya don't have their attention what's the use of teaching?"), the eager young students listen attentively. Pop described the science of Pataphysics, its varied uses and its wide application. The young in the front were kept busy taking extensive notes, the more experienced in the rear were kept busy passing them. Pop punctuated his lecture with fast and witty lines ("what did the elephant say when he was pulled out of the pit by the ears? - thank you Mr. and Mrs. Ear."), greeted, of course, with loud and boisterous guffaws. At the end of the lecture, he announced that next Wednesday was movie day, and all were welcome to attend.

After the lecture, Pop invited us to his two-room office for tea. He informed us that he refused the chairmanship of the department a few years back to concentrate on more academic matters. "Leave the administrating to the administrators," he remarked with a smile (This, an allusion to the division in the department between the neo-pataphysic followers and those who follow a S-R philosophy). "I teach only 12 hours a week, nine, devoted to Introductory classes, and three, at the graduate level. My field, as you might not have known is the Development of Pataphysics as traced through the rise of occultism in Eastern Europe."

Pop informed us that he did once enter the field of politics in his younger days. "I entered the primary for state assembly, but announced my support for Alf Landon (then, a very controversial issue). I was beaten fairly badly. Ever since then I steer clear of getting my feet dirty, as it were."

We asked our "Prof of the Year" whether he had any interest in any campus organizations. He told us that he was faculty advisor to the Student Pataphysic Club, but his old age had kept him down. Pop announced to us in proud and ringing tones that this was his thirty-fifth year with the University. He expressed his hope that he could remain here for "another thirty-five."

It was no easy choice in choosing "Pop" Grosch as our "Prof of the Year." There are many instructors that are almost as stirring as Pop. But, in every community, one man must stand out and this year it is you, "Pop" Grosch, our "Prof of the Year." The citation reads "For excellence in your profession, for fondness that your students consistently have for you, for the enjoyment that constantly flows out of your class, you, "Pop" Grosch, we, the staff of the Sceptic, salute as our "Prof of the Year."

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

1. What is the status of the "Negroes for Goldwater" movement?
2. What is the condition of that University of Maine tackle? Why?
3. What is the insistence of faculty dropouts at UVM? Why?

Placement Barometer

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

A Program for the Potential Executive. One of the more interesting and little known programs, by our students, is the Management Intern Program, designed to attract talented young men and women into management careers with the Federal Service. Potentiality for growth to the upper levels of the Civil Service, rather than a particular background, is the important criterion for these positions. About 20 different agencies, among them Agriculture, Defense, Navy and State, to mention but a few, have made agreements with the U.S. Civil Service Commission to provide special training and development for successful Management Intern Candidates. Management Interns, already at work, in a wide variety of administrative fields, have made rapid progress and are now providing the leadership needed to carry out the vast responsibilities of Federal Government.

Anyone who at the time of appointment will have at least a bachelor's degree or equivalent work experience is qualified to compete for a Management Internship. A candidate becomes eligible for appointment by successfully completing a two part written test. The first part, the Federal Service Entrance Examination is a general ability test, required of all competitors, except those qualifying on the basis of Graduate Record Examination Aptitude Test Scores, as described in the Announcement. The additional test, in public affairs and administrative problems, is required of all candidates applying for Management Internships. Those who attain a passing score in the written test will be required to participate in a group discussion on current topics and an individual interview. The process is completed by the attainment of favorable recommendations from faculty members, supervisors, and others in a position to appraise the candidate's personal qualities.

Test dates are given in the Civil Service Commission Examination Announcement #333 available in the Placement Office. If you are interested in receiving a Management Intern appointment you should apply as early as possible and no later than 21, January, 1965. To apply, use the tear-out application form on the last page of Announcement #333. In the space marked "Title of Examination" write "FSEE, Management Intern Option". Submit this to the Civil Service Office having jurisdiction over the place where you wish to take the written test. A list of these offices is included in Announcement #333. The examination is given in major cities throughout the United States. You can qualify for both FSEE and Management Intern positions, in fact, you may receive offers for FSEE positions before you are fully qualified as a Management Intern. However, it is usually to your advantage to select a Management Internship. Because of the very favorable impression created by previous Management Interns, candidates who successfully complete the Management Intern examination are in great demand by agencies in Washington, D.C. Management Interns begin at Grades GS-7 ($6,050 a year) or GS-9 ($7,220 a year) depending upon their qualifications. Candidates appointed from the FSEE begin at Grades GS-5 ($5,000 a year) or GS-7. If you fail either the written Management Intern Option or the group oral, you are still eligible for many excellent employment opportunities under the FSEE within a month. If successful on the Intern Option, you will be scheduled for your oral examination in February or April. You will receive your final rating several weeks later. Agencies generally make their appointments in the spring and begin their training programs in the early summer. However, some appointments are made throughout the year. Most positions are with the Agency's Central Headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Snoopy Says...

by Laura Schildhaus

What a weekend! UVM was full of pep, or so I was told by the president of the Pep Committee. He is wondering if your spirit, exemplified at the football game, (thanks Charlie, Cheerleaders, and Yankee Conference Champs-to-be) will continue, or will dwindle as soon as the excitement of Homecoming wears off. In case you're interested, there will be a notice in Billings for the next Pep Committee meeting. Everyone is welcome, especially Freshmen, and urged to join.

I hope you all have recovered from Homecoming because we have hourlies next week. Can someone please devise a better system for grading. School would be so much better if we didn't have to study for exams. (Well, that's what lots of kids are saying.) As a matter of fact, you guys don't really know why you're here. If your attitude doesn't change soon, you may not be here for too long. We are in an ideal society; a minimum of responsibility and a maximum of freedom and security. If life were like this, it would be cool but, pity, this is not the way it is out there.

I notice that we are still sitting around wasting time in the Den. I guess we won't be evacuating the place in the very near future. May I therefore interject a few thoughts for Mr. Spees to mull over in his office: (1) Can the legs of the tables be evened so we don't spill our delicious coffee? (2) We feed the juke box with coins (American, not Canadian) and still can't hear the music. It's our coffee shop and we want to enjoy it. In my opinion, the Beatles and all their friends are in perfectly good taste for in-between class relaxation. Get with it!! If anyone has any other suggestions for simple improvements around campus, let me know. This school is great, but it hasn't reached perfection - yet!

It's nice to know that the CYNIC covers are so well-liked. No, they are not a regular feature, but, any good artwork will be greatly appreciated. I don't expect anyone to go out and construct an Aschenbach-type masterpiece - cartoons will do.

This is the year of the great elections. Don't feel bad if you're under 21. You can still support your candidates. You can even vote for class officers. Tomorrow is the day so please get out and exercise your right - VOTE!! By the way, this is not a popularity contest, o.k., kids? The word is out that each fraternity and sorority has its own "slate". Of course, you want to vote for your brothers and sisters, but trading votes is dirty politics. If we start that now, what will happen when we're voting in national elections? You guessed it - we'll have men like Goldilocks leading us. Good luck, all of you.

That's about it for now, folks. Believe it or not I've gotta hit the books.

How about you??

L.S.

*My humblest apologies and thanks to Mr. Spees. I was overwhelmed by the volume of the juke box this week.

higher education, headed by Lord Lionel Robbins, professor of economics at the University of London, issued a mammoth and unprecedented report in 1963 calling for rapidly increasing expansion of the university system. The Robbins report seems to have marked the beginning of a new era in Britain, and all discussion on the subject begins either for or against Robbins.

The report was startling not simply in terms of the numbers of students it wished the universities to accommodate, but also in the emphasis it placed on the concept of a university as an institution responsible to the needs of society as well as to the needs of its individual students. The first objective of any properly balanced system, the Robbins report declared, is "instruction in skills suitable to play a part in the general division of labour. We put this first, not because we regard it as the most important, but because we think that it is sometimes ignored or undervalued."

IN FRANCE

In France the crisis in higher education consists almost wholly of a numbers game. The main building of the Sorbonne, the liberal arts faculty of the University of Paris, was built in 1890 for a student body of 1,000. Present enrollment in the same building is over 33,000. A recent newspaper article described the University as so overcrowded "that the government is reduced to accusing the student unions of demagoguery when they advise all their members to show up for class to dramatize their plight."

Decentralization of the monolithic French higher education system has been proposed as the solution to overcrowding in Paris. The French government has attempted to encourage students to attend the provincial universities and a couple of new campuses outside Paris, but this has consistently failed. In fact, provincial universities are under-attended because students have always regarded Paris and the Latin Quarter as the cultural center of France and the only suitable setting for a university education. The American concept on the campus, isolated the self-contained, is scorned upon by French students, who prefer the tiny crowded cafes along the Boulevard St. Michel to a spacious, air-conditioned student union.

IN WEST GERMANY

In West Germany, on the other hand, what is called the "catastrophe of education" is blamed on decentralized, relatively uncoordinated educational system. Because of Germany's preoccupation with social welfare and reorganization of the economy after the war, education until now had been relegated to a secondary position, and the government is only beginning to do the kind of research essential for educational expansion. There is no central Ministry of Education, as there is in France and England. Educational policy is formulated independently by the minister of cultural affairs in each of West Germany's twelve states. No comprehensive program exists as a result of the lack of central planning. Teaching, an occupation which has attracted particular attention in other Western nations, has suffered heavily in West Germany. It is estimated that 90% of all students currently at the universities would have to become teachers before the national need would be met.

Educational reform in Western Europe is proceeding on two assumptions: one, that higher education should be available to more students, if not all students; and two, that the university is no longer an isolated community, but bears a definite responsibility toward the society in which it exists.

In This Corner: Our Advisor

This old grad would have to pick last weekend as one which bids fair to go into the record books as a pretty good homecoming. Even the weatherman smiled for the occasion, which brought out a goodly number of alumni and parents... can't recall that fraternity and sorority posters even showed more imagination. Pi Phi's "Maine-spring" a particular delight... Congrats are also in order for Bob Clifford, his coaching staff and his fired up band of Catamounts. The win over Maine must have been particularly sweet for Coach Clifford since last year at this time he was on the short end of a one-point loss to the Black Bears and his Yankees were in the process of losing to the madcap Los Angeles Dodgers, in four straight, no less. Last Saturday, they clinched the pennant about the time the Cats shut the door on Maine.

SAGASMANSHIP

Saga pulled a tasty coup with the buffet it served at Simpson last Saturday for more than 400 parents. Last time Family Associates had a parents weekend, they asked Saga to serve parents the same meal served to students that day. It turned out to be hot dogs, hardly the kind of fare mother would order on her day out. This time, everything turned up ham, chicken, roast beef and a cornucopia of assorted goodies.

DON'T OVERLOOK WIVES

One of the happy little features of the University Directory (1964-65 version not due before the end of October) is its use of an asterisk to indicate married faculty-staff members. This can be particularly helpful to student organizations who are extending invitations to faculty and staff.

Fred Maher of the sociology department once broke up the audience at an S.A. dinner when he related the kidding he took from his wife when he received an invitation addressed to him at home. Seems the invitation was signed by an S.A. officer who also happened to be Miss Vermont that year. Prof. Maher's point: if you are not inviting the faculty or staff member's spouse (often they are much more charming than the faculty or staff member, by the way) don't send the invitation to his or her home address. If you are inviting the spouse, by all means send it to the home address, but make sure you address it to both. No telling how many marriages you may save.

STEARNS WORDS

Edward R. Stearn, administrator of the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Blood Program, reports that when more than 300 blood donors showed up recently in response to an emergency appeal from the Center, 30 (or 10 percent) of them were staff or students of the University of Vermont. He notes the total turnout cut across community lines, with representatives from every segment and section.

Students or staff thinking about giving blood in the near future may wish to mark Wednesday or Thursday, Oct. 28-29, on their calendars, since the two days will be set aside for a University-wide drawing at the Blood Center located on Mansfield Ave., just across from the fire station... students under 21 will need written consent of their parents to give blood, and may obtain consent forms at the Blood Center which is just a pleasant walk around the corner from Billings and the Ira Allen Chapel.

Evening Division Offers Civil Defense Program

The University of Vermont Evening Division, in cooperation with the Vermont State Office of Civil Defense, will offer a University Adult Education Civil Defense Program during 1964-65.

The program, starting on Oct. 7 and running through April, will consist of 14 Civil Defense Conferences, each in a different community.

In addition, a two-day course in Fallout Shelter Management has been scheduled at the University for Jan. 14-15, 1965.

Both the conferences and the shelter course are being offered under a contract with the Department of the Army - Office of Civil Defense as a part of a nationwide effort designed to train local and state officials as well as volunteers in the latest techniques of coordinating the work of appropriate governmental units in the event of a natural disaster or wartime emergency.

The conferences are for Civil Defense personnel and will include instruction on the establishment and operation of a control center, with participants actually taking part in the operation of the control center. Communications aspects of Civil Defense, include discussions of RACES, Citizens Band, State Police, microwave, National Air Warning Alarm System, and the Emergency Broadcast System.

Conferences have been arranged on a schedule to begin at 6 p.m.

The Shelter Management Course has been planned for community shelter managers and others having major supervisory responsibilities for community shelters. The course covers the need for fallout shelters and describes the National Fallout Shelter Program, organization of the community shelter system, the role of the shelter manager, shelter staff requirements, water and food provisions, calculations of capacity, habitability, ventilation, health and sanitation, equipment, communications and radiological monitoring, information and training, human relations problems, and shelter occupancy exercise.

Participants will spend eight hours in a fallout shelter.

The dates and places for the 14 conferences are: (all are held in the local high school unless otherwise stated).

Oct. 7, Brattleboro; 14, Bennington; 21, Swanton; 28, Newport.

Nov. 4, Morrisville; 18, Enosburg Falls.

Dec. 2, South Royalton.

March 17, Manchester (Manchester Center Elementary School); 24, Essex Junction; 31, Barre (Spaulding).

April 7, Ludlow (Black River); 14, Rutland; 21, St. Johnsbury; 28, Middlebury.

Skiers Begin Training

by Gordon Josephson

The University of Vermont ski team, traditionally a strong threat in intercollegiate competition, have begun their pre-season training ritual in fine style. The boys are under a strict program of weekend hikes, tumbling, isotonic and isometric exercises organized by the coach Mr. Robert Stone. These exercises build the strength, endurance, and the coordination which is so essential in competitive skiing. The practices are supervised by returning veteran captains Steve Logen and Jim Dwinell, while Mr. Stone is engaged in fresh man soccer.

Intercollegiate skiing competition consists of four events which are subsequently divided into two categories. The Downhill and Slalom are called the Alpine events and the Cross Country and Jumping are referred to as the Nordic events. The Downhill is principally a speed contest in which endurance and coordination are principle assets to the competitor. The Slalom is an event in which individual skiers run through a course consisting of 70 or 80 gates in an effort to post the fastest time. An event requiring a maximum of strength, speed and endurance is the Cross Country. Nine miles of hill and dale, approximately 1/3 up, 1/3 level and 1/3 down present a situation in which the skier must pit his skill against the forces of nature. Jumping, the final event of collegiate skiing competition is done off a 40 meter jump in which a jump of 140-150 is considered excellent.

This winter's competition includes the customary winter carnivals such as Dartmouth, Middlebury, Williams and St. Lawrence, all of which are sponsored by the EICA (Eastern Inter-Collegiate Association). There is a strong possibility that UVM freshmen will be able to compete in a separate division at these winter carnivals. "We have a good team," remarked coach Stone, "but several difficulties arise when we compete with schools who are afforded large funds for ski scholarships." Let us hope that ability outweighs funds, and that the ski team enjoys a successful season.

Pershing Rifles Meet

Having just returned from an extensive and comprehensive practical training exercise at Camp Holy Cross in Mallett's Bay, UVM's Company L-12, NATIONAL HONORARY SOCIETY OF PERSHING RIFLES, initiated its seventh fall pledge program and outlined a schedule of activities for the semester at a 23 September meeting.

The annual search for qualified prospective members began at a smoker on Tuesday evening, September 22. A keynote address by PMS Colonel Leonard G. Robinson and a new film about General Pershing and the founding of the Society highlighted the affair. The following evening, the first PERSHING RIFLES drill of the semester afforded Capt. Peter Sheridan the opportunity to announce recent promotions and temporary staff assignments. PFC John Gillespie was awarded the position of 1st Sgt. with a rank of M/Sgt. for his drill proficiency and command abilities. The new pledges were given a mild sample of the work ahead during their ten week pledge program. This will require not only an exceptional proficiency in drill but a comprehensive knowledge of the life and work of General Pershing, as well as the meaning and goals of PERSHING RIFLES.

Capt. Sheridan also recently announced a tentative date of October 23 for an inspection tour of Plattsburgh AFB, while at the same time informing the company that the annual PERSHING RIFLES vs. ROTC Department "touch?" football game will be held at 1600, Tuesday, October 6. Despite a 1-2 losing record, PERSHING RIFLEMEN are confidently predicting an overwhelming victory for their fearless gridiron eight.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

Tests for Management Internships will be given only in October, November, January, and February on the following dates: Applications must be received by - For the test that is given on -

Oct. 22, 1964	Nov. 21, 1964
Dec. 17, 1964	Jan. 16, 1965
Jan. 21, 1965	Feb. 20, 1965

Candidates for Management Internships who pass the written tests in October and November will be interviewed during the week of February 8, 1965. Those who pass the written tests for Management Internships in January and February will be interviewed during the week of April 12, 1965.

Our Boy Rusty

The first weekly ECAC All East (college division) football team for the 1964 season finds the University of Vermont's Rusty Brink at the center position.

Although seeing limited service in last Saturday's 41-6 romp over Worcester Tech, Brink made his presence felt. He recovered a fumble to set up the initial six-pointer and his jarring tackle caused a bobble that was recovered by the Catamounts to start the second scoring drive.

This is the second time the Lawrence, Mass., native has been named to the weekly ECAC squad. He earned honors last fall as a sophomore for his play against Middlebury. The 6-1, 200-pound operator earned second team all Yankee Conference honors last fall.

Reduced price tickets for the games will be on sale at the University Store.

Oct. 10	Rhode Island
Oct. 27	New Hampshire
Oct. 24	Norwich

These are for all those with appropriate identification. The price will be $1.00 each. At the gate students and faculty will pay the regular admission charge.

Remember The Maine

Frank Foerster (33), UVM halfback, cuts around right end in game with Maine. The play was good for twenty-five yards.

by T. Rowen

This Saturday our Catamount football team made history by defeating the University of Maine 14-7. This is the first time in forty-one years that the Catamounts have made Maine taste the bitter ashes of defeat. History was also made when Vermont won the first three games of the season. This has not been achieved since 1899.

The Catamounts wasted no time in scoring. The kickoff occurred at 1:30 and at 1:32 the University scored its first touchdown, when Scot Fitz threw a pass to Paul Giardi for 72 yards.

The first half of the game was completely dominated by the Catamounts who were led by Fitz, Giardi, Foerster, Kent and Andrade. Our defense also proved to be impregnable. This was by far the Catamount's finest effort. Coach Clifford felt that this game was one of Vermont's greatest defensive games.

Some of the outstanding plays of the game occurred when Richie Reynolds pulled off a beautiful fake to the right and ran toward the left. Richie Reynolds also scored our second touchdown. Ken Andrade must be commended for his all-round performance during the game. He once again proved to be invaluable on offense as well as defense. The defensive team's outstanding appearance is exemplified by their impressive 5-goal line stand.

On the whole our team played an excellent job. According to the Burlington Free Press we should walk all over Rhode Island this Saturday. Below are the statistics of last Saturday's game which has been compiled by the Burlington Free Press:

SWIMMING TEAM PREPS

The two-year old Catamount swimming team is working out nightly preparing for their 1964-1965 debut against Plattsburgh on December 12. Coach Les Leggett said that, although there will be no record breakers on the squad, all the boys are working hard and could go far. Swimmers to watch for on the team include Dave Cheney in the backstroke, Pete Gross in the butterfly, Tom Mill and Scott Davis in the free-style, and Jim Nixon and Pete Fredericks in the breaststroke.

All meets held at home will be open to the public and should be exciting and interesting. The varsity schedule this year includes: at home, Plattsburgh, Dec. 12; Norwich, Jan. 20; McGill, Feb. 6; Union, Feb. 10; Connecticut, Feb. 20; State Championship, March 6; and away, Geo. Williams, Jan. 30, at Montreal; Massachusetts, Feb. 13, at Amherst; Norwich, Feb. 24, at Northfield; and the New England, March 13-14, to be arranged.

The Women's Recreation Association recently announced the organization of a girls' swim team. An orientation meeting was held on September 30, and the first practice took place the following night at the Forbush Natatorium located in the Patrick Gym. Although this is the first year for such a team, a very difficult schedule has been planned for the members. Three of the most important meets for the group include: one at UVM involving only Vermont students, a contest at Skidmore and a second at UVM, where the team will face five or six colleges from this area.

Miss Farrell, the group's advisor and coach, said that the following events would probably be included at the meets: free-style, backstroke, butterfly, breaststroke, medley and free-style relays, diving, and possibly a form swim. Speakers will often visit the group to help the swimmers improve their styles and practice techniques. Miss Farrell stressed, however, that this was an intramural program and not a varsity team, although it functions very much like one.

Practices are held on Thursday Evenings between 7 and 8:30 and all interested girls are greatly encouraged to attend. Additional information may be obtained from Miss Farrell or Dean Hubert, the Women's Recreation Association's Swimming Manager.

Kittens Blanked, 6-0

The UVM freshman football team opened its season with a 6-0 loss at the hands of the Norwich frosh in Northfield, Friday.

Vermont had three scoring opportunities in the first half, when they penetrated deep into Norwich territory, but the Cadets put up a good defensive effort each time, to stop the threats.

The Kitten quarterback, Dave Shumate of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, completed three of 10 passes for 69 yards in the game. The top rusher for UVM was fullback Jim Culhane with 30 yards on 14 carries.

Coaching this year's Kitten squad is Tom Austin, the varsity backfield coach last year. Austin's assistants are George Sulima and Bill Davidson, a former star for UVM.

The game against Norwich was the only away game of the year for the frosh. This week the Kittens host the Dartmouth "B" squad at 2:00 Friday. The remaining two games are at home against Bridgton on October 16 and Middlebury, October 30.

Tackles - Jim Gallipo, Rutland, Vt.; John Currier, West New York, N.J.; Howard Savin, Bridgeport, Conn.; and Dave

Young, Tacoma, Wash.
Guards - Gene Carruthers, N. Tarrytown, N.Y.; Rod McLean, Syracuse, N.Y.; Don Martin, Ansonia, Conn.; Pete Brusco, Montpelier, Vt.; and Bill Wolff, Stamford, Conn.

Centers - Colin Hurd, Lovell, Me.; Paul Ardell, Fairfield, Conn.

Quarterbacks - Dave Shumate, St. Johnsbury, Vt.; Jim Dedham, Orange, Conn.

Halfbacks - Brian Flaherty, Jersey City, N.J.; Paul Malone, New Haven, Conn.; Brad Stevens, Shaftsbury, Vt.; Bob Robinson, San Francisco, Calif.; Andy Shuyler, Midland Park, N.J.; Don Nelson, Dunellen, N.J.

Fullbacks - Jim Culhane, Weehawken, N.J.; Bob Mitchell, Bridgeport, Conn.

Although the Kitten record now stands at 0-1, much can be expected from this young team in the future. Best of luck to Coach Austin and this determined squad.

This year, due to student requests, the University has made it possible for football films to be viewed by the student body.

Every Thursday, at 3:30 P.M. in Votey Hall the pictures of the previous weeks game will be shown to the student body. Attendance is requested since it is you, the students, who desired to see these films. A member of the faculty will be on hand to aid with the projection.

Kake Walk To Go Independent?

Interviewer Conference Planned for Class of '65 To Be Held Oct. 20,21

Next Tuesday and Wednesday evening at 8:00 P.M. in Votey Auditorium, the first University of Vermont Interviewer Conference will be held for members of the Senior Class and Graduate College who expect to earn a degree in 1965. The program, for Tuesday evening is being sponsored by Boulder Society and is for men only; on Wednesday evening, Mortar Board Society is presenting the women's program. Both Senior Honorary Societies have been working hard with Mr. Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement, interested members of the faculty and administration are cordially invited to attend. Preceding the Conference, there will be a dinner for the guest speakers at the Hotel Vermont. After the Conference, an informal reception will be held in the Votey Reading Room for students and faculty to meet with the speakers. After each participant has given a talk, the audience will be instructed to submit written questions and a panel discussion will follow. Mr. Hanau states that "this is an extremely attractive double feature in which either half of the program is equally informative and of value to the students". Following is a breakdown of the topics to be covered and the speakers:

1. "Preparing for the Campus Screening Interview and Taking the Campus Screening Interview."

Mr. Warren L. Buckholz, College Relations Representative, Western Electric Company, New York, New York. Mr. Buckholz holds a BS in Mechanical Engineering from Stevens Institute of Technology. Served two tours of duty with the Military, 1942-1946, during which he attended New York University's School of Meteorology and served as weather officer; 1951-1955, during which he attended Air University in Alabama and served as Assistant Professor of Air Service at Princeton University. Other teaching experiences included evening school at Fairleigh Dickinson, Pratt Institute,

KW Evaluation Committee Submits Recommendations

Editor's note:

Following is the text of the Kake Walk Evaluation Committee's letter to President Rowell. The result of several months' study, it represents a concerted effort to improve the quality of KW Weekend.

Members of the Committee include Professor F. Marston, Professor W. Penner, Howard Cyr, John Norton, Helen Keith (Secretary), and Samuel Laufer (Chairman).

We of the Kake Walk Evaluation Committee have studied the various aspects of the Kake Walk Weekend and have come to the following conclusions.

Kake Walk is a university function designed for the entertainment of the university community. Therefore, it has been agreed that Independents, provided they are able to uphold the spirit and quality of competition upon which the weekend is based, should have the opportunity to participate in Kake Walk functions.

The problem as we see it is to allow Independent participation, while at the same time to insure that the quality of the weekend is in no way diluted.

To accomplish the basic aim, we feel it necessary to place certain organizational restrictions on the manner in which the Independents may participate.

1. In order to insure support, interest, and a center of responsibility, we feel that an Independent Kake Walk Committee must be formed.

2. This committee shall be formed for the sole purpose of participation in Kake Walk functions and shall organize itself from all those University of Vermont students interested in participating.

3. This committee shall take part in all facets of the Kake Walk Weekend.

4. A member selected or elected by this committee shall attend those meetings of the Inter-Fraternity Council which deal with Kake Walk issues and shall have a vote equal in scope to that of the other participating social organizations.

5. Independent participation is allowed only if this committee is formed by November 1st of the school year in which they wish to participate.

6. It should be required that this committee be composed of at least thirty (30) members in order to insure that interest is present and man-power available, to meet the competitive demands.

7. It is also understood that the Independent Committee shall have only one set of walkers, to insure the unity of this organization.

The mechanics of this organization insure that interest be present before the Independents are permitted to participate. The very reason for establishing this committee as an autonomous social organization is that -- as interest dies, so does the right to participate. All we require is thirty (30) members of the Independent student body, so that we may try to insure the quality of their participation. If interest is not present during a certain

Belafonte Arrives

by Betty Miller

Harry Belafonte, the internationally famed singer who made folk singing a national art form, will appear at Memorial Auditorium on Monday, October 19, as he opens his first college tour in ten years.

The only artist to have ever appeared at the world's largest theatres for longer engagements and larger audiences than any other performing artist, Mr. Belafonte is regarded as the foremost concert attraction in the world. Music critics all over agree that he is an artist of stature in every sense of the word.

"Belafonte in Person" introduces the unique voice of Greek songstress, Miss Nana Mouskouri, the excellent backing of the Belafonte Singers, and spotlights two old-timers in folk jazz, Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee.

First and foremost, however, the show will feature the art of Belafonte, singing the songs of the world in the varied settings of their own natural habitats. But most of the songs will be all new and their moods will range all the way from sweet ballads, to dramatic songs of history, to gay fun-filled calypsos.

It is through his complete individuality as a singer and distinctiveness in choice of material and method of presentation, that Harry Belafonte has achieved his fame. He has been called "The man who has brought folk singing into its own with other musical forms such as jazz, opera, and the classics." Belafonte is more of an "actor in song" than the accepted image of a folk singer. His repertoire knows no bounds. His songs are the songs of the people all over the globe, of all fields of endeavor, and every area of expression.

Born in New York City, Belafonte moved with his family to Jamaica while a young boy, lived there for five years, then returned to New York to attend George Washington High School, which he never completed. His first introduction to legitimate theatre came from attending a production of the American Negro Theatre which developed his interest in dramatics. Eventually he joined the Dramatic Workshop and in one production his role called for him to sing one number. He thought nothing of it at the time, but then, one night he was asked to sing at the Royal Roost, a New York nightclub. Belafonte did and was signed to an original two-week contract which ran for twenty weeks.

This modest beginning has led to Belafonte's success as an accredited entertainment giant in the concert and recording field and a recipient of Television's highest award, the Emmy.

Belafonte has also been credited with introducing many fine artists to the American scene, and for this concert he adds to his list of artistic contributions with the inclusion of the exciting Greek singer, Nana Mouskouri.

Miss Mouskouri has in a very short period of time, become the musical custodian of many memorable moments in the cultural history of such countries as Greece, France, Germany, Italy and Spain. Her voice is able to bring the very soul of these nations directly to the audience. Miss Mouskouri's repertoire will touch upon the musical heritage of many lands, singing in their native tongues. A fluent linguist, in addition to her excellence in the musical art form, she is indeed a proper and dramatic addition to the Belafonte program.

On Monday night, then, we will have the privilege to attend the concert the Lane Series Committee has been anticipating for ten years. In this show, there will be much more than the carefully selected songs of Belafonte. There is the magic of Nana Mouskouri, the wildly different sound of Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee, the vitality of the Belafonte Singers, and always there is the consummate artistry of Harry Belafonte.

SA Pres. Visits D.C.

by Ken Klonsky

In the excitement of Homecoming Weekend a fortnight ago, perhaps few persons were aware of another event. Dick Badger, president of the Student Association, was one of 230 outstanding college students invited to the White House by President Johnson.

Dick took the long bus ride to Washington Friday night and arrived at 11 a.m. Saturday. After taking in some of the many tourist attractions in D.C., he arrived at the White House at 5 p.m. for the reception.

The Secret Service cleared Dick and the other students and escorted them to the East Room where they were addressed by various distinguished speakers. The first speaker was Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who impressed everyone with his clear-cut and precise speech. Robert MacNamara, Secretary of Defense, spoke, as did Rusk, of our foreign policy. Both speeches were tinged with political references. The third speaker was Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, whom many people thought gave the best speech of the evening. He discussed in a practical manner the challenges we face in America today and urged young people to seriously consider government work.

President Johnson was the final speaker. In the beginning his speech was political. He mentioned that bipartisan cooperation between Republicans and Democrats was responsible for the establishment of programs in education and volunteer work. In citing the Peace Corps and the War on Poverty he claimed that the present day attitudes of some American adults that teenagers "don't give a damn" are complete misconceptions. He labeled us "The Volunteer Generation". The President then informed students of a "White House Fellows" system that he plans to adopt. Fifteen highly qualified collegians would work in the government every fifteen months. One would be assigned to the Vice President, others to each of the cabinet officials, and four to White House aids. The students will be chosen by a commission headed by David Rockefeller and financed by the Carnegie Foundation. He concluded by telling the students that following dinner they could have free reign of "your" White House.

Dick noticed the careful planning that went into the evening. When the students emerged from the East Room they were pleased to find a football scoreboard. Mr. Badger saw where UVM had beaten Maine but could not find the Maine representative to rub it in. They all ate a beautiful buffet dinner and the students were able to mingle with the President and his family. Afterwards, entertainment was provided by Stan Getz, Bob Newhart, and the Chad Mitchell Trio.

On the long bus ride back, Dick Badger knew he had missed the last Homecoming Weekend as a student at UVM. However he did not hesitate to admit that this had been one of his most memorable experiences as a student.

Lascume--New Addition

by Judi Weintraub

A new addition to the University's Department of Romance Languages is Mr. Jean-Pierre Lascume. Born in Paris, Mr. Lascume studied at the Lycee Louis le Grand, and after taking two "awful" exams received the baccalaureate degree. He then studied at the Academy of Sciences, which is similar to a liberal arts college here. After getting his license he went on to medical school for two years. At this time the war in Algeria broke out and Mr. Lascume was called into military service. After two years of this he came back to Paris, planning to resume his studies. However, all his friends ("and especially the girls") were ahead of him so he came to the United States.

Mr. Lascume taught French last year at Burlington High School, at the French Institute over the summer, and came here this year to replace Dr. Parker, who is on sabbatical leave. He likes the University and prefers teaching on the college level where "the students want to work."

Speaking about the differences between schools here and in France, Mr. Lascume feels that here girls have a greater interest in languages than the boys, while in France this is entirely opposite. Basically though, it is the professors, not the students who differ. In France the teachers are very strict; students must stand when a teacher enters the room. There is no contact between teachers and students; if a student is having trouble with his work it is difficult to get help. In fact, a student is not even required to attend any classes. Mimeographed copies of class notes are sold and all a student must do is pass his exams.

Possibly one of the reasons for this separation between students and professors is the overcrowding of the schools in the cities. Mr. Lascume says that everyone wants to come to Paris and "there is no room for the Parisians." He says that he cannot remember more than three or four of his teachers, and much prefers the way it is here.

Mr. Lascume likes the United States, and especially Vermont, as he is a skier. However, he may go back to Paris, where all his family and friends are. While here, he is taking graduate courses in biochemistry, hoping one day to finish his studies and become a doctor. If this is not possible he would like to get his doctorate in biochemistry or in an associated field. Although his chief ambition is to be a doctor, he is happy teaching and enjoys his life.

Lane Series Goes Dramatic

OLIVER

Last Thursday evening, the George Bishop Lane Series presented the musical adaption of Charles Dickens's Oliver Twist. Oliver, before going on tour, was presented in London and New York. The company has been on tour for two years.

The production in Memorial Auditorium was professional in every sense. It was not, as far as I could tell, different in presentation for the New York stage.

The vitality of early nineteenth century England, ribald and coarse, was successfully captured and conveyed to the audience. The sets, costumes, and background extras were full and in keeping with the rest of the show, complimenting the superb performance of the cast. The main set was basically a staircase which could be rotated from off stage for the necessary shifts in scene.

Mr. Henry Gubel, in charge of production, has been recently appointed General Director of Music Theater of the newly formed Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

The story revolves around Oliver. We are first introduced to this Beatie-mopped urchin when he is brazen enough to ask for more food. For fear this action might start a trend, Oliver is packed off and sold to an enterprising undertaker who seeks to exploit Oliver's mournful expression. He is fit out with a top hat and enlisted as "junior staff in follower." Unloved and exploited Oliver is played by Christopher Spooner, a 10-year old native of London. Naturally Oliver runs away. He is soon befriended by the Artful Dodger, played by Chris Andrews. Chris was also born in London and is 17½ years of age. Chris has been on tour with company for 2 years and was the original Artful Dodger in the London production. The irrepressible Dodger captivated the audience. The Dodger takes Oliver to Fagin's School in pick-pocketing. Here we are introduced to the avaricious yet lovable Fagin. Fagin is incomparably portrayed by Jules Munshin. The role of instructing his urchins in a truly practical profession are met by Mr. Munshin's skill. His vitality livens up what is already a lively show. Like a proud parent, he admonishes his charges to "shut up and drink their gin."

Nancy, played by Joan Eastman, is the leading female star of Oliver. Her beauty and singing of "As Long As He Needs Me," was one of the high points of the show.

Especially noteworthy was the orchestration under the leadership of William Bruhn.

Oliver was thoroughly enjoyed by an enthusiastic audience. I can only regret that there were not more students in the audience. The performance of Oliver will surely be one of the high points in this year's Lane Series program.

VIRGINIA WOOLF

by Alan D. Perlis

On Tuesday night, October 6th, the touring stage production of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" was performed to a near capacity audience at Memorial Auditorium. This was a tired production, unnecessarily reflecting the fact that its four actors have performed the play innumerable times in the past year or two. Often, it seemed that they were reading their lines, over-emphasizing obscenities and thus detracting from the subtlety which can be affected in this play.

Most ineffectual of the actors was Donald Friscoe, whose interpretation of "Nick" seemed strained in its effort to portray a not-so-impressive image of "the perfect man," and who most seemed to be reading his lines. In all, the players had the least apparent difficulty affecting a drunken quality, for here they could employ the communicative advantage of physical action to enhance spoken lines.

The stage setting, on the other hand, was excellent, displaying the multi-dimensional aspect so often lacking in the actors' interpretation of their characters.

Only as the third act commenced, as the play reaches its height of intensity - as "truth" gradually triumphs over "illusion" - did the actors break their inhibitive shell and become totally believable. Fortunately, the sheer power, involved allegory and bawdy humor of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" transcended an often sub-par acting performance.

Music Dept.

Holds Concert

The Music Department of the University of Vermont will present an evening of chamber music, Friday evening, October 30 at 8:30 P.M. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The program will include a Trio for Violin, Viola, and Cello, by the German composer, Max Reger, as well as the Quartet No. 1 in G minor, by Mozart.

The featured performers will be James Keene - violin, Mary Keene - viola, Flora Kinsey - cello, and David Kinsey - piano.

James Keene is an assistant professor of music at the University of Vermont. He has studied at the Eastman School of Music and the University of Michigan.

Mary Keene is a graduate of Wayne State University and acted as concertmaster of the Wayne State University Orchestra. She was concertmaster of the Olean, New York Symphony and was a member of the Billings Symphony Orchestra. She has appeared in recitals and chamber music programs with her husband in the mid-west and far-west.

Flora Kinsey attended the Yale Music School and studied cello from Charles Krane. She has played with the New Haven and Springfield Symphonies and was a member of the Scholarship Quartet at Yale.

David Kinsey, an associate professor of music at the University of Vermont, received his Bachelor of Music degree from Yale University and a Master of Arts and Philosophy degrees from Columbia University. He has served on the faculties of Yale University, Florida State University, and Middlebury College.

The concert will be given without charge and the public is cordially invited.

He is Vice President of the Mohegan Council, Boy Scouts of America, a member of the Personnel Directors Association, the American Management Association, and the Eastern College Personnel Officers Association. In 1961, Mr. Marshall was selected as one of Worcester's ten outstanding young men by the Worcester Junior Chamber of Commerce.

III. "The Teacher Interview for Elementary and Secondary School Position."

Mr. William F. Keough, Jr., Burlington Superintendent of Schools, Burlington, Vermont. Mr. William Keough earned the A.B. and M.Ed. Degrees from Boston College. He has done work toward the Doctorate at Boston University. Prior to coming to Vermont, he taught in schools in South Royalston, Westport, and Sudbury, Massachusetts, where he also served as an Administrative Assistant; and as elementary principal in Brimfield, Massachusetts. Mr. Keough came to his Burlington post from the Windham Central Supervisory Union where he was also Superintendent. His professional memberships include the New England Association of School Superintendents, The American Association of School Administrators, Phi Delta Kappa, and the Burlington Rotary.

IV. "The Graduate School Interview."

Mr. William H. Macmillan, Dean, Graduate College, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vermont. Dr. Macmillan acquired his A.B. from McGill University in 1948 and his Ph.D. from Yale University in 1954. In the fall of 1954 he joined the faculty of the Medical College at the University of Vermont as an Instructor in Pharmacology. From 1955 through 1958, he was Assistant Professor and from 1958 to 1959 was a U.S. Public Health Service Special Research Fellow, Department of Pharmacology, The University of Oxford, Oxford, England. Returning one year later to UVM, he was Associate Professor of Pharmacology from 1959 to 1964. For the academic year of 1962-63 he served as Acting Chairman of the Department and in 1964 became both Dean of the Graduate College and Professor of Pharmacology. He has served on numerous academic committees in the College of Medicine and the University. Dean Macmillan is also a member of Sigma Xi, New York Academy of Science, and the American Society for Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics.

V. "The Medical School Interview."

Dr. Harold B. Pierce, Assistant to the Dean, University of Vermont College of Medicine, Burlington, Vermont. Born and raised in Kansas City, Missouri, Dr. Harold Pierce was awarded the B.S. Degree from the University of Massachusetts in 1917. He served for one year as a Second Lieutenant and began his professional career as Assistant Chemist in the University of Massachusetts Experimental Station. From 1919-1926, he was an Instructor and Assistant Professor of Agricultural Biochemistry, Pennsylvania State College, earning his M.Sc. in 1921. A fellow in the Department of Vital Economics, University of Rochester 1926-1927, the Ph.D. Degree was awarded to him the following year. The period from 1928 to 1937 saw Dr. Pierce as Assistant Professor and Professor of Physiological Chemistry at Rochester. In 1937 he joined the faculty of the University of Vermont College of Medicine as Associate Professor, eventually becoming Professor of Biochemistry. One year later, 1938, he became Chairman of the Department of Biochemistry and served until 1960 at which time he was appointed Assistant to the Dean, University of Vermont College of Medicine.

"THE 120 MINUTE LIFETIME"

This year, as in all other years since the late 1940's, a swarm of well-dressed, soft-spoken, serious men will descend upon our campus. At the University of Vermont, as at other colleges and universities all across the country, they will spend one, two or three days closeted in the Placement Office talking earnestly to a long line of sometimes confused, sometimes determined, sometimes bewildered, but always eager senior and graduate students. These men are recruiters representing all variations of employers, graduate and professional schools with a mission to locate and attract the talent required to staff or study at their ever-growing and even more capable complex organizations, school systems, and institutions.

To many of our seniors and graduate students, the pleasant fellow in the conservative business suit, the Oxford buttondown collar, and the "sincere" neck tie represents the first real contact with the world beyond this campus. The recruiter smiles pleasantly, extends his hand and introduces himself to the candidate entering his office. The stage is set. What transpires is a major key towards obtaining employment or acceptance into graduate school. Yet this very same stage is one on which better than 95% of our senior and graduate students will set foot for the first time!

Next Tuesday and Wednesday evening at 8:00 P.M. in Votey Auditorium, a unique experience will be given to all senior and graduate student men and women expecting to earn a degree in the current year. Seven professional recruiters have been invited by the Placement Office to take part in an Interviewer Conference. The topics to be covered include "Preparing for the Campus Screening Interview and Taking the Campus Screening Interview"; "The Secondary Plant/Home Office Interview and the Drop-in Interview"; "The Teacher Interview for Elementary and Secondary School Positions"; "The Graduate School Interview"; and "The Medical School Interview". The program has been planned to cover subject matter little known to the overwhelming majority of our Senior and Graduate College men and women.

It makes no difference what future plans might evolve—business, industry, federal/state service, teaching, social service, the ministry, graduate school, medicine, law, dental school—entrance into each is almost universally predicated by an interview. The success of this Conference will tangibly be measured by the attendance and intangibly by the results of your own interviews. It is strongly hoped that all our Senior and Graduate College members will turn out en masse and avail themselves of this 120 minute key to a lifetime of gainful endeavor.

Letters

Logically Interested

To the Editor:

I have just been privileged (?) to read an editorial in the September 24 issue of the Vermont CYNIC under the heading "The Sceptic." This is the editorial which warns us poor uninformed Vermonters of the diabolical plan of the Burlington Free Press to turn us over to the Communists.

Well, the Free Press has been accused of a lot of things, such as being narrow-minded, pro-Republican, etc., but how on earth you can ever deduce that it is pro-Communist is beyond comprehension. Obviously, you first arrive at the conclusion, and then work up distorted facts to support the conclusion. It makes me shudder to think that you are referred to as the "leaders of the future". To think that these leaders could print an article so full of contradictions, poor grammar, and utterly bad taste.

I think that any logical thinker would have to conclude that the Free Press and David Lawrence are anti-Communist, with a capital A. The Free Press continually prints and praises articles by J. Edgar Hoover. It has continually praised the House Un-American Activities Committee.

You say Vermonters see through their scheme. I have read the Free Press for ten years and see no such scheme. Come, Come, Children, surely there are better thinkers at the University than portrayed by the writer of the "Sceptic." Dedicate yourselves to something more believable and logical.

The "Sceptic" of September 24 was passed to me by a friend to show the interest students have in politics. Interest you may have, but logic you lack.

Now, in closing, do you print articles which disagree with your point of view as the Free Press does? Or am I to conclude that you do not allow any criticism of yourselves in print?

Pataphysics??

Dear Sceptic(?):

I am shocked and outraged by your callous misspelling of 'Pataphysics. Such actions will and do incur the wrath of the entire College of 'Pataphysics. Furthermore, no Mr. Grosh is found on the lists of the College. A full apology is demanded.

I have sent a copy of The CYNIC to The Sub-Commission of Attempts and Outrages. Grave action may result. For several weeks we have been doubting the existence of the University of Vermont.

THE SCEPTIC

by Robin Schore and Miles Wortman

After a millenium of obscurity behind the mumbo-jumbo of Druidic symbolism, the code to the mysterious Mother Goose rhymes has been cracked. The Sceptic staff, aided by the pentagon, the C.I.A. and the campus security force, made this break through early this morning and now, for the first time, we present to you, the public, the unexpurgated meanings behind those harmless rhymes that had until this time been relegated to the nursery. The following will be a sample of some of our best loved lines that our own youngsters have been enjoying so long.

"With cockle shells and silver bells and pretty maids all in a row," Need we dig very hard to bring to light the poignant commentary on interracial relations contained in these innocent verses? Mistress Mary sure was a sharpie (and whose mistress was she?). Herein is an obvious attempt to subtly convince the unsuspecting to miscegenate our pretty maids with not only "cockle shells" but more important, "silver bells" and we all know who they are.

"All the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty together again." Here we see the conflict between strong federal government and state's rights. The king's horses and men, representing the various executive agencies cannot cope with all the little pieces of Humpty Dumpty Sectionalism. Is this mere nursery rhyme a tool of the states' righters intent on encouraging our naive babes to look more favorably on another civil war? Beware of these "hidden persuaders."

The "old lady who lived in a shoe" together with "Peter, Peter pumpkin eater" who kept his wife in a pumpkin shell are those unfortunates who suffer from the broken Humpty Dumpty situation.

The effects of this mordant inheritance are aptly displayed in the familial difficulties of Jack Sprat and his wife. He, poor man, "could eat no fat and his wife could eat no lean." Marriage incompatibility! Working from opposite diverging points to "lick the platter clean," this is the waste of capitalistic competitiveness and the downfall of the formerly sacred family.

And where do we find this prophet of doom and this criticism of contemporary institutions, policies and conditions? Where, but in the ancient annals of the child's book pile, on the nursery floor, in the little pink bookshelf, under the crib, it is time, and there is not much more time if we carefully weigh these new facts, to take Mother Goose out of the kiddies' rooms and into the Supreme Court and the House UNAmerican activities Committee. Let us give thanks that we have discovered the secret terror contained in our own homes, the horrors absorbed by our under-sixes, the tales of dearth and woe that subvert the young. Alarum! Alarum! "Little boy blue come blow your horn!"

Students Urged To Fight Poverty

WASHINGTON (CPS) -- The nation's colleges and universities will be in the front lines of the administration's anti-poverty army this year.

They will provide faculty troops to serve as directors and staff members of anti-poverty programs in remedial education and as project consultants in other areas.

Students and recent graduates can enlist as paid teachers and counselors for the Job Corps, work training programs, the adult literacy programs. They can also volunteer to help in local anti-poverty projects or join the domestic peace corps, VISTA, for a year.

About 600 people are needed to teach for one year periods and serve as counsellors in the Job Corps' conservation camps. About 20 camps are scheduled to be opened this fall. Within a year, there will be about 150 camps for 20,000 high school drop-outs and draft rejects.

Although trained teachers are preferred, there is no set certification or experience requirements for Job Corps teachers. Salaries will range upwards from $5000.

Applications can be obtained from the Office of Economic Opportunity, Box 100, Washington 20506, D.C.

Universities will have major responsibilities in running the Job Corps' 1000-1500 person educational and vocational training centers. These centers will grow to about 20,000, or the same number of boys as the conservation camps.

The Office of Economic Opportunity is currently contacting universities about staffing and developing curricula for these centers. The first two or three centers should be in operation by the end of the year.

Social scientists in particular are expected to contribute their research skills to the planning and evaluating of community action and other programs.

Faculty and administrators will be serving as both consultants and staff members on programs. A number of them have already taken leaves to work on the task forces setting up the various programs in the Economic Opportunity Act passed this summer.

Large numbers of students receiving federal aid under the anti-poverty bill's work-study program are expected to be hired by community organizations engaged in fighting poverty.

It is expected also that schools and departments of education will play a very large part in developing methods and materials for the anti-poverty bill's other remedial education programs.

One of these programs is the adult basic literacy program, which will center on reading, writing, oral communication skills, and computation.

Instructors in these programs will work part time and may be drawn heavily from groups of retired persons and housewives whose children have grown up.

It is "entirely possible," according to Milton C. Cummings of the Office of Education, that college students may be hired as instructors in adult literacy programs. Some volunteers might also be used.

Those interested in working on adult literacy programs should contact the adult education unit in their local school districts, Cummings said.

Finally, up to 5000 volunteers will be chosen in the next 12 months to serve in VISTA. The program's backers hope the volunteers' work will create a spirit of "national involvement" and spur others to help in their local anti-poverty programs.

Preliminary VISTA applications are available from VISTA, Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington 20506, D.C.

Senior and Graduate men and women should pick up FSEE Application Forms in the Placement Office now.

NSF Offers Fellowships

The National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has been called upon again to advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's program of graduate and regular postdoctoral fellowships. Committees of outstanding scientists appointed by the Academy-Research Council will evaluate applications of all candidates. Final selection will be made by the Foundation, with awards to be announced on March 15, 1965.

Fellowships will be awarded for study in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological and engineering sciences; also in anthropology, economics (excluding business administration), geography, the history and philosophy of science, linguistics, political science, psychology (excluding clinical psychology), and sociology (not including social work). They are open to college seniors, graduate students working toward a degree, postdoctoral students, and others with equivalent training and experience. All applicants must be citizens of the United States and will be judged solely on the basis of ability.

Applicants for the graduate awards will be required to take the Graduate Record Examinations designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement. The examinations, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on January 16, 1965, at designated centers throughout the United States and certain foreign countries.

The annual stipends for graduate Fellows are as follows: $2400 for the first level; $2600 for the intermediate level; and $2800 for the terminal level. The annual stipend for postdoctoral Fellows is $5500. Limited allowances will also be provided to apply toward tuition, laboratory fees, and travel.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20418. The deadline for the receipt of applications for graduate fellowships is December 11, 1964, and for regular postdoctoral fellowships, December 14, 1964.

year, this committee will be considered dormant. However, as interest arises, so does the organization and the mechanism with which to participate.

Those of us who viewed Kake Walk in 1964 felt that a few participating teams did not display the high standards of walking held by the majority of the Kake Walkers. It is suggested, therefore, that prior to the two formal nights of walking the Kake Walkers be screened.

1. The purpose of this screening is not to reduce the field of participants to any special number, but to insure that all walkers are capable of performing their routines well.

2. We feel that the screening committee should include the Kake Walk directors for the following reasons:

A. They are in contact with Walkers during the entire training program; therefore, they are in an excellent position to recognize a lack of time and effort, which might be correlated with a poor performance.

B. We feel that the screening should take place at the two preliminary walking sessions. This gives the directors an opportunity to see the walkers twice and insures that the walkers have had adequate chance to prove themselves.

C. The screening procedure is an opportunity to eliminate those teams not ready to participate.

D. If a team is not prepared to participate and therefore is incapable of performing well, we do not feel it an injustice to eliminate them from the program. It is a matter of time and effort to be able to perform one's routine well.

Because of the presence of the screening program, we feel that the Walkers will work harder to insure their participation and thereby improve the overall quality of the walking.

Another consideration of the President's Kake Walk Committee was the 1964 judging system which consisted of several judges, each concentrating on a particular area of the Walkers, i.e., head, shoulders, kick, etc. If a judge were entering a remark on the judging sheet, it is possible to miss a particular mistake. Therefore, we feel that as well as the "parts" judges, two judges should be added to view the overall performances of the Walkers. This addition would improve the calibre of the judging as well as enable a better cross-section of opinion to be obtained.

Along with the problems of the judging system in 1964, came the problem of the recognition of the Walkers. A light green face was used in the 1964 Kake Walk. Not only was the identity of the Walkers too apparent, but this choice of color seemed to detract from the general costumes of the walkers. Therefore, it is suggested that a darker face and a head covering be used.

1. A uniform darker face could be used.

2. A possibility of employing different dark colors according to the individual color schemes of the Walkers's costume, i.e., dark purple, red, blue, green. This would not only solve the problem of discrimination, but also add a more brilliant color scheme to the walking.

3. A dark, close-fitting head covering should be employed to add to the uniformity.

It is also suggested that an orientation program be held for the Walkers, instructing them in the points on which they will be judged and on the "correct way of walking."

These proposals entailed a considerable amount of research and have been agreed upon by all members of our committee. In conclusion, we, the members of the President's Committee on the Evaluation of Kake Walk, feel that these proposals are designed to improve the quality of K.W.

ANYONE FOR TELEVISION?

Students at Vermont may find themselves sharing the campus with a real live television studio in the near future. There will be little danger, however, that they'll find themselves in front of the candid camera, since the primary goal of the whole thing will be to enrich in-school programming for elementary and secondary students of Vermont.

Evening cultural programming will be offered, however, so it is not inconceivable that University Players' casts may have a chance to perform on the "telly."

FATHERED BY FORD

The whole thing started when the Ford Foundation gave the University a $20,000 grant to study ETV for Vermont -- its prospects, its needs, its feasibility.

The result: a proposal for a statewide network was sent to the 1963 Vermont Legislature with a request for $1,595,000 in funds to construct the system. The Legislature said no to that amount at that time, but appropriated $5,000 and instructed the University to use it to preserve the state's interest in the four UHF channels reserved for ETV in Vermont by the Federal Communications Commission. The proposal will go back to the 1965 Legislature, sure as there will be snow at Stowe.

Both Governor Philip H. Hoff and Lt. Gov. Ralph A. Foote have gone on record as favoring ETV for the Green Mountain State, and both have said they hope ETV will be given consideration in the coming Legislature.

The University presently has an application before the Department of Health, Education and Welfare seeking $650,000 in matching federal funds for construction of the system; and John J. Hurley, deputy assistant to H.E.W.'s undersecretary, was on campus last week as part of a New England wide tour to collect data on plans for ETV. Nationally, he reports, educational television is booming, and there's no end in sight for the boom. Vermont's prospects for matching federal funds, H.E.W.'s Hurley reports, do not appear unreasonable.

B. & G. BACK AT OLD STAND

Dean of Men Roland Patzer is candidly pleased with the way Buildings and Grounds has handled security on campus since taking over from Burns at the end of the two year contract between the University and the internationally-known agency. Buildings and Grounds Superintendent Dave Demsky has named Fred Barrett to the chief security post, and has retained uniforms and automotive patrol introduced by Burns.

Since university officials are mostly realists (cross my heart, they are), they do not expect students here or elsewhere to do backflips at news of the fact or theory of security.

NOT QUITE AS OLD AS EVE

After all, the history of college age intolerance for law enforcement goes back as far as college age students, if not farther. More often than not good natured, it occasionally reaches unwieldy proportions in such romantic places as New Haven, Conn., or Hampton Beach. It is by no means a new world phenomenon, as Europe's old university towns can attest; and even the Communists are not immune from its slings and arrows, though dictators are notoriously less amused by the phenomena than those who govern by consent of the governed.

In general, University of Vermont students have gotten on fairly well with local police and campus security forces. There have been, in more than 160 years, occasions when spirits exceeded temperance and, whether or not we like to admit it, the forces on the side of law enforcement (a minority group, by the way) have been creditably tolerant. But then, law enforcement officers grow older with time; like the rest of us. College students are mostly always the same age. Year after year, Generation after generation. Few of us privileged to work with them would change it for anything.

Apply Now For Study Grants

WASHINGTON (CPS) -- The application deadline for foreign study grants for next year under the Fulbright Act and the Buenos Aires convention is November 1.

Approximately 1,000 grants are available under the Fulbright Act, and two grants for each Central and South American country are available under the Buenos Aires convention.

Applicants must have a B.A., present an acceptable plan of graduate study, be U.S. citizens, and preferably know the language of their host country.

Applications for both programs are available from the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67 Street, New York 21, New York.

Alpha Phi Omega Pushes Blood Drive

A group of students seeking to organize a chapter of the national service fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega, are hoping students and staff on the Vermont campus will set aside Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 28 and 29, the dates on which the group is organizing a University-wide blood drawing for the Vermont-New Hampshire Red Cross Regional Blood Center.

Jim Baxendale is serving as chairman of the group seeking to organize the Alpha Phi Omega chapter here, and he is also serving as co-chairman, with Bruce Alger, for the Oct. 28-29 blood drive.

The group is currently seeking S.A. recognition to make Vermont one of more than 300 U.S. campuses with chapters of the service fraternity which has as its aim "to assemble college men in the fellowship of the Scout Oath and Law, to develop leadership, to promote friendship, to provide service to humanity, and to further the freedom that is our national, educational and intellectual heritage."

In addition to Baxendale and Alger, charter organizers seeking establishment of an APO chapter here include Pete Fredericks, Myles Gladstone, Douglas Holland, Morris Root, and Fred Sole.

Advisors include Dean of Men Roland Patzer, and H. Reed Saunders, director of financial aid; Emil Spees, director of student activities and of Billings Center; and Prof. James A. Root of the department of civil engineering.

Further information about the fraternity may be obtained through Baxendale, Alger or one of the advisors.

The group is currently making arrangements to distribute reservation cards for the blood drawing in the residence halls and in fraternity and sorority houses. It is not necessary to fill in a card to give, since walk-in donors will be welcome on both days of the drawing.

The drawing will be at the Blood Center on Mansfield Ave., just around the corner from Ira Allen Chapel. Goal for the two-day drawing has been set at 300 pints, Baxendale said.

Last spring, students and staff contributed 309 pints in a similar two-day drawing sponsored by the Ethan Allen Rifles.

Since the Blood Center opened in 1950, students and staff of the University have contributed more than 5000 pints of blood at University drawings. Many more have given at other drawings, Red Cross officials report.

Show Is First Production Of Season; Players To Present "South Pacific"

by Robin Frost

The University Players' production of "South Pacific" to be presented December 3-7 in the Arena Theater, will be the first major production of their new season to use the new dressing room, rehearsal room, and Green Room facilities.

Speech department head Edward Feigner will direct the musical, which will involve close to fifty students. Music director is to be Professor Frank Lidlal, vocal coach Assistant Professor Francis Weinrich, director of choreography Miss Mary Lee, and technical director speech instructor Bob Ackley. Joint production by the departments of speech, drama, and music, the Dance Workshop, and the University Players will allow for greater specialization and thus greater refinement in all facets of "South Pacific."

With the exception of last year, the Players have put on an opera or musical since 1958 when the Arena Theater was built. Prior to the theater's construction, Southwick gym and the museum's lecture auditorium were the sites for all productions. Expansion of facilities has resulted in expansion of the field of possibilities from which the repertoire is chosen.

For those who are not familiar with the Arena Theater, it is located in the basement of the Fleming Museum, which is directly north of Bailey Library across East Campus. Plays are presented in a pit surrounded by seats on three sides. The stage is very flexible, for its shape can be changed by rearranging or removing seats. Although it appears small, the theater is well-equipped for all types of productions.

Also located in the museum basement are the rehearsal room, formerly used for geology displays and now equipped with special lighting facilities, two large dressing rooms, and the Green Room, a lounge for the players.

To momentarily look at the Players from a historical point of view, the University of Vermont had a moderately active Dramatics Club for several years prior to 1945. In that year the club adopted a new constitution and became the University Players, to which over two hundred students from all colleges belong at present. As stated in the constitution, the purposes of the organization are to "increase interest, stimulate creativeness, and to foster artistic achievement in and through the practice of the allied arts and crafts of the theater."

Taking into account the success of past Players' productions and the excellent theatrical facilities, there is no doubt that "South Pacific" will mean another success for the University Players.

UVM Nets ECAC Crown

Last Saturday John Alder and Win Marston led our tennis team to an unprecedented victory. The team swept 15 points out of a possible 16 points in the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Championship (E.C.A.C.). For the first time in UVM history, our tennis team placed first in the ECAC.

This tournament was played at Rider College in Trenton, N.J. Some of the participating colleges were: Fairleigh Dickinson, Lehigh, Franklin and Marshall, Lafayette, Temple, Hunter, Rider, Moravin, and Saint John's. Each college entered two players in the singles competition, and one team to compete for the doubles championship. Since there were so many schools competing for the championship, each player's first round consisted of playing twelve games.

John Adler had to overcome the number one players from Hunter, Rider, and Rutgers, in his climb to the E.C.A.C. finals. His toughest and most exciting match came against the number one player of Rutgers, who had never been defeated in four years of intercollegiate competition. John lost the first set 4-6. However, he fought back brilliantly and took the next two sets 6-3 and 7-5.

Win Marston, UVM's second candidate in the singles tournament had to overcome the number one players from Fairleigh Dickinson, Lehigh, Franklin and Marshall and Temple. He had some trouble with Temple's leading contender. However, he managed to defeat him in three sets, 6-1, 5-7, and 6-3.

Our doubles team consisted of Paul Ryan and Laddie Cooke. Both should be congratulated for their excellent performance. They defeated the doubles team from Hunter, Franklin Marshall, and Rider College. They failed to overcome Moravin and were defeated 6-4 and 8-6.

John Adler is without a doubt the finest tennis player ever to emerge from UVM. John is a transfer student from the University of Florida. He received a great deal of excellent training from his father, Jerry Adler, who at one time attained a high national ranking.

Win Marston is also a transfer student. He transferred from Wesleyan in Connecticut. This is the first season of eligibility for both of these boys, and it will also be the last. Both are seniors and will graduate this June.

John Adler became E.C.A.C. Champion when Win Marston pulled a muscle and was forced to default the match. When I asked John how he felt, he told me that it was impossible to describe. He played the best tennis of his career, and at the time I interviewed him, he seemed more concerned about his Spanish grade than he did about winning the tournament. He is quite a champion.

Two years ago, Coach Marston decided that this would be his last year as tennis coach. He hopes to do some research work and take a leave of absence. He has certainly done an excellent job and his team is rewarding him for his tireless effort by giving him a season which he certainly can be proud of.

The tennis team was not at its full strength for the E.C.A.C. tournament because Rich Holden, their captain, was out with a sprained ankle.

According to Marston and Adler, the team should place "in the top three," this spring in the always tough New England Collegiate Championships. There they will come face to face with Harvard, Yale, Brown, Colgate, Cornell, etc. - As for the Yankee Conference Championships in April, "the team can hardly wait."

Cats Seek Fifth Win

The Catamounts are off to their best start since 1899 with four consecutive victories. Last week our mighty eleven overhauled Rhode Island 16-8 in what was a hard fought yet clean contest.

Vermont began its scoring punch early in the first quarter (3 minutes gone), when Ken Andrade powered his way into the end zone from the four. We obtained the ball minutes earlier on the Ram's thirty-three yard line. It was there that Bill Foster recovered a Rhode Island fumble of the opening kick-off.

Andrade cemented Vermont's fourth straight win of the young season with a 45 yard field goal late in the first period. The 45 yard boot is the longest in Catamount History.

Rhode Island pulled to within one point of Vermont in the second quarter behind the passing of quarterback Greg Gutzler. Billy Bryant scored on a one yard plunge, and the two point conversion attempt was good. Bryant's scoring drive was the first touchdown scored rushing against the Cats this season.

Both teams remained scoreless in the third period but Vermont added an insurance touchdown in the final frame. This followed an interception by Bill Leete with 36 seconds showing on the clock. Rich Reynolds smashed over from the two yard line and Andrade converted the extra point.

Vermont rolled up a total of 257 yards against the Rams, 87 in the air, and 170 on the ground. Dean Kent led the Cats with 61 yards in ten carries and he received two Fitz passes for an additional 31 yards.

Vermont is in a tie with Massachusetts for leadership in the Yankee Conference. Both teams have won twice in conference play.

The undefeated Catamounts are off to Durham, New Hampshire for a Yankee game. UVM is seeking its fifth consecutive win this season.

The game will be televised over WMTW (Channel 8) beginning at 2 o'clock p.m. Vermont will go with the same lineup as the past three games. Their toughest competition will come from the passing attack of Peter Ballo, who has completed 23 passes for 263 yards and a T.D. Ballo's leading target is Ken Olson who has snared nine passes for 74 yards.

Oelze: Guard Of The Week

Capt. George Oelze was selected to ECAC weekly team for play against Rhode Island. (Credit: SPS)

For the third week in a row, a University of Vermont football player has won a berth on the weekly ECAC All East team (college division).

Earning the plaudits of the press for his play last Saturday was guard George Oelze. The 195-pound senior from Union City, N.J., turned in one of the finest efforts of his three-year career as a starter at Vermont. The former captain, who teams with Rusty Brink to give Vermont what many observers believe is the best linebacking in New England, picked up 25 defensive points for his play in the Catamount's 16-8 win over Rhode Island, a victory that preserved Vermont's undefeated skein at five games.

In the previous two weeks of the weekly selections, center Rusty Brink had twice been selected for the team.

In the weekly Lambert Cup poll, despite its victory, Vermont slipped from its fifth place rating of last week to eighth this week.

BACKFIELD IMPRESSIVE

Fullback Richie Reynolds continues to be the top rushing leader for the University of Vermont football team but quarterback Scott Fitz has taken over as total offense leader.

Reynolds, a senior from West New York, N.J., has churned out 245 yards in 60 carries for a 4.0 average and has scored two touchdowns. He has been the workhorse of the Vermont staff. Two other senior halfbacks are second and third. Frank Foerster of Union City, N.J., has 181 yards on 36 carries while Ken Andrade of Falmouth, Mass., has 164 on 42 trips.

By completing six of 11 passes against Rhode Island for 87 yards, Fitz, a Nashua, N.H., junior became the team's offensive leader. He has now passed for 241 yards and run for 51 for a total of 292 yards.

Foerster and Andrade also share scoring honors, both with 18 points apiece. Foerster on three touchdowns, Andrade on one TD, nine PATs (11 attempts) and a prodigious 45-yard field goal, a Vermont record.

Deane Kent, Rutland senior and the top pass receiver for the past two years, again heads the receiving department with five catches for 72 yards.

Harriers Win

by Dick Frostig

Walt Stowell posted a winning time of 23:50 on the four-mile UVM course Saturday, as the cross country harriers coasted to a 38-22 win over Union College. Vermont grabbed the first, third, fifth, sixth and seventh places to take the meet. Light rain and cold temperatures, however, made running conditions unfavorable.

The meet, by the way, pitted two of the nations veteran coaches against one another. UVM's Archie Post is in his 36th season, while Union's Bill Ketz is starting his 34th year.

In Vermont's opener last Wednesday against R.P.I., they were edged 29-26, as Walt Stowell was again top man with a time of 27:06 minutes.

The summary:

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------|
| 1. Walt Stowell (V) | 23:50 |
| 2. Ring (U) | 24:04 |
| 3. Doug Kibbe (V) | 25:20 |
| 4. Campman (U) | 25:25 |
| 5. Sid Young (V) | 25:28 |
| 6. Frank Pataniello (V) | 25:34 |
| 7. Rich Ashton (V) | 25:40 |
| 8. Bob Brooks (V) | 26:27 |
| 9. Morris (U) | 26:42 |
| 10. Johnny Morse (V) | 26:50 |

In a second meet on Saturday the freshmen hill and dalers made it three in a row by sweeping the first five places to trounce the Union frosh 15-42.

Golf Team Swings Into Fall Action

Golf, traditionally a spring sport in intercollegiate competition has begun a fall training and competition program similar to that initiated by the baseball and ski teams. Coached by the UVM director of athletics, S. Edward Donnelly, the Cats golf squad is dominated by sophomores. Of the eight men on the team, seven of whom compete in competition, six are sophomores, one is a junior, and the lone senior, Steve Slack, is the captain. Practices and home matches are held at the Burlington Country Club, which is adjacent to the Redstone Campus.

In preseason competition the Catamounts have traveled to Dartmouth, where they were defeated 5-2, and to Montreal where they placed 3rd in a five team field. To date, the Cats have played host to M.I.T., whom they defeated 4-3, and to the E.C.A.C. (Eastern Inter-Collegiate Athletic Conference) regional qualifying meet in which they failed to qualify by not placing in the top 2 of a 12 team field. Despite these unencouraging pre-season results, the squad is looking forward to a highly successful spring season in which they seem a sure bet to cop the Yankee Conference and to place high in the New England Tournament.

The golf team shows remarkable talent when one considers seven of the varsity members can, and consistently do shoot fine scores in the low seventies. With most schools, the team is considered fortunate if it has 2 or 3 members who can break eighty. This year's squad is headed by Captain and senior Steve Slack. Steve has a highly creditable six handicap. Rounding out the squad is junior Jim Nixon, and sophomores Joe Donnelly, Art Shields, Tony Rish, George Van Tassel, Matt Brown, and Lloyd Heir. Heir posts a fine three handicap and at the present leads his team in low score.

S.A. Elections Forthcoming

On Wednesday evening, November 4, 1964, the UVM S.A. Senate will conduct its weekly meeting before a newly elected and installed body of S.A. Senators. Between now and Nov. 4, elections will be held in all living units for new Senators. The way in which these Senators will be elected this year is as follows: The fraternities and sororities and single-floor girl's dorms Robinson, Redstone, Slade and Allen House will hold selection of new Senators at a meeting of the whole living unit. For the men's dorms both freshman and upper men's voting will be held on Thursday evening Oct. 29 from 7-11 p.m. in the freshman dorms at the Counselor-on-duty's room and in the upper men's dorms at the Marsh head desk. For the large girl's dorms voting will be held from 7-11:30 p.m. at the head desk in each dorm.

Between now and Monday, Oct. 26, 1964 all students living in dormitories who wish to represent their dorm at S.A. should compile a petition with the signatures of 25 members of the living unit they wish to represent. They should have their name and the name of their living unit of this petition and have these turned in by 4:15 p.m. on Monday the 26, 1964. This is the deadline for running and only those persons turning in petitions by the above deadline will be allowed to run for S.A. Senator of their dorm.

It is hoped that seriously minded students who want to represent their living unit at S.A. and also who wish to serve on S.A. will consider running for an S.A. Senate position. It is also hoped that the members of the living units will vote wisely for the person whom they feel can best represent them and their interests at S.A.

If there are any questions on the above procedures call Bob Lampke ext. 343 or at 2-7948.

Opera Lovers Only ???

By Betty Miller
A brand new production of Johann Strauss' lilted "Die Fledermaus," one of the season's highlights offered by the New York City Opera Co. this fall, will be seen at Memorial Auditorium, on Monday, Oct. 26. The gifted Julius Rudel, General Director of City Opera, who also will be one of the conductor's stand, has imaginatively staged this opera with a spirited and knowing hand.

This Blue Concert will mark the ninth successive year the City Opera has been a guest of the Lane Series, and Rudel's eighth year conducting it here. The Strauss work which was previously performed in Burlington in 1956 is in a brilliant and witty English translation by Ruth and Thomas Martin and will have the benefit of one of the finest casts in the City Opera galaxy. Beverly Sills will be the beautiful Rosalinda with Anee Elgar as Adele. The large cast includes Jon Crain, John Stamford, and Coley Worth among many others.

The New York City Opera Co. was born out of the depression in 1943 when Mecca Temple became the property of the city of New York. In the beginning it was to have been a musical

WRUV Growth Benefits All

WRUV began its 14th year of collegiate broadcasting Wed., Sept. 30. Since then, the processes of innovation and improvement have been working to promote the new WRUV. Let me introduce the new WRUV to you.

You may recognize WRUV as the old brown barn behind Pomeroy Hall. However, this "barn" contains some of the finest broadcasting equipment in the state of Vermont and the broadcasting originating from there is on a par with the best collegiate broadcasting in the nation. However, this year WRUV is striving to build and improve to meet its special obligations and the needs of its unique listening audience at the University of Vermont.

What's new at WRUV? The most important changes to the listener have been in programming. The accent this year is on "playing what the students want to hear" according to station manager, Bob Piper. To this end, the tempo picked up immediately after dinner and by seven o'clock currently popular music prevails on "Jamboree." An agreement has been reached with the Billboard Top 100 Service to provide the necessary records for the show.

Programing should be greatly facilitated and improved this year with the addition of a projected cartridge tape machine. This machine runs commercials, news, weather and spot announcements, etc., on a continuous piece of tape which automatically re-winds and cues itself, making it possible to produce a wider variety of programming and introduce a more professional sound on campus. The professional touch should also be aided by the installation of a United Press International news machine. With this machine, news programs can be produced which emphasize items of interest to college students.

The greatest innovation this year will be the introduction of FM broadcasting at WRUV. An FCC construction permit for equipment is expected to be approved in the near future. Once this approval is received, work can proceed in the construction of FM broadcasting facilities. After a series of tests, a ten watt FM station will begin transmission on a test basis. This is expected to begin sometime at the beginning of next semester. It is also hoped that affiliation can be achieved with the Educational Radio Network. This 10 watt facility will be just the beginning with a good deal of growth in the future of FM radio at the University of Vermont.

Last year WRUV began re-broadcasting CJFM, Montreal. CJFM's FM signals were converted to AM and re-transmitted through WRUV facilities. This type of arrangement provided twenty-four hours a day broadcasting and made WRUV the only twenty-four hour station in Burlington. It still is. It will also continue as part of the CBS Radio Network this year.

Student broadcasting begins each weekday evening at five o'clock with "A La Carte" which is the dinner music piped into the university dining halls. At seven o'clock it's time for "Jamboree." The top in popular records and golden hits are accented on this show until nine o'clock when folk, jazz and show music take the spot light on Sounds on Campus until eleven o'clock. Nocturne runs from eleven to one. The idea of this show is to provide quiet study or mood music. WRUV broadcasts CJFM, Montreal from one o'clock a.m. until student broadcasting is resumed at five the following afternoon.

Directors Plan - K W

Kake Walk may seem far in the future but the directors of this 68th annual Kake Walk have already begun their work on the oldest collegiate winter carnival in the country. Such duties as looking for entertainment, drawing up a budget, picking a secretary and assistant directors, are presently on their agenda. This year's directors are Steve Slack, Production; Steve Watson, Finance; Cal Walker, Publicity.

Steve Slack, from Washington, D.E., is a Commerce and Economics major. He is a brother of Sigma Phi, which he has served as secretary and treasurer. Steve, a former member of Key and Serpent, is now president of Boulder. He is also captain of the golf team and an athletic council representative.

Steve Watson hails from Lyndonville, Vt. He is a Chemistry major and has received a National Science Foundation Fellowship in this field. Steve is a brother of Lambda Iota and is their IFC representative. He has served IFC as chairman of the Constitution Committee and as a member of the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee. A Dean's List man since his freshman year, Steve is also a member of Boulder.

Cal Walker is a native of Underhill, Vt., and is an Animal and Dairy Science major. A brother of Alpha Gamma Rho, he served as pledge master and is now rushing chairman. Cal has been a member of Gold Key and Key and Serpent, and he is now secretary-treasurer of Boulder. Cal also is a member of Alpha Zeta.

Mock Election

On Wednesday, Oct. 28, 1964, all UVM students and faculty will get an opportunity to participate in S.A. Mock Election for Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates. This Mock Election is being run to give the students who are not eligible to vote in National elections a chance to vote for the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates who they would vote for if eligible to vote. We are opening the voting up to students and faculty who are eligible to vote in November in order to get a more representative idea of how UVM would vote in the November elections.

The voting hours will be as follows:

Billings - S.A. Office 9-4 p.m.
Simpson Dining Hall - 4:30-6:30
Waterman lower lobby - 5:00-6:30
Marsh Lobby - 4:30-6:30
Waterman Faculty Lounge - 11-11:1 p.m.

October 28, 1964.

See you at the Polls.

Give Blood

A record turnout by students, faculty and staff at the blood drawing on Oct. 28-29 could boost the all-time University contribution to 6000 pints of blood.

Since 1950, a total of 5586 pints have been donated. The drawing on the 28-29 is being sponsored by students seeking to organize a chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, on the Vermont campus. The drawing is scheduled for the Blood Center on Mansfield Ave., from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

comedy showcase, but before the first season's curtain rose in 1944, opera was included.

The dynamism of City Opera under the direction of Julius Rudel has come to the forefront of opera house not only in America, but throughout the world.

Writing in The New Yorker magazine, the astute Winthrop Sargent wrote, "The New York City Opera commands the loyalty of an extraordinary group of singing actors, who, in turn, command the loyalty of a solicitous management. It finds and utilizes the talents of good American artists demanding the imprimatur of previous European celebrity..."

Julius Rudel, who has led the New York City Opera as its General Director since 1957, has achieved a stature in the world of opera unparalleled in recent operatic history. For, not only is he the company's imaginative administrative head, but also he is its leading conductor, a position of eminence that has brought him to the foremost podiums in the United States and Europe.

"Die Fledermaus," so full of entrancing waltzes and polkas, is the first work the eminent maestro has both staged and will conduct. To go with so beautiful a production, Mr. Rudel has cast the work with a fine hand for both singing voices and acting ability. In a review of this new production, a critic of the New York Times recently said, "The City Center is known for the youthfulness, good looks, fresh voices and clear enunciation of its singers, and those in Fledermaus lived up to this reputation. They sang with style and grace, and hardly a syllable was not clear enough to be understood in the auditorium."

Julius Rudel himself declared, "This work is really one of our season's most important productions and I am happy, indeed, to have our company bring it to the music lovers of your community. Burlington has always received us well and we feel we owe your city the best we have to offer in music."

Philharmonic Produces High Quality Sounds

The main essence of music is its worldwide popularity, for it is a universal language utilized by all peoples. This aspect was particularly well illustrated by the appearance of the Japanese Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra last week in our Lane Series.

The Japanese Philharmonic is a relatively young and aspiring orchestra. Their first United States tour, is proving to be quite successful, giving audiences an opportunity to hear Asian interpretations of music, as opposed to the usual American and European.

The first work presented by conductor Akeo Watanabe was William Schuman's American Festival Overture. It is a many colored work, written somewhat in Aron Coplands' style of developing folk material. For such a modern work of music the orchestra performed it admirably well.

They followed with a Japanese composition, Mayuzumi's Essay for Strings. Mayuzumi is the most prominent composer in Japan, and has recently taken up the avant garde atonal style of composition. The work did not have any true musical development in the sense of a melody, just an endless flowing of discordant and confusing sounds. It was received quite poorly by an equally confused audience.

The highlight of the evening followed, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E Minor with soloist

Toshiya Eto. This concerto is one of the most taxing, requiring a masterful musician with excellent technical virtuosity. Eto seemed to struggle with the high and low registers, the music not flowing but being forced from his instrument. The orchestra, however, was masterful, bringing out the soul of the concerto and carrying Eto to a very moving allegro molto vivace.

After intermission the philharmonic returned with Sibelius's Second Symphony in D Major. There is a fervent feeling of nationalism flowing throughout the work; depicting Finland's struggle for and final attainment of independence. Conductor Watanabe is a well known expert on Sibelius, and the orchestra played with appropriate familiarity. The Second Symphony involves the listener as well as the musician, the pulsating reaching a moving climax in the allegro moderato. This was a truly excellent orchestra playing now, bringing the symphony to amazing heights with broad, sweeping tones.

For a very interesting encore the philharmonic played a traditional Japanese ceremonial dance, (reminiscent of the Vienna Symphonies' performance of the Viennese Waltz last year) with a great deal of feeling and pride. It had proved to be a very worthwhile evening, for we had heard one of the world's top orchestras in fine form.

Belafonte sings what every man feels

In his latest album, "Ballads, Blues and Boasters," Belafonte brings to mind the words of an old spiritual, "... sometimes I'm up, sometimes I'm down ..." With a wide variety of songs, he expresses the moods that every man (and woman) experiences at one time or another. Boasters like "Tone the Bell Easy" and "Back of the Bus," find Belafonte in a satisfied and expansive mood while blues such as "Blue Willow Moan" are for everyone who has ever known trouble. And, of course, ballads like "Four Strong Winds" find Harry right at home in his musical element. A dynamic performance in Dynagroove sound!

PR's Honor Capt. Karin

Karen Ringdahl

The officers and brothers of Company L-12, National Honorary Society of Pershing Rifles, installed Miss Karin Ringdahl as their sponsor in a formal ceremony held Oct. 21 in the Military Science building. Commanding Officer Peter Sheridan presented Miss Ringdahl with the honorary rank of Captain in Pershing Rifles.

A 1963 graduate of the Emma Willard School and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eskil B. Ringdahl of Mohawk Acres, Rome, New York, 19 year old Miss Ringdahl is a sophomore majoring in medical technology.

In addition to serving as vice-president of her pledge class of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Miss Ringdahl is an avid skier - both on and off the slopes, a better-than-average golfer and an accomplished pianist.

As company sponsor, Miss Ringdahl will attend company meetings, social functions, and accompany the drill team to various meets on the Pershing Rifles' drill circuit. She will also compete against sponsors from the other 10 Pershing Rifles companies in the 12th Regiment for the title of Regimental Queen. L-12 has been extremely proud to furnish two Regimental Queens in the last two years - Misses Sally Tauchert and Judy Greene. In the Spring of 1963 Miss Tauchert placed second in the National Pershing Rifles sponsor contest.

Miss Ringdahl has commented that she intends to work closely with the company and is anxiously looking forward to our first Regimental Drill Meet in Boston.

ACS Opens On Campus

In February 1964, the University of Vermont was granted permission by the American Chemical Society to form the UVM Chapter of Student Affiliates of the A.C.S. This new campus organization, open to any student taking courses in chemistry, will enhance general interest in chemistry on the UVM campus.

Last year the UVM affiliates held three lecture meetings, two coffee hours for chemistry faculty and graduate students, and an open house for all UVM students and townspeople.

Plans for this year include visits to industrial installations, lectures by scientists from off campus, and a joint meeting with chemistry students at Middlebury, Norwich and St. Michael's.

Anyone wishing either to join the UVM Chapter of Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Society or to attend meetings should watch the special bulletin board on the first floor of Williams Science Hall where announcements will appear.

Prof Returns From Paris

A University of Vermont doctor has recently returned from Paris where he attended the Fourth International Congress of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation.

Dr. Robert Smith of the department of epidemiology and community medicine attended the week-long meeting which attracted physicians from all over the world. An added sidelight to the Congress was a tour of selected medical facilities in France.

Dr. Smith, who is associated with rehabilitation work, reports that one of the highlights of the week was a demonstration of artificial extremities which can feel and move themselves, and built-in power and mechanical memories which permit paralyzed extremities to learn and carry out useful functions.

"The purpose of the Congress," said Dr. Smith, "is to study ways of helping disabled people to become as independent as possible and, while much research and experimenting remains to be done, this demonstration definitely shows what future methods will make possible."

Columbia Frats Integrate

NEW YORK (CPS) — All sixteen social fraternity chapters at Columbia University have complied with the school's requirement that they file a "Declaration of Non-Discriminatory Practices," although one house had to disaffiliate from its national organization in order to do so.

The local chapter of the Sigma Chi fraternity found it necessary to resign from the national fraternity. The resignation was accepted, effective Oct. 1, 1964, by Harry V. Wade, national president of Sigma Chi.

The requirement was originally stated as a university policy in 1953, with the date for compliance set as Oct. 1, 1960, and later extended to Oct. 1, 1964.

The university said that after this date "no fraternity, social organization, or other student group shall be permitted to function on the university campus if it is compelled by its constitution, rituals, or government to deny membership to any person because of his race, creed, color, or national origin."

The prohibition would not apply to "a student group that is organized in good faith for devotional purposes or for the study or propagation of a religious faith."

The University also required that alumni organizations responsible for the local chapters, and the national organizations of the fraternities, join in the "Declaration of Non-Discriminatory Practices."

Advanced ROTC Holds Smoker

The Military Science Department will hold a Smoker for all Advanced ROTC Cadets in Lower Waterman Lounge on October 22 from 6:30 to 9:30. Acting Brigade Commander Hubert Safford will make a few opening remarks followed by an introductory speech by Colonel Robinson. Major Wenz will speak on the recent ROTC Appropriations Bill which has just gone through Congress. Also attending will be Acting President Rowell and Dean Patzer. A film will be shown followed by refreshments.

Chaplain Finds Value in Premarital Sex

OTTAWA, Canada (CPS-CUP) — A chaplain at Carleton University has suggested that premarital sexual relations are justifiable if they contribute to personal growth.

Writing in The Carleton, student newspaper at Carleton University, Rev. Gerald W. Paul, representing the Anglican, Presbyterian and United churches on campus said recently "only if we are certain the sexual relationship will help more than harm our partner in the long run as well as in the immediate encounter, are we justified in premarital sex."

Rev. Paul said the reasonable student today doesn't think the church is justified in relating the commandment prohibiting adultery to a type of sex engaged in by the two unmarried students.

He says students today generally adopt one of two attitudes towards premarital sex. Some cling to the absolute law against sex outside marriage. Others, who cannot embrace a sex ethic that does not take account of the social, psychological and religious insight of post Victorian thinkers, adopt a relative approach to sex activities.

Members of the second group might say, "If two people want to go to bed together, what's wrong with that? Everyone has his own life to live. With all the tensions of university life, students should be free to seek a release wherever they can find it."

According to Rev. Paul, the "open-door" policy toward sex is not new, but with modern methods of contraception, students today have less to fear than did their parents.

Instead of an "outmoded" and "irrelevant" absolute standard supported by God, or a relative ethic that ignores God, Rev. Paul suggested an ethic of love: "unless we are certain that sexual union will contribute to the growth of the other person, we should leave it alone."

Quoting an essay called "Chastity" by Glen Cavaliero, he said, "Sexual experience is a great healer, but unrelated to the rest of life, unrelated to personal commitment, it can ravage and destroy."

Following publication of Rev. Paul's remarks, spokesmen of the three churches he represents said they would investigate the matter.

Providing power for every environment...

provides challenge for virtually every technical talent at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

Being a technically trained man... we assume you are looking ahead to a career of exciting growth and accomplishment and that you are looking for a company possessing these same qualities.

If our assumption is correct, we would like you to take a close look at us. For this Company, while solving the problems of the day, thrives on a sort of creative restlessness which anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. And more important to you, it recognizes its engineers and scientists as the master key to its present success and future progress.

From a solid foundation of basic and applied research, our Company has gained a firm foothold in the land, sea, air, and space programs that are helping to shape our nation's future. Our engineers and scientists are exploring ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment. Should you join them, you'll be assigned early responsibility... to apply your engineering talents to such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells and nuclear power.

Such trail-blazing projects command the best of varied talent. That's why you'll find at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft men with college training as diverse as their responsibilities. You will also find that opportunities for professional growth are further enhanced by our corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

For further information concerning a career with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

"ALL WORK AND NO PLAY..."

At this rate, UVM'ers will desperately need that month's vacation in December, not for gallivanting about or for skiing, but for the sheer necessity to recuperate from over-exhaustion.

Although on paper this semester is but a few days shorter in length than the Fall semester of 1963, in effect it does not seem this way to us. This past week most of the student body has been exposed to an unusually heavy barrage of hour exams. A UVM'er has had to cope not only with studying for these exams (two or three of which may have occurred for him on the same day), but also with maintaining the normal rapid pace of work and study required in his remaining two or three courses.

Practically speaking, those four or five days off in November and those two weeks in December preceding finals had served the three-fold purpose of breaking up an otherwise monotonous semester, of allowing time to finish term papers, and of beginning preparation for final exams.

With no Thanksgiving vacation in sight and finals only six weeks in the future, the outlook appears none too bright and the consequences undeniable. In the first place, it's terribly difficult to keep up to date with assignments when hour exams fall so closely together. And, secondly, it strikes us as being psychologically detrimental to students (and faculty) to be subject to such constant pressure.

Scheduling semesters this way would be justifiable, perhaps, if a tri-mester program was an eventuality. Presumably, then, each student would take only three or four courses per semester and study them in depth. As far as we know, however, the Administration forsee no such program, aside from the possibility of lengthening the Summer Session.

We assume this current year's schedule is experimental, and that, upon evaluation, hopefully the Administration will furnish some badly-needed improvements.

Letters To The Editor

... Play In Due Time

Editor's Note:

The following letter, written by Acting President Lyman S. Rowell, was received by the CYNIC after this week's editorial had been written. We present here the two articles, one from the student's point of view, the other from that of the administration.

To the Editor:

Richard Badger, President of the Student Association, has communicated to me the inquiry concerning the calendar at Thanksgiving. When this calendar was discussed in the two years before it was adopted, it was recognized by all that some of these changes would cause considerable readjustment. It was recognized by faculty, administration and students that questions concerning the Thanksgiving week-end would arise.

We submitted this calendar to Student Association and received support of this schedule with the contemplated one day at Thanksgiving. In looking at the advantages, it was recognized that in order to begin after Labor Day so that students working in resorts during the summer might complete their work and in order to complete the examinations before Christmas, it was necessary to curtail the Thanksgiving recess to the one day.

Students realized that many would be unable to go home for Thanksgiving but believed that the advantage of going home before Christmas with all examinations completed far outweighed this change.

The number of class days this semester is about three shorter than the average number in previous years, and the faculty after considering the work to be done held that this number should not be reduced further. This first year of the new calendar produces the tightest schedule of any year, since Labor Day was at its latest point.

The number of days necessary for final examinations has been shortened to the barest minimum. The Registrar assures me that to curtail further this period would mean that some students might have three and possibly four examinations scheduled on the same day. This is a circumstance we wish to avoid.

Also during consideration of this calendar, we discussed the change with other institutions who have shortened their Thanksgiving recess. Sometimes parents have come to have Thanksgiving with the students, and of course students living nearby have been able to go home for the day. A majority of the students, however, have used this day as a period of relaxation on campus, many having dinner with faculty, staff, and friends.

I wish, therefore, to re-emphasize that the schedule will be followed as planned with one day suspension of classes on Thanksgiving Day. Just two weeks and two days from that time final examinations will begin, and depending upon the schedule, some of you will have finished examinations and will be going home by the end of the third week. All of you will have gone home within three and one-half weeks from that time. I hope that we may have the cooperation of everyone in making this trial semester a success.

— Miguel de Unamuno

To Steiner

A University, as an educational institution, is usually looked upon with just a little bit more respect than other sections of the society. Thus, when decay becomes noticeable at a university it is all the more disturbing. If citizens in their homes listen to a girl's cry while she is being murdered or raped, this is disturbing, but these citizens are common people, probably for the most part uneducated. When there is decay at a center of the society, at a place where education is supposedly given the highest value, then this is surely the sign of a very sick society.

Decay always sets the same pattern. It digs its way into the core of a society and only once in a while does it break onto the surface. Decay is always marked by a lack of emotion, a deterioration of brain tissue we suppose, the society sees something revolting and fails to react.

We have been noticing this decay here at the University of Vermont for the last year—little things, things most students never see or if seen, disregarded. We remember, for instance, the night of November 22, right after the assassination of President Kennedy, walking around, with some of our friends, in a daze. We wandered into the "Catamount Den" where, much to our amazement, a celebration seemed to be in progress. Children, our fellow-students, were laughing, playing, singing along with the jukebox.

There's a crazy little shack across the tracks,
Sugar shack, sugar shack.

Acquaintances came over to our table to make conversation.

"Ya hear, school may be called off. I sure hope so, I've gotta exam Monday in Minority Groups. Whatda ya think heh? Didn't study for it, sure hope it's called. I gotta go, see ya."

No emotion, no care. The card game in the corner was progressing with its usual speed and money was continuously pouring into the music box. Everything in the "Catamount Den" was fun and games.

We'll never forget when, the following day, it was announced that classes were cancelled for the next week. The celebration began again. Children ran up and down the hall with an exuberance football games never brought forth. No emotion whatsoever. During those days few knew what was occurring but these "future leaders of our country" were celebrating.

Decay, as we said before, only breaks onto the surface in periods. A few weeks ago we went to a football game, a game that was filled with the usual amount of excitement. The cheers came from the crowd every minute. A few rows behind us a dozen or so students shouted their favorite cheer, "KILL, KILL," they shouted, "KILL, KILL." It was funny to the crowds surrounding them, some even joined in. A lack of emotion to anything, a lack of feeling as in Fascist Spain for example where Generals used to shout "VIVA LA MUERTE."

This past week another event occurred under our window in our dormitory which amazed us. There, in a drain pipe, an upper-classman had cornered a skunk. Soon a crowd surrounded the drain pipe and began taunting the poor creature. Soon, one of the crowd furnished firecrackers which were promptly tossed at the cornered animal. Finally, the stunned animal ran out of the pipe and the crowd grabbed the nearest rocks and began stoning the animal. A lack of emotion. They finally succeeded in bashing in the skunk's head. A decay that only once in a while breaks onto the surface.

What is the cause of the decay? Some might say a lack of religious belief. We noticed some "very religious people" in the crowd in the coffee shop and in the crowd that stoned that skunk. We wondered if, when those people attend confession they will confess.

"My father, I have sinned, I celebrated the day after the death of our beloved President and Father, I also stoned a skunk to death."

Does the cause lie with an administration which practises and transfers to its students perverted social values? Does the cause lie with our educators who concentrate on teaching the syllabus rather than on educating students.

Or perhaps the cause just lies with our middle-class society which no longer is challenged; reflexes dulled, the society never responds. Difficult questions can be answered only with simple, easy answers. "All that matters is the gold." DeTocqueville's lethargic society.

The University, with its educated instructors and administrators, and its young "brilliant" students seems to be not above, but very much a part of and involved in the middle class lethargy. We, as observers, can only be happy for the fact that we are in but not a part of this decadence.

"Women's Career Planning Three Dimensional"

Today's senior woman, in looking ahead to her future, has to plan for three work-a-day worlds. The first is what I choose to call the training period. This usually lasts from one to three years. Upon getting married, the young woman puts aside her job training, enters the second world of marriage and raising a family, concentrating essentially on living a domestic life. This period tends to last, depending upon the number of children in her family, anywhere from seven to ten years. She now enters the third work-a-day world, which is a re-entry into the job market and picking up the strings of her career, which was started following her graduation from college.

There are many reasons today why women are taking on fulltime jobs, after having established their families. I am sure you have read any number of articles discussing this topic in the various women's magazines. Furthermore, I suspect many of you have your own insights on this discussion, based upon your own family experience. Without getting too involved in looking at the working mother's reasons for holding down a job, one basic cause to affect every American family is the increasingly high cost today of obtaining a college degree. Fifteen years ago a husband's income could sustain the majority of his education bills. Today the working wife is a major contributor to the family income where it concerns absolving the cost of obtaining a college and graduate education.

A report, prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that in 40% of the 6.5 million U.S. families with incomes of $10,000 or more annually, the wife brings home a pay check to supplement the income of the chief bread winner. The rise of multi-wage families also is predicted on the continued increase in the number of married women in the labor force.

An estimated 13.2 million married women - nearly one fifth of the nation's work force - are currently employed or looking for employment. The typical working woman of today is likely to be about 41 years old, with a husband and a growing family. While many work out of necessity, a growing number are seeking to use the skills acquired by higher education and training. The Labor Department estimates that nine out of every ten women will be gainfully employed during some part of their lives. If she is married, a woman can expect to work 25 years. If she is single, she will work forty years. Despite this trend to outside jobs, housewifery is still the main occupation of most American women and about 35 million of them devote their full time to it. However, for the wife who wants to, or needs to work, there are some 446 kinds of jobs open to her. She is most often found in a sales, service, or factory job. The Labor Department also reports some 2,500 women electricians, 5,000 carpenters and more than 12,000 painters and paperhangers.

No longer can the women college graduate in today's ever-changing world limit herself to the planning of a single career. For her thinking, unlike a man's, in at least this respect, must now become three dimensional.

Civil Rights Group Reports

Carl Kleban, coordinator of the faculty solicitations phase of the Burlington Committee for Mississippi is explaining the goals of the faculty drive to Dr. Samuel Hand, History Department professor. Similar meetings will be going on with all faculty members in the coming weeks.

Carl Kleban, says that over 100 faculty members have been contacted by representatives of B.C.A.M. To date, close to $200 has already been collected and will be sent to Mississippi in the next few days. Twenty-five students are now working on this phase of the program which is to be completed in about two weeks, at which time the community solicitations program will begin. The committee would like to thank all those people who have contributed so generously to the fund raising drive. Those students still interested in the group are urged to attend the meeting Thursday, October 22, at 4 p.m. in Billings, Marsh Lounge.

Debate Club Third

The Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club of the University of Vermont opened its 1964-1965 tournament debate season this weekend with a third place finish in the University of Kentucky Thoroughbred Invitational Debate Tournament in Lexington, Kentucky. Twenty of the top colleges and universities in the nation were invited to participate.

The catamounts sent Sharon Call a senior from Springfield, Vermont and Carl Lisman a sophomore from Burlington, Vermont as its representatives to debate the national intercollegiate proposition: Resolved, that the Federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed.

Miss Call and Mr. Lisman compiled a 6-2 record for their "show" finish, defeating the University of Pittsburgh, North Carolina University, Wisconsin State University - Eau Claire, Emory University, the University of Florida and Northwestern University. The team suffered defeats at the hands of the University of Miami and Notre Dame University.

Dr. Robert B. Huber of the UVM Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

NUS Influences British Education

"Agitation" is a misnomer for the kind of activity in which the British student engages. The rational, unruffled, English temper also characterizes student politics and marks student efforts on the national level. Nus, which is comparable to the United States National Student Association (USNSA), can be effective in influencing national educational policy to a degree which is impossible in this country. European higher education is first and foremost a state-supported, state-controlled activity. Because it is usually handled by a single, centralized Ministry of Education there exists a clear and open channel for attempts to reform. Central planning means that educational resources can be developed according to national needs. It means also that special interest groups such as students have the opportunity to affect basic philosophy and long-range policy. Nus suggested, backed with statistical and informational research that the student union had compiled, were incorporated into the Robbins report, the radical outline for educational expansion that was adopted in principle by the Government. Much of NUS's future activities will be directed toward getting the Robbins report implemented.

Home Ec Prize Up For Grabs

A 1965 Home Economics graduate will literally win an exciting first job as junior executive with a major food firm.

How? Through the Pillsbury Awards Program which annually selects the year's top Home Economics graduate to become Associate Manager of The Pillsbury Company's Educational Program for one year.

In addition to her starting salary of $4,800, the top Awards Winner will receive a $500 cash prize, plus a $2,500 scholarship for graduate study — or a permanent position with Pillsbury — following her year of executive training.

That executive training includes not only recipe development and preparation of educational materials in the Ann Pillsbury Consumer Service Kitchens, but work with other corporate departments as marketing, public relations, research and legal. The program is designed to give the Pillsbury Awards Winner practical, personal training, and an understanding of the Home Economist's role in business.

Travel will be among the winner's duties when she represents Pillsbury at the AHEA National Convention, as official hostess to junior contestants at the annual Bake-Off, and as a foods demonstrator on television shows throughout the country.

Four other Awards finalists — selected, like the winner, on the basis of scholarship, extracurricular interests, and personal suitability — will receive grants of $150 and two-day, expense-paid trips to Minneapolis.

Applications for the Pillsbury Awards Program are now available from college or university Home Economics Departments. Closing date for applications is November 18, 1964.

ROTC Unable To Fill Quotas

Army ROTC programs are conducted at 247 colleges and enroll approximately 175,000 students. Air Force ROTC programs exist at 186 colleges and enroll about 102,000 students. The Navy's program is the smallest; it is at 53 universities and has approximately 11,000 students enrolled.

The 1964 ROTC Vitalization Act represents an attempt to remedy the failure of ROTC programs to attract and particularly to retain adequate numbers of students in the advanced, or third or fourth year ROTC course. Completion of the advanced course plus receipt of a degree are necessary to receive a commission.

During the past few years, the Army, Navy, and Air Force have all been unable to fill their quotas of ROTC officers, either qualitatively or quantitatively, according to the Senate Armed Forces Committee report.

The Army, for example, estimated its fiscal 1964 officer need at 14,000 graduates, but expects fewer than 12,000. The Air Force, with a requirement of 4,000 officers, expects about 3,300. The Navy requires 3,000 officers but will graduate only 1,733.

The relatively small number of ROTC graduates compared to the number of students enrolled in the ROTC programs is explained primarily by attrition after the first two years of the program — the basic course.

In the Air Force, for example, there are 90,000 students in basic ROTC. Of these, only 11,000 are expected to enter the advanced course and of these 11,000, only 3,300 are expected to last until commission time.

Summer Cadets Given Awards

In a ceremony held on Friday, October 9, Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, Professor of Military Science, presented ribbons to eight advanced ROTC cadets, designating their membership in Company A, which was the best company at the 1964 ROTC Summer Camp at Fort Devens, Mass. The award consisted of an infantry blue ribbon enclosed in a gold frame.

Company A was number one out of nine companies competing for the honor of being the best company. The competition among companies for this honor becomes more vigorous as the camp progresses. Each week, one company is designated best and presented a gold streamer for its guidon, with the second best company receiving a white streamer. This was based on ratings from the instructors and committees handling training. An accumulation of these weekly ratings was one of the criteria for determining the best company at the end of the summer encampment. Other criteria for determining the best company were the appearance of the company, tactical performance, attitude, final ratings of the company by the committees, and the company's performance in map reading, marksmanship, physical combat proficiency test, the Leadership Reaction test, and the final written Comprehensive Test.

Company A consisting of 175 cadets from 22 different schools, was commanded by Major R.S. Fleming of Bowdoin College, with Sgt. Major J. Brady of UVM as company. First Sgt., Sgt. Brady, attributes the success of Company A to the superlative individual effort of each member of the company and the teamwork displayed.

Those cadets receiving ribbons were: Roger F. Ames, Charles M. Dale, Richard A. Davies, Richard J. Indrieri, DeWitt Mead, Hardy F. Merrill, Gerard J. Smith, Douglas W. Towne.

Saint Opens Tomorrow

The Saint, a Friday night coffee house sponsored by St. Anselm's Chapel, will be starting on Friday, October 23, this year. This week we will have Jim Mitchell, a folksinger, as entertainment, and, as last year, coffee and donuts will be sold. After the SA Movie, come over and sit on cushions in front of the fire in the library of St. Anselm's Chapel on the back path of Redstone Campus and join in singing with Jim.

Marine Program

The Marine Officer Selection Team for New England will be visiting the University of Vermont on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th of November, from the hours of 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. until 7 p.m. Persons interested in obtaining information on the various programs may contact members of the team at the display located in the Lobby of Waterman Hall.

New Quarters For Research Project

by Judy Beeber

This year, third floor Waterman has made room for the new headquarters of the Upper New England Research Project for Nurse Practitioners. Miss Mary Beam has been appointed the new director for the nursing education project in Vermont.

The main purpose of the Upper New England Research and Education Project is to improve the nursing care of patients in Vermont by establishing an educational program in which graduate nurses, who are responsible for direct care of patients learn to use effectively new knowledge gained from research studies and demonstrations. This project is especially beneficial to nurses in outlying communities who by attending these seminars can get instruction in current changes on nursing care. At present, seminars are held in Rutland, Barre and Montpelier with the average enrollment of sixty professional nurses altogether. The seminars are voluntarily attended and there is no enrollment fee presently.

This project is beginning its second year of operation and is directed under the American Nurse's Foundation. A grant from the Irene Heinz Given and John La Porte Given Foundation has made the three year project possible.

Miss Beam expressed some of the goals which she hopes will eventually be achieved. Her desire to turn over the project at the end of two years to the universities and colleges of Vermont. The ultimate goal of the program is to set up guide lines for national use by those states which have a high rural population to provide training programs to nurses. In the meantime, Nurse's Reference Libraries are being set up in the public libraries in town in order to provide current literature in the field.

Vermont Booters Romp At UNH 6-1

UVM Eleven Seeks Record Victory String

The Vermont Catamounts romped to its fifth straight win this season and its sixth consecutive victory over two years, by handily defeating the University of New Hampshire 40-0. Next week will see UVM visit Northfield, Vermont, to play Norwich with a chance of breaking the all-time UVM win string. The present string was tied in Saturday's contest at six straight set in the 1954-55 seasons.

In the first quarter Vermont won the toss and elected to receive. The boot was taken by Rich Reynolds on the Vermont 16 and he ran it back to the UVM 34 yard line. Following four first downs, Frank Foerster crushed into the end zone from the UNH five, to make the score 6-0. Ken Andrade converted the first of his three extra points to make it Vermont seven, New Hampshire nothing.

Vermont recovered the following kick-off on the UNH 30 yard line. Richie Reynolds bulled his way over for the score from the 1 yard line. Andrade's kick was again good for a 14-0 lead.

New Hampshire appeared to have no luck at all last Saturday. On their third play from scrimmage Jim Brennan intercepted a pass on the Vermont 30 and ran it back 18 yards. Scott Fitz danced the ball over for the score from the 11 yard line on a keeper play. With only 12:00 minutes gone in the first quarter, Vermont was in front by a score of 21-0.

The score appeared to be too much for the 8,000 or 20 fans which watched the first quarter. Fans started to stream out of the stadium in herds as they safely anticipated New Hampshire's tenth consecutive defeat.

The Cats scored once more before the half time intermission following a Paul Giardi recovery of a UNH fumble on the Wildcat 38. Mike Burke scored after five plays on a four yard run to make the score 27-0 when the buzzer sounded, ending the second quarter.

It was in the second period that New Hampshire made its only scoring threat. The Wildcats were down to the Vermont 10 yard line where the always shining Rusty Brink tossed UNH quarterback Paul Lovallo for a 14 yard loss to stop the score. New Hampshire was not to cross the Vermont 30 for the rest of the afternoon.

Vermont was held scoreless in the third frame, however we bounced back for 13 big points in the final quarter to close out the scoring for the afternoon. Scott Fitz led Charlie Foster beautifully to put together a 32-yard pass play. This capped off a 54-yard drive, giving UVM a 33-0 lead.

Ken Andrade intercepted a pass on the Vermont 47 yard line to set up the final T.D. Sophomore Bill Leete ran the final 13 yards for the score. Carl Etlinger kicked the final P.A.T. of the game.

Coach Bob Clifford's "boys" rolled up a number of records in last Saturday's contest. The Cats rolled up a total offense of 530 yards, surpassing the old mark of 522 yards set against R.P.I. in 1962.

Every man on the traveling squad (40) participated in the contest and 14 different men carried the pig skin. Of the fourteen, nine of them ran up yardage in double figures. Deane Kent and Richie Reynolds were the big gems who carried the better part of the record breaking 84 offensive plays from scrimmage.

Vermont will be playing against Norwich this Saturday, but it only seems to be a practice for the big test, which is to come the following week against Mass.

● Pigskin Hi-Lights ●

A quartet of senior backs have all gained over 200 yards rushing for the University of Vermont in five games this fall.

The undefeated Catamounts are led by powerful fullback Richie Reynolds, who has gained 326 yards in 74 carries. The West New York, N.J. back gained 81 yards in Vermont's 40-0 win over New Hampshire Saturday.

In a highly contested battle for second place, Ken Andrade has picked up 216 yards to 213 for Frank Foerster. Coming on fast is veteran speedster Deane Kent with 205 yards. The Rutland senior gained 85 yards at New Hampshire.

Junior quarterback Scott Fitz continues to lead in total offense with 359 yards gained. Fitz has run for 92 yards and passed for 267 yards.

Foerster broke out of a tie with Andrade to take the scoring lead with 24 points on four touchdowns. Andrade has scored a touchdown, 12 extra points and a field goal for 21 markers.

In the pass receiving department, sophomore Jack Schweberger's three catches moved him ahead of Kent. Schweberger has gained 67 yards in seven snafes while Kent has five grabs for 72 yards.

Jim Brennan moved into the defensive lineup Saturday and came up with two interceptions to take the lead in that department.

As a team, Vermont has out-rushed opponents, 1238-408. The Cats also hold a big edge in first downs and total offense.

Defensively All New England

line candidates George Oelze and Rusty Brink continued to dominate with 82 and 75 points, respectively. Schweberger leads the defensive backs with 45 points.

The University of Vermont "Booters", under the skillful direction of Coach Hal Greig, walked away with its third consecutive victory last Saturday, by a score of 6-1 over the UNH soccer team. New Hampshire is a newcomer to intercollegiate soccer as are the Catamounts who are in their first season. However, UVM looked far from young and inexperienced in this game in Durham.

Bobby Cronin and Dennis Linneham teamed up to supply the offensive punch for the Cat booters. Cronin, a product of Richmond, exhibited team play and fine footwork throughout the contest. He continually set up Vermont scores with wildcat passes to his mates. Linneham gave the Cats their scoring punch in the first half. He scored twice following fine assists from Bob Cronin.

Four other Cats entered their name on the scoring column against the University of New Hampshire. These were John Edbroake, Jim Cunningham, George Hayes, and Ted Manning. The lone New Hampshire goal was kicked by their center half-back Dan Semeter. The point was scored in the second period of the contest.

Coach Hal Greig, although joyful after the victory, was quite disappointed about the team's play on the whole. One report quotes Mr. Greig as saying: "We played lousy, but we won. We'll have to play better to beat Norwich."

With the win over New Hampshire already in the record books, Vermont has an overall record of 3-2 and are 2-1 in Yankee Conference competition.

In state competition, Vermont began with a loss to the always powerful Middlebury squad, but bounced back to defeat St. Michael's. A tight defense that has allowed only two goals in the last three games has put UVM on the victory path. The improved offense has accounted for twelve goals in the last three outings.

Vermont will attempt to better its 1-1 state-play record this Saturday against Norwich. The game will be played in the Gutterson Field House field at 3 p.m.

Harriers Bow To Maine

By Dick Probst

The University of Vermont cross country harriers lost their second meet in four starts, as they were defeated by the University of Maine, 15-50, here Saturday. Maine captured the first seven places to take the meet, Fred Judkins winning it with a time of 23.18 over the 4.5 mile course. In second place, nearly a minute behind Judkins, was Paul Petrie with a time of 24.09.

Walt Stowell was the first Vermont runner to finish with a 25.33 clocking. Following him were Vermont's Dick Ashton 25:55 and Sid Young, 26:15.

The unusual part of this meet was the fact that Stowell's time against Maine was nearly two minutes off the time he ran in the Union meet two weeks ago. However, Vermont will get another crack at Maine in the Yankee Conference championship meet at Amherst, Mass. on October 31.

The varsity will run Trinity College (Conn.) on Saturday at Trinity and will be looking for their third win of the season.

The freshmen harriers who have an unbeaten slate of 4-0, swept the first seven places to whip the Plattsburgh J.V.'s 15-50 last week. Rick Howard took first place with a time of 17:53.1 over the tough 3.1 mile course.

The frosh will run against Rutland High at home on Saturday. They will be looking for their fifth consecutive win this season. It looks as if the Varsity squad will be a much strengthened one in the very near future. The young freshmen runners appear to have the strength, endurance, and determination which makes for a successful squad.

Educators and Scientists Announce Support For Johnson and Humphrey

More than 150 Vermont scientists, engineers and college professors today announced their support for the reelection of President Johnson. With members from the major Vermont Colleges and Universities and from local industry, this group has raised funds to endorse the Johnson-Humphrey ticket in a series of advertisements in most of Vermont's daily newspapers.

Their statement declares: "We the undersigned, Educators and Scientists, Republicans, Democrats, and Independents of Vermont, endorse the responsible nuclear policy, the reasoned approach to foreign affairs and the forward looking domestic programs of President Lyndon B. Johnson. We urge our fellow Vermonters and all Americans to vote for the Johnson-Humphrey ticket on November 3.

The Johnson-Humphrey supporters from the UVM faculty are:

BCAM Fund Drive Nears Completion

Larry Schonbrun, Chairman of the Burlington Committee for Mississippi, has announced that the first stage of the Committee's three-stage drive to collect funds is well under way. All funds collected will be used to support voter registration activities in McComb, Mississippi (the site of recent church bombings and terrorizing of the Negro community).

In connection with the faculty solicitation stage of the drive, headed by Senior Carl Kleban, almost two thirds of the faculty have been approached for contributions and to date over $300 has been collected. A portion of this money has already been sent to McComb where it is urgently needed.

Each faculty member contacted receives a letter explaining the purpose of the Burlington Committee for Mississippi, outlining the voter registration and relief program which it is supporting, and asking for a donation. The letter also lists some thirty clergymen and faculty members who are acting as Sponsors. Within a few days, the faculty member is visited by a member of the Committee who answers any questions and accepts a donation.

It is hoped that this stage of the Committee's drive will be completed within two weeks. Schonbrun said that he was "extremely pleased with the reaction and generosity" of faculty members contacted so far and wished to express his thanks for their aid.

As soon as this stage is completed, the community-solicitation stage will begin. Here, members of the Committee will distribute literature throughout the Burlington community again outlining the Committee's aims and asking for donations, primarily of food and clothing which will be used to combat the economic reprisals which the white establishment in Mississippi has resorted to. On two or three Saturday afternoons members of the Committee will visit each home in the community and accept donations.

At the same time the committee will solicit contributions for the general student body. Also various items will be sold by the Committee in an effort to raise further funds. Among these items will be "We Shall Overcome" and "One Man, One Vote" buttons, folk song books containing the major folk songs which have developed with the movement, specially prepared albums by the Freedom Singers, civil rights bumper stickers for cars, and civil rights posters.

The third stage of the Committee's drive will be a collection of books from students and faculty. These will all be shipped to Mississippi where they will be used in the many Freedom Schools which are run as part of the Mississippi Project. This stage has been tentatively scheduled for the period around finals when many students are anxious to dispose of texts and other books.

Kake Walk Opens To Independents

Editor's Note:

Following is a statement received from President Rowell, concerning final action to be taken on the recommendations submitted by the Kake Walk Evaluation Committee.

On October 21 I met with the Kake Walk Committee and Kake Walk Directors considering independent participation in Kake Walk. I informed the group that Men's Residence Hall Assembly, the Interfraternity Council, and the Student Association had all approved the report of the special committee which would permit the participation in Kake Walk by independents providing certain conditions were met.

The Kake Walk Directors indicated their acceptance of this in view of the fact that their sponsoring body, the Interfraternity Council, had accepted the report. I, therefore, stated that I would receive and accept the report and that the first section including the definition of Kake Walk and seven conditions of participation were to be placed in effect.

I also indicated to the committee and to the Kake Walk Directors that I accepted the remainder of the report concerning screening and conduct of Kake Walk and that I recommended this to the attention and consideration of the Kake Walk Directors.

Mr. Wesley Abell was present as a member of the Alumni Interfraternity Council, and he and Dean Patzer will convey this information to that group.

A copy of this will go to the University CYNIC in order that the student body may be informed of this decision.

I appreciate the very excellent work that has been involved in presenting this report, and I am appreciative of the guidance and counsel of Dr. Marston and Mr. Penner as faculty members of the special committee.

The Men's Residence Hall Assembly is hereby advised that if participation in 1965 is to be effected, the committee of thirty should be organized in compliance with the statement by the November 1 deadline. The information and certification of membership should be submitted to Dean Patzer for the Jurisdiction Committee with copies to the President of IFC.

LBJ Beats Goldwater in Mock Elections

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (CPS) — Lyndon Johnson beat Barry Goldwater by a margin of nearly 2 to 1 in mock elections held on the campuses of five Big Ten universities.

Johnson was preferred by 14, 111 students at the five schools, while Goldwater was the choice of 7, 553. The straw vote was a striking reversal of the 1960 Big Ten mock election, which saw Richard Nixon trounce John Kennedy 21,034 to 15,058.

Five schools — Michigan State, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Northwestern — participated in the balloting. A sixth, Indiana, also took part, but the student council decided not to count the ballots because of "election irregularities." Two other campuses — Ohio State and Wisconsin — will vote later in the month.

Johnson piled up his biggest lead at Michigan State, where 9,432 students took part in the voting. The President got 6,610 votes to Goldwater's 2,822. The campus also overwhelmingly avored the re-election of George Romney as Governor of Michigan. Romney, who has refused to endorse Goldwater, topped his Democratic rival, Neil Staebler, 6,824 to 1,299.

Goldwater came closest to victory at Northwestern, where Johnson edged him out by a scant 98 votes, 1,270 to 1,172. The only other place where the margin between the two candidates was under 100 votes was at Minnesota, where less than 1,000 students participated, and the President beat his Republican opponent 435 to 353.

At the University of Illinois, Johnson won 3,570 to 2,094.

At the University of Iowa, it was Johnson, 2,226; Goldwater, 1,161.

PANHELLENIC RUSHING NOVEMBER 1 and 8

PROFESORES

WHERE ARE THE ISSUES?

By Prof. Denes Gulyas

Periodically questions are raised by students and faculty alike about where the University is going, what it is accomplishing, what its purposes are, etc. Except when glib answers provide momentary relief from a troubling confrontation we find that efforts to come to terms with questions like these become bogged down in the mire of study committees or become lost in a maze of other activities destined to bring on a rash of melancholy shoulder-shrugging. In short it would seem that unless one is prepared to put the disquieted at ease or to come up with ultimate answers these are the kinds of questions that are best left undisturbed.

On the other hand, these are hardly the kinds of questions that should be ignored by students any more than they should be by their teachers. In point of fact they actually never are except that the form they take is usually highly personalized and private-career oriented. Besides, people spend a lot of time shrugging shoulders anyway to say nothing of woefully shaking their heads.

What concerns me in all of this and in my view of the University is the nurturing of a proper intellectual environment. I should like to offer the thought that the university, properly understood, is a forum for the exchange of ideas -- a forum that transcends the confines of the classroom -- and that the physical apparatus so familiar to us is merely a convenient way for men and women with ideas to assemble. If we may assume for a moment that this notion has some merit, and if it could be further allowed that ideas find their expression in the form of issues, I am led to ask the question: Where is the University? That is, where are the issues of our campus? Put another way, what evidence can we point to that suggests the university is more than a convenient formal arrangement of people? Where are the camps of students and teachers opposing one another over substantive issues, be they matters of academic excellence or the criteria for intellectual maturity?

Private quarrels, negotiations and compromises over grades, authority and student and faculty competence are in the nature of institutional life and change as the University comes to be shaped to the liking of generations who make it up. These require attention as well as debate. However, it would be tragic if such relatively trivial matters remained the only concern in University life and issues of greater substantive worth could not be formulated.

The belief that an expression of vital intellectual involvement is necessary for a meaningful educational experience implies a willingness to keep the forum alive, to entertain a vision, to turn away from acts of personal or official terrorism. In the final analysis terroristic exposes, even if morbidly delightful, are hardly acts of dissent.

The moral of my brief argument and challenge seems best expressed through the message of a news item of last year. It reads:

BETTER TO BE WITHOUT BARK THAN NOT BE DOG AT ALL

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) -- Good relations have been restored between the Sparks city council and Rocky, a 5-year-old boxer whose bark was worse than, well, practically anything.

The city fathers got so many complaints about Rocky's loud and excessive barking that they lifted his license to be a dog in the city of Sparks.

They restored the license, after assurance that Rocky and his bark had been decisively parted.

The operation, known as a ventriculordecotomy, involves cutting the vocal cords. Vets say it'll be six months before he'll be able to bark above a whisper.

Professor Gulyas will be lecturing on this same topic as a SCOPE presentation Monday night.

Religion Outdated?

OTTAWA (CPS-CUP) -- A chaplain at Carleton University, whose views on premarital sexual relations aroused a nation-wide controversy in Canada recently, will continue as university chaplain.

And seemingly unscathed by criticism of his outspoken article on extra-marital relations, Rev. Gerald Paul has written a second article for the student newspaper, The Carleton, criticizing outdated religious teaching.

In his latest article, on "that old time religion," he said much of what passes for religion today, belongs to the past. It is grandpa's religion, taken in here and there with a hurried stitch, but grandpa's religion just the same. And grandson, he adds, is not at all happy with grandpa's hand-me-down.

"Young people are fed up with old fashioned religion," he said. "they knew this is an old world -- billions of years old. They know that the world took a long time to evolve and that stars are still coming into being. They know this is a shrinking world where prejudice (religious and social) seems out of place."

"The thinking youth of today believe that talk about 'my salvation' and 'Are you saved?' is irrelevant in a world that could be knocked out any day by nuclear weapons."

"The stories of Noah's Ark, and David's sling, of Ezekial's wheel and Daniel's den are interesting. But they seem juvenile in our present context. They have nothing to say about the mushroom cloud or the population explosion, the space race or the loss of values. Yet these problems are in the minds of every young person who is aware of our times."

SAM Lecture

Dr. James Petersen, chairman of the Department of Commerce and Economics, will speak on Thursday, Oct. 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the monthly meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management. Dr. Petersen has recently developed a new logistics system for the Air Force and his subject will be the development and testing of this system.

SAM is the recognized national professional organization of managers in industry, commerce, government and education. One of the objectives of our student chapter of SAM is to serve as an effective medium for the exchange and distribution of information on the problems, policies, and methods of management in industry.

All interested students and faculty members are cordially invited to attend the Oct. 29th meeting. Membership in SAM is open to all students.

Chamber Music

The University music department will present an evening of chamber music on Friday (Oct. 30) in the Ira Allen Chapel at 8:30.

Featured performers will be James Keene, violin; Mary Keene, viola; Flora Kinsey, cello, and David Kinsey, piano.

Included on the program will be Mozart's Quartet No. 1 in G Minor and Trio for Violin, Viola and Cello by Max Reger, a German composer.

The concert will be open to the public at no charge.

Dellin Serves On Fulbright Comm.

A University professor has been asked to serve on the screening committee for the Fulbright Awards for the coming year.

Dr. Lubomir A.D. Dellin of the department of economics and head of the University's Program of Russian and East European Studies has accepted an invitation by the Institute of International Education to serve on the Fulbright committee. The Institute is the agency designated by the Department of State to conduct annual competitions and select candidates for awards for graduate study and research abroad under the Fulbright-Hays Act.

Dr. Dellin, a recognized authority on Communism and Eastern Europe and the author of several books in these areas, will screen candidates for awards to Poland, Rumania, and Yugoslavia.

This is believed to be the first time a University faculty member has had the distinction of serving on the Fulbright committee.

Introducing Your New Faculty Members: Mr. And Mrs. Leonard And Dr. Roth

By Judy Beeber

Among the many newcomers to the University faculty are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Leonard of the English department and Dr. Wilfred Roth, chairman of the department of electrical engineering.

Both former residents of California, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard arrived here last semester in order to teach world literature and freshman English at the University. Mrs. Leonard attended undergraduate school at St. Olaf College, a private liberal arts college in Minnesota and got her Masters Degree at the University of Southern California. She also taught temporarily at California Lutheran College. At the present, Mrs. Leonard is teaching sections in freshman English and world literature. One of her major interests in her field is literature written during the Renaissance period.

Previous to arriving at UVM, Mr. Leonard was working toward his Ph.D. at the University of Southern California. His interests in the English seem to be oriented towards English-American Literature. Both Mr. and Mrs. Leonard commented that they love UVM. Oh yes! I must not neglect to mention that both met in an English class - as might be expected.

Dr. Wilfred Roth, chairman of the electrical engineering department, has had an extraordinary background. He spent World War II at the M.I.T. Radiation Laboratory, where he devoted his efforts towards developing radar, fire control systems and navigation equipment for the war effort. He later worked for industrial firms which specialized in developing radar, instrumentation and computers. For the past fifteen years, Dr. Roth headed his own company - Roth Laboratories - in Hartford, Connecticut, which is a research and development consulting lab doing work for industrial firms and the U.S. Government in the field of electronics, instrumentation and ultrasonics. During this time, he taught math, physics and engineering at the University of Hartford and Trinity College.

This year, new emphasis is being put on biomedical engineering, which involves collaborative projects with the College of Medicine. Dr. Roth mentioned that the purpose of this is to bring together people to work on different medical problems. Research will be done in electrical stimulation of the brain, under the direction of Dr. Chambers of the medical staff. Professor Rush will be in charge of work done on the development of an electromagnetic model of the human thorax.

Dr. Roth was delighted to point out the fact that these projects promote a unique relationship with the College of Technology and College of Medicine. This permits a close working relationship so that medically trained and technologically trained students can join hands in solving problems in the medical field.

SNEA Shows Russian Films

On Thursday, October 29, in the lower lounge in Waterman, the Student Education Association is presenting a program on education in Russia. The program will include two movies, "Public Education" and "Palace of Science".

"Public Education" is a survey of elementary and secondary education in Russia. "Palace of Science" is an hour long color movie about Moscow University. Both movies have previously been banned in the United States.

Dr. Daniels from the History Department and Dr. Bollie from the Education Department will speak. There will be a panel discussion afterwards.

SNEA is designed to aid future teachers by giving an inside view of the profession. This year their theme is comparative education. Everybody in the College of Education is urged to attend this meeting and join SNEA.

There will be a follow-up to this meeting next Tuesday, November 3, in the Education Room in Waterman, where there will be further discussion on the movie.

Chapel Is Scene Of Chekov Plays

On Oct. 29, 30, and 31, two farces by Anton Chekov will be presented at St. Anselm's Chapel on Redstone Campus. The plays, produced and directed by David Storti, will be The Brute and a cutting of A Marriage Proposal.

The plays represent an experiment in rehearsal process, staging, costume and make-up. St. Anselm's presents unique production problems (such as a permanent slate altar in the middle of the playing area).

The casts of these two comedies (or jokes in one act, as Chekov describes them) will include Ann Abbott, Peter Covette and John Martin in The Brute, and Donna Kristianson and Paul Humes in A Marriage Proposal.

Admission will be twenty-five cents. Curtain time is 8:00 o'clock and tickets will be available at the door.

Hood Dairy Awards Four Scholarships

Four University of Vermont students are recipients of Charles H. Hood Dairy Foundation scholarships for the 1964-65 academic year.

Two of the recipients, George Nichols of Enosburg Falls, and Calvin Walker of Underhill Center, are seniors while the other two, Natt Divoll, Jr., of Bellows Falls and David Hoag of Grand Isle, are juniors.

Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Nichols, is majoring in agricultural economics. He is a member of Phi Mu Delta fraternity and Alpha Zeta, national agricultural honorary.

Walker is an animal and dairy production major. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Walker, he was a member of Gold Key and Key and Serpent, sophomore and junior honor societies, and is a member of Boulder, senior men's honorary. He is also a member of Alpha Zeta, Alpha Gamma Rho, and is a Kake Walk director.

Divoll, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Natt Divoll, is majoring in animal and dairy production.

Hoag is an animal and dairy production major. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoag and is a member of Alpha Zeta.

LBJ Establishes White House Fellows

President Lyndon B. Johnson has announced the establishment of the White House Fellows.

The fellows will be named by the President on the recommendation of a distinguished Commission on White House Fellows headed by David Rockefeller.

The purpose of the program is to give the Fellows first-hand, high-level experience with the workings of the federal government and to increase their sense of participation in national affairs.

It is not a college or a scholarly program. The Fellows will have completed their education and a number of them will be well into their careers. They will be chosen from business, law, journalism, the universities, architecture, or other occupations. Each will have demonstrated high moral character, exceptional ability, marked leadership qualities, and unusual promise of future development.

There will be 15 White House Fellows and they will serve for 15 months. One Fellow will be assigned to the office of the Vice President; one to each Cabinet officer; and four to members of the White House staff. In addition to their daily work, the Fellows will take part in seminars and other activities especially planned to advance the purposes of the program.

Each Fellow will go on leave from his present occupation. He will receive a base salary of $7,500 - $12,000 depending upon age, plus other increments for family responsibilities.

All Fellows must be 23 to 35 years old; American citizens; and graduates of an accredited four-year college. Women as well as men and local, state, and federal government employees are eligible. The deadline for applications is December 15, 1964. The Fellows will be announced in the Spring of 1965 and begin their 15-month period on or about June 1, 1965.

Applications and inquiries should be addressed to the Commission on White House Fellows, The White House, Washington, D.C.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS

When the computers begin calculating the ballots on Nov. 3, we will be witness to perhaps the most significant election in more than two decades. There can be no equivocating that voters do have a distinct choice to make between Lyndon Johnson and Barry Goldwater, each of whom represents a defined political viewpoint.

However, this has been a disappointing campaign; although the issues begged discussion and clarification, they appeared only to become muddier, primarily because of Senator Goldwater's vacillating and hypocritical moralizing. At this point, the outcome seems to indicate a victory for President Johnson, who, unfortunately, has not had to defend to any extent his domestic and foreign policies, a defense which is obligatory when one must decide intelligently, and not emotionally, who is to be President of the United States.

THE INTERVIEWER CONFERENCE

"In recognition of the growing importance of the senior year," Mr. Hanau of the Placement Office organized for senior and graduate students the first Interviewer Conference, which was held last Tuesday and Wednesday night.

Aside from the fact that it may have been a bit too long and repetitive, nevertheless, there is no doubt that the conference proved beneficial to those who attended; and there is no reason why subsequent conferences cannot be polished to perfection.

Much of the success was due in large part to the superb articulation of the speakers themselves, each of whom adequately presented his case, whether it was how to conduct oneself at an interview for medical school or a job.

Beyond the specifics, however, there was a definite ringing theme touched upon by every speaker. William Macmillan, Dean of the UVM Graduate School, was a foremost proponent of this theme -- that, regardless of one's projected goal -- and one must have a goal -- one must think it, believe it, and do it with conviction. If the students gained only this knowledge from the speakers, then the conference was an undeniable success.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

When UVM coeds were cautioned three weeks ago not to walk unaccompanied at night, there was good reason for the warning: Last Friday night, an "unknown assailant" unsuccessfully attempted to rape a visiting Bennington student, the third such attack within the month.

The Administration is working in conjunction with the Burlington police to discover the attacker, and together have begun investigation of the adequacy of street lights as a preventive measure against any future occurrences of the kind.

Police efforts to protect our women students are, of course, limited. In the long run, a woman's safety must rest with herself in that it is she who must react sensibly if an emergency threatens.

UVM coed -- don't shrug off the danger, assuming it could never happen to you. Obviously, it could. In the event that it does, just scream as loud as you possibly can, scratch, kick, etc.

Two more things to keep in mind -- if you notice anyone who looks suspicious, get a full description and report it to the police. (Have no fear about personal publicity -- your name will be held confidential.) And, once again, don't walk alone anywhere at night.

Reactions To Sceptic

Some Praise..

To the Editor:

We would like to commend Miles Wortman and Robin Schore for their fine writing of last week's (Oct. 22) "Sceptic."

Slade Hall

To the Editor:

The Oct. 22 Sceptic is an excellent example of what I feel the Sceptic should be. If we students lack emotion the Sceptic here tends to correct us. In the past the Sceptic has tended to be colorful but unconvincing, i.e. satire has its limits. If the Sceptic continues to set an example of mature thinking perhaps we as students will begin to leave our 'emotional decadence'.

Daniel Heath, '66

..Others Criticize

Dear Sceptics:

In your last article you accused our campus society of being decayed and lethargic. Hell, basically this is fine because much of society, whether on campus or in the big world outside, is this way and few, if any, would dispute the fact. However, collecting the symptoms of this decay under the very general category of "lack of emotion," with some pseudo-physiology added (any fool knows that acne, not brain deterioration, causes moral decay), is a serious mistake.

Did the thirty-eight Bronx citizens refuse to help the murdered girl because they lacked emotion, or because their fear (an emotion) interfered with their desire to be morally right? Were the students happy because Kennedy was dead, or because they were going home sooner and home was of more immediate importance at that time? When the football fans shout "kill" do they, like the Fascists, really want blood? They seem satisfied with a good tackle. If it is at all possible to sum up the symptoms of decay in a few terms (which I doubt) the word "indifference" and "selfishness" would be much more suitable than "lack of emotion." You forget that society may see something revolting and not consider it revolting. (And that even some "very religious people" may lack strong religious conviction.)

When you discuss causal factors, your analysis becomes more accurate and more valuable. In spite of flaws the entire argument is still intact at the end of the article and still quite disturbing. Then the last sentence appears and everything becomes even more disturbing. With what seems to be a disgusted sneer you wash your hands of the whole matter and become very self-righteous by announcing that you "are in but not a part of this decadence." Is self-righteousness in the face of a national social tragedy any better than celebrating an extended holiday caused by an assassination? Decadence in our society is doubtlessly subtle and wide-spread, but you have forgotten that there are many variations on the theme.

We regret the unfortunate omission of several paragraphs in the October 16 SCEPTIC. The omission was an error in printing, and was not intended as a censure of Mr. Wortman and Mr. Schore.

By Miles Wortman and Robin Schore

"Go into the voting booth, hold your nose, and vote for William Jennings Bryan." - Grover Cleveland

A recent cartoon in "The New Yorker" shows two children watching a campaigner on television. With their astonished eyes they exclaim, "For this they knocked off 'Wagon Train'?" With election day less than a week away we feel like we are just coming out of hibernation. The excitement of the campaign has shocked us, the intense political activity has amazed us.

One such instance of this activity we noticed in that "Trafalgar Square" of Burlington-Billings Center. There, a large crowd surrounded a booth on the main floor. Angry voices and swinging fists could be noticed. A large banner in the booth proclaimed "Vermont Young Americans for Freedom" in brilliant red, white and blue. Pamphlets and buttons were scattered over the booth's counter, "Barry Goldwater's Foreign Policy," "Hubert Humphrey and the ADA (Now who the hell knows what the ADA is?)," "Famous Quotations from Bill Miller," etc., etc., ad nauseum. We managed to fight our way through the fierce crowd to see the cause of the commotion. There they were, three bright and starry eyed young, good-looking co-eds and one man, taking on the populace with little outside support. We managed to talk with these YAFers to try to understand what motivates these wide-eyed idealists. They quickly informed us that they were a completely non-partisan group with no political affiliation (despite the propensity for Goldwater pamphlets, stickers and buttons). We asked one of the co-eds what she thought of Federal aid to education.

"Well, in my case," she informed us, "I'm getting federal aid, but," she qualified, "it depends on the case." We completely agreed with her. Another of the beauties informed us that she "had no opinion" on whether we should defend Taiwan, or whether we should take over Africa, or on the Kennedy round of tariff talks, yes, she was for federal aid for education, and yes, but of course, she was for Barry.

Their views were as diversified as the Republican party. One of the political brains told us she "didn't give a crap" if Outer Mongolia should be admitted to the United Nations while another said, "definitely not, we should kick all the Commies out of the U.N." A third intellectual added that "she would rather be dead than red."

Perhaps the one individual who personified this group the most was the leader of the group, the only man behind the counter. He was tall, well-dressed (right off Madison Avenue) and well spoken. He informed us that his idol was Joe McCarthy (This shocked us, imagine, Barry's running second). He (Joe McCarthy) kept the aliens and subversives out of the government, we were informed. A great American, one of the finest, the fighting marine from Wisconsin. As this leader of the YAF chatted, he had a nervous habit of buttoning and unbuttoning his coat. He spit out his whole political philosophy; how he would invade Eastern Europe up to Russia, feeling confident that it would not cause war; how Negroes could come out of the slums and become great Americans like everybody else; how federal aid was bringing us to slavery (Imagine, Joe Brown, a Negro who has just achieved "freedom", when he awakes one day and finds "Lo and Behold, I got me a new Massah, the Fed'ral Government"), etc., etc. Here we saw standing before us, Barry Goldwater epitomized; we could see in this political eunuch Rockefeller being booed off a Frisco platform, dogs in Mississippi and yes, Joe McCarthy himself. In this verbal onanism we could hear Bill Miller's slander and Dean Burch's bravado--here it was, the national Republican party, opening and closing its coat nervously.

We asked one of the coeds whether she thought Barry was going to win. She looked at us, with her eyes wide open, arrows and stars shooting out. She stared at us with a beauty one can only see in idealism, a beauty we have rarely seen -- "Of course he is."

As we left we could hear one "Young American" arguing "Of course niggers have rights...."

Dear Editor:

Last week the Sceptic bared his conscience and revealed to the world just what has been bothering him all this time, viz., the entire student body is showing signs of moral decay, and these in turn are indicative of a greater moral decay throughout the nation. After reading the column, one wished to immediately inquire into the Sceptic's position on hurricanes and flash floods. Aside from Billy Graham, one can think of no individual who is more vociferous on the matter of the disintegration of national morals than the current Republican presidential aspirant, and Barry Goldwater as a role model is a surprise this campus may never survive.

Certainly everyone is concerned over the decay of moral standards, but when this problem is attacked, one expects the person attacking will offer solutions. Those two illustrious gentlemen referred to above are both outspoken on this present American dilemma, and yet they have given us, at best, only pseudo-solutions which, one thinks, are offered more with an eye cast toward self-interest than toward concern for the state of the nation. However, the Sceptic has not even offered a pseudo-solution. Rather he sits within his mist of self-righteousness and states that everyone, himself excluded of course, is stampeding their way to hell.

It would not be so sad if one had not come to regard the Sceptic the only entertaining element of a newspaper which continually dips to new lows in banality every week. In last week's column, certainly the Sceptic's vocabulary and allusions were sophisticated, but his tone was decidedly similar to those collected writings of Laura Schildhaus which have recently appeared in an adjacent column. One hopes that in the future the Sceptic will return to his proper genre, satire, and leave the pious moralizing to those junior Clark Kents who run The CYNIC.

Charles Rostkowski
Class of 1966

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

On Tuesday and Wednesday, October 20-21, an Interviewer Conference was held for those of the Senior Class and Graduate College who expect to receive a degree in 1965. Both the men's and women's programs were sponsored by Boulder and Mortar Board Societies, respectively. At this point, before making some general observations, I would like to publicly thank all of the student members of each Honorary, under the Chairmanship of Steve Slack and Ruth Baldwin; the Departments of Buildings and Grounds, Audio-Visual, Public Relations and Saga Food Service; Dean Patzer and Dean Harris, together with numerous people from our Faculty and Staff who supported the Program, and last but far from least, Miss Joan Klonsky and the Vermont CYNIC. Two fundamental questions were of importance to the writer: 1) Does the subject matter have universal appeal to our seniors and graduate students? and 2) Will the seniors and graduate students support such a program? The answer to both of these questions was 'yes'. Approximately 45 percent of the men attended the session while 95 percent of our senior women took part in the Conference. Furthermore, during the panel discussions that followed, a good variety of questions were submitted by the audience. What then might be said of next year? At this time a comprehensive evaluation of the whole Conference is being made and it will not be too long before a final recommendation will be forthcoming. However, if attendance alone is a predictor of success, it would seem that we have a program that should be repeated.

Early Thursday morning, the writer left for Boston and the MIT campus to attend a Symposium on American Women in Science and Engineering. At another time perhaps my comments on this Symposium may prove of interest. For anyone wishing to read the complete papers presented by the speakers, special arrangements can be made to obtain a copy through the Placement Office.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION INTERVIEWS FOR SENIOR AND JUNIORS, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1964. Mr. Albert E. Johnson, Administrative Assistant, New York University Graduate School of Business Administration will be in the Placement Office, Monday, November 2, 1964 between 10:00 A.M. and 4:00 P.M. to interview Senior and Junior men and women who may be interested in pursuing graduate studies at the Graduate School of Business Administration. Students need not be registered with the Placement Office but should sign-up immediately for an appointment.

U.S. MARINE CORPS INFORMATION TEAM VISIT SCHEDULED FOR NOVEMBER 2, 3, 4. A team of Officers representing the U.S. Marine Corps will be located in front of the Book Store in Waterman on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, November 2, 3, and 4 to explain the various Officer Programs for men and women graduates.

ARMY MEDICAL SPECIALIST CORPS COUNSELOR TO VISIT NOVEMBER 9. Captain Frances A. Iacoboni, Army Medical Specialist Corps Counselor, for northeastern United States, will be in front of the Book Store in lower Waterman to talk to women about programs in dietetics, occupational and physical therapy.

THE AMOS TUCK SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION INTERVIEWS FOR SENIOR AND JUNIOR MEN AND WOMEN, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1964. Dean Karl A. Hill, The Amos Tuck School of Business Administration, Dartmouth College will be in the Placement Office on Wednesday, November 11, to talk with those men and women of our Senior and Junior Class that might be interested in the MBA Program. Students need not be registered with the Placement Office but should sign-up for an appointment now.

Sceptic

As we mentioned before, the political interest at UVM is astonishing. To discover just how much interest there is, we polled a few random Freshman English classes. The questions (like the responses) were very simple.

1. Who is Walter Jenkins? ("a writer," "an actor," "an Army staff member.")
2. Who is Barry Goldwater's running mate? ("Henry Miller," shades of Harding.)
3. Who is Johnson's running mate?
4. Who headed the Federal Commission on the assassination of J.F.K.? ("the head of the F.B.I.")
5. Who is Chief Justice of the United States? (Generally left blank)

The poll was quite a revelation - only 20% of those who took the quiz answered all of the questions correctly, 33% got one wrong, 22% got two wrong, etc. One delightful good-looker failed to answer any of the questions.

With all this in mind we asked ourselves "Who would be best qualified to rule people such as these?" Dwight Eisenhower immediately came to mind. But the "five-starred Good-Humor man" (as one of our friends call him) has already had his chance and Mamie would rather stay at the health farm anyway. Dick Nixon is a loser and we can't support losers. Thus, only Johnson and Goldwater remain. Johnson ("Either way with LBJ.") has had an eventful eleven months. Morals not withstanding, he has made a pretty fair President. Now Barry's another story. Here's a man who will help (defense) industry, who will help the common (military) man, he'll help everyone. In our heart we know he's right; in our brain, we know he's insane, hell, in our ass, we know he's crass. To quote Bob Dylan, "But if you think I'll let Barry Goldwater move in next door and marry my daughter, you must think I'm crazy. I wouldn't let him do it for all the farms in Cuba." Thus Johnson, by default, is our pick. We look back, with fond nostalgia for the Democratic party of the Adlai Stevensons and the Eleanor Roosevelts instead of television station owners and with fond nostalgia for the Republican party of the Willkies and the (Jackie) Robinsons, instead of college flunkouts and political hacks. But, alas, it is all for naught. For other political offices, the Sceptic selects,

Governor of Vermont - Robert Babcock

Senator from New York - Pierre Salinger

Senator from California - Bing Crosby

The campaign is closing. The arguments are done and the money is spent. We all knew who was going to win on November third in August, and we all know who's going to win on November third now. For this they knocked off 'Wagon Train'?

Goldwater, M. D.

Editor of the Cynic:

The truth is that we Americans as a nation are like a sick man. We are always doctoring ourselves and if someone recommends a medicine, we expect to be cured by it, with the result that we make our diseases worse and more complicated. We dislike most of all the man who tells us that no medicine will do us any good and that we must stop our unhealthy living.

For our own welfare, on November 3 we will stop taking medicine and elect the man who will make us put a stop to our unhealthy living. We will elect BARRY GOLDWATER.

Young Americans for

University of Vermont

New Schedule Fine

To the Editor:

Hurrah! The University of Vermont has at last come of age, perhaps. When in the memory of man have UVM students admitted to pressures and exhaustion from academic endeavor? What a refreshing change, that students may use the winter recess to recuperate from academic (I dare not say "intellectual") rather than social pursuits.

Alas, however, I question the validity of the complaint registered in last week's editorial. Perhaps there is more pressure, but how can one expect to change a familiar situation without feeling the change?

Lastly, it seems a bit rose-colored to really expect UVM students to use extra time (i.e., in case of a three- or four-course semester load) for going into their subjects in depth. I doubt sincerely that anyone, who doesn't already do that, would find the motivation in a mere presence of "more time".

Yours truly,

Jean A. Camp, '66

Maine Tackle

For UVM

To the SCEPTIC:

Several weeks ago there appeared in the SCEPTIC column three "questions of the week." The second question, quote: "What is the condition of that University of Maine tackle? Why?" That question puzzled me, after all, what was the reason for that WHY? At least that question gave me an incentive to answer, for just that following week there appeared in the Burlington Free Press an article by columnist Betty Sproston entitled "Broken leg, no grudge: He's rooting for UVM." Here are a few quotes from Ron Rogerson, the Maine tackle: "Injuries are part of the game, just like touchdowns. I'm going to be in next year's game, haunting Vermont." Talk about injuries, why do people always play up football injuries? Sure it's a great sport, a "hard-nosed" contact sport, man against man, BUT, their ankles, and wrists are taped, pads on hips, shoulders, arms, and other parts of the anatomy if necessary; and helmets for their heads, good physical and diet conditioning, so what else is needed? Nothing, as far as a layman's eye can see, they should have all that for the dangerous sport called skiing! And besides, the sport is man against mountain, not just man against man! How many people are in condition for that sport? I bet it would be a shocking low percentage. But to get back to Ron Rogerson, the Maine tackle,

In This Corner: Our Advisor

By L.E. Van Benthuyzen

It may be reasonably doubted that there can be a member of the University family anywhere who does not know something of the tall gentleman with the modest mustache who currently serves our University as its acting president.

...

Lyman S. Rowell crossed over into the Green Mountain State as a babe and has been its life-long resident and servant ever since. A graduate of The University of Vermont, he joined its department of zoology after earning his Master's degree here.

BI-LATERAL ARTISTRY

Though he might choose to be remembered for other teaching attributes -- and doubtless is -- President Rowell probably always will be known to generations of alumni as the man who could step to the blackboard and draw zoological pictures with left and right hand going at the same time, and without missing a beat in his lecture. Try drawing a mud-puppy that way next time nobody's looking.

He is also likely to be remembered by many others who came to know the University as students in adult education or in Summer Session courses, for he headed both these programs before he was called to serve the University as Dean of Administration by then President Carl W. Borgmann. President Borgmann said at the time that he consented to the resignation of the former Dean of Administration only because Lyman Rowell had consented to becoming his replacement. The man he replaced, by the way, Robert H. Kroepsch, is currently head of the Western Inter-State Commission on Higher Education.

It is no secret that President Borgmann's successor, Dr. John T. Fey, counted Lyman Rowell a warm and good friend as well as an able right hand man; nor was it any secret to the Board of Trustees-- when they chose an acting president-- that Lyman Rowell may very well know the University of Vermont better than anyone else around.

GOING STEADY?

After all, his more than ten years of service as dean of administration to two presidents has placed him at the heart and head of the University's administration, where he has met and monitored the pulse of all its constituents. And though most of the colleagues who have served with him during this period would give him a high mark for objectivity, it is apparent that his association with the University has been colored by what this reporter suspects is an outright romance with and for Vermont's oldest, most handsome institution of higher learning.

Some remarks -- excerpted from an orientation address made to incoming freshman students last June, when he was speaking as Dean of Administration-- seem pleasantly in order:

UNIVERSITY'S TASKS ARE...

"The University's tasks are those of learning, research, constructive criticism, and intellectual inquiry... You are here to learn. You will find many others here for the same purpose. Some of them we call faculty, some students, some researchers, but do not misunderstand-- they are all here to learn."

...

"...in a sense, the final goal of any student's education should be the capacity to learn without the teacher, to continue his intellectual life on his own initiative and with his own resources... We realize that if we have not taught our graduates how to learn without us, then we have taught them nothing of enduring value in a rapidly changing world."

...

"Good teaching is that which stimulates you to turn to the stored knowledge of the past as a basis for understanding of the present and exploration of the future."

...

LIBERAL EDUCATION DEFINED

"From a liberal education," President Rowell advised, "one should acquire... a sense of values... basic skills and abilities generally useful... an understanding of the main ideas of the physical, biological, and social sciences and the ability to read about them... an understanding and appreciation of the humanities... and a capacity to find pleasure and a sense of well-being in seeing, hearing, touching, thinking and doing, in all aspects of life."

he sent a letter to Coach Bob Clifford in which a portion of it I'd like you to read:

We, down here in Maine, have the top respect for your 1964 team and I've been talking to the boys on our team and we are all going to be pulling for you when you play Mass for the Yankee Conference title."

Best of luck Coach Clifford and your whole football family; and you can be sure, with God willing, I will see you on the field here in Orono next fall!

This is a statement from the heart of a very respected opponent. In it is nothing of the violence of football, but behind it is the self discipline of an athlete.

And to this I'll add, "Good luck this Saturday to a well deserving team!"

Sincerely,
Mrs. Robert D. Grant

Cats Edge Norwich To Set School Record

By I. KOTLER

The Vermont Catamounts emerged victorious from their Saturday afternoon encounter for the sixth consecutive time this season, as they tripped the Cadets from Norwich.

This sets a new school record which was set in the 1954-55 season 21-17. The Cats had an uphill climb all the way, but they came through on the finale as we knew they would.

Norwich took the opening kick-off in the first half and proceeded to sustain a long drive. With only six minutes and twenty-five seconds gone in period number one, Norwich had a lead of 7-0. In the second quarter the military men pushed another seven points onto the scoreboard with their second and final TD of the afternoon.

Vermont, which was held scoreless in the initial quarter, finally got its machinery into high gear mid-way in the second quarter. Scott Fitz moved the ball brilliantly on the ground with fakes, hand-offs and pitch-outs. The scoring play was on a 34 yard pitch-out option play, from quarterback Fitz to Frank Foerster around the left end. As the half ended Vermont was down by seven, 14-7.

SECOND HALF CLUB

Although a fired up Vermont squad took the field in the second half, the Cats were unable to score in the third period. We moved the ball well, yet the scoring punch was not to come until the final fifteen minutes of play. Norwich scored first in the final frame on a field goal from around the twenty-two yard line. The Cats struck back with a vengeance almost immediately. Dean Kent took the kick-off and ran the pigskin into Norwich territory. Andrade, Foerster, Kent and Fitz combine to bring the ball inside the 10 yard line. Scott Fitz plunged over the center of the line on a quarterback sneak to add six points to the Cat scoring column. Ken Andrade converted his second extra point of the afternoon, to make the score 17-14. The final scoring play of the afternoon came with under two minutes remaining in the game. Frank Foerster ran the ball around right end, following an excellent Fitz fake to the fullback going up the middle. The run was good for 16 yards and a Vermont score. Andrade kicked his third P.A.T. in succession to make the final score 21-17 in favor of Vermont.

TEAM EFFORT

The Vermont eleven played a fine game against the spirited Norwich squad. Several Cats have said that "Norwich was really up for the game." The Cadets played a fine game, and perhaps we can single out a few Vermont players for their fine effort and skill which overtook Norwich. Dean Kent had a fantastic day driving the ball on the ground. His tricky footwork, resembling the old Hugh McElhakey, was good for large gains on several occasions. Scott Fitz was an excellent field captain throughout the contest. His fine calls and slick hand-offs pulled Vermont out of many tough spots.

This Saturday the Cats will meet the always tough Redmen from the University of Mass. Both Vermont and Mass. are 3-0 in Yankee Conference competition. The game will begin at 1:30 sharp at Centennial Field. The winner of this contest will be the Yankee Conference Champion of 1964. Try and make it in person -- it should be an exciting afternoon.

STRENGTH VS. SURPRISE

This Saturday the University of Vermont will meet the Redmen of Massachusetts in the deciding game in the Yankee Conference. Both squads have unblemished records in conference play. The following statement was released by the publicity director of the Yankee Conference:

The surprising University of Vermont Catamounts, who currently are sporting a record of three victories and no losses in Yankee Conference action, will attempt to play to the role of "David" when they collide with the "Goliaths" of the University of Massachusetts at Burlington on Saturday.

The Catamounts not expected to be a threat this year, already have compiled their best record in the 18 years the conference has been in operation. They would like nothing better than to upend the defending champions from Amherst in their conference finale.

In their three conference engagements, the Catamounts of Coach Bob Clifford have turned back Maine, 14-7; Rhode Island, 16-8, and New Hampshire, 40-0. The Redmen also have won three, defeating Maine, 6-0; Connecticut, 30-0, and Rhode Island, 7-0.

Is Vermont truly a "surprising" ball club enjoying a "surprising" season. The answer is no! Upon reviewing the statistics of the Catamounts' 6 consecutive victories, it is apparent that chance has little to do with the success of the team. Vermont has looked impressive both offensively and defensively. Several lettermen have returned this season to add further acclaim to their already impressive records. The Cats are not a surprise ball club playing on guts alone, but a seasoned squad with depth, determination, and ability.

The Vermont eleven boast a record of 6 wins and no defeats for the 1964 season. In evidence of these victories, the Cats have scored 146 points, the high in the Yankee Conference, while only yielding 44. The Catamounts have almost doubled their opponents in total yardage. Scott Fitz

Harriers Lose To Trinity

By Dick Frostig

The University of Vermont cross country team lost their third meet in five starts, as Trinity College of Conn. defeated them Saturday, 22-37 in a dual meet at Hartford, Conn.

Bill Shortell of Trinity posted the winning time of 21:03 over the 3.9-mile course. With the help of Shortell's teammates, Steve Borneman, Ted Zillmer, Lowell Vander, Peter Wild, Joe Varzegi, and Jesse Brewer who took third, fourth, sixth, eighth, ninth, and tenth places respectively, enabled Trinity to capture the meet. First man home for Vermont was Walt Stowell, who completed the course in 21:23.

The Vermont Harriers under Archie Post will now prep for the Yankee Conference Championships on Saturday at Amherst, Mass. Last fall the championships were held here in Burlington. Vermont finished fourth overall with Stowell taking sixteenth place.

Looking ahead, Vermont will run Bowdoin, November 6, at

New Brunswick and will compete in the New England at Boston on November 9.

The Vermont freshmen harriers, who have shown Coach Post with some excellent running ability, will be aiming for their tenth straight consecutive win of the season. Paul Aldinger and Rick Howard have led the team very successfully thus far and hope to have an undefeated season.

Last Saturday, the freshmen runners defeated Rutland High 22-37 and Burlington High 22-35 here in a tri-meet. Burlington's Joe Rivers, undefeated so far this season, was first to break the tape with a clocking of 15:07. First man for Vermont was Rick Howard, who finished in second place with a time of 15:58. In third place was Rutland's Dave Bushwell with 16:00.

The freshmen team will run this Saturday at home against Paul Smith College and will complete their season on Nov. 9 at the New England in Boston.

has performed credibly with a 38% passing average (19 for 50) for 279 yards in the air. Our fleet backs like Kent, Foerster, and Ettlinger have more than made up for the slack left by all Yankee Conference halfback Ken Burton, who graduated last year. Vermont offense is primarily a rushing one, as the Cats have rolled up greater than 3 times as much rushing yardage as passing yardage. Our sturdy backfield makes our offense a potent one --- not a lucky one.

From a defensive standpoint Vermont has shown a remarkable tenacity, particularly on its forward line. Brink, Oelze, Giardi, and Schweberger have combined with the rest of the team to hold the opposition to something near 11000 yards total. On many occasions the Cats have turned trouble into ecstasies as is manifested by 11 recovered fumbles and 13 pass interceptions. The Cats have forced their pigskin opponents to put 34 times thus far this year. On the whole, Vermont has dominated the field on defense, and has not been "pushed around" but once.

Richie Reynolds has been the powerhouse to depend on in the clutch for the past two seasons. This year he has already surpassed last years excellent mark of 331 total yards, as he now posts 353 yards to his credit. Deane Kent has been better than ever this season. Deane has averaged 6.9 yards per carry in five outings. Frank Foerster has definitely been the standout. He has already increased his rushing yardage by multiples of five. Improvement has been made, but not where it was not expected. All of these boys were in Burtons shadows last season. Now they have proven that they are tops on their own.

Massachusetts should be the toughest team we have faced this year. The Redmen are led by their ace quarterback Jerry Whelchel, who has completed 64% of his passes (39 for 61) for 461 yards and 4 T.D.s. He will be the prime objective of the Cats this Saturday. If our offense and defense live up to their record, this game should be a close one. Both squads are evenly matched as the record book shows.

Vermont is not a "surprise" squad, but a hard working one. The team has been working hard for the Mass game and the Yankee Conference Championship for several weeks. By dinner time Saturday, we will all know the results.

FOERSTER SHINES

A great effort by Frank Foerster against Norwich has pushed the University of Vermont senior halfback into a challenging position for individual rushing honors.

In gaining 129 yards, the Union City, N.J., back leaped into second place and is now just 11 yards behind fullback Richie Reynolds who has been the top ground gainer for the Catamounts all fall. Reynolds, from West New York, N.J., has gained 353 yards on 81 carries for a 4.3 average while Foerster has picked up 342 yards in 56 rushes for a 6.1 figure.

Foerster also increased his lead in the scoring department Saturday as he tallied twice and he now has 36 points in six games. Another senior, Ken Andrade of Falmouth, Mass., is second with 24 points on one touchdown, 15 and 19 conversions, and a field goal.

This week the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference has found it should reward Foerster for his fine play in Saturday's game. He has been chosen by the ECAC as the halfback of the week. Congratulations Frank, you deserve this honor for your excellent running.

Other leaders are Charlie Foster, North Andover, Mass., kickoff returns, 93 yards, punt returns, 76 yards, and punting, 32.4 yards; Paul Giardi, East Hartford, Conn., interceptions, three; Jack Schweberger, Weehawken, N.J., pass receptions, seven; and Scott Fitz, Nashua, N.H., passing with 19 of 50 completions for 279 yards.

As a team, Vermont has ground out 1932 yards offensively to 1149 for the opposition. Of Vermont's total, 1474 has come on the ground. In six games, the Catamount defense has given up only 538 yards to enemy ball carriers and 611 via the aerial route. Vermont has outscored its six opponents, 146 to 44.

Panhel Revises Rushing; Sororities Open Houses

by Judy Beeber

What may have looked like a procession last Sunday, November 1, was really the first day of Panhellenic Rushing. This year, only a few changes have been instituted in rushing, and it is basically the same as it has traditionally been. Instead of having one week devoted to rushing, Panhel has made it so that the first two days, which consist of open houses, are spread a week apart during the first semester. On these days, the girls get the opportunity to visit all seven sorority houses for a period of thirty minutes in each house. "The change," says Merry Rogers, President of Panhel, "is due to the fact that this year's calendar did not allow sororities to have rushing during intersession, as it was last year. Rushing first semester allows the rushees the opportunity to get to know sorority women as individuals rather than through a stereotyped image of the house to which she belongs."

Rushing will continue on January 24th after the vacation, when girls will be able to visit the four houses of their choice. The duration of each party will be forty minutes. On January 30th, the sororities will extend invitations to the girls of their choice. Each girl will be allowed to attend three invited parties. On January 31st, theme parties will be held for seventy five minutes. Each girl may attend two invited parties. Final parties will be held on February 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th. Balloting will be on February 5th and bids will come out on the 6th.

Rushing in itself, a unique experience, offers various advantages. Even if one does not intend to join a sorority, rushing enables her to meet all types of people, therefore broadening her perspective of women at the university. Through rushing, one can get acquainted with the ideals and goals of sorority life.

Need Extra Money?

You may have noticed a number of new posters recently. They are bright red -- to catch your attention -- and they state that there are a number of available positions for students interested in part-time work. A few students have inquired into some of the jobs listed, but there are still more waiting to be filled.

The listings of jobs on the posters will be brought up to date each week by our office.

For you students interested in working in the ski areas of the State of Vermont, watch these posters for notices of available positions. We are working with the ski areas to get a listing of their openings during the vacation between semesters, and we hope to have them posted as soon as November 15. Students Vote LBJ To Set State Trend

by Richard Berk

Last week's mock election saw UVM students endorse President Johnson by an even greater margin proportionately than that afforded him in the national election. On campus Johnson won 571 to Goldwater's 208, better than two to one. Nationally Johnson was re-elected by a margin of considerably less than two to one, if nevertheless an overwhelming one. Here at UVM the mock election also showed a greater endorsement of inaction than did the national tally, as only 779 out of a potential electorate of 4000 cast their votes.

What the university results reflect, if anything, is highly speculative. They may be an indication that "Goldwater" is a name which is regarded disdainfully by the aspiring sophisticates of the collegiate set, that, in effect, conservatism is currently out of fashion in academic circles, at least in this part of the country. They may, on the other hand, reflect an educated conclusion, carefully arrived at. All that can be said conclusively is that these results reinforce an element of complacency on the part of the 3200 who didn't vote. It is curious to note that while little spending money while you are on vacation -- and after all, who doesn't want to ski a little and earn a little money at the same time?

the Vermonters who participated in the mock election supported Johnson two to one, the out-of-staters supported him almost four to one. This may be explained by the fact that most out-of-staters live in urban areas where parents generally vote Democratic.

A few days before the national election we interviewed a number of students, faculty, and local political leaders, in an effort to catch the drift of general public opinion with regard to the two presidential candidates. Our findings were rather disappointing. Most of the opinions we received were obviously uneducated ones; others, somewhat more enlightened, were rendered by people who refused to have their names associated with their sentiments. This last point is nowhere more clearly emphasized than by the difficulty we had in finding Goldwater supporters. One third of the people who voted in the mock election voted for Goldwater. But the Goldwater supporters on campus apparently comprise an extremely reticent group for we had to seek them out while the Johnson contingent was everywhere. Of course, it must be remembered that requires considerably more courage to champion publicly a generally unpopular cause while it is a simple matter to jump onto the band wagon. One of the more profitable interviews we obtained was with a UVM senior, who felt that Johnson was corrupt and that Goldwater was a man of integrity. He was particularly critical of Medicare. He is a pre-med student and requested that his name be withheld. Another student, Daniel Barden, a sophomore in Arts and Sciences said, "I don't think the country will benefit from either man. One's a crook, the other's a radical. If I were voting I'd write in Nixon." Carl Lisman, another sophomore in Arts and Sciences, liked Goldwater. He said, "Contrary to popular belief, Goldwater is not unbalanced. I think he is perfectly stable and is the best man for the job."

On election eve we made the rounds of the local political headquarters. First we headed north, to Winooski, Vermont's democratic stronghold. There we spoke with Jimmy Shea, Chairman of the Winooski Democratic Organization. He said, "We're very happy at the results so far. We've all been working very hard. My only disappointment is in the fact that Fayette is losing. The nation will be losing a good man." Our next stop was Fayette headquarters which, in all its funeral splendor, appeared totally devoid of even the slightest hint of optimism. While patrons downstairs at the State Theater laughed at Dr. Strangelove, the Fayette girls upstairs cried at their father's imminent political doom. In search of Burlington Democratic headquarters we learned that everyone involved was over at Governor Hoff's house watching the election returns on television. Just as we arrived at his house the Governor came strolling out onto his lawn. We congratulated him and asked for a general reaction to which he replied, "We're delighted at this astounding switch and take this as an expression of the fact that the people of Vermont are not going to accept old ideas anymore, and that they are ready for a new trend toward progress. We are

"Sound Of Genius" - Isaac Stern

By Betty Miller

Isaac Stern, America's great violinist, will be the guest of the Blue Lane Series Concerts Saturday night, November 7 in Memorial Auditorium. Mr. Stern made his first Lane Series appearance in the spring of 1959 and is returning this year assisted by Alexander Zakin at the piano in a very diversified program. He will begin with "Sonata Impetuosa in D Minor" by Francesco Geminiani. Other selections will include portions from the "Partita in B Minor," by Bach, Riegger's "Sonatina, Opus 39," Dvorak's, "Four Romantic Pieces, Opus 75," Shostakovich's, "Three Preludes, Opus 34," and Ravel's "Perpetuum Mobile." Highlight of the evening will be Beethoven's "Sonata in D Major, Opus 47 -- Kreutzer."

Mr. Stern began his musical career in 1926 at the age of six when he began studying the piano, but two years later he switched to violin. At ten he began studying with teachers from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and by the time of his local debut five years later, was proficient enough to play the Bach Double Violin Concerto with Naum Blinder, his major teacher. Guest performances under Pierre Monteaux's direction followed, as well as appearances with Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Minneapolis and Chicago orchestras.

The violinist was launched on the concert route after his promising New York debut in 1937 and his steady upward climb was followed with interest by critics from coast to coast. With his Carnegie Hall concert on Jan. 12, 1943, he rocketed into the sparsely populated realm of first-flight violinists. Glowing notices had been his aplenty before this, but now Virgil Thomson in the New York Herald Tribune labeled him "one of the world's master fiddle players."

Season after season in New York and cities across the U.S., in Europe, Israel, The Soviet Union, South America and Australia, critics have echoed this unstinting enthusiasm. The London Times said, "He belongs to that great company of virtuosi around whose names legends have grown in the course of history."

The recipient of this tribute is a modest, hard-working American who takes his job of making music with complete seriousness, plays well over a hundred concerts a season and appears annually with almost every major orchestra in this country and abroad.

In April, 1956, Stern played in the Soviet Union for the first time at the invitation of the Soviet Ministry of Culture. The violinist was the first American concert artist to appear in Russia in more than a decade and audiences jammed concert halls in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Tiflis, Baku and Ervan to hear him.

It has been said that something akin to mass hypnotism occurs during Isaac Stern's rapt performances. His big repertoire, ear-dazzling technique and the rich tone of his 250-year-old Guarnerius make him one of the most sought-after artists of our time. The Lane Series is privileged and honored to be able to present to its audience Saturday evening "The Sound of Genius..." -- Mr. Isaac Stern.

IFC Hosts NBC's Mueller

World famous news correspondent Merrill Mueller is scheduled to speak at Ira Allen Chapel on November eleventh at 7:30. The topic chosen for this occasion is "The Future of Southeast Asia in View of the United States Election." Sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council, Mueller is extremely qualified to speak on this topic.

A native of New York city, he attended Springfield College, the Sorbonne and the University of London. In his field as a news correspondent, he has covered three wars and been the recipient of such coveted awards as the French Legion of Honor and the Order of the British Empire. He has been chief of four key NBC overseas bureaus and has interviewed a varied list of top newsmakers from kings and queens to religious leaders and dictators. In the line of duty he has traveled around the world several times obtaining the knowledge of countries and human behavior which make him a most qualified speaker.

The speech will be open to the University and town and it is hoped that many of you will take the opportunity to attend this worthwhile occasion. The topic is good, the speaker is entertaining and informative, and the speech should be excellent.

going to give them that trend." When we asked him if he thought that the election of President Johnson was to be construed as an endorsement of a democratic administration or simply as a reaction to Goldwater, he said, "That's impossible to determine; it's like shooting fish in a barrel, whatever that means."

After all the results were in we interviewed a few more UVM students. Maureen McGann, assistant head of our campus organization of the Young Americans for Freedom, said, "I think Johnson is a good man; I have always thought so. But I think Goldwater would have been better. I will support Johnson because he is President." While the Goldwater people on campus may have found it unnecessary to express their views willingly, let us not forget that in their hearts they know they're right. The opposing view was eloquently expressed by Peter Covette, another UVM student, who claims that, "In your guts you know he's nuts."

We realize that our interviews were arbitrary and may therefore be indicative of nothing. Keeping this in mind we voted for Harold Stasson and proceeded to throw this article out to the public as a matter of interest.

Sceptic's Pen Called Poison

To the Editor:

After reading the latest deluge of slop in the Sceptic, I am forced to conclude that the two poison-pen artists who constantly squeak about "hatemongers" and "racists" rashly gave perceptive readers a glimpse of the hatreds that fester under their miss-happen skulls.

Senator McCarthy, who was always fair game for verbal refuse from the New York Times to the sleazy little Communist-fronting weeklies that mysteriously flourish in tiny towns, from TIME to obscure cult-sheets for semi-literate barbarians, did not escape the Sceptic's vilification.

The Sceptic shrieked as loudly and as incoherently as a bevy of intoxicated banshees, in simulated horror at the very thought of an effective conservative student group appearing on the UVM campus. This must have brought joy to the hearts of all the "peace-loving" internationalist readers, who would like nothing better than silencing all conservative organizations so that the "liberals" could make the World Safe for Bestiality.

I often wonder how the "liberals" must often reflect that if only there had been a "United Nations" in operation in the Eighteenth Century, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, and all of the other nasty "right-wing extremists" could have been butchered and fed to noble Caribs and other superior creatures. And then America—indeed the whole world—would be free to conservative boobs who, although always useful as tax payers, talk about truth, religion, ethics, patriotism, and other silly subjects which the disciples of Karl Marx and John Dewey cannot bear to hear mentioned.

And if we are again burdened by a "liberal" victory Nov. 3, freedom of speech, which is the indefeasible and sacrosanct perquisite of charlatans, intellectual saboteurs, and traitors, will probably not be extended anymore to conservative Americans.

THE ARTS

by Sanford Plotkin

In the past three years I have often heard students and teachers remark about the general lackadaisical attitude of said students towards various affairs. This criticism has ranged from lack of school spirit i.e., athletic events, to political apathy. The causes of this pervasive attitude have been debated, yet no one is really sure why it exists.

The above may sound like the beginning of a self-righteous reform column but that is not its purpose. Briefly, for those who are interested, I plan to report on the various campus and Burlington cultural activities. Unfortunately, to date, any knowledge of these events has been spread mainly by word of mouth, a weekly resume of information i.e., exhibits, in town at the Fleming, lectures, Lane Series performances, the theater, movies, and the French Cultural Center.

In the course of the next few weeks many different people and organizations who have been involved in this work will be introduced. Through this column, I hope to encourage a greater student participation in all activities associated with the arts.

This week is filled with activity, highlighted by the appearance of Isaac Stern (see Betty Miller's Preview).

FLEMING

The current exhibition features 16th century bronzes and prints from the Metropolitan Museum (New York City) starting Nov. 7. In the next few weeks a preview of this exhibition will appear.

LANE SERIES

Isaac Stern (see Betty Miller's preview) will appear at Memorial Auditorium. (In next week's column the work and organization of the Lane Series will be explained.)

THEATER

"Much Ado About Nothing" will be presented at SMC's Playhouse on Nov. 4, 5, 6, and 7th at 8 P.M.

LECTURES

The Augustinian Lecture Series will present "Where Does the American Negro Go From Here?" on Nov. 5. The lectures will be by Dr. Cleveland Williams of St. Michael's College.

"What American Students Know and Don't Know" is the topic of Prof. B. Ulanov at SMC Playhouse on Nov. 8 at 8 P.M.

FRENCH CULTURAL CENTER

A really new innovation in bringing French conversation and culture to UVM was created by Doctor Daggett, Chairman of the Romance Language Department. This venture is being directed by Mrs. Renee Swift, a charming native Parisian.

On Nov. 11, the Center will present a documentary "Napoleon and the Birth of France as a Modern World" and "Notre Dame du Paris" at Southwick.

Also available at the Center, located in Redstone Hall, are a collection of books, magazines and travel publications. Presently, there are two exhibits at Bailey Library, one of Aide Musset and one of Victor Hugo.

Mrs. Swift welcomes any student interested in conversation and any other aspect of French culture. At Simpson Dining Hall on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 5 o'clock "Free Language" is on the menu. Students, MEN also, are invited to exchange ideas and converse in French during dinner. The language has been really popular.

The interest in French culture is growing. Mrs. Swift reports.

NSA's Professional Qualification Test is your first step towards a uniquely rewarding career

Let us clarify what we mean by a "uniquely rewarding career." If you agree with our definition, then perhaps you should see your College Placement Officer to learn more about the National Security Agency and the Professional Qualification Test to be given Saturday, December 12th (Passing this test does not commit you in any way, but you must pass it first in order to schedule an on-campus interview with NSA representatives.)

First of all, whatever your major interest—finance & accounting, personnel or business administration, data systems programming, languages or linguistic research—you can make use of your college-acquired capabilities with the National Security Agency, headquarters for secure communications research and development... unusual design refinements in computer & edp systems... cryptologic and related techniques. Your professional growth and earning power expand from the day you join us, without having to wait for years of "experience."

Then, too, you will engage in study and research that will take you well beyond known and accepted boundaries of knowledge. Although NSA is a key research activity within the Department of Defense, it has influence and responsibility of far greater scope... and intellectual associations with leading institutions, laboratories, agencies and consultants. The art and science of secure communications in all its ramifications is utterly without precedent or restriction, and involves programs of national importance.

PROGRAMS OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE—a thought worth repeating. For what it may be worth to you personally, you'll realize an extra measure of satisfaction from your NSA work, knowing that the results may benefit a lot of people.

In this regard, you'll find, too, that the NSA interchange-of-information leads easily and naturally to a maximum extension of your individual capabilities. You'll find yourself working with people from an amazing range of intellectual sectors—philosophy, psychology, history, international affairs, English, art and music... over 500 of whom have advanced degrees—in a near-academic environment. NSA conducts internal development programs to acquaint you with its new technologies, and encourages advance degree programs at nearby universities.

Now, what of the more pragmatic rewards? Your BA degree makes you eligible to start at $6,050... with regular increases as well as excellent promotion possibilities in your field. As a Federal employee, you are entitled to a number of meaningful benefits—including 13 working days' leave the first year. NSA also offers both aid and encouragement in your pursuit of advance degree education at nearby universities (Maryland and Johns Hopkins in particular are nearby).

One further advantage is NSA's location... midway between Washington and Baltimore in an area of fast-growing business, industry, and research expansion. Take your pick of in-town, suburban, or rural living—and enjoy the proximity to the Chesapeake Bay and ocean resort region.

If you agree-act now

If you are interested in an NSA career, you must apply for the Professional Qualification Test NO LATER THAN FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27th. Your College Placement Officer has a PQT brochure and application. (You must be a U.S. citizen, and are subject to a character & loyalty check.)

THE AFTERMATH

The votes are tallied. The victory is definitive. But, above and beyond the history of campaign and election lie the demands of the future.

For the Republican Party the future is anyone's guess at this point. To remain a functioning unit, the dissident forces must be reunited. Will it be the liberals Romney and Scranton or the moderate Nixon who will emerge as the leader(s) of unification? What of the conservative wing - will it dissolve or will it harden and break off to establish itself as an individual party?

For the Democrats, the immediate future is bright, owing especially to an increase in control of the Congress. That the election was a landslide for Lyndon Johnson does not obliterate the reality that significant millions abstained from voting, not because of disgust for the revelation of immorality in high government offices.

As chief statesman, politician and spokesman, President Johnson owes a lot to the American public in the maintenance of internal and external security. In the subsequent term, he must exert extra diligence in keeping politics clean and free of graft. Another disappointment in this particular area could mean his and the Democratic party's devastation for many years to come. Who can deny that corruption is as condemnatory, if not more so, a vice as extremism?

Along with the greater complexity of our times, the President bears the burden of augmented responsibility. The New York Times has put it so well:

The President is the embodiment of the nation as no man, no group of men, no department or court or Congress, can be. He symbolizes the unity of the states and of the men and women who live within them. . .

He must remember. . . that he represents this nation, this people, and that he will serve his age and the world best by preserving the security of the United States and making the country an honorable example of what a nation should be in this period of history.

The times cry out for a President who will accept the limitations of power imposed by the contemporary world, but who will wield, without fear or recklessness, the enormous responsibility that the office conveys.

Letters To The Editor

To The Students Of UVM

We are agreed that pride in alma mater, college spirit, and friendly rivalry between colleges are healthy and desirable, and should be encouraged; however, we are also agreed that the damage of property, either on a rival campus or elsewhere, is not a proper manifestation of college spirit. We condemn such actions, and any student who is apprehended may expect to be subjected to disciplinary action.

We also wish to announce at this time that the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages is not permitted at football games held under the auspices of the colleges we represent.

Professor Goes Humane

To the Editor:

Recently, the Sceptic column described how some of our "students" deliberately tortured and killed a hapless animal that had the misfortune to wander near their dormitory. I am ashamed that such people are a part of this university. Further, no one from the crowd that witnessed the sadistic scene stepped forward to put a stop to it. I am ashamed that those students lacked the resolve to behave like men.

Immediate and decisive intervention on behalf of a victim of cruelty should be a moral imperative for us all.

For increasing their maturity, I suggest that those students join and support one of the following organizations: The Humane Society of the United States, World Wildlife Fund, or The Wilderness Society.

For further information they can call at my office.

Norman J. Slamecka, Psychology Dept.

Sceptic—Factless Propaganda?

Dear Sceptic:

In view of the blatantly liberal views that this column expounds, your statement: "Now who the hell knows what the ADA is?" is unbelievable, as the ADA happens to be one of the most liberal groups in the country and was formerly vice-chaired by Hubert Humphrey. This statement, (if you are serious) and others lend support to the assumption that you are interested only in emotional propaganda, not fact.

If you insist on bombarding us with this factless propaganda, may I suggest that you turn over your column occasionally to someone of opposing viewpoint. In this way those of us who disagree with you politically (and who are being forced, incidentally to share the cost of your liberal propaganda sheet) would be able to see our views in The CYNIC someplace besides the "Letters to the Editor" column.

THE SCEPTIC

THE ART FILM

"...Here's the scene. It's a brand new idea in holidays, takes place the week after Hallowe'en. We open with a zooming shot of fifty thousand naked blonde-haired blue-eyed males and females cavorting and gamboling in a sunlit field. Then, on the screen flashes the title in gory lettering - ALL WHORE'S EVE - two minutes solid of chilling, oozing sign. Quickly we get in among the revelers who are revealed as your friends and mine. All around they dance and the scene really sparkles with close-up range when all of a sudden there comes an announcement (in horrendously frightening tones) 'The dean of women has returned!'

The camera switches immediately to two individuals screaming in pure terror, fainting, gasping amid cries of 'Clothes,' 'Clothes.' There is a fast fade out and then a fade in as we join the Dean of Women and her "men." They are driving a World War I tank and carrying flame throwers. A quick close up to the Dean itself and we scare the living daylights out of the audience. (We show this face only once to get the maximum scare effect, and it's really just too horrible.) We return to a shot of the gigantic moving tank and our sound system goes on blaring the only lines in the film: "Sexuality is Bestiality," and "Chastity is Saintly." The overpowering sound is produced by a four hundred pound loudspeaker box carried on the back of one of the Dean's aides.

We put on our wide angle lens and get a truly De Mille shot of our birthday-suited army chased by the mental monster. Of course the williness of the Dean is displayed as our friends get driven into an enclosure of concrete two feet thick and twenty feet high, lined with jagged glass. We leave the prisoners with a blackout.

After an apparent time lapse, we come in among the bare babes who are obviously cold from a night outdoors with no clothing protection. After this action has sufficiently aroused sympathy, we notice a great cast iron bucket with a smiling magnanimous face painted on it over a sign reading "I am your friend the Dean of Women," whereupon special effects drops warm clothing on the shivering and grateful mass. We switch from tableau to tableau of pious adorer offering up praises to the iron bucket, looking with pure love at the awesome object.

We cut from this heartwarming scene to a shot, through a grey filter, of escaping inmates. Bleeding, after a climb over the broken glass, we see one of the refugees who scales the barrier cut down by flame throwers carried by black uniformed Dean's aides. With a disgust sparing switch, we find ourselves looking at the escapees who were stopped on the inside of the enclosure. They beseech forgiveness, are given mercy (great study in facial change) and vow obedience to the iron bucket. This is the great symbolic bit. We get a panorama shot of general happiness and delight in being put under the rule and protection of the Dean. We give moving flashes of general putting on of clothes, agreement to stay within and love the walls and concession to separation of the males and females as properties drops in a bisecting wall. Our close is a splendid sunset scene wherein the benevolently smiling bucket is hanging over the enclosure covered for the night with a wet blanket..."

Well what do you think Miss Dean sir? How do you like our fear film for this year? I'm sure it'll keep the kids in line. By the way, the face on your bucket needs a new coat of paint.

Student Loses Mind In Library

To the Editor:

I am composing this letter in the Bailey Library. You are probably wondering why I am composing this letter in the Bailey Library and the answer is simple: When one spends more than twenty minutes in the Bailey Library it is very difficult to retain one's sanity unless one vents one's spleen on someone, and you, dear editor, must bear the brunt of my attack. I have been sitting here now for approximately two hours and have watched my fellow students (?) come and go and come and go again with much merriment and joviality, stopping to talk with last week's date, last year's roommate, this weekend's date, etc. Is the Bailey Library being infected with the same disease that has stricken the Billings study areas? If so, I can't help wondering if someone shouldn't look into the possibility of installing a juke box in the Reserve section.

I have learned many things in these two hours -- among the more interesting are:

- 1) what x and y equal in a freshman math problem
- 2) that a certain sophomore boy (whom I have always considered normal from what I have heard of him in previous library conversation) is a complete flink and that a certain sophomore girl wouldn't go out with him even if he should ask her
- 3) that a junior girl remarked after being respectfully asked by two well-meaning freshmen boys to be quiet, that "These freshmen are getting fresher every year!" (a pun which cracked us all up here in the Reserve section)

I have not, however, been able to get past page three in my reserve book, and it is due back in five minutes.

Actually, since I began writing this it has quieted down somewhat (understandably so, since it is around 9:00 and time for all cool students to play coffee shop); however, I can still hear four distinct conversations and three muted mumblers over in the card catalogue section. I have always been under the impression that the more serious students study in the library while the socializers play games at Billings. Tonight, however, I have learned that Bailey Library is:

- 1) a great place to pick up a date
- 2) the place to talk over old times with your fraternity brothers whom you haven't seen since dinner
- 3) the best of all possible places to get a resume of the class(es) you cut today complete with interpretations of the professor's character

AND ABOVE ALL

- 4) a wonderful place to lose your mind.
- I don't know about you, but from now on I'm studying in the Den!!

A Prophetic Ministry: Church Vocations: The nature and purpose of the ministry and church in our contemporary world provides the setting for an exploration of the fulltime job possibilities in the Church today. "A Prophetic Ministry: Church Vocations" is the theme of a very interesting presentation to be made on Monday evening, November 9, at 7:00 P.M., Lower Lounge, Waterman Building. One of the highlights of the evening program will be a half hour film "Minister" which provides a dramatic and symbolic interpretation of the various roles of the Protestant Minister: Student, Evangelist, Prophet, Pastor, Preacher, Teacher and Missionary. The film will be followed by a panel discussion with representatives from two national seminaries, a local pastor, and a director of Religious Education. The purpose of the program is to present the Christian Ministry to students and young people as a possibility for fulltime life work. Seminary representatives will discuss the preparation and training necessary to do graduate work in seminaries. Local pastors and religious education directors will comment on their own careers. There will be ample opportunity for the audience to ask questions of the panel members, and further details regarding seminaries and church vocations will be available in the form of literature and pamphlets. On Monday morning there will be an opportunity to interview with the seminary representatives in the Placement Office. The meeting is open to all students and interested members of the faculty, staff, and general public.

others smilingly, and commenced the incantation, designed in Germany nearly a century ago to get the attention of Gods, although for a while the people thought it was meant for them and would criticize the work.

This accomplished, the priests retired to a private temple to meditate, whilst the scholar gentry wandered around awaiting proof from the Gods to see how the incantation took. Before too long the Gods replied, by blinking the lights and threatening to turn off the power, so the scholars hurriedly returned before the sacred place and by clapping their hands together, implored the priests to return and placate the Gods and save the multitudes, (who were still outside chanting, dancing and singing to the people from the other world who were there to take place in the annual games, which are part of the feast).

This time they were in full force, four in all, and played a soothing melody by an Austrian which had been too known to work in the past. This appeared to work and finally the priests, tiring, stopped and walked back into their smaller temple, but the scholars apparently were not satisfied as they again started clapping their hands together. The priests returned and looked out upon the scholars nodding their heads, as if to say all would be well. It took, however, three or four reassurances before the scholars quietly left the temple and returned to their homes to await the games the next day.

The preceding trivia is in response to a plea for a review of the faculty chamber music recital, Friday, October 30, 1964. It is written by Paul W. Bristol, who while he feels he has been here forever, should leave our hallowed halls in December, leaving one sheep skinless for the winter. Mr. Bristol wishes to be held responsible for the contents, and as he is currently taking a music course, this should be reassuring to the sheep.

Ward Bond For President

To the Editor:

They should have left Wagon Train on.

In the pathetic atmosphere of the 1964 presidential election at least one cloud has a silver lining. The television horse operas are telling a story that our President and all other liberals should watch.

Did anyone ever see a western here who lacked courage, integrity, honesty, patriotism and devotion to his friends? Have you ever seen a western that did not glorify the past of our Nation? Does the hero ever have any question in his mind about what is right and what is wrong? Does this type of program so much as even imply that the hero will even consider any compromise with evil? As a viewer, do we ever have any question as to which will triumph — good or evil? Don't the villains have all the bad personal habits, and can't we identify one just by looking at him? Isn't there a constant dose of respect for God, woman, and the home?

Furthermore, in the successful western the hero must be a rough and ready character, not a dressed up dude rancher. If he draws his gun somebody is going to get hurt. Nobody pushes him around.

Unless this trend is merely a mechanism for total escape from reality, which I doubt, wouldn't it be a good idea for our diplomats and political leaders to watch more of these shows? Maybe they could learn something. For example, would Wyatt Earp stop at some frontier equivalent of the 38th Parallel when the rustlers were escaping with the herd? Ridiculous! Would Marshal Dillon refuse to allow his deputies to use shotguns for their own defense because of the terrible nature of the weapon? Ha!

Our political leaders seem to be going one way while the American people are going the other. While the striped-pants boys appear to be bent on "peace at any price", have the American people begun to indicate that what they want is a return to the fundamental virtues which made this Nation great — death before dishonor, justice, liberty, honesty and human dignity?

More Letters Saturnalia ?

To the Editor:

Friday night witnessed the opening of Saturnalia festivities on the university campus, marking the end of summer and the beginning of winter.

While outside minor priests, dressed in animal hides and warm robes, led chanting commoners in ritualistic and semi-hysterical dances of thanksgiving and infertility in praise of the summer holidays, within the temple, seated under the mighty time-piece God, which regulates, guides, and determines the lives of the multitude, sat the scholar gentry awaiting the arrival of the high priests.

As the appropriate moment of maximum favorable reception arrived, these high priests, two learned men and their equally accomplished priestess wives, came to the sacred ground where all ceremonies which are designed to please the Gods take place. They were dressed in ceremonial black, the priests with one patch of white showing, but with a black line at the top, lest it influence their judgement; the priestesses in long flowing black robe-like gowns, emphasizing the mystery of the sacred colors. During the first part of the ceremony, one priest sat amongst the scholar gentry, so that the God might watch them as they were him.

As the correct time arrived, one priestess, holding a four stringed instrument larger than the others, an obvious symbol of her authority, nodded at the Study Abroad--Why Not?

Want to spend a semester or a year abroad?

The Institute of European Studies has announced the opening of application periods for undergraduate foreign study in Paris, Madrid, Vienna, and Freiburg, West Germany.

All four Institute centers will offer both spring-semester, 1965 and full-year, 1965-66 programs for students in history, political science, modern languages and literatures, philosophy, and other liberal arts and social science fields. The programs are designed for college juniors, but some sophomores are admitted in Paris and Vienna.

Formal applications are due Dec. 7 for next spring's programs and May 10, 1965, for full-year programs starting next fall. Sailings are set for Feb. 1 and late August or mid-September. All programs end in late June or July.

An Institute spokesman said the programs aim at "immersing the student as deeply as his background permits" in a European university. Total immersion is rarely practical, he said, because European university courses are so highly specialized that U.S. undergraduates can usually profit from foreign university courses only in their major or minor fields.

"On the other hand," he said, "we don't want to place the student in a 'ghetto' where he is exposed only to American-style courses taught by American professors, and must live and study only with other Americans. Whether you look at it academically or culturally, the European experience should be both excellent and different.

To supplement the courses students take in the European university, the Institute's Madrid, Paris and Vienna centers each offer from 34 to 55 courses taught by European university professors in fields ranging from art history to sociology and theology. Except in Vienna, where a number of courses are taught in English for students still brushing up on their German, all instruction is in the native language.

Because University of Paris courses last the full year, and do not admit new registrants for the second semester, students in the spring semester program there will be unable to attend regular university lectures. Instead, they will concentrate on language development and French-taught courses organized specifically for American students.

In Freiburg, the principal town in Germany's Black Forest, Institute students take all their work with German students in the 500-year-old university, described as "a graduate school by U.S. standards." They receive as much as one hour of tutorial assistance for every hour of lecture they attend.

For its Vienna programs, the Institute has introduced a new requirement of at least a semester of college German or a year of German in high school. These programs also require a C-plus college grade average.

All the other centers require a B average and one or two years of the appropriate language. Applicants must also have the approval of their U.S. colleges and universities.

Students in all the centers live in private European homes or in European student dormitories. Before regular classes begin, they are given from four to seven weeks of intensive language training. The programs also include orientation, meals, and two field trips under European university lecturers.

Descriptive literature is obtainable from the Institute of European Studies, 35 E. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill.

Profs Make Harvard List

Two members of the University department of psychology are represented in the new, third edition of "The Harvard List of Books in Psychology."

The book "Systems and Theories of Psychology," by UVM's James P. Chaplin and T.S. Krawiec of Skidmore, is described in the Harvard List as "an excellent, historically oriented account of the theories of sensation, perception, learning, thinking, motivation, feeling, emotion, personality, and psychological quantification..." It was published in 1960.

The second Vermont book included in the list is "The Individual Psychology of Alfred Adler: a systematic presentation presentation in selections from his writings," edited and annotated by Heinz L. and Rowen R. Ansbacher. The "List" describes it as "the fullest and clearest exposition of Adler's individual psychology." It was published originally in 1956.

The "List" is a list of psychological books, chosen and annotated by Harvard psychologists. An early version, intended as a guide for Harvard students, was compiled in 1938 with a supplement in 1944. The first edition under the present title appeared in 1949, the second in 1955 with a supplement in 1958. The second edition listed 699 books. The third edition lists 704; 304 of them new, 238 retained from the previous list, and 117 updated as to edition or annotation.

Scholarships

Two national scholarships for college senior girls are offered for 1965-1966 by the Katharine Gibbs School. These awards were established in 1935 as a memorial to Mrs. Katharine M. Gibbs, founder and first president of the School.

Each scholarship consists of full tuition ($1,200) for the secretarial training course, plus an additional cash award of $500, totaling $1,700. The winners may select any one of the four Gibbs schools for their training -- Boston, New York, Montclair, or Providence.

Winners are chosen by the Scholarship Committee on the basis of college academic record, personal and character qualifications, financial need, and potentialities for success in business.

Each college or university may recommend two candidates, and each candidate must have this official endorsement. Students who may be interested in competing for one of these Katharine Gibbs awards may obtain full information from the college placement bureau.

Five Join Alpha Zeta

Five students have been initiated into the Green Mountain chapter of Alpha Zeta fraternity at the University of Vermont.

Alpha Zeta is the national agricultural honorary.

New members are Armine Wodehouse, 1400 Spear St., South Burlington; Walter McKee, 12 Loomis St., Burlington; James Rowley, Milton; Theodore Manning, Jr., Westfield, N.J., and Robert Ireland, Johnstown, N.Y.

Wodehouse, a senior, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wodehouse and is majoring in agricultural education. McKee is a junior with a forestry major. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McKee.

Rowley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rowley and is a junior engaged in agricultural economics. Ireland is also majoring in agricultural economics and is a junior. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ireland. Manning is a junior in agronomy and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Manning.

Suicide Rate Rises Among Students

(CPA) — The number of student suicides has risen alarmingly in the United States during the past few years, according to a report in the November issue of the NEA Journal, official magazine of the National Education Association.

"Depressed boys and girls, victims of inner turmoil and increasingly difficult outside conditions, are taking this way out of their troubles," Marguerite Clark of the Cornell University Medical College declared in the current issue. In 1962, about 550 young people between 15 and 19 years old took their own lives.

Cornell University conducted a study of suicide among college students. Dr. Leif Braaten, former psychologist of Cornell and author of the study, outlined four motives for student suicides in his report.

— A desire to destroy themselves because they can no longer tolerate the discrepancy between how they appear to themselves and how they would like to be.

— A need to punish others who hurt them.

— An urge to repent from some sin.

— A cry for help — "Please rescue me. Don't leave me alone."

Surprisingly, the Cornell doctors found that the student-patient who gets the highest marks is the one most likely to commit suicide. "Students with suicidal tendencies, were, as a group, good or very good students. Non-suicidal students, on the other hand, were often doing poorly in their academic work," the study noted. "The bright students were often overreaching themselves, measuring themselves by their own standards, which were much higher and more demanding than the minimum standards of the University," the report concluded.

Town Players Start Year

Going on the theory that no one can get too much of good theatre, we'd like to mention that the Burlington Community Theatre will launch another season with its Fall presentation, "The Girls in 509" by Howard Teichmann, on Nov. 23 and 24 at the Taft School Auditorium, curtain time 8:30.

Other offerings this season will be the Winter play, "A Far Country" by Henry Denker, and the Spring production of the smash Broadway hit "A Thousand Clowns" by Herb Gardner.

Members of the UVM faculty and staff have long taken an active interest in the Community Theatre both behind the footlights and behind the scenes, and many more of you may be interested.

Individual memberships at $5 entitle you to all three productions plus club privileges and may be purchased by contacting Prof. Gordon Lewis of the Sociology and Anthropology Department, or those who wish may obtain memberships at the box office either night during the run of "The Girls in 509".

Air Your Ideas

This year at UVM has been one of change. There are many pros and cons to be evaluated on such matters as our new trimester system. How do you feel about? What do you think about WSGA and SA? Why not bring your ideas to Joint Conference where you can air them before faculty and administration? Women students — that's Wednesday, November 11 in the Southwick Ballroom at 6:30 P.M. This is your chance to do something about UVM policies. Don't waste it!

Finale Saturday With Panthers Championship At Stake

The Vermont Catamounts tried valiantly last Saturday to overcome a powerful University of Massachusetts eleven, but the effort was in vain as the Redmen "overran" the Cats 28-7. Eight thousand and five hundred people viewed this contest which saw UMass retain the Yankee Conference Championship for the second straight season.

Pep Rally Friday Eve.

There will be a Pep Rally this Friday which will be the last one of the season, and let's make it our best. Let's have the biggest turnout of the year. Our team has played amazingly well this fall. How many colleges or universities can claim that their team finished the year with a 7-1 record? The answer is not many. Our boys have tried their best and have brought Vermont's finest hour into being. They are mentally and physically up for this game, but they need your help. The squad must have your fighting spirit, which will make their task of defeating Middlebury and obtaining their seventh victory even easier. They are counting on you for support. The Cats have never let you down and you can't let them down. It will be a short rally, but it will do a lot of good.

General Aptitude Test

The general Aptitude Test is composed of three different types of problems: verbal, mathematical, and spatial.

The verbal questions require one to select from five alternatives the synonym for a given word. The mathematical questions call for one to solve a problem, stated in a sentence or two, using processes generally taught in secondary school mathematics. The spatial problems consist of pictures of piles of blocks and require one to judge the number of blocks needed to make up the pile. Many of the piles include blocks which cannot be seen in the picture but whose presence can be inferred from the position of the other blocks.

The Modern Language Aptitude Test

The Modern Language Aptitude Test is designed to provide an indication of one's probable degree of success in learning to speak and to understand a foreign language. One's score on this test will depend to some extent on his knowledge of English vocabulary, but the test also measures sound-symbol association ability, sensitivity to grammar structure, and the rote memory aspect of the learning of foreign languages.

Golf Season Completed

by Gordon Josephson

The University of Vermont golf team, captained by senior Steve Slack, completed a fairly successful fall season by defeating Brandeis this month by a score of 5-1. This rounded out the teams' mark for the year to an excellent 2-0 record. The Brandeis win was complimented by one against MIT earlier in the year. In tournament play, the squad has not fared so well, however. They placed low in the ECAC tournament, and only 3 out of 5 schools in the Montreal tournament.

Composed mostly of excellent sophomores, and under the experienced guidance of J. Ed Donnelly, the team shows tremendous promise for the future. This spring, the Cats seem a sure bet to come out on top in the Yankee Conference.

A golf match is scored in much the same way as is a tennis match. In dual or tri-meets, seven members from each team go out in the field and the team at the end who boasts the lowest combined score total is the winner. In tournament play five members of each team compete in what is called Medal play. Medal play, in contrast to match play, which is used in dual and tri-meets, consists of awarding a certain number of points to each member of each team for the order of finish on each hole. After 18 holes, the team having the highest total points is the tournament champion.

Sophomore Lloyd Heir leads the team this fall with a 72/18 hole average. This fine average is further complimented by his excellent 3 handicap. Rounding out the remainder of the team are junior, Jim Nickson and sophomores, Art Shields, Nick Van Tassal, Tony Rich and Joe Donnelly.

BAD BREAKS

The Cats appeared to have suffered one bad break after another, and if you were keeping score in the stands the score should have read 17-6 in favor of Mass. that is, 17 bad breaks for Vermont as opposed to 6 for the Redmen. The Vermont trouble began when a rushed point traveled a sum total of 7 yards in the first period. The Cats fumbled, missed tackle and passes, and committed several infractions, and it was not until the buzzer sounded after 60 minutes of play that our trouble was over. Had the Cats been able to have the playing field and return to the clubhouse for an additional pep-talk, who knows what the result would have been like. The Cats played a tough game in spite of their bad luck, never tiring and never sustaining to the excellent Massachusetts squad.

Although the Catamounts were unable to make a dent in the Massachusetts ground game, Vermont did something which has not been done against U Mass in the Yankee Conference in almost two complete seasons. It was the first time since Mass. played Maine in 1963 that the Redmen have been scored upon by a Yankee Conference foe.

BRENNAN SPARKLES

The Vermont T.D. came in the final period of play after it was obvious that the victory was beyond reach. This shows the determination of our fine squad. It never gave up, and down to the final buzzer the Cats threw everything they had at the Redmen.

The scoring drive came with Jim Brennan at quarterback in the fifteen minutes of playing time. Brennan, used mainly on defense, had taken over for Scott Fitz, the number one quarterback, after Scott had dislocated a finger of his throwing hand late in the game. Brennan came through like a seasoned veteran as he quickly completed three of four forward passes.

The drive started on the Catamount forty-one yard line. Dave Busich, a sophomore speedster, picked off a Brennan pass for nine quick yards. Larry Rice made a beautiful grab of another pass to give the Cats a first and ten from Massachusetts 40. Brennan then clicked with Ken Andrade on a third aerial. Andrade's catch was perhaps the best of his career as he leaned between two defenders to pick off the spiral on his fingertips. The pigskin traveled sixteen more yards on the next play to the two yard-line, as Brennan kept the ball, finding a hole in the right end spot. Richie Reynolds bulled his way over for the score on the next play. Andrade kicked the extra point to complete the Catamount scoring of the afternoon.

PALM SCORES

Taking a look at the Massachusetts scoring last Saturday, it appears to be that the Redmen continuously took advantage of the many bad breaks. The first score followed a Vermont fumble in the first period. Vermont tried a roll-out option pitch out to the halfback, a play that has worked so successfully all season. But this lateral, for some unexplainable reason, went astray and was recovered on the Cat 23 by U Mass. Bob Ellis and Mike Ross made it first down in Vermont's eleven. Ken Palm then burst off tackle for the 11 yards and a U Mass score. Jerry Welch's first of four extra points made at 7-0 with 3:10 left in the first period.

In the second period Mike Ross bulled over for a 13 yard run to make the score 13-0. This scoring play followed a 31 yard drive spearheaded by a Welch pass and the running of Ross. When the halftime show began the score was 14-0 in favor of Mass.

The halftime show deserves mentioning for the U Mass Marching Band, which numbers 100 strong, provided the crowd with 15 minutes of enjoyable entertainment. The Maroon and white clad bandmen acted out a clever voting skit which caught the attention of everyone. This fifteen minute intermission served as a change of pace from the tough football contest.

It was the first play of the third period which literally broke Vermont's back. DeRose took the kickoff on his own 13, stuck to the sidelines and bolted past the oncoming Vermont defense. He did not stop running till he touched pay dirt in the Vermont endzone. Welch's boot was good and U Mass had a 21-0 lead.

The Redmen scored their final touchdown the next time they got their hands on the ball. Welch found Palm open and completed a pass to the Vermont 21 yard line. Four plays later the Redmen had scored and had their final tally of 28 points for the afternoon.

Statistics show that U Mass had a superior ground game in the contest as they totaled 19 first downs and 292 yards rushing to 87 yards for Vermont. The Cats did outdistance the Redmen through the air 114-52 yards, however this margin was not enough to be a deciding factor.

TITLE GAME

The Catamounts will attempt to take its second straight State Series title and complete its best season in history Saturday when it hosts unpredictable Middlebury College in the 1964 finale at Centennial Field at 1:30 p.m.

The Panthers are 3-2-1 on the season and served notice last Saturday that they would like their state title back after battling to a scoreless tie with Norwich. Vermont ended a Middlebury grip on the title last year with a 14-0 victory.

The Cats have a host of players who will make their final appearance in a UVM football uniform Saturday. Seniors who will graduate in May include Captain Ron Hertel, George Oelze, Ed Fugit, Fred Boese, Tom Mongeon, Denis Blanck, Paul Giardi, Richie Reynolds, Deane Kent, Frank Foerster, Ken Andrade, Jim Brennan, Larry Rice and Carl Ettlinger.

Bob Clifford is expected to go with his regular starting lineup with the exception of veteran junior quarterback Scott Fitz. Fitz was injured last Saturday and his status is not known for this week's contest. If the Nashua, N.H. field general does not start, Brennan will probably be given the nod by Clifford.

Backs Fred Beams and Jeff McKay and linemen Dave Giddings and John Kingman are the key men on Duke Nelson's eleven.

The Panthers hold a slim 26-25 lead in the series started in 1897. There have been six ties. A Vermont win or tie will clinch the state title for the Cats.

WSGA Plans Federal Opportunity Days For Tues. And Wed., November 17 And 18

One of the greatest problems we, as students, eventually encounter is the question of a career. As juniors and seniors, we feel more acutely the need to acquaint ourselves with the numerous opportunities available, but the freshmen and sophomores must also receive a little insight about different vocations so that they can plan some sort of a tentative outline pertaining to a career. As Mr. Hanau, Director of Placement will attest, the main reason for an individual's inability to select a specific career upon graduation resides in the fact that the large majority of students are simply unaware of the many possibilities which are open. By acquainting ourselves as much as possible with as many fields as possible, we will be better able to select the job which would be most satisfying to us, in the sense of personal fulfillment and achievement, effective contributions to that area or society, and financial considerations. We must know the choices before we can fairly and adequately choose a career. We may vacillate in our choices, but our final choice will come as a result of careful consideration and deliberation as to what we want to do with our lives.

In an effort to close this gap between what we students know about career opportunities and what actually exists, Women's Student Government Association has undertaken the promotion and presentation of Federal Opportunity Day, the second of its kind at the University of Vermont. Although this is only a beginning, we feel it is certainly a beneficial beginning. W.S.G.A. has decided to support this program in order to bring this type of effort into the hands of the students themselves; it is the students who are to benefit from the program and who should be organizing the program in order to get maximum knowledge from it. We could very easily let the administration put the program on and merely walk through the displays and remark casually how "nice" the program is; but, unless we are directly involved in the planning and running of the program, we will neither appreciate the importance of the program nor will we be able to contribute our own ideas as students and therefore to express an interest in particular fields from which we might want representatives to come and talk. It is the hope of W.S.G.A. Council that this Federal Opportunity Day be continued in future years, that the whole subject of career opportunities be expanded to include many other fields, and that the organization and presentation of these ideas be handled by the students in conjunction with the Placement Service.

The Federal Opportunity Days are to be November 17 and 18; Tuesday, the hours are from 9:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m., and Wednesday, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. It is to be held in Billings Center, North Lounge. The participating agencies are as follows:

Social Security Administration, Welfare Administration, Internal Revenue Service, Springfield Armory, Public Health Service, Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, Immigration Service, Labor Department, Soil Conservation Service, State Department, Civil Service Commission, and Bureau of Public Roads.

Each agency has at least one representative who is more than willing to describe his agency and answer any questions you might have. Take advantage of this opportunity to acquaint yourself with some of the areas in government work; I'm sure you will all find the entire program of interest. Janet Koch
President, W.S.G.A.

Senator G. Aiken To Speak Friday

U.S. Senator D. Aiken

The University community will enjoy the unparalleled opportunity of meeting on a personal level with the senior Senator from Vermont, George D. Aiken.

The Student Cultural Activities Committee (SCOPE) has arranged to have the Senator address the University Friday afternoon (Nov. 13th) at 4:30 P.M. in Billings North Lounge.

Aiken is the ranking member of the Senate's Foreign Affairs Committee, thus the University can be assured of hearing a well informed discussion of Foreign Affairs which will include the "Shake-up in the Kremlin" and "China's new bomb."

SCOPE members explained that the meeting should be on a personal level because the Senator has consented to accept any and all questions from the floor following his talk. It is hoped that a good number of students, as well as faculty, will avail themselves of this unprecedented opportunity.

Federal Opportunity Day, December, 1963.

ROTC Selects Cadets For Flight Training

Each year, the United States Army makes participation in its Flight Training Program available to qualified and selected ROTC cadets at the colleges and universities where Army ROTC is a part of campus life. The University of Vermont ROTC is allocated 10 spaces in the program during the current academic year.

Awarded the distinctive single-wing badge, emblematic of participation, during the cadet drill last week were the following students (all of whom are members of the Class of 1965).

The impact and importance of this program are most easily measured by examining the future activities of these young men who are about to embark upon the adventure of flight. During their senior year at UVM, they will receive a complete course in private flying by Northern Airways at Burlington Airport which will include 35 hours of ground school, 22 hours of flying instruction with an instructor pilot, 14 hours of solo flying time (local and cross-country), and, finally, an FAA-awarded private pilot's license upon successfully passing the government-prescribed written and performance tests. Upon commissioning as Second Lieutenants at the time of Commencement next May, the officers will enter on active duty for three years, the first year of which is devoted to intensive additional flight training at the Army Aviation School. As fully-qualified Army Aviators, these young men will receive higher pay than their non-flying contemporaries by an amount which varies between $100 and $245 a month depending upon rank and time in service. Their future will be enriched by a sure knowledge that they will have joined the ranks of those adventurous and explorative Americans who have constantly pushed back the frontiers of flight during the last half-century.

KW News

The Independent, Kake Walk Committee was formed on October 27th and, after having its certification of membership approved by Dean Patzer, met for the second time on Nov. 2nd. Under its chairman, Howard Cyr, the committee was divided into four sub-committees and each elected its own chairman: Sculpture Comm. — Phil Buttarovoli; Social Comm. — David Zarling; Walking Comm. — Eric Anderson; Financial Comm. — Dick Darling (treasurer). The committee will continue to meet individually, and will welcome any freshmen or upperclassmen who wish to join.

The Burlington Committee for Mississippi, according to its co-ordinator, Carl Kleban, has just completed its faculty solicitations drive on campus. All teachers in every department of the school have been contacted and over $600 have been collected. Each teacher was visited by one of the 30 members of the group at which time the goals of the drive, the rebuilding of burned churches in McComb, Mississippi and the installing of two way radios in voter registration cars, was explained, to him. The committee is truly grateful for the generosity of the faculty. A letter sent from Mississippi to the Committee and the many contributors will be reprinted at a later date. With the conclusion of this drive the first phase of the BCAM program has successfully been accomplished.

With the completion of phase one, the Burlington Committee for Mississippi will begin its student contribution drive beginning the week of November 16. There will be a display at the School Store during the week and the articles being displayed there, will be on sale at Billings Center information desks on Nov. 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20 from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. Articles being sold are:

Handshake buttons $.50
Bumper Stickers $1
Freedom Posters $1
Freedom Song Books $3
The Freedom Singers "Records" $3
"The Abolitionists" book $5
Pictorial history of the Civil Rights movement $2

Michael Unger, who is co-ordinating the student drive, says that he hopes to have BCAM representatives in the dormitories and fraternity houses who will be able to answer questions about BCAM and explain its purpose.

All the money which is collected will be sent to Mississippi where it will be used to carry on voter registration drives and to finance the 14 freedom schools now operating in Mississippi which are desperately in need of funds to carry on their work. Students are encouraged to support the Mississippi project.

"We were brothers all

In honour, as in one community,

Scholars and gentlemen." - Wordsworth, The Prelude

THE CASE FOR AN HONOR SYSTEM AT UVM

We are profoundly disappointed to learn that attempts to establish an academic honor system at the University have been prematurely halted. Why?

Two weeks ago at the S.A. Senate meetings a discussion on the possibility of instituting an honor code terminated nebulously. Debating the issue led only toward the negative when various students felt the solution to cheating lay in a more stringent application of proctoring.

A similar conclusion was reached during a recent meeting of student leaders, faculty and administration, the majority of whom felt an honor system to be unworkable at UVM.

Why is UVM different from any other college? If such varied institutions as Bowdoin and West Point have been successful insofar as their honor code is concerned, then why can't UVM attain the same success?

Several people offer the argument that this university lacks the tradition to establish such a system. As one of the oldest universities in the country, we certainly can agree that, in fact, we do indeed possess a rich heritage. If for some reason we lack the specific tradition (whatever that may be) requisite for an honor system, then this is the very time to begin building a completely new tradition, so that, in 10 or 20 years, an honor system will be as much a part of our academic life as Kake Walk is of our social life.

Others argue the impracticality of an honor system on the basis that there is too much cheating. Stricter proctoring is no solution; it does not at all affect the root of the problem. We like to assume that people are basically honest. Consequently, cheating seems to arise from conditions not conducive to the maintenance of honesty; be it the atmosphere of competition - to do as well as, or better than, others; or the lack of respect for a professor or his subject matter.

A foremost proponent of the system here at UVM has expressed the belief that every student inherently has honor; it is only a matter of cultivating this honor. Emphasizing the individual, an honor system would thus encourage the exercise of what is basic and noble to man.

The problem of competitiveness can be solved only within ourselves; each person should be able to assess his own worth, his capabilities and his shortcomings. In cheating, a student is taking from another what does not belong to him - in effect, he is stealing, and falsifying what he really is.

The problem of a lack of respect for the professor and/or his subject can be solved by mutual cooperation between students and faculty. Granted, it is the responsibility of the student to regard his instructor positively as a symbol of authority. On the other hand, it is the responsibility of the teacher, as educator, to present his material so that it is valuable to his students; a lax attitude on his part, either in teaching or in administering exams, reflects unfavorably upon impressionable young people, who develop attitudes and values from the examples set for them by their elders.

What would an honor system entail if, theoretically, it were established at UVM? We would like to recommend the sort of system as is employed at Bowdoin College. Briefly: students are left to their natural honor not to cheat; there is no proctoring during exams. As for reporting an individual who is seen to break the code, the choice lies within the student himself according to his own sense of honor. (Conceivably, this provision would prevent cheating, since, as admitted to us by confessed cheaters, a student would not know whether he would be reported if he did cheat; so, most likely, he would not.)

What more can we ask of anyone? Honor is an abstract word with which even Webster struggles to define. In the last analysis, it is definable only by each individual, who must ultimately live with himself.

Not only do we support the establishment of an honor system; but, we demand it. In an age of growing impersonalization, let us reject further artificiality when we know we can do something real and personal, tangible and enriching, for the University society and for ourselves.

Letters To The Editor Sour Grapes

To the Editor:

One week the Sceptic bemoans decadence on the university level and the next week gives us "Art Film", which has a good case of dry rot if nothing else. This article is not constructive criticism, it is just sour grapes. I agree that something needs to be done about governing of women at UVM but making an ogre of the Dean of Women accomplishes nothing. It is hard to tell what the Sceptic suggests - it sounds like the alternative is between the sort of Dean of Women and her henchmen pictured here, and a mass orgy, or perhaps more realistically, the musical beds sort of promiscuity which leads to boredom and loss of meaning in sexual relationships.

I personally think there are other alternatives. I think upper-classmen should have more freedom, corresponding to increased maturity and responsibility, than a few token late curfews. Why should all women students be treated as if their emotional and social development remained static for four years? Maturity and responsibility admittedly are not determined by age or class, but as an indication, these factors could be used to lead to more realistic regulations.

I also do not understand the reason for standards of dress being imposed on women students. If it is to impress outsiders, it seems trivial; if it is to assure that we all become well-behaved and feminine, it won't work; and if it is to promote conformity, it might work but the desirability of this aim is dubious.

In other words can't we have some concrete gripes instead of this general dumping on the Dean of Women? Can't we have some realization that the Dean of Women is necessary and WHY? People have been talking about all this since my freshman year and probably long before that, and so far all that has been done is the removal of the Honor Code, slight changes in Pink Cards, and much tearing of hair, none of which seems to have done much toward satisfying anybody, much less everybody. Even if you consider the Dean of Women to be against you, you must admit that she, not resorting to such things as "Art Film", is presently in the lead.

Sincerely,
Betsy Gottlieb, '65

Post-Mortem

To the Editor:

In the CYNIC of Nov. 6, 1964, I was unknowingly quoted incompletely as to my position on the presidential election. In the future if no mention of printing a statement is given, I would advise the reporter to at least record a complete viewpoint before it appears in black and white.

At that time, I stated my disgust in the prior campaigning drenched with the political "mud" thrown by both candidates in their zeal to win. When asked during my "interview" about my words "crook" and "radical" I expressed no great desire to uphold a man possibly connected in any relationships with individuals like Jenkins and Baker. Nor did I throw my support for a man whose stand on the very important issue of nuclear weapons renders their use with so carefree an attitude. It is also my opinion that both election campaigns came to exemplify children playing "Cowboys and Indians" more than it did two

"An academic grasp without practice behind it is like an emblamed corpse, perhaps lovely to look at but nothing to inspire or ennoble..." - Mahatma Gandhi

We have been sitting back for these last four years noticing with amusement the attempt of an administration to run down the academic status of a university. Since we first came here four years ago some of the finest teachers we have known have departed. Our tuition, not our education, has increased one-third. Under the direction of Messrs Fey, Rowell (the former you freshmen have the benefit of missing) and the trustees, we can confidently say, this school is becoming a third-rate institution. The latest in this downhill progress we are now involved in. Our dear Mr. Rowell has seen to it that more of us drop out of school because of grades and/or health (physical or mental) this semester. For some reason, that has apparently escaped us, the man from Waterman has chosen to push this semester as close as possible only to give us a three and a half week "vacation." How mysterious! One would think that Mr. Rowell isn't on the side of education after all. How strange! "Is he trying to kill us," one sophomore co-ed asked us. "This is worse than boot camp," a veteran informed us. It seems the campus is on the brink of revolt. In order to quell this rising tide of violence on the green the staff of the Sceptic has dug into the real reasons behind the new semester.

The reasoning, as we hear it, is to get in as many classes as possible so that, in the future, this school can admit more and more students. This is just the first step in a long range program to establish a "speedy" education program. From what we hear the University's final step will occur in a decade. They will then announce the final program. Classes, in this new program, will be fifty-five minutes long and the usual class day will be extended from seven in the morning to eleven at night. Holidays, such as Thanksgiving and Christmas will be abolished. New Year's Eve will be useless to observe since all girls will have to be back in their dorms by 10:30 (classes the next day) and the consuming of alcoholic beverages (a very un-academic pursuit) will still be prohibited anyway. Each student will be required to take thirty credits a quarter and every student will have to graduate within two years of admission. Tuition, of course, will be doubled (reason-students are getting twice the education in half the time) as will be the fees, all of them. The University, as with all plans, will submit this new semester to both the Faculty Senate and the Student Association. The faculty will say nothing. Borrowing from their past history they shall sit in their "senate" and mutter a few pious groans over the decline of education but, in the end, they shall give their approval (the only noise that will ever come from this astute body will come over the very academic question of paychecks). The Student Association with their nice, agreeable young president shall agree (as they always do) unanimously to support the Administration. Everyone is agreeable: let's give out the diplomas as fast as Queen City Printers can make 'em.

The future certainly will be great. A typical class day will begin at seven in the morning when the entire school will meet on the quadrangle in front of Waterman (if it has not been turned into a parking lot) for calisthenics. With loudspeakers strung from tree to tree and the Dean of Men standing on the steps of the building leading the drill (One, Two, One, Two) it will be an impressive site (the Physical Education Plant will have been adjudged obsolete and given to the Military Science Department. The old gym will be turned into a storage area for obsolete IBM machines. Downstairs the book store will sell books at the same exorbitant prices for the same nifty profit). Classes shall be so large that attendance will be impossible to take. Students will punch in at seven and punch out at eleven. Imagine sixteen hours of bliss in Lafayette Hall with all those inspiring instructors! Two years of sixteen-hour days counting those little holes in the ceiling, doing the daily crossword puzzle and passing notes between friends. Wouldn't it be lovely.

Yes the future will be bright at Vermont. With all interstates pointing towards Burlington, with the inactivity of the faculty Senate and the Student Association and with the activity of the Dean of Administration, UVM will reach new financial, if not academic heights.

IMPORTANT - We have been asked by leading officials to issue an announcement over the recent sexual attacks around the University grounds. We would appreciate it if all those girls who desire sexual relations would make it easier for your attackers and not make such a noise; it embarrasses the administration. If you girls wish to be molested stand alone in the darkest shadows of South Prospect Street when no one is around and when attacked, make no noise. A nearby bush is recommended. Remember, when you wish to be raped, consider the public relations of the University. We have spent a considerable amount of money building the name of this institution. We do not wish the good name of the school thrown away because of a few careless acts on the part of a few co-eds. Next time when you girls go out alone at night, play it cool.

mature politicians speaking on their party platform. Campaign speeches in a country trying to live in peaceful coexistence with the others of this world seem quite trite when they become more involved with who is to push the little black button than for what reason it should be used.

Whether we stood for Johnson or Goldwater or were independent we must set the recent election in its proper place, the past. We can no longer function with over zealous anti-party antagonism. Only as cooperative Americans can we exist.

Signed,
Daniel P. Barden, '67

French Center

To the Editor:

I was happy to see in your publication another article dealing with the French Cultural Center. The Center is indeed a growing organization and the vigor of its Director, Mrs. Swift, is reflected in the enthusiasm of the students who have taken part in its activities or sat at the French table at Simpson.

I should point out, however, that the final paragraph of the article is misleading and that Mrs. Swift was misquoted. No formal request has been made as yet for the establishment of a French House for next year and, consequently, any report about

TAX RELIEF FOR TUITION?

A proposal to provide an income tax credit for costs of tuition, books, supplies, and equipment at colleges and universities was narrowly defeated during the 88th Congress. It is expected to come up again in the next session.

On the surface, the proposal has appeal for families increasingly confounded by the increasing cost of sending one or more sons and/or daughters through college. Opponents of the proposal, however, believe its passage would in fact give rise to a new round of increased tuitions and fees.

A pamphlet published by the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges reports that advocates of the proposal tell parents it will provide relief, but "to educational institutions pressed for money they say it is an opportunity to collect federal tax money by simply raising tuition by the amount of the tax credit."

ARE YOU CERTIFIED?

The Milwaukee Journal, in an editorial of October 27, cites "Another serious objection ... raised by President Fred Harrington of the University of Wisconsin. He said recently: 'If the treasury department, through the bureau of internal revenue, is to police this provision in a manner calculated to protect the interests of all the taxpayers who foot the bill for it, it will have to impose on the colleges and universities, the parents and individual students the most elaborate system of record keeping and certification ever conceived to apply to American higher education.'"

Concludes the editorial: "Tax credit advocates should put their energies to more constructive uses by supporting -- and helping to expand -- such tried and worthy aids as federal fellowship and loan programs."

HE'S FOR INTELLECTUAL BICEPS

Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California recently got in a plea for academic freedom as he addressed the 47th meeting of the American Council on Education. "Great schools have survived without large sums of money and even without a high degree of public interest and enthusiasm." But he said they cannot survive "dictation from outside their own ranks as to what the teacher can teach and what he cannot; or what the student can hear and what he cannot; or which fields of inquiry are open and which closed; which are 'safe' or 'unsafe.'"

He warned that education today is "being challenged by those who would clamp the lid on intellectual inquiry," and said that "in California we are determined to counter that effort with all the force we can muster. By the same token, we will press our belief that the mind of the student is not a bottle into which you should pour pre-mixed ideas. Rather, it is a muscle -- to be strengthened by exercise -- toughened and matured by vigorous use."

COLLEGE: LAND OF CHOSEN PEOPLE

A survey made by University of Cincinnati registrar, Dr. Garland G. Parker, estimates that U.S. college and university enrollment may hit a new high of 5,000,000 this year. That's 5,000,000 of our nation's 190,000,000 citizens who are currently engaged in pursuit of education beyond the high school. Full-time students in accredited four-year colleges and universities will account for only half of the 5,000,000, however.

Perhaps it may help to personalize the figures just a bit by pointing out that 3600 of our nation's 2,500,000 full-time undergraduates are enrolled at Vermont. That's a cozy .0014% of the total.

Placement Barometer

By Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

If you were to ask me, what universal question do I constantly receive from students, my answer would have to be, "What can I do following graduation?"

For a number of years now, I have had a growing belief that the main reason so many of you are unable to select a career following graduation is simply due to the fact that you are basically unaware of the world of opportunity that is open. I contend that once you become acquainted with different fields, types of jobs, and in general the language of the world of work, armed with this information, you should be able to make a decision as to where you will start. To be sure, you may change your outlook and job any number of times but at least you will have made a beginning and acquired some experience upon which to build a foundation.

Thirteen agencies have been invited to participate in a two day program, scheduled for Tuesday, November 17, 8:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. and Wednesday, November 18, 1964, 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. in the North Lounge of the Billings Center. The guests include: The Civil Service Commission, Central Intelligence Agency, Bureau of Public Roads, Public Health Service, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Social Security Administration, Labor Department, Soil Conservation Service, National Security Agency, State Department, Welfare Administration, Internal Revenue Service and the Springfield Armory. Each agency will provide a display and personnel will be more than willing to discuss various career opportunities with you. Furthermore, collectively the group represents career areas for all of our colleges here at the University.

I am not going to request you to visit Billings next Tuesday and Wednesday. Each of you must decide in his or her own way. Many of you, quite frankly are not ready for it; but for the few of you who are willing to try to tear down this curtain that separates you from learning of the world of opportunity, perhaps a half hour walking through the North Lounge might be the first pebble heard dropping into a very large and deep pool.

one is premature. At the same time, this Department, as well as the Director of the Center, are, of course, most interested in the creation of such a residence unit next September, and will urge it upon the Administration, provided there is sufficient response on the part of our women students to warrant exclusive occupancy of one of the residence units. When we have facts about student willingness to reside in a French House, we can at that time do something about it, and I feel certain that the Office of the Dean of Women will hear us sympathetically.

THE ARTS

by Sanford Plotkin

The Lane Series is an integral part of UVM. Yet this was not always the case. The idea of bringing a program of artists to the campus was originally conceived of by a student, Jerry Agel, in 1952. Although he was opposed by a conservative administration, Agel persisted and his efforts were met by success. In 1952, the Student Association presented a full program highlighted by the appearance of Charles Laughton, and Norman Thomas. In 1953, the program featured Tyrone Power and Raymond Massey. In 1954, the season featured the play, "The Caine Mutiny" with Wendell Cory. That year the performances were moved from the Chapel to Memorial Auditorium. The Lane Series was formally inaugurated in 1955. This was made possible by the gift of Mrs. George B. Lane in memory of her husband, Class of 1883. Since its inception the Lane Series has been a tremendous success. Each year the Lane Series, the Chamber Arts Series, and children's program, bring approximately 25 cultural productions to Burlington. The success of the Lane Series is such, that different attractions and agents inform the Lane Committee of their offering because of the prestige to be gained by appearing on the Lane Series, which is known for its high quality and discrimination in choosing what will appear. This year for the first time in the history of the Lane Series, more than half of the tickets were sold to students. In the past, students accounted for only 30% of the ticket sales. The hidden success of the Lane Series lies in the fact that students play an important part in the choosing and producing the program. On the working committee of the Series the students actually have more voting power than the members of the faculty. This committee is not a mere facade or rubber stamp group. It is in the full sense of the word a real working committee.

The accomplishments of the Lane Series and committee are in no small part a reflection of the effort of Dr. Jack Trevithick, who has guided the Lane Series since its inception ten years ago. Dr. Trevithick pointed out the ironical position the Lane Series now finds itself in. The Series is comparable to that offered by schools with greater resources and audiences, such as the University of Chicago and Boston University, yet lacks an auditorium equal to the performers which the Series presents. "The biggest need," Dr. Trevithick states, "is for an auditorium that is consonant with the artists we present." Eugene Ormandy when he appeared as conductor, the Philadelphia Philharmonic felt only 60% of the orchestra's sound was getting through to the audience. The acoustics are only one of the disadvantages of using Memorial Auditorium. A more serious drawback is the lack of sight-lines. Because Memorial Auditorium is an all purpose building used for exhibitions, sports events, etc., it does not provide a properly sloped floor. Dr. Trevithick pointed out that the city, who owns the auditorium and rents it to the Lane Series at a nominal fee, which would be ten times higher in another big city, has spent $116,000 dollars in the last 8 years in improving the dressing facilities and general condition of the building. What is especially lacking is a "fly loft" suspended over the stage from which scenery can be stored and lowered during the performance. There is a possibility that Memorial Auditorium will be renovated by the University in a cooperative effort with the city. There is also "agitation and thinking" about a Fine Arts building on campus. However, both the drama and music departments are opposed to the inclusion of a concert auditorium in such a project. Their objection is soundly based on the fact that there simply will not be enough money available to construct both an adequate classroom and an auditorium. Secondly such a building would not be used enough to warrant the expenditure. Dr. Trevithick related an interesting anecdote which dealt a serious blow to the cause of a new auditorium. When Van Cliburn appeared three years ago he was depressed by the recent death of an aunt to whom he was very close. At a dinner after the performance given by President Fey he was asked by the President about the auditorium. Politely Van Cliburn replied that it was the "best auditorium he had ever played in."

Obviously there is a need for a new auditorium in which the audience can get the full value of a Philharmonic Orchestra, or theatrical production. As the situation now stands several orchestras are reluctant to appear at the Auditorium.

As a service to ticket holders the Lane Series offers to sell tickets for any single performance if the ticket holder is not able to attend. Those interested should call extension 240.

Meetings of the Lane Series Working Committee are open and students, especially freshmen and sophomores, are encouraged to attend. This week's meeting will be in room 54 at 4:10 in Lower Waterman on Tuesday, November 17.

SCOPE

Henry Mandel informs us that: Nov. 2 Prof. Gulyas gave an earful to a few interested students (18) herded together by SCOPE. The Professor suggested that the real objectives of a University were being forgotten, that emphasis was being placed on quantity and the material world rather than on quality. The general lack of attendance of any intellectual or cultural gathering on this campus would seem to bear him out!

I.B.M. Brings Art To Fleming

by George Reed

Last Saturday, two new exhibits opened at the Fleming Museum, "The Mannerists," 16th Century bronzes and prints, circulated by the American Federation of Arts, and "American Printmakers," on loan from the Department of Arts and Sciences of the IBM corporation.

Nearly half of the prints in the show are contemporary works purchased recently for the IBM collection. The prints cover printmaking in America from the early 19th Century to the present and include excellent pieces like the "Lion" by Kohn, the "Pieta" by Lansansky, and "La Terra Trema" by Summers.

The bronzes in the Mannerist exhibit cover the style that flourished with varying intensity throughout Europe from roughly 1530 to 1630, between the High Renaissance and the High Baroque.

Because the artists of both periods faced a world of instability and tension, the two exhibits make a very interesting juxtaposition.

Both exhibits may be seen through November 29th and I urge all to do so because they are both excellent.

"Hmm, what shall I say?"

by Judy Beeber

Next week, beginning on Nov. 16th and extending through Nov. 20th, telephones will be ringing a little more than usual in men's residence halls and fraternity houses. This will be the week girls have been waiting for, when the tides are reversed and girls call the guys for dates. This as you may already know is called "Merp Week". Many functions have been planned to make the week an enjoyable one.

On Tuesday, November 17th, the annual Powder Puff Football Game will be held at 4:00 p.m. on one of the greens on main campus. Girls from sororities and dormitories will compete with each other to get those touchdowns. The referees and coaches will be the candidates for Merp Week King. This should be quite a spectacle, so girls, bring your dates and cheer for the team of your choice.

On Wednesday, November 18th, girls can bring their dates to a Hootenanny which will tentatively be held in the North Lounge of Billings at 4:00 p.m. Each sorority is responsible for one act. Thursday, November 19th, marks the high point of Merp Week when Merp Week King will be elected. Candidates for king are:

1. Alpha Chi Omega - Scott Fitz from Kappa Sigma.
2. Alpha Epsilon Phi - Carl Kleban.
3. Delta Delta Delta - Ron Hertell.
4. Gamma Phi Beta - Rusty Brink from Kappa Sigma.
5. Kappa Alpha Theta - Tom Minnahan from Delta Psi.
6. Pi Beta Phi - Buzzy Clifford from Kappa Sigma.
7. Alpha Delta Pi - Skip Lamere from Delta Psi.

Allow me...

"Anything you'd like, sir."

Off to the movies.

"I wonder what she wants, as if I didn't know."

"Why MUST he keep me waiting?"

Later, at night... waiting again!

Wonder who took the initiative for this one?

FEDERAL OPPORTUNITY DAYS - NOVEMBER 1964

Billings Center, North Lounge

by Bayne Andrews
Civil Service Commission

Of the Federal Government's seventy-plus departments and agencies, how many can you name? Most of us are doing well if we can recall the ten Cabinet agencies. How many of us could identify, much less explain, the Home Loan Bank Board, the National Science Foundation, the Bureau of Standards, the Renegotiation Board? How many of us have heard of the General Services Administration? Yet this agency has subdivisions that do business on a larger scale than most of America's largest corporations.

Our governmental structure is complex and diverse. Government changes with the times; like a living thing, it reacts to alterations in the world around it. Most of us, unless we have a special interest, are not able to keep up with the intricacy and dynamic change of modern government. We tend to think of Government in terms of the few agencies with which we have had personal contact -- the Post Office, the Internal Revenue Service, perhaps the Veterans Administration or the Department of Defense -- without a thought to the many other activities carried on by Federal agencies.

By the same token, how many of us could name even three or four of the more than ninety classes of positions for which the Federal Government hires college graduates. The Federal

GSA TELLS STORY

The General Services Administration will be represented by Mr. Frederick J. Graham, Regional Placement Officer. Mr. Graham has degrees from Merrimack College, Andover, Massachusetts and Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts, based upon a major in Personnel Management and Industrial Relations. He has been continuously employed by GSA and its predecessor, FWA, since 1948, principally in personnel duties except for a two-year period when he was employed as Treasurer of the Merrimack Electrotyping Corporation in Concord, New Hampshire. In recent years, while employed by GSA, he has specialized in the placement field.

The General Services Administration is an organization of approximately 30,000 employees performing duties in all 50 states. Every agency of the Federal Government does business with GSA, as we are either "landlord", "buying agency", or "record keeper". To handle its wide range of work GSA is efficiently arranged into an organization best suited to the various tasks which come within the scope of its overall responsibilities. The major organizational units in GSA are referred to as "Services" or "Staff Offices" and is comprised of the Public Buildings Service, Federal Supply Service, Defense Materials Service, Transportation and Communications Service, National Archives and Records Service, Utilization and Disposal Service, Office of Finance and Administration, and the Office of General Counsel.

In the professional, technical and administrative fields there are career opportunities for those interested in accounting and budget, archives, buildings management, communications, digital computer analysis, engineering, legal, management analysis, personal property, personnel administration, public utilities, record management, real property, supply, and transportation.

Service is the largest single employer of college graduates; about 20,000 college-calibre positions are filled each year. The Government recruits top graduates in every field, to provide a continuing intake of talent and thus provide a steady supply of junior executives to replace the top managers who will be retiring five, ten or twenty years from now.

The purpose of the Career Day program is to educate, not to recruit. I think of it as an extension of the Guidance and Placement services provided by the University. We will have with us representatives of a dozen Federal organizations, a cross-section of the Government's activities. We hope that the students will talk to as many as they can manage. Such exploration can help assist the future worker to formulate his own ideas about his chosen vocation, and can also open to him an awareness of the rich possibilities open to him in the Public service.

A SERVICE TO THE PUBLIC

The mission of the Soil Conservation Service is to establish a sound soil and water conservation program throughout the State and Nation. We are interested in recruiting graduates of the Agricultural College with backgrounds in agronomy, biology, wildlife, forestry, economics, recreation and agricultural engineering. We also need civil and hydraulic engineers, geologists, soil scientists, business administration officers, etc.

Carl B. Kenton, Jr., Administrative Assistant; born November 22, 1930 in Winnsboro, Louisiana; U.S. Army October 13, 1951 to December 13, 1951; graduated Athens College, Athens, Alabama, with B.A. in Business Administration 1956; entered on duty with the Soil Conservation Service as trainee in Jackson, Mississippi, on October 20, 1958; transferred to Hawaii on October 4, 1959; transferred to Vermont on December 10, 1961; married and has four boys.

Roger T. Dunton, State Administrative Officer; born and raised in Vermont; received B.S. in 1952 and M.A. in 1956 from University of Vermont; served in World War II; taught VO-Ag in New York prior to joining the Soil Conservation Service; on June 25, 1956; married and has no children.

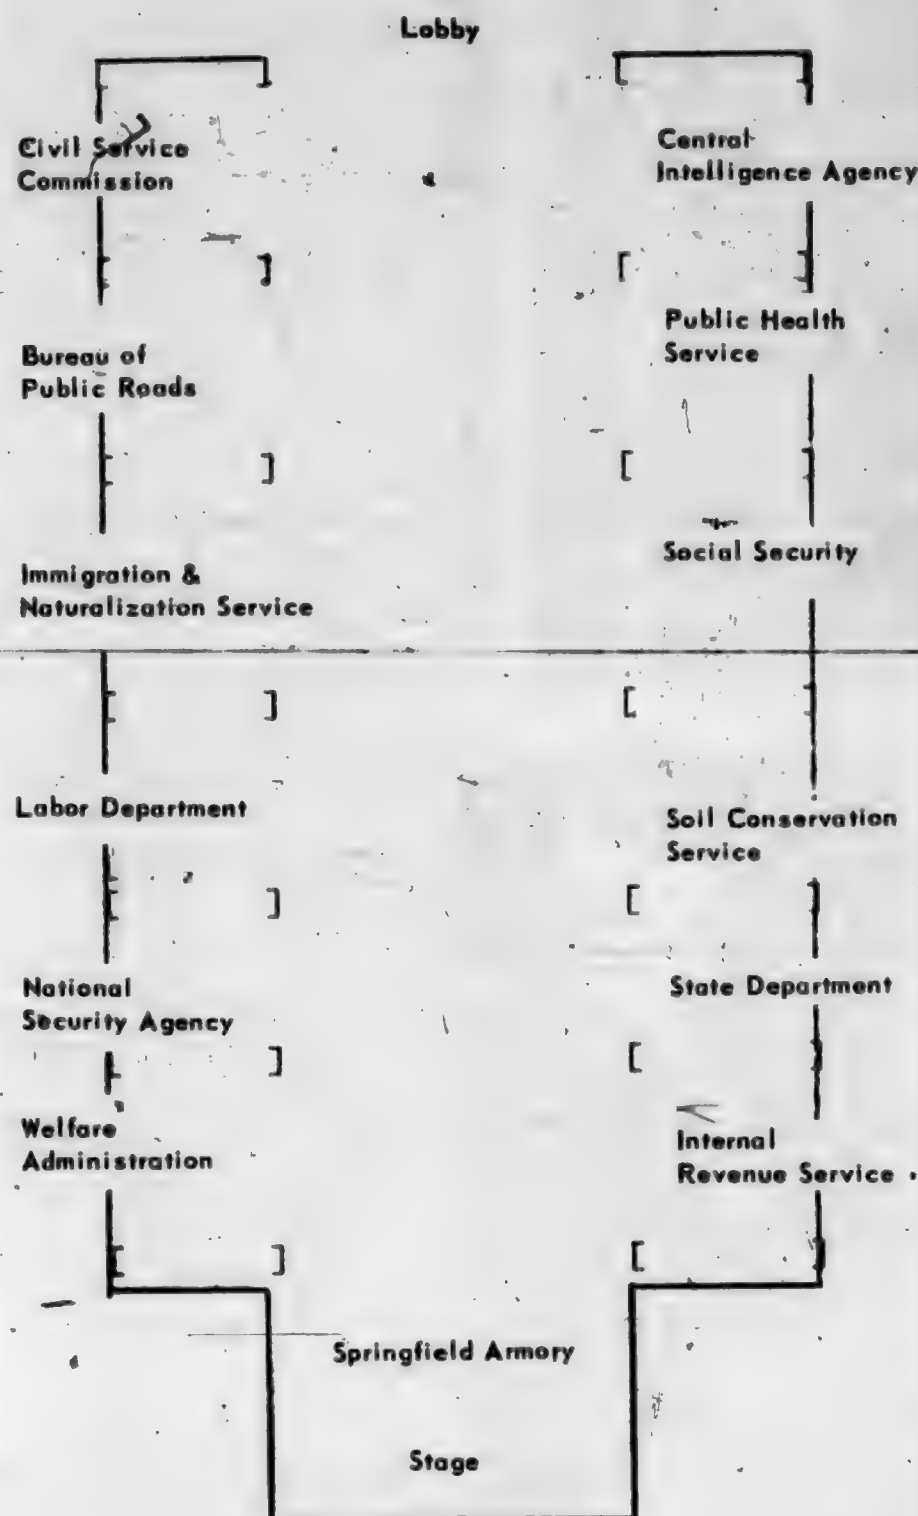

IRS SKETCH

Mission: The mission of the Internal Revenue Service is to encourage and achieve the highest possible degree of voluntary compliance with the tax laws and regulations and to maintain the highest degree of public confidence in the integrity and efficiency of the service. This includes communicating the requirements of the law to the public, determining the extent of compliance and causes of non-compliance, and doing all things needful to a proper enforcement of the law.

Biography: Robert Lafayette, Personnel Officer, Mr. Lafayette has participated in all phases of recruiting for the Internal Revenue Service for approximately three years.

John Detore, Internal Revenue Agent. Graduated from the University of Vermont in 1960. In accordance with our team concept of recruiting, a technical person is generally made available for consultation by interested applicants.

FLOOR PLAN

NSA LOOKS AHEAD

The National Security Agency, located at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, is a major activity of the Department of Defense. Career positions are available in which scientific and liberal arts graduates may contribute satisfactorily to matters affecting the security of the United States.

Although the sensitive nature of the work prohibits a detailed description of NSA activities, the following paragraphs outline opportunities for scientific and liberal arts graduates.

Engineers and scientists will be concerned with advance concepts, techniques and componentry relative to a great variety of communications equipment; computers and data processing systems; complex recording devices; and a seldom seen array of instrumentation and laboratory facilities.

Career assignments for liberal arts graduates would involve individual and group research projects dealing with a study in analyses of written materials covering different subject matter fields relating to area studies. Many of these complex problems are of long range as well as current interest to NSA and provide a rare opportunity for the person interested in analytic research.

Initial salaries depend on degree, degree level, and experience. Employees also receive all Civil Service benefits such as Life and Health Insurance at minimal cost, liberal Sick Leave and Vacations, and the Federal Retirement Plan.

All new employees receive the necessary training to prepare them for their initial assignments, and opportunities for training are present throughout the employee's NSA career.

NSA conducts an annual college recruitment program and any person desiring additional information should contact the Placement Office or write to:

THE MISSION OF SPRINGFIELD ARMORY

Springfield Armory is the principal small arms research and development center for the U.S. Army. It is, today, essentially a research, development, and engineering laboratory for weapons and weapons systems. We are interested in recruiting B.S. and M.S. candidates in mechanical, electrical, and electronic engineering for positions concerned with weapons design and development and electro-mechanical engineering, including servos, and the design and development of electronic computers and control systems for use in the weapons systems.

Mr. William J. Hayes, Chief, Employment Services Branch received a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration from Boston University. A Masters of Education from Westfield State. Presently Chief of the Employment Services Branch at Springfield Armory. This position includes responsibilities for recruitment, employment, and career development, among others.

SOCIAL SECURITY TO VISIT

William E. Dorn, District Manager and Orville C. Keefer, Field Representative of the Social Security Administration, Burlington, Vermont will be present at the University of Vermont Federal Opportunity Day, December 11, 1963.

The Social Security Administration operates a national social insurance system designed to meet specific needs through three programs for income maintenance:

1. Old age retirement
2. Survivor's insurance
3. Disability insurance

The program is administered through a system of over 600 offices throughout the United States. The central office is in Baltimore, Maryland, where the activities of this large insurance program is directed and managed. Here also is the central location of the earnings records of all persons who have worked under social security. These records are kept current with the aid of the latest electronic data processing equipment.

The Social Security Administration has numerous openings for college graduates interested in interviewing people who are claiming benefits or seeking information about the social security program. More specialized jobs are found in the Payment Centers. The central office offers opportunities in policy formulation, research, procedure development, management, financial analysis or informational programs related to this nationwide system of insurance. A broad range of jobs are to be found within this organization.

Foreign Service Seeks Officers

DEPARTMENT OF STATE: The Foreign Service of the United States, a branch of the Department of State, is a career, professional and clerical corps of men and women whose responsibilities are establishing and maintaining friendly relations between the Government of the United States and the governments of other countries; keeping our Government informed regarding political, economic, and social developments abroad, extending protection to American citizens and promoting just American interests; and interpreting the viewpoint of the United States Government. This Department will be represented by several Foreign Service Officers presently studying here in the United States.

Bureau Of Public Roads Improves State Highways

The Bureau of Public Roads, a part of the Department of Commerce, represents the United States Government in matters relating to highways. Its principal functions are the administration of Federal Aid to the States for highway construction, road-building in Federal areas and highway research. Under existing legislation, the Bureau has the basic responsibility to see that Federal-aid highway funds are expended in such a way as to insure the ultimate development of a logically connected highway system - a system that encompasses the highway transportation activities of the nation as a whole.

Responsibility for direction of the work of the Bureau of Public Roads is vested in the Federal Highway Administrator, appointed by the Secretary of Commerce. Public Roads headquarters is located in Washington, D.C. Headquarters is organized into major offices with responsibility for functional areas such as audits and investigations, administration, research and development, engineering, planning, and highway safety. Public Roads has 11 regional offices located across the country. Ten of these supervise the Federal-aid program in from 4 to 8 states. These regions have division offices in every state and in Puerto Rico.

The following personnel of the Bureau of Public Roads, Vermont Division office, plan to participate in the Career Day program: Mr. Albert R. Purchase, Division Engineer, Vermont Division office.

Mr. Purchase was born and educated in Washington, D.C., graduating from George Washington University with a BS in CE in 1932, and is now a resident of Montpelier, Vermont. He entered an engineering career as cartographic engineer with the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, Washington, D.C. in 1934, transferring to the Bureau of Public Roads in Albany, New York in 1935. From July 1935 to January 1943 he served as assistant to the district engineer in charge of the Federal-aid program in Vermont. From January 1943 to September 1945 he served as chief, Geographic Research Section, Aeronautical Chart Division, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. Returning to the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads in 1945 to resume a career in highway engineering, Mr. Purchase was appointed division engineer in 1954 to become responsible for the administration of the Federal-aid highway program in Vermont.

Mr. Purchase is married to the former Marian Stewart Duke of Montpelier. Mr. and Mrs. Purchase have two boys, the oldest Richard a student in the School of Liberal Arts, University of Vermont, and David a junior in Montpelier High School.

Mr. Cecil W. Utley, Program & Planning Engineer, Vermont Division office.

Mr. Utley is a native Vermonter. He graduated from Rutland High School in 1927 and from the University of Vermont in 1933 with a degree in civil engineering. Mr. Utley was employed as resident engineer with the Vermont Highway Department until August 1941. At that time he became associated with the U.S. Corps of Engineers in construction and maintenance operations of the harbor defense installations. Mr. Utley served with the armed forces as an infantry officer and later as a post engineer officer. Following his release from active duty in 1946, Mr. Utley joined the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads as a highway engineer in the division office, Albany, New York. In 1949 he was transferred to Montpelier as an engineer with the Vermont Division and is currently the program and planning engineer in that office.

During his collegiate years at UVM Mr. Utley was a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Mr. Utley married Laura Mae Knight a high school classmate in 1936 and the couple have two sons, Ronald, the oldest, has a master's degree in mineral processing from Penn State University and is currently employed as product engineer in the mining equipment division of the Hewitt-Robbins Co. of Passaic, New Jersey. Gayl Alan the younger son is a student at Johnson State College.

Labor Dept. In Brief

LABOR DEPARTMENT: Established in 1913 by Congress to "Foster, Promote, and Develop the Welfare of the Wage Earners of the United States." AAA Fellowships

For the 1965-66 academic year the National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta will award the Maria Leonard, the Alice Crocker Lloyd, the Adele Hagner Stamp and the Kathryn Sisson Phillips Fellowships for graduate study. The amount of each fellowship is $1500. Use in a college or university where there is a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta is encouraged.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta who graduated in 1962, 1963 or 1964 and who has maintained the scholastic average throughout her college career is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have maintained this average to the end of the first semester (or first quarter) of this year.

Applicants will be judged on scholastic record, recommendations, the soundness of the applicant's project and purpose and, to some extent, on need.

Dr. W. Raab Returns From Trip To Japan

Dr. Wilhelm Raab, University of Vermont emeritus professor of experimental medicine, has just returned from a three-week trip to Japan where he presented a paper on his recently developed cardiac prediction test, and where he found further comparative statistics to support his theory that the rich, soft, nicotine-stained, fast-paced life in the U.S. conditions citizens here to "premature vulnerability to heart disease."

The septuagenarian, who exercises every day "except on my birthday," presented his paper at the International Congress on Sports Sciences, and later lectured at five universities in Japan. He was accompanied by his wife.

He reports that the incidence of myocardial infarction (destruction of heart muscle tissue, caused by local lack of oxygen) is 200 times greater in the U.S. than in Japan. The incidence of severe arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) is 10 times greater here than in Japan.

According to Dr. Raab, the remarkably low incidence of coronary heart disease in Japan as compared with its "enormous prevalence" in the U.S., is no longer believed to be due merely to the low fat intake of the Japanese people.

"Greater emphasis on physical education and exercise, different general living habits, and a more serene philosophy of life seem to be equally responsible for this striking, enviable contrast in cardiac health," he declares.

He goes on to say that a great deal of excellent research is being conducted in some of the Japanese institutions.

In order to clarify the factors responsible for the low incidence of heart disease in Japan and to apply them, if possible, for practical prevention in this country, Dr. Raab conferred with several Japanese doctors, including Prof. Eiichi Kimura of Tokyo. Dr. Kimura worked with Dr. Raab and with Dr. Eugene Lepeschkin at the University of Vermont Heart Unit at the DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital. It was agreed that the UVM cardiac predisposition test will be applied also in Japan for epidemiologic studies.

When Dr. Kimura returned to his native country, he was succeeded here by Dr. Yoshio Nawata who came from Japan's leading Heart Research Institute in Kurume.

Medical School Receives

Acting President Lyman S. Rowell has announced the receipt of a major gift of $500,000 for the University of Vermont College of Medicine Building Fund.

Rowell said the gift was "anonymous, but the result of interest of the friends of the medical college within Vermont."

He said the gift represents "a tremendous spur" toward the goal of $4.5 millions needed to match federal funds expected to be available for the $8.7 millions third unit of the medical college's major postwar building program. Dr. Robert J. Slater, dean of the College of Medicine, said the "outstanding record achieved by University of Vermont medical alumni and faculty in promoting medical education and better patient care, and the help given by citizens of Burlington have been a key factor in attracting this gift, and in the approaches we have been able to make to other potential contributors to this building project which is important to the continued growth of the College of Medicine."

Completion of the third unit will permit a 50 percent increase in medical classes, a doubling of graduate enrollment, a tripling of capacity for postgraduate medical education, and markedly increase the programs in continuing education for practicing physicians, nurses, and technicians.

Next Red Lane Series Features Les Grands Ballets Canadiens

by Betty Miller

Canada's youngest ballet company, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens of Montreal, will be featured as a Red Lane Series Concert on Monday night, Nov. 16th at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium. The ballet company, with its 30 young dancers, 24-piece orchestra, Conductor Claude Parer, and complete costumes and scenery, is making this appearance as part of their fourth tour throughout Canada and the United States. The group's U.S. debut at the famous Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Mass. in 1959, and their subsequent re-engagement there the following summer were an unqualified public and critical success. A critic in the N.Y. Times said of the ballet company, "It is a friendly, vivacious and winning little aggregation, and it dances with vigor, animation, and professional zip."

Les Grands Ballets Canadiens was founded by Mme. Ludmilla Chiriaeff, eminent ballerina who had long believed that an emerging cultural capital like Montreal deserved its own ballet company. With top students from her ballet academy plus Canadian dancers attracted to the project from other cities and from abroad, she began with a company of sixteen.

As artistic director of the company, Mme. Chiriaeff continues her successful policy of combining the talents of newcomers with stars of international repute. Besides bringing well-known dancers into the company, she has for several seasons shared the choreography honors with leading dancer, Eric Hyrst, and with outstanding artists like David Lichine.

Les Grands Ballets Canadiens has programmed a wide range of works for Monday night's performance. The program will begin with the ballet "Fete Hongroise" by Brahms, and continue with "Trapeze" written by Claude Pothier. Other features of the program will include Riccardo Drigho's "Le Corsaire" and a modern version of "Medea" with electronic score by Georges Savaria. The final selection will be the second act of "Pierrot de la Lune" by Borodin, Cvi, Liadov, Liszt, Rimsky-Korsokov, and Perrault.

In addition to the evening performance, Les Grando Ballets Canadiens will appear Monday afternoon, Nov. 16th at 4:15-5:15 p.m. in a Lane Youth Concert Matinee. This will be the tenth of such matinees sponsored by the Lane Series, and the program will be geared to be just as exciting and entertaining to the children, as the evening performance will be for the adults.

NOTE: The Isaac Stern concert was postponed due to an operation on the violinists' mouth. The concert has been rescheduled on Sat. evening, Jan. 30, 1965.

130% of his time, effort, and ability to UVM.

Uniform number 82 was a number 1 to watch in the Cats eight games this season. It is worn by Paul Giardi from E. Hartford, Conn. Paul received two touchdown passes this season to bring Vermont big victories. He more than doubled last year's defensive point total of 29, beside the fact that he intercepted two enemy arriels. At 6-2, 190 pounds, "Gino" played well at his starting end position.

The Captain of the 1964 Catamount squad was Ron Hertel, sturday guard from Union City, N.J. This 5-11, 210 pounder is probably the most underrated athlete on the squad. Last year he was named to the second Team All Yankee Conference squad for his spirited play.

He improved upon his 1963 defensive record of 47 points by playing his usual rugged, tough football game. Ron gave us a scare in the game with U Mass. when he was knocked unconscious for a moment, but because of his courage and desire to play, he walked off the field like a time warrior. This Catamount will be remembered for a long time to come and his absence will be felt next season.

Tom Mongeon is the last to be mentioned of the four senior tackles. He is the only in-state tackle in the quartet as he hails from St. Albans. Tom was an All State at Burlington High twice during his high school career. He was the top defensive tackle on the 63 team and after a slow start this year, he came on to be the true "crusher" that he is at 230 pounds. Tom deserves all the luck and wishes in his future teaching career.

The name to remember for the past two seasons has been that of George Oelze, number 64. Last year's Most Valuable Line-man and team captain returned this season to be a necessity on both offense and defense. George gained recognition from the ECAC team of the week once last year and once this season. Last year Oelze finished second in total defensive points closely behind Rusty Brink. The same appears to be the case this season although the final statistics have not yet been published. It was a safe bet that if George wasn't in on the tackle he was not more than a few yards away when the whistle sounded, Union City can well be proud of their boy George. He will be hard to forget — that is the way it should be.

Fullback Rich Reynolds is another man who can be singled out as tops in his field. Rich was second to Ken Burton last year in rushing with 331 yards in 84 attempts. Last season he was named to the ECAC squad for his play against AIC when he churned out 99 yards in 13 carries, including a 45 yard dash which set up a score. This year Rich surpassed last seasons fine offensive mark. He was the man to depend on when short yardage was necessary. Rich Reynolds, who resides in West New York, N.J., is a tough customer with a warm hand and a friendly chuckle.

Larry Rice, the last to be named on this alphabetical list, began this season with pretty much of a clean slate. He did not catch a pass all last season and only totaled 6 pts. on defense. However, this season Larry's very first reception was good for 17 yards. The big 6-2, 190 pound end from Saxtons River, Vt., multiplied his defensive record by more than three fold as he stepped in often to turn the play in from his end position.

The University of Vermont can be proud of the boys mentioned in this article. In the coming years the men themselves will be forgotten by the majority, and only then outstanding statistics in the record books will remain. Thanks so much boys for caring about UVM. We appreciate your efforts to make UVM a happier, more spirited and thoughtful university, where many will come to study. You all deserve the best the world has to offer/ Thanks again.

Cats Retain State Title

'64 Football Team Makes UVM History

X Country Season Ends With Even Record

The University of Vermont completed its cross country season last Monday in the 52nd Annual New England Intercollegiate Cross Country Run at Franklin Park in Boston.

The varsity harriers scored 420 points to finish fifteenth out of the twenty-two teams entered. Walt Stowell, the first Vermont man to finish took fifty-eighth place with a time of 25:43 over the 4.2 mile course. Dick Ashton, second Vermont runner to finish, was in sixty-second place.

Providence College, with the help of Barry Brown and Paul Harris, scored 47 points to take first place honors. Brown zipped over the course in 20:19 to win the meet.

Recapping the season briefly, the Vermont runners finished with a 3-3 slate. They recorded wins over Union, Plattsburgh State, and Bowdoin, while they lost to R.P.I., Maine, and Trinity. The harriers also competed in the Yankee Conference Cross Country Meet on the 31st of October. They finished in fifth place with Walt Stowell taking twenty-fourth place. Walk, incidentally, won three of the five dual meets that he competed in and will naturally be an important factor in Coach Post's plans for next fall.

The freshman runners also competed Monday in the New England, Rick Howard, in sixty-fifth place, was first Vermont harrier to complete the course. The team scored 386 points to finish in fifteenth place out of a total of twenty-three teams that were entered.

The frosh completed their season with a 9-1 record, losing their last meet by one point, 27-28, to Paul Smith Junior College. The frosh runners have shown excellent running ability throughout the season and will undoubtedly bolster the varsity team next fall.

Possibility Of Wrestling Team Exists At UVM

There is an ever increasing trend to start a wrestling team at UVM. Although the athletic department cannot at present allocate sufficient funds for the establishment of this team, there is a chance that with the assistance of some interested and talented boys who want to wrestle on an informal basis, a team may be started in the near future. The athletic department would like the team to be supervised by a senior or graduate student, who has some interest in or knowledge of the sport. The team's membership is growing and can possibly shape up to be a real fine asset to UVM's athletic department. However, first the obstacle of obtaining a supervisor must be overcome. If anyone is interested in filling this position please contact Ira Mandel, Ex. 475.

Frank Foerster on a successful end sweep. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

The 1964 version of the Vermont Catamounts completed the best season in UVM history last Saturday by defeating the Panthers of Middlebury College 12-0. An estimated crowd of 8,000 sports fans watched the Cats defeat Middlebury which meant the retention of the State Series title by the University of Vermont.

The first half of the ball game appeared to be a complete standstill as neither team could gain enough steam to score a T.D. Twice the fired up Middlebury defense halted Catamount drives inside their own 10 yard line.

Frank Foerster received the kickoff in the third period and neatly ran the pigskin back to his own 31 yard line. Jim Brennan, who quarterbacked the game due to the injury to Scott Fitz's hand, spear-headed a long drive, which brought the Cats to the Middlebury 4 in ten plays. Brennan completed three passes in four attempts in the drive. However, Vermont failed to hit pay dirt when a pass fell incomplete on fourth down. Middlebury took over possession on downs and were promptly penalized to the 2 1/2 yard line. Then sophomore Bill Leete recovered a fumble on the four to give the ball back to UVM. Again the Panther's determined defense held the Cats off for four downs, this time stopping in short on the six inch line.

Middlebury could not dig themselves out of the hole in which they found themselves. The Panther defense had been excellent, yet their offense could not get started. They chose to try a quick-kick which had appeared so effective in the first half of the contest.

Rusty Brink, Vermont's exceptional center, broke through the Panther line from his defensive line backer spot to block the attempted kick. The ball lagily rolled into the end zone where sophomore Bill Van Bennekum fell on it to give Vermont the first score in the game. Carl Ettlinger, filling in for the injured Ken Andrade, attempted the conversion which was blocked.

Middlebury refused to give up hope, as on the kickoff Fred Beans returned to the Vermont 46 yard line. Beans, one of the exceptional runners in the state of Vermont, turned in a typically exceptional effort in last Saturday's game.

Following an incomplete pass from quarterback Jeff McKay to intended receiver Al Reilly, Middlebury's best play of the game was viewed. McKay faded back again to pass, and he found halfback Paul Ford breaking downfield completely engulfed by 2 Vermont defenders. Ford miraculously grabbed the pass and he reached the opposing eleven before being overhauled from behind. Beans and McKay combined to bring the ball to the three yard line where the attack stalled out. Vermont took possession of the ball and did not relinquish possession deeply in their own territory again.

Vermont's second touchdown drive in the final period of the season was set up when George Oelze intercepted a Middlebury pass on the Cats 24.

The Catamounts kept the ball on the ground and 10 plays later they had another six points on the scoreboard. Dean Kent's 28 yard run, from the UVM 33 to the Middlebury 39, was the exceptional play in the scoring drive. Frank Foerster and Kent teamed up to bring the ball to the 18 in four plays. Carl Ettlinger carried for 3 more yards and the Vermont first down. Foerster and Reynolds picked up 5 a piece to bring the pigskin to the 3 yard line. Here Foerster bolted off tackle for his 7th T.D. of the season and six more points. With 3:50 left in the game the old scoreboard slicked to 12-0. The time ran out before either could score again, this completing the game and the season.

The Panthers, although literally crushed statisticwise by the Cats, exhibited fine team spirit and a tough defensive squad. The Middlebury defense was brilliant throughout the first half as they stopped Vermont inside their own 10 several times. In the second half the Panthers showed potential offensive power, however they were unable to gain the momentum necessary to score.

Vermont's ground game, good for 237 yards, was spearheaded by Dean Kent with 64 yards in eight carries for an 8.0 average.

Brennan also completed 7 of 17 passes for 82 yards in the air.

Thus, another season is completed and the tough pigskin athletes will have time to study, sleep, and enjoy other aspects of college life. For some, the seniors, the game against Middlebury was the last of their career. We wish the best of luck to these fine individuals in the years to come. The juniors and sophomores have gained necessary experience this year which will enable Vermont to continue in its winning ways. Let us hope that next year will be as fruitful and enjoyable as this one. And let us hope that next year will be our year to walk away with the Yankee Conference crown which we have strived so hard for in the past. The CYNIC wishes to thank the entire team and coaching staff for their time, effort, and compassion for UVM.

Team Loses 13 Valuable Seniors

The past three years have meant shortened summer vacations, two hour practice sessions every day for three months, loss of study time and sleeping time, and extensive physical abuse for the senior members of the Vermont football squad. These boys deserve all the recognition and thanks possible, for they have given their time and effort for UVM in an unrewarding manner. Taking these seniors in alphabetical order they are: Andrade; Blanck; Boese; Brennan; Ettlinger; Foerster; Fugit; Giardi; Hertel; Mongeon; Oelze; Reynolds; and Rice.

Ken Andrade from Falmouth, Mass., seriously believes that it is easier to run over a defender than to run around him. Last year Ken averaged 5.2 yards per carry from his halfback slot as he romped for 73 yards. This season the improved Andrade multiplied that total (73) by four. Ken kicked almost a score of extra points as well as doing the kicking off for the Cats this season along with sophomore Joe Soldano. Ken continuously made his presence felt on defense as he was among the leaders in total defensive points. The loss of this all around athlete will be felt in future seasons.

Denis Blanch, a 6-2 225 pound tackle from Hackensack, N.J., has the size and head to be a top collegiate lineman. He moved into a starting role this season, which he filled brilliantly and consistently. Dennis' football career might be over, but he will have many fruitful years in his future.

Filling as the starting tackle opposite Blanch is big Fred Boese from Union City, N.J. Fred has the same measurements listed on the schedule as Blanch. Last season Boese was second in defensive points among the tackles and his biggest play was a blocked PAT against UNH. This year Fred was high among the linemen on defensive also, having a very creditable season.

Jim Brennan, a quarterback and defensive specialist, is also from New Jersey, this time from the Teaneck area. Last season he recovered their fumbles, intercepted three passes, and broke up nine attempted completions. This year Jim came on late in the season to play both offense and defense with exceptional perfection. With the football season completed we are expecting a successful year from Jim on the baseball diamond where he doubles as both pitcher and outfielder.

Carl Ettlinger, a 2-year-old fullback from Staten Island, N.Y., has found himself in the shadows of Rich Reynolds for the past two seasons. In the 1963 season Carl scrambled for 141 total yards in 39 carries. This year his rushing was consistent when he saw action, and his hard blocking opened many a hole throughout the season.

The most improved player this season was big number 33, halfback Frank Foerster. Frank, from Union City, New Jersey was exceptional in every contest in the campaign. He was named the ECAC halfback of the week following his fine running against Norwich. Foerster scored a total of seven touchdowns which was tops on the squad. Evidence of improvement can be shown by viewing a few of Frank's individual statistics. Last season (1963) Frank gained 62 yards on the ground, compared to this year's figure which nears 400 yards. Frank saw limited action on defense, but he was definitely the one who Coach Clifford depended on for long gaining end runs and sweeping plays.

Rutherford, N.J., boasts about tackle Ed Fugit a 6-2, 220 pound scholar. Ed improved upon last year's fine defensive record this season with a countless number of assisted tackles. Fugit is a hard working boy, who has given

Deans Answer Questions At Joint Conference

By Judy Triplett

The bitter temperatures of last Wednesday night effected no chilling of the discussion between students and administration that took place in Southwick Ball Room.

Present to answer any and all questions asked by meager coeds were Dean Harris, Dean Patzer, Dean Wing, and other distinguished members of the UVM faculty and administration. Moderator of the conference was Dr. Boller, head of the Education Department.

First of the topics submitted for discussion was the Freshman Orientation Program. It was observed that, although highly organized, this program was so rushed that there was not sufficient time to appreciate the available opportunities. Extension of the sessions was suggested, which would allow more time with the advisors and with the deans. Suggested also was the possibility of pushing the September session, popular with out-of-state Freshmen, back to the end of August, which would allow more time between this session and the beginning of classes.

Dean Patzer explained that next year there will be five sessions, eliminating the last one in September. More time will be allowed for meetings with more permanent faculty advisors.

A complaint concerning the short semester, with its incessant hour exams and term papers was dealt with by Dean Patzer, who admitted its hardships, but said that it was an experiment. The calendar, he said, was "cussed and discussed" for the three years that he has been here and probably before that. He said, in substance, that we do not know for certain what its effects will be; therefore, we should see the plan through the year before deciding whether it is the best thing for the individual. Dr. Boller suggested that the early dismissal in May is especially beneficial to job-hunting students who work their way through school. Should this system fail, administration will come up with a better one. Let's give it a fair chance.

President of WSGA, Janet Koch, made the observation that UVM graduates students in high honors in small proportion to other schools. A committee consisting of members of faculty and administration is now looking into the possibility of a new grading system. This committee has reached some definite ideas. Dean Harris said that the deans would welcome any thoughtful, valid ideas from students on this subject.

Next semester's Joint Conference, tentatively scheduled for next April, will witness further discussion on these and other subjects. At that time, there will be more evidence available on which to base valid conclusions. Dr. Boller urged all women students to attend the conference.

Lester Pearson To Give Honors Day Address

Lester B. Pearson, Prime Minister of Canada, will deliver the Honors Day address at the University of Vermont on April 30, 1965. It was announced here Friday by Lyman S. Rowell, acting president of the University.

Rowell took the occasion of a lecture at the University by Sen. George D. Aiken to make the announcement, noting that Senator Aiken had been "both enthusiastic about and helpful to the University in its efforts to establish a Canadian Area Studies program."

Honors Day is the annual convocation at which time the University observes the birthday of its founder, Ira Allen, and pays special tribute to its students for outstanding scholarship and leadership.

Mr. Pearson became the fourteenth Prime Minister of Canada on April 22, 1963, succeeding John G. Diefenbaker of the Progressive Conservative party.

As Canada's leading diplomat, Mr. Pearson has served as Ambassador to the United States and delegate to the United Nations and was a major figure in the promotion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He was Secretary of State for External Affairs in the government of Louis St. Laurent from 1948 to 1957 and in January of 1958 became the leader of the Liberal party. Mr. Pearson was awarded the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize for the role he played in helping to resolve the Suez crisis of 1956.

Mr. Pearson was born in 1897. He holds a B.A. degree from the University of Toronto and B.A. and M.A. degrees from Oxford. Taking a civil service examination for the position of first secretary with the Department of External Affairs, Mr. Pearson posted the top score and began his career in government in 1928.

He will receive an honorary degree during the Honors day program.

Willard Teaches At West Point

Lt. Colonel Sumner Willard, formerly a member of UVM's Romance Language Department, was nominated by President Johnson and confirmed by the Senate to be a permanent Professor of Foreign Languages at West Point. He was formally invested with the insignia of the professorship on October 5, 1964. Colonel Willard taught in the Romance Language Department here from 1947 to 1951. He was recalled to active duty during the Korean War and returned to West Point, where he had taught during the war years. He has served consecutively at the Military Academy since leaving UVM.

The picture shows General Lambert and Mrs. Willard pinning the insignia on Lt. Col. Willard.

1965 KAKE WALK POSTER RULES

The rules for the Poster Contest of the Sixty-Eighth Annual Kake Walk are as follows:

Posters are to conform to the measurements of 14 inches wide and 22 inches long. They are to consist of no more than three colors, and in this case black and white are considered colors. They must be original and be constructed so as to leave adequate space for pertinent information such as where Kake Walk is held and at what time.

Posters must contain the words "68 (either written or in numerals), Kake Walk, University of Vermont."

Posters will not be accepted with personal or fraternity names or initials anywhere on the poster. The name and address of the artist should be attached on a separate piece of paper.

The poster contest is open to individuals representing fraternities or sororities as well as all members of the university. An individual may submit as many entries as desired. The posters will be judged on their artistic merit and ingenuity.

All entries are to be wrapped and submitted to the Kake Walk Office in Billings Center, and slid under the door. The deadline for submitting posters is December 22, 1964 at 5:00 P.M. No posters will be accepted after that time.

Med School Nears Goal With Gift Of 2 Million

The University of Vermont College of Medicine building fund will receive a gift of $2,000,000 from the Irene Heinz Given and John LaPorte Given Foundation.

It is the largest single building gift ever received by the University, according to Acting President Lyman S. Rowell, and reportedly the largest grant ever made by the Given Foundation.

Rowell said "this wonderful gift brings the medical college to within a half million dollars of the funds needed to match federal funds excepted to be available for the major third unit of the medical college building program."

He praised the "enthusiastic devotion which Medical College staff and faculty, alumni, and friends throughout the state have brought to the University's effort to raise the funds necessary to complete the major medical building construction projected immediately after World War II."

Rowell particularly praised Medical College Dean Robert J. Slater, and Lawrence J. Doolin, a member of the Board of Trustees who has devoted special time and attention to the Medical College fund campaign.

Cost of the third unit has been estimated at $8.7 millions, and the University has made preliminary application for matching federal funds of just over $4,000,000 for the project.

Alumni of the medical college who matched a federal grant to make possible the first unit of the three unit medical construction program, contributed over $750,000 to the third unit; Burlington area business, industry and friends contributed over

Scope Presents Senior Senator

By Ron Dixon

George Aiken, the senior Senator from Vermont, spoke Friday, Nov. 13, at Billings Student Center. A large crowd heard him speak on "Foreign Affairs" and the position of the United States in the world today.

He told the audience that while nearly every country looks to us as the world's leading nation - both economically and militarily - we have a price to pay for this. We must contribute funds and supplies to many countries to keep them from going communist; we must serve as arbitrators in disputes between nations; thereby standing to lose the friendship of one country; and we tend to be "blackmailed" by some nations who threaten to convert to communism if we don't give them what they want.

Thus we frequently find ourselves in a precarious situation. Nearly everything that happens in the world affects us.

Turning to specific issues the Senator liked first on Russia and the effect of Khrushchev's ousting. He said that while it wasn't unexpected -- because of Breshnev's recent appointment as assistant secretary of the Party - we weren't prepared for it at this time. He doubted that it had to do with poor health and speculated that it may have resulted from Russia's poor economy; the poor relations with Red China; too much of one man in government; or the fact that Russia had recently been leaning to far to the "right" in that it had been taking on many characteristics of capitalism. Also there has been discontent in Russia since the Spring of 1963, over the extremely high cost of living. This has been hurting Russia's image abroad.

A possible effect of this change might be the cementing of relations with Red China, thus uniting the Communist Bloc.

In turning to other issues Senator Aiken felt that the explosion of an atomic bomb in Red China might start a chain reaction among 8 to 10 other countries who have the knowledge, but have yet to detonate an atomic explosion.

Talking of a major world issue, Aiken said that he felt we shouldn't revert to open warfare in Viet Nam because it is doubtful we could win without nuclear weapons. He stated that it takes approximately 15 regular soldiers to take 1 guerilla. Thus we haven't a change on the ground and the Communists won't fight in the air or on the sea. Also if we did use nuclear weapons we couldn't assume the rest of the world would sit on the sidelines and watch.

Following his prepared statements Senator Aiken answered a few questions from the floor concerning foreign relations. In reply to one question concerning the debate as to who will head the Republican Party, he responded, "I have no idea."

This talk was a SCOPE presentation. It was announced before the speech that on April 30, Canada's Lester Pearson will be here to speak on Canadian-American relations. Senator Aiken was introduced by President Rowell.

Mueller Speaks On Politics, Foreign Policy, the Future

by Ken Klonsky

Both students and faculty were on hand at Ira Allen Chapel Wednesday night Nov. 12 to hear a speech sponsored by the IFC. The speaker was Merrill Mueller, chief of N.B.C. news bureaus overseas. He has been a correspondent for thirty years and has interviewed every top news-maker in the world since Adolf Hitler.

Originally he was to speak on developments in Southeast Asia after the election. However, nevertheless, feeling that many issues warranted analysis Mr. Muller proceeded to discuss all developments on the earth since the election, and to prognosticate as to what the world would be like in the days ahead.

The speaker told us that there was still hope for the decayed Republican Party. He gave a number of reasons why Senator Goldwater lost the recent election, among which were his lack of conciliation after the Republican Convention, his failure to understand Democrats, a confusing economic policy, and an unclear foreign policy. He believed the election was not for Johnson but against Goldwater. Among new Republican leaders he mentioned Lindsay of New York and Taft of Ohio.

Mr. Mueller's speech then shifted to foreign policy. He felt that we should, and probably will, take over the command in South Viet Nam. He lashed out at Castro for threatening to shoot down our U-2 spy planes. He had unqualified praise for our retaliatory action in the Gulf of Tonkin and thought that this, along with our powerful nuclear arsenal, would serve as a warning to the world that you can only push us so far. He said that the Russians would suffer greatly if they "let nuclear bombs over the poles."

"The IFC must be given great credit for attracting such a distinguished name to speak at UVM. Mr. Mueller's speaking voice was commendable but his topic was so far-reaching that one could not possibly write about all that was said. Nevertheless it was a well-spent evening.

MIXES AND MATCHES

By Sandi Elstein

Well, the end of MERP Week is approaching... soon the girls will be back in the waiting-to-be-asked position and the boys will be the aggressors, which is as it should be - or is it?

Thanksgiving is upon us and a few - a very few, of course - will try to get away from it all. Mohawk is completely booked for the weekend which gives us a pretty good idea of the administration's terrifyingly effective new calendar.

Alpha Epsilon Phi's attempt to bring intellectual stimulation to UVM, in the guise of a movie, was very successful. The movie, "Billy Liar" was excellent.

Congratulations to Alpha Epsilon Phi's Roy Wiener on her engagement to Carl Kleban and Merry Schron on her engagement to Bill Likosky of UVM Med School.

Best wishes to Anne Dietrich, ADPI, 'tt on her pinning to Bob Ostrum, Sig Ep, '66, and Debbie Carpenter, '65, on her engagement to Hall Thompson, '64, of AGR.

The Alpha Chis congratulate Linda Prentiss on her pinning to Dean Linderman of SAE.

The Owl's congratulations go to Daniel Boone, on his pinning to Ellen Stearns of Rutland, Vt.

The Phi Delt's best wishes go to Paul Modarelli on his pinning to Laura Sikenski of Montclair State College of N.J.

Congratulations to Ed Bailey, TEP, '66, and Dena Apple, Tri Delt, '68, on their pinning. Best wishes to AEPI's Norm Shapiro, '65, on his recent pinning to Barbara Goodman, UVM, '64, of Hartford, Connecticut.

Hockey Rink Opens

For Public Skating

The University of Vermont's hockey rink will open for public skating next week.

Ed Donnelly, director of athletics at the University, announced the rink will be open for public skating on Wednesday and Saturday evenings from 8 to 10 and on Sunday afternoons from 1 to 5:30. The first public session is set for Wednesday (Nov. 11).

On nights of home hockey games however, there will be no public skating.

Donnelly also said that the third season of the ice skating school will start on Nov. 19 with a class for adults (14 years and older). There will be three adult sessions this winter. The second session will begin on Jan. 7 and the third on Feb. 11. The first children's skating school session is on Jan. 2, the second on Feb. 6.

Bob Mesterton will again be the instructor.

Additional information about the skating school may be obtained by calling the University, 4-4511, Ext. 574, or by writing to the athletic department at the Patrick Gym.

Alumnus Appointed To Lehigh Faculty

A University of Vermont alumnus who served as president of the American Association of School Administrators during 1963-64, has been appointed to the faculty of Lehigh University.

Dr. Natt B. Burbank has assumed his duties as associate professor of education at the Pennsylvania institution.

A native of Danville, Burbank was graduated from Vermont in 1925. He taught at Burlington Junior High School and was superintendent of schools in Morrisville before earning his Master's degree from Columbia University in 1931 after which he returned to the state of Vermont and spent four years as superintendent of schools in Danville. He served in a similar capacity at Bellows Falls and Concord, N.H. before World War II.

After the War, he was superintendent of schools at Melrose, Mass., and then spent the 15 years in Colorado, the final three as superintendent of the Boulder Valley Schools.

He is married to the former Vivian Hubbard of Middletown Springs. Mrs. Burbank is also a Vermont graduate.

"South Pacific" Rehearsals Under Way

The cast of the Fine Arts musical "South Pacific" due at the Arena Theatre December 3, 4, 5, 6, is now rehearsing daily under the direction of Edward J. Feidner.

The part of Emile DeBecque, the wealthy middle-aged French planter who settled in the South Pacific before the outbreak of World War II, will be played by Michael Woodard. As the famed Rogers and Hammerstein musical opens, he is host to Ensign Nellie Forbush, played by Jean Conner. A romance develops between them, but problems ensue, and DeBecque finds himself involved in the efforts of the American forces on a nearby island. Lt. Cable, leader of these forces, is portrayed by William Bosworth, and as the story progresses he meets and falls in love with Liat (Susan Bowman) a Tonkinese girl and daughter of Bloody Mary (Esther Sundell). The atmosphere of the island is enlivened by the presence of a number of Marines, sailors, and Seabees, including Errol Selsby as Luther Billis, Richard Beaupre as Capt. Brackett, R.J. Huber as Stewpot, as well as a contingent of waves, with Chris Berman, Marilyn Deutsch, Patti Onderwyzer, Lois Dodge, Cynthia Clark, Cora Stimpson, Elizabeth Wilson, Margorie Adams and Regina Robicheau.

"South Pacific", which has been called a show "eloquent in song and rich in dramatic substance", will also feature Ruth Trautstein, Emile Di Donato and Janice Rood.

Mr. Feidner directing Jean as Frank Seikmann accompanies the rehearsal.

$250,000; and other private philanthropy - including an anonymous gift of $500,000 announced last week - has contributed nearly $1,000,000 more to the third unit project.

The $2,000,000 Given Foundation grant brings the total received to date from private philanthropy for the project to just over $4,000,000. Rowell said "the University is immensely gratified by this remarkable support for and faith in its College of Medicine."

He said the Given Foundation grant, "like the anonymous gift of $500,000 announced last week, is the result of the interest of Vermont friends in the medical college and its contribution to the quality of medical care and service available to Vermonters and citizens of neighboring states."

are giving us a close race. He went through a list of our two thousand odd rockets. I was very comforted when he told the audience that the Russians would be sorry if they "lob nuclear bombs over the poles". I wouldn't want to be in New York when they start "lobbing".

When are the Goldwaters and the Muellers going to realize that the age of Theodore Roosevelt foreign policy is over? There is a certain degree of realism missing when a person thinks that without the institutions and ideas of the United States a country cannot exist. South America is no longer considered to be a bunch of "banana republics", as Vietnam is not another Korea, as Negroes are not innately inferior. We can't wield a Big Stick because might is not right. The intellect of this world is rapidly changing and people will no longer be stepped upon. This is a fact of life and we'll either live with it peacefully or not live at all.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Mueller did not enlighten us with some of his varied experiences as a correspondent. I came out of his lecture, not with any insights, but with the strange feeling that he had snuck a copy of the New York Daily News up to the podium with him. He wasted his fine voice on rehashing platitudes of another time and, hopefully, of another era.

Providing power for every environment...

provides challenge for virtually every technical talent at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

Being a technically trained man... we assume you are looking ahead to a career of exciting growth and accomplishment and that you are looking for a company possessing these same qualities.

If our assumption is correct, we would like you to take a close look at us. For this Company, while solving the problems of the day, thrives on a sort of creative restlessness which anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. And more important to you, it recognizes its engineers and scientists as the master key to its present success and future progress.

From a solid foundation of basic and applied research, our Company has gained a firm foothold in the land, sea, air, and space programs that are helping to shape our nation's future. Our engineers and scientists are exploring ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment. Should you join them, you'll be assigned early responsibility... to apply your engineering talents to such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells and nuclear power.

Such trail-blazing projects command the best of varied talent. That's why you'll find at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft men with college training as diverse as their responsibilities. You will also find that opportunities for professional growth are further enhanced by our corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

For further information concerning a career with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or—write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

LEST WE FORGET

One year ago an assassin's bullet cruelly and permanently eclipsed the life of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Society has symbolically documented the tragedy by renaming roads, writing eulogistic books, and issuing an exhaustive study of the assassination itself.

History will objectify the martyr and the myth. Time will dull the pain of grief and anger we felt when he was murdered.

But let us never forget Mr. Kennedy as he truly was -- an energetic, vibrant man who generated the interest of young and old alike in government and world affairs; who reintroduced to the Presidency a spirit lacking since the F.D.R. era; who instituted the Peace Corps, a great humanitarian project; who -- as President of the United States, father of two children, idol of America's idealistic youth, respected statesman among world leaders -- was a man of the present and a man who held so much promise for the future; a man who undeniably was many things to many people.

WHERE PRAISE IS DUE

The occasions are too few and far between when we can justifiably give praise to the University community for demonstrating extracurricular interest. In the course of the past week, however, we feel commendation is warranted in two particular areas.

You will notice that in this week's issue we have reprinted an open letter to the faculty for their overwhelming support of the BCAM and the Mississippi Freedom Project. Canvassing virtually the entire faculty, members of the BCAM collected more than $600. We believe that such a sum is indicative not only of generosity, but also of a sincere humanitarian spirit on the part of our professors.

The second situation which merits praise was occasioned by the significant numbers of students, faculty and administration who filled the North Lounge in Billings last Friday afternoon to hear Senator Aiken. Those who listened to the Vermont senior Senator appeared to be listening in earnest; and their questions reflected thought and intelligence.

We would like to feel, although admittedly it is idealistic, that giving praise where it is due will help maintain the interest already shown and perhaps stimulate those who are inclined to be lazy and apathetic.

CIVIL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN. The "HELP WANTED FEMALE" section of your favorite newspaper will be a thing of the past after July 1965. Under an often unmentioned provision of the new Federal Civil Rights Law, sex as a basis of discrimination will be outlawed. Originally, the new law banned consideration of race, color, religion, and nationality in hiring, assigning, promoting, firing, or pensioning employees. The word "sex" was added at the last minute.

Beginning next July, women who believe that they are not being considered for executive openings, or are unable to compete equally with men for admission to medical schools, or are barred from jobs -- all because of their sex -- will be able to complain to the Federal Equal Employment Opportunities Commission. The Commission will have to accept, investigate, and, if necessary, act upon these complaints.

Various interpretations of the new law are being discussed by personnel and industrial relations directors and legal counsel representing leading corporations in a series of seminars conducted nationally by the National Association of Manufacturers.

The effects of this provision are important and many. For example, when a corporate vice presidency is open, women will have to be considered along with men for the position. Women will no longer be excluded from executive training programs as they are almost universally now. Compulsory retirement for women at 62 will be outlawed when the age for men is 65. The new law will also help in the enforcement of the equal-pay-for-equal-work law passed last year.

In a reverse twist, the Federal Equal Employment Opportunities Commission must also act to prevent men from taking unfair advantage of some of the privileges enjoyed by women under many state laws. These privileges presently include such things as increased washroom facilities and a limit on weights to be lifted.

Letters To The Editor Who Studies?

To the Editor:

Recently, the Educational Testing Center administered a questionnaire to entering college freshmen to determine their reasons for going to college. Results were reported in the Nov. 8 "News of the Week" section of the New York Times. It seems that 51 per cent were most attracted by the extracurricular side of college life, while 27 per cent were motivated by vocational goals, and only 19 per cent considered cultivation of the intellect as most important.

In the light of this study, can Miss Riggs reasonably expect all of her fellow students to go to the library simply to read books or concentrate on academic achievement?

Strangelove At UVM

The Times They Are a' Changin' -

Bob Dylan

By Ken Klonsky

A critique of Merrill Mueller's speech is in order. Despite his slightly broad topic, Events on the Earth in General, he did manage to touch a few sensitive spots. It was obvious from the start that this widely traveled correspondent from N.B.C. lacks even the most basic understanding of the inner workings of foreign policy.

I believe the primary reason for Senator Goldwater's recent election disaster was his unrealistic foreign policy, the same policy that Mr. Mueller so pompously spouted. The name of the policy is "brinkmanship." Mueller wants us to go into South Viet Nam and "clean it up like we did in Korea." That would mean another battle with the ever-increasing Red Chinese. He says there are still many Americans who hate the Chinese because of the sons they lost in Korea. He doesn't remember that quite a few Chinese were killed also. But of course they don't have families in China. They produce babies in test tubes because there are not enough of them.

The speaker's attacks on Castro were ludicrous. It was not yet occurred to Mr. Mueller that Cuba is no longer a territory of the United States. They are a separate country and our right to fly "reconnaissance" planes over their territory is highly dubious. I'm sure we'd let their planes fly over Florida. Finally, Cuba is not a puppet state of the Soviet Union. Castro's revolution was supported by this country, oddly enough against the institutions that we were responsible for. It is natural that they would choose the Soviet Union as an ally because a genuine Communist revolution had taken place.

His most ridiculous statements of the evening were directed toward Russia itself. He said that "the Russians are giving us a close race to the moon." He disparaged the recent Soviet three-man flight because it wasn't, as our Mercury flights are, controlled by man. How can he say this when every top scientist in this country openly admitted that the Russian flight was a major setback to our program? It proved conclusively that they have rocket booster power which we can't approach. But they

THE GAME

Coach Boffer said to the boys on the team, "Are we going to let Hibble Junior College beat us for the football conference again this year?"

"No," screamed and shrieked the football players, baring their teeth and beating their chests.

"That's the kind of answer I like to hear from you bums," Just then Assistant Coach Muffer walked up and announced in a concerned growl that the star of the team had escaped from his cage while he was being fed and they had better find him fast because the game was starting in ten minutes.

"All right you guys" said Boffer, "you men search the trees and the rest of you follow me and we'll look through the sewers. He's gotta be around here somewhere." Suddenly someone yelled and pointed up to the flagpole and there was the star hanging by his toes fifty feet above the ground. The Star was the meanest, ugliest, most dangerous monster that had ever crawled onto the gridiron. He was covered with long black hair, had long canine teeth and tiny little nasty eyes and he was so big and awful that he never wore padding even when he played. Matter of fact, they had trouble getting him to wear a uniform but by the simple process of monkey-see, monkey-do they usually got him clothed.

Coach Boffer was handed a bunch of bananas and waving it underneath the flagstaff grunted "oh pretty please come down my little baby Star." Star smiled, if you can call it that, and clambered down the post, grabbed for the bananas and was hastily netted and collared in record time, for the game between Piltz University and Hibble Junior College was about to begin. "With tears in his eyes, Coach Boffer grabbed the manacled Star to his fat stomach and said "Baby, why do you scare your poor old Daddyman like that. Now come with me and we're going to have fun carrying this little ball again all the way across the grass and if Star does it without anybody stopping him he's going to get a brand new tire to roll in." Coach Boffer got very emotional at moments like these and treated his boys as if they were his own special pets.

The horn sounded and Hibble and Piltz went out to face each other on the field of glory. Piltz received and the ball was immediately lateraled to Star. A fellow teammate spiked Star in the bottom and the monster started running for the goal posts and the banana-man. Along came a Hibblite but Star stuck a toe into his eye and jumped over the athlete. Then came another, Star growled at him and the frightened defense lost his nerve and his tackle timing. Star was at the 50 yard line and there were three opponents rushing for him and it looked like an easy play, Star bowled them over and he was at the twenty five, the twenty, the fifteen and he was down on three legs the ball under his fourth, the ten and he held the ball in his teeth running on all fours like an animal, and over the end zone line. The crowd went wild.

When Hibble had the ball the situation wasn't much better because Star would grab the ball carrier, loft him on his shoulders and carry him lightly into his own end zone for two points and nobody could stop the five hundred pounds of mighty muscle. By the fourth quarter Hibble realized that they were being taken advantage of. After calling Star a dumb ape, a dangerous brute, and a vicious beast, the stands reacted rationally to these accusations which were causing Coach Boffer and Muffer such amusement.

When the fourth quarter started and Piltz was ahead 250-0, Star came onto the field and found himself surrounded by bananas, peanuts and all the other things a tough football player likes. To make things even more frightening for the Piltzers, Amazon Sorority brought along one of their members who was in heat and then there was no controlling Star. He ran into the stands, into his own end zone, and munched on mangoes contentedly as eleven Hibble bruisers bounced on him. In short, Star has to be taken out of the game. With this loss of force and subsequent morale, Piltz promptly gave up the needed two hundred and three points in twelve minutes giving the victory to Hibble Junior College. Coaches Boffer and Muffer cursed and retched because they had lost a sure game. Star also retched from eating too many unripe bananas, Piltz never again won a game and has since faded into obscurity.

Moral: It is very easy to make a monkey out of a football player, but very hard to make a football player out of a monkey.

ACHTUNG, YOU ALL!

Hardly a day goes by that some close acquaintance doesn't lament the "problem" of communication.

The "problem" is no respecter of rank or prestige. Deans, indeed university presidents, are as often heard waxing sadly on the subject as are faculty and students and, for that matter, plumbers, politicians, housewives, and my twelve year old son, who often asks - with fraudulently benign frustration - "how was I supposed to know."

OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD

As you might imagine, directors of public relations are always prone to assume the question has been raised merely to embarrass them, since they are supposed to be experts on communicating.

But the problem these days is not so much in finding an avenue for communication of the message, intelligence, or what-have-you, as it is of finding the means of gaining the attention of the person or persons the message is intended to reach.

On a very elementary level, for example, the Public Relations Office is often asked "how come you didn't have it in the paper?" when in fact it was in the paper twice.

READERS PREFER S.E.X.I

And any editor worth his salt knows he'll get twice as much readership out of a sex scandal as he will from a feature story on the philosophy of Immanuel Kant. No doubt that's why the paper back book people put those grabby covers on their wares. They don't stand much chance of selling you the book if they can't even attract your attention to it.

Thus, the business of attracting your attention is a booming one, particularly in a free society, where there are few restraints placed upon what may be said by whom and on how it may be said.

The nub of the problem, in fact, may very well be that we are living in an age of over-communication. There are more books and periodicals published than anyone can hope to read, more radio and television programs than anyone can hope to hear or watch, more movies made..., speeches uttered..., lectures delivered..., memos sent..., etc.; and the amount of red and green light emanating from all the flashing neon signs would probably stagger an astronomical physicist.

DOWN WITH IDEAS!

On the other hand, most of us build a certain amount of immunity to this audio-visual deluge upon our senses. We not only recognize that writers with axes to grind or soaps to sell have a way of deflating the value of our every day language, so that we know the word "Terrific" applied to a movie is probably synonymous with "Grade B"; we also have a habit of shutting our inner ear when the sound gets louder on radio or TV, signifying a break for a commercial.

In fact, the talent - and it is considerable - which is behind the scenes competing for our attention already knows that a significant number of people routinely hear and see only what they want to hear and see. And that is another problem of communicating.

It is a two-edged problem. If those who would communicate must seek to solve the problem of getting our attention, we must seek to solve the problem of sorting out from the mass of communications which assail us those which we need or desire to receive.

There's the rub.

The Arts

By Sanford Plotkin

The need still exists for improving the publicity of events related to the Arts. Student and faculty participation in these events is dependent on an accurate source of information. To provide this service is the purpose of this column. To this end I would urge those committees and organizations to inform me of the nature of the events they are planning.

A survey of this and every week's events points out the variety of things to do. Especially worthwhile would be Mark Van Doren's lecture at St. Michael's College, "The Mannersits" at the Fleming Museum. French and history majors should find the films offered by the French Cultural Center this week especially interesting.

Who Says Sex is Fun, Funny, and Natural?

BALTIMORE (CPS) -- Human sexuality should be considered as inherently good and as a result sex is fun, funny, and natural, the Reverend Frederick G. Wood, Jr. of Goucher College told his congregation recently.

Wood said students tend to take sexual expression far too seriously and that they should quit doing so. It is separated from the rest of one's activities and "assumed to be fraught with all kinds of special meaning and mystical significance," he said. "Sexuality itself is good," he said, "from the structure of the human organism as male and female to every conceivable act of sexual self-expression. There is nothing bad or dirty or perverted about it."

The Reverend said he hadn't told the students "whether you should or you shouldn't, or even how far you should go," because to do so would be to violate irresponsibly individual freedom.

He said the primary implications of the concept that sexuality is good are that sex is fun and natural. "Because sex is fun, it is freely chosen," he said. "Because sex is fun, it is not to be understood as something which we owe to anyone, whether that obligation is understood in terms of a debt to be paid after a certain number of dates, or as conformity to the generalized expectations of a group."

By "funny" Wood said he was referring not only to the humor attached to sex, but to its playful, creative aspects. "And this means that there are no laws attached to sex," he said. "I repeat, absolutely no laws. Anyone who tells you there are may be guilty of mistaking social and cultural custom for divine sanction.

The fact that sex is natural does not relegate it to the position of being merely a natural function which has one specific purpose and no other, Wood said. "Eating, for example, is also natural, and has the natural function of the nourishment and preservation of the organism. But most of my gourmet friends would be rather abashed if I told them that they should engage in eating only for these purposes."

Wood said that according to the Bible sexuality is more than good; it is creative, and from this concept comes the possibility of distinguishing between a hedonist and a believer.

Reasonably reliable methods of birth control exist, Wood said, but the control of fertility does not appear to be the final issue. "Heterosexual union is always at least potentially creative of another person -- a person, not just some little baby who may be viewed as a nuisance or an unfortunate inconvenience, but another person, for whom his creators are deeply and intimately responsible." To disregard this potential creativity is to deprive sex of much that makes it meaningful, he said.

He also said "sex is creative as a means of self-fulfillment."

"If sex is creative in the sense of being a means of interpersonal fulfillment," Wood said, "then perhaps we need to acknowledge that sex may have something to do with those relations we characterize as love relationships; that is, relationships marked by certain mutualities of respect, consideration and diving."

"The believer will find himself raising the question whether sex outside of such a love relationship is not at least potentially destructive, rather than creative, and therefore less than fully sex," he said.

Wood said marriage is a symbol for this type of relationship, but the content can exist without the symbol, just as the symbol does not necessitate the content.

The individual is free to determine his own actions, but he loses the security and relaxation provided by an established pattern.

All sexual activity is interpersonal, "whether that activity is heterosexual, homosexual, or autosexual (for such relationships almost inevitably involve the fantasy of or the desire for a relationship with another person)," he said.

The biblical understanding is that for an interpersonal relationship to be full, it must be responsible, Wood said. Rather than use one another as things, we should relate to one another as persons. "And this plea is relevant to any kind of interpersonal relationship, whether it is in bed, or playing tennis, or singing a duet."

"From the biblical point of view," he said, "to relate to another person is to assume some responsibility for that person. And the magnitude of the responsibility is directly proportionate to the depth of the relationship."

A Final Reminder TO Liberal Arts Majors

You must apply by Nov. 27th to be eligible to take NSA's Professional Qualification Test

The PQT itself won't be given until Saturday, December 12th, but, in order to take the test and qualify for a career position with the National Security Agency, you must stop by the College Placement Office, pick up your PQT brochure, and mail in the enclosed application card NO LATER THAN FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27TH. You are not under any obligation to NSA if you take this test, but all Liberal Arts majors (Mathematicians excepted) must pass the PQT before they can be considered.

Remember—whatever your specialty—finance & accounting, personnel, business administration, data systems programming, political science, history, languages or linguistic research... you can make immediate use of your college-acquired capabilities with the National Security Agency, headquarters for secure communications research and development... unusual design refinements for computer and edp systems... and cryptologic techniques.

Remember, too, these special NSA advantages:

1. Widely-diversified research programs not available anywhere else.
2. Advancement geared to either technical or administrative capabilities.
3. Unique training in new disciplines and methods.
4. Encouragement and financial assistance in your advance degree work.
5. Association with staff members and consultants of recognized stature.
6. Ideal location midway between Washington and Baltimore... and near the Chesapeake Bay resort region.

Starting salaries of $6,050 (for B.A. degrees) plus regular increases, excellent promotion possibilities... and all the benefits of Federal employment.

Apply now and be sure. You must be a U.S. citizen, subject to a character and loyalty check. Engineers, scientists, and mathematicians should also consult their College Placement Officer for information on NSA and interview dates.

Here Praise Is Due

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the Council of Federated Organizations, I want to express our deep appreciation for the work you have done in raising money for, and increasing public awareness of, the Mississippi Freedom Project.

We are so glad that you have chosen to contribute money for the two activities that are absolutely vital to the Mississippi Freedom Project. The acquisition of additional radios is of crucial importance to the very lives of project workers. The rebuilding of churches and community centers, destroyed by bombs and fires, is essential to Southern Negro communities that are organizing to fight the centuries of oppression and degradation.

The installation of short wave radios, begun this summer, has greatly increased the safety of those working in the field. Now, for the first time, it is possible to maintain contact with field workers in remote areas and those traveling by car. If Chaney, Schwerner and Goodman had been able to communicate their situation, perhaps, their lives could have been saved.

As you know, churches and community centers are the hub of community organization in the South. They are used to hold mass meetings, to conduct freedom school classes for adults and children and kindergarten classes for pre-school children. Community centers are a place to go to play basketball, to ask advice or just to chat, for people who formally had no place to go. Because these meeting places proved to be so successful, every night the people worry about whether a bomb will destroy all of this before morning. Frequently, their fears are realized. The books, the records, the crayons, the very building, no longer exist. The painstaking process of rebuilding begins. Because of your efforts it will be easier now.

We are proud to add the Burlington Committee for Mississippi to the list of dedicated Americans who are committed to the goal of making this country truly free for all its citizens.

Yours in Freedom,
Marion S. Barry
Adm. Secy. -

The Burlington Committee for Mississippi has thus far collected $610 from professors representing all undergraduate departments in the schools. With the exception of 50 professors who will be contacted this week, every professor in the university was approached for a donation and the results show for themselves the generosity and public awareness of so many of our teachers. The BCAM at this time wishes to thank all of them and reprints this letter sent to them from the people working at this very moment in MISSISSIPPI.

Vermont Skiers Await Season

By I. Kotler

The 1964 Vermont ski team, under the direction of Coach Robert Stone, appears to be molding into excellent physical shape in preparation for the coming season. The boys have been working out daily since the second week of school as they run through a routine of exercises, soccer, isometrics, windsprints, and long distance hikes. Mr. Stone, a former ski instructor at Dartmouth College, recently hiked with his skiers up Mount Mansfield in order to increase the team's strength and endurance.

As most people at Vermont know, skiing is a grueling competitive sport, which requires guts, desire, excellent equipment, and ability of expectations of victory is to be achieved. The team, which has an 'A' rating by the Eastern Intercollegiate Skiing Association (EISA), is fully outfitted with the ever so popular Head competition skis. We will be competing in both Nordic and Alpine events this winter against schools like New Hampshire, Dartmouth, St. Lawrence, Williams, Maine, Norwich, and Middlebury.

The Alpine events are subdivided into two skiing categories: downhill and slalom. The downhill competition is a race against the time-clock, as the skiers try with all their practiced ability to reach the finish line at the bottom of the mountain with the best time. There are no control gates set up, as specified by the Federal International Skiing Association, unless hazardous conditions deem it necessary. In the slalom events there are control gates set up at specific intervals. The object is to ski between pairs of gates at a top speed in order to reach the bottom with a winning time. This year's alpine skiers are Ken Austin, Rod Carnie, Peter Donaghy, James Dwinell, Nash Lamb, Carson Loomis, Buck Love, Douglas Peterson, Jonathan Teuscher, Peter Van Alstine, and Steve Phillips. Of these fine athletes only James Dwinell, '65, Nash Lamb, '65, and Steve Phillips, '65, are presently rated as 'A' skiers. Mr. Stone stresses the fact that all of the Alpine skiers can compete in both the slalom and downhill races this season.

Cross country and jumping are the two different types of competition in the Nordic events. The jumping is done on a large hill with an inclined slope, from which the skiers sail through the air striving for large distances. The jumping is usually done on a 40 meter hill which has a maximum jumping potential between 140-150 feet. The Vermont squad is only equipped with a 15 meter hill, so they are forced to practice on the 200 foot jump at Middlebury. The judges watch for both form and distance counting only the best 2 of 3 total jumps. A perfect score according to revised scoring rules is 240 points. The cross country race is skied on a tough nine mile hard track which is ideally 3 miles up, 3 miles level, and the final one third of the race downhill. Special cross country skis are used which are light, and tougher than ordinary competition skis. In the Nordic as well as the Alpine events, four men are entered in each division, and the scores of the top three finishes (in each division) are recorded. The Nordic skiers are Mason Bryant, Alan Goedecke, Dave Hosmer, A. Scott Leake, and Steve Lozen, all of which have 'B' ratings.

Last year the ski team finished eighth in the N.C.A.A., however this season appears to be the strongest team in many years. The team, led by juniors and seniors, have seven returning lettermen. Thus, the nucleus of the team will form around Ken Austin, Rod Carnie, Jim Dwinell, Alan Goedecker, Dave Hosmer, Nash Lamb, and Steve Logen. Experience and leadership should prove to be the deciding factor in many of the meets this winter. Mr. Stone has confidence in his squad and his co-captains Dwinell and Lozen.

As the winter vacation (and finals) approach us very quickly, Coach Stone will set up a training camp in Stowe for the Alpine skiers, while the Nordic competitors will be racing and jumping in Lindenville and Franconia, New Hampshire, the first few days after the New Year (Jan. 2 and 3). On January ninth the Eastern Cross country Relay will take place in Hanover, New Hampshire. Four men will appear for each team and each will ski for six miles, making a total of 24 miles to be covered that afternoon.

Vermont has already been invited to compete in the Dartmouth, Williams, St. Lawrence, and Middlebury Winter Carnivals. The best of luck to Coach Stone and his fine squad. The boys will be on the slopes from the first heavy snowfall until the last days of March. Victory should follow the frozetracks of this veteran ski team.

Intramurals Under Way

By Bob Bloomenthal

The 1964 UVM Campus intramural program, under the fine leadership of Norm Strassburg, has gotten off to an exciting start. So far this semester, touch football, tennis, and a handball doubles tournament have been completed. Currently taking place are a basketball league, a bowling league, and a handball singles tournament.

The paddle ball singles tournament which was slated to start October 28 was postponed because the equipment which was ordered failed to come in. Following is a summary of all intramural activities for this semester:

TOUCH FOOTBALL

The all-campus touch football champions are the independent winners, the Leftovers. They defeated the fraternity champs, Delta Psi, by a 12 to 6 score in a closely contested game. Independent runners-up were the Grads, while Sigma Phi Epsilon took second with Kappa Sigma third in the fraternity league.

TENNIS SINGLES TOURNAMENT

Bruce Hanna of Sigma Alpha Epsilon defeated Delta Psi's Jack Stewart, 12-14, 6-1, 6-2, for the fraternity championship. Delta Psi, however edged SAE for the team championship, 56 to 51. The independent winner was Fletcher Joslin, with Converse taking the team title.

HANDBALL TOURNAMENTS

Phi Sigma Delta's duo of Ken Spalter and Ed Hootstein belted Abrams and Shapiro of Alpha Epsilon Pi, 21-3, 21-4, in the finals of the doubles tournament. The singles tournament starts this week with 48 boys entered. The final round will be completed on December 12th.

BASKETBALL

(Records through November 16)

There are four different leagues in this year's basketball activities. With two weeks remaining in regular season play, the leaders of League A are Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Mu Delta with identical 4-0 marks. Kappa Sigma is third with a 3-1 record and SAE and AGR are tied for fourth at 2-2.

The two undefeated leaders of this league will meet in an important contest on November 17 at 8:00.

Delta Psi leads League B with a 4-0 record. Sigma Nu is in second place at 3-0-1, with Phi Sigma Delta, 3-1, third. Phi Delta Theta is next with a 1-3 mark. On November 18 at 7:00, Delta Psi and Sigma Nu meet in a game which might decide the league championship.

Leagues C and D are composed of independent teams. The Gunners are at the top of League C with a 2-0 record and the Chargers are second at 1-0. Chittenden, North Converse, and the Leftovers are tied for the lead in League D with 1-0 marks.

The playoffs in basketball will begin the week of December 7.

BOWLING

The intramural bowling competition has also been divided into two leagues. The standings are:

League A

	W	L
Delta Psi	6	0
Sigma Nu	4	1
Alpha Epsilon Pi	2	3
Phi Mu Delta	2	3
Phi Delta Theta	2	4
TEP	1	3
Theta Chi	0	3

League B

	W	L
Sigma Phi Epsilon	2	0
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	3	1
Alpha Tau Omega	3	1
Lambda Iota	3	2
Sigma Phi	2	3
Kappa Sigma	1	4
Wills	0	3

Playoffs in the bowling leagues begin November 24, in the Waterman Bowling Alleys.

With a successful season under way this semester, Mr. Strassburg is planning for even more participation in the Winter semester events. Some of these will be an indoor track meet, a squash tournament, a volleyball league, a swim meet, a softball league, a wrestling tournament, and a badminton tournament. Mr. Strassburg would also like to thank the students for their interest shown in this semester's activities.

B Ball Opener At Dartmouth

The University of Vermont will open its 51st season of intercollegiate basketball on Dec. 1 when the Catamounts travel to Hanover, N.H., to face Dartmouth.

John C. (Fuzzy) Evans, the dean of Yankee Conference coaches, is beginning his 23rd season at the helm with seven lettermen on hand from last season's team that posted an 11-10 record. Evans starts the season with a 254-182, won-lost record.

The 1964-65 schedule:

Dec. 1, at Dartmouth; 4-5, at Maine; 11, New Hampshire.

Jan. 8, at Massachusetts; 9, at Connecticut; 13, at Middlebury; 20, Norwich; 23, at Rhode Island; 3-, Connecticut.

Feb. 2, at Clarkson; 3, at St. Lawrence; 6, Massachusetts; 11, St. Michael's (Vt.); 13, Rhode Island; 17, at New Hampshire; 23, at St. Michael's; 27, Brandeis.

Mar. 3, at Norwich; 5, Middlebury.

Outing Club Shows Movie

Ski buffs will have the opportunity to schuss down trails from California to New England to France via film on Saturday evening when the Outing Club at the University of Vermont presents "Ski Unlimited."

The film is another in a series shot by Jim Farnsworth who has been producing exciting and thrilling ski films for the past decade.

The film will be shown at 8 p.m. in the Patrick Gym.

Top skiers such as Othmar Schneider, Junior Bounous, Stein Eriksen, Arthur Furrer, Anderl Molterer and Adrien Duvillard will be seen executing their own skills on snow varying from hardpack to waist-deep powder. The film was shot in such areas as North Conway, Mt. Orford, Val d'Isere, Sugar Bowl, Aspen and Boyne Mountain.

Farnsworth shoots his film using a system called ski-orama which minimizes the camera bounce and helps to create the feeling that the viewer is actually coming down the slope.

Pigskin Facts and Figures

The 63rd edition of a University of Vermont football team found the Catamount eleven to be the "swingingest bunch of Cats" ever assembled.

In posting a 7-1 record for 1964, Coach Bob Clifford's team established the following team records:

Most consecutive wins: 7 (final game of 1963 and first six of 1964)

Most wins in one season: 7 (old record six; several times)

Most yards rushing one season: 1800 (old record 1620 set in 1954)

Total offense for one season: 2454 yards (old record 2350 set in 1954)

Total plays one season: 520 (old record 490 set in 1963)

In addition, one-game records for total offense, 530 yards and most first downs, 30, were set, both against New Hampshire.

Ken Andrad put his name into the record book for the longest field goal, a 45-yard boot against Rhode Island.

By posting wins over American International, Worcester Tech and New Hampshire, Vermont took over the series lead against these rivals, and tied the Rhode Island and Middlebury series by winning. The Catamounts also snapped what must have been a "frustration" record by finally defeating Maine. The 14-7 victory over the Black Bears marked the first win since the modern series was resumed in 1950 and was the first triumph since a 7-6 verdict back in 1923.

The only blight on the log was a 28-7 loss to the powerful Massachusetts Redmen who captured the Yankee Conference championship for the second year in a row and who have lost only once in their last 18 games.

In individual statistics, a quartet of seniors took care of the largest chunks of the 1800 yards the Catamounts gained rushing. Fullback Richie Reynolds of West New York, N.J., and halfback Frank Foerster of Union City, N.J., staged a spirited battle with Reynolds gaining 408 yards on 99 carries for a 4.1 average while Foerster, the team's top scorer with seven touchdowns, gained 393 yards on 72 rushes for a 5.4 average.

Halfbacks Deane Kent of Rutland and Ken Andrade of Palmyra, Mass., were third and fourth with 337 and 234 yards gained respectively. Andrade was second in scoring with 24 points which he accounted for mostly on his talented right foot. He scored one touchdown, was successful on 16 of 20 PAT tries and was 1-for-2 in the field goal department for a total of 25 points.

A total of 10 different players scored one touchdown or more.

Junior quarterback Scott Fitz of Nashua, N.J., edged his senior counterpart Jim Brennan, completing 21 of 57 passes for 309 yards while Brennan found the range on 22 of 46 for 303 yards. Both passed for a touchdown.

Sophomore end Jack Schweberger of Weehawken, N.J., was the top pass receiver with 11 receptions for 111 yards. Senior end Paul Giardi of East Hartford, Conn., hauled in six passes for 158 yards and two touchdowns.

As a team, Vermont gained 1800 yards rushing and 654 passing for a total offense of 2454 yards while the opposition had 898 on the ground and 743 through the air for a total of 1641 yards.

In the individual defensive race, linebackers George Oelze and Rusty Brink tied for top honors, each with 136 points. Oelze is a senior from Union City, N.J., Brink a junior from Methuen, Mass.

Centennial Field is deserted and the football equipment has been put away until next year but Vermont fans won't soon forget the '64 edition of the Catamounts — a real collector's item.

NOTICE

Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity is inviting all freshman men to an Open House to be held Sunday, November 22, 1964 from 4-6 P.M. at 275 South Willard Street. The football game on television starts at 1:30 P.M. and a buffet dinner will be served at 4:00 P.M. So come early, stay late. KW Directors Select Secretary, Assistants

Christmas may be on the way but so is Kake Walk. The first big social weekend of the second semester is well along in its planning stages. The directors - Steve Slack, Steve Watson, and Cal Walker - have chosen their secretary. She is Susan Monti. Sue, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lyle J. Monti, is from New Britain, Conn. She is a senior majoring in Business Education. Sue is a sister of Pi Beta Phi, where she served as corresponding secretary. During last year, she was WSGA house president. With a considerable amount of secretarial experience, she is a true asset to the committee.

The committee is now at full strength with the addition of four assistants. They are John Bradley, Vincent DeCesaris, Robert Ostrom, and David Cohen.

John is the assistant director of finance and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Vinny, one of two assistant production directors, is responsible for the skits plus lighting and sound. He is a member of Delta Psi. Bob, the assistant production director in charge of royalty campaigns and walkers, is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon. Dave, from Phi Sigma Delta, is the assistant director of publicity.

The time and effort contributed by each of the members of the committee is immeasurable. Since last Kake Walk, the directors have evaluated that production with hopes of improving this year's program. With the aid of Sue and the assistants, these hopes will become realities, and the 68th annual Kake Walk will be bigger and better than ever.

Music Assoc. Honors UVM

The University of Vermont was promoted to full membership in the National Association of Schools of Music on Friday, November 27, at the 40th Annual Meeting of the Association. Frank W. Lidral, Chairman of the Department of Music represented the school at the meeting which was held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, St. Louis, Missouri.

The curricula which have been approved for the University of Vermont lead to the degrees Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science in Music Education, Master of Arts, and Master of Arts in Teaching.

The University of Vermont became an associate member of NASM at the annual meeting in 1962 and received the report of its being granted full membership at the opening session of the St. Louis meeting.

Membership of the Association has included 261 universities, colleges and conservatories in the United States. Nine new schools were admitted to membership at this meeting, and ten schools were promoted from associate to full membership.

The NASM is designated by the National Commission on Accrediting as the responsible agency for the accreditation of music degree curricula and the work of the Association has an important bearing on the continual development of music in America.

BCAM Begins Book Drive

The Burlington Committee for Mississippi will be conducting a Book Drive on campus at the end of this semester and the beginning of next semester. David Rothchild coordinator of the Book Drive says that a giant collection box will be set up at Patrick Gymnasium during finals week at which time students may deposit their books after exams. The books which are collected will be shipped directly to Mississippi, to be used in the 26 freedom schools which are now operating there and are sorely in need of books. B.C.A.M. stresses that ALL books can be used, for the book store has graciously agreed to exchange books which are not applicable to Mississippi use, for those which are.

Next semester in addition to collection points in Waterman building and Billings Center, representatives from B.C.A.M. will be collecting books from students themselves.

'South Pacific' Is A Total Sell-Out!

Cast Features

Connor, Woodard

With the opening of South Pacific the Arena Theatre will mark its 8th musical production. It was just 6 years ago on December 3, 1958, that Brigadoon officially opened the Arena Theatre. In the ensuing years audiences have seen Carousel, Carmen, Where's Charley?, The Medium, The Telephone, and The Fantasticks. It has been two years since the music department and the dance workshop have combined forces with the drama department to produce a musical. The last such joint effort was The Fantasticks in which only 7 people made up the cast. By contrast, South Pacific has a cast of more than 40 and an orchestra of 25.

The entire production is staged and directed by Edward J. Feidner, with the music under the direction of Frank Lidral. The orchestra is conducted by James Keene; vocal coach is Francis Weinrich; choreographer is Mary Lee. Settings are by B.G. Ackley.

Heading the cast are Jean Connor as Nellie Forbush, Michael Woodard as Emile de Becque, William Bosworth as Lt. Cable, Esther Sundell as Bloody Mary, and Susan Bowman as Liat. Other principals in the cast are Dena Apple, Richard Beaupre, Jeff Freeman, R. John Huber, Paul Humes, Becky Lauzner, Mark Leopold, Errol Selsby, William Thiess, and Ruth Traunstein.

The Arena Theatre has been virtually converted into a south sea island for this production, with grass skirts, foliage, palm trees, a mountain, and a revolving stage.

Adapted From

Michener Book

Originally South Pacific was to be a play. Joshua Logan conceived the idea of adapting two of James Michener's Tales of the South Pacific for a stage play. When he decided that incidental music was necessary to create the proper mood and atmosphere, he discussed the matter with Richard Rodgers who interested his collaborator Oscar Hammerstein in the project. It was finally decided that Hammerstein and Logan would collaborate on the story and Rodgers would compose the score.

The two stories chosen from Michener's book were "Our Heroine" and "Fo Della." The first of these tells of the love of Emile de Becque, a French planter, and the American nurse Nellie Forbush. The second is concerned with the romance of Marine Lt. Joseph Cable and the native girl Liat, daughter of Bloody Mary.

It took courage and independence of thought and action for the authors to make the secondary love plot of Cable and Liat a plea for racial tolerance, to write a song on the subject ("You've Got to be Taught"), and after having built up a favorable atmosphere for this love affair, to kill Cable.

Emile and Nellie share the main musical numbers; the leading love song, "Some Enchanted Evening"; "I'm Gonna Wash that Man Right Outa my Hair"; "I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy"; "A Cockeyed Optimist"; and "This Nearly was Mine." Other songs reflected the personalities of the characters who sang them: "Bali Ha'i" and "Happy Talk" (Bloody Mary); the tender love song of Cable for Liat, "Younger Than Springtime"; and amusing lament of the marines, sailors and seabees, "There is Nothing Like a Dame."

THE ARTS

by Sanford Plotkin

This week's on campus cultural activity is highlighted by the Players' Production of South Pacific. The cast has been hard at work on this production and although the seats are relatively expensive, I am sure they will be worth the money. By far the best movies to be shown on campus, or in town this year will be presented by SCOPE. "The Bicycle Thief," produced by Vittorio de Sica, is a superb foreign film and should not be missed. Again let me remind those that are unable to attend the Lane Series production of the "H.M.S. Pinafore," that they can sell their tickets through the Lane Series Office, (Ext. 240, Room 54, Lower Waterman). On December 12, members of the History Department will have a panel discussion of Voltaire on television. The panel will consider the effects of his cynical wit on his environment. This program should be of interest to students currently studying the French Revolution or Europe in the Modern Age. On December 9th Paul Aschenbach will give a talk on sculpture as it is related to the spiritual climate of the times, (see below).

UVM Places Third In Debate Tournament

The University of Vermont Debate Team took the third place trophy at the Georgetown University Debate Tournament in Washington, D.C. this weekend.

One hundred four debate teams representing 70 colleges and universities were competing in the tournament, debating the National Intercollegiate Proposition: Resolved, That the Federal Government should establish a national program of Public Work for the unemployed.

Vermont sent David Waite of Springfield and David Webster of Burlington, both juniors and Carmen Wessner a senior from Manchester and Norman Snow a junior from Burlington to the tourney.

Waite and Webster compiled a 4-2 record, defeating Kings College, The University of Chicago, The University of Scranton and the College of William and Mary. The team lost to Southwest Missouri State College and the University of Webster have now won 13 of their last 17 debates.

Norman Snow and Carmen Wessner carried UVM out of the elimination rounds and into the final rounds with a 5-1 record, defeating Georgetown University, La Salle College, Miami University, the College of the Holy Cross, and Princeton University.

Snow and Wessner went on to meet and defeat Ohio State University in the octofinal round and Northeastern Oklahoma State College in the quarterfinals. The Vermonters dropped their semifinal round debate to Northwestern University who went on to capture first place defeating Washburn University of Topeka Kansas in the final round. Snow and Wessner have now won 12 of their last 15 debates.

Professor Robert Richard Carr of the University Speech Department was the coach on the trip.

THANKSGIVING AND THE NEW CALENDAR

Although no formal survey was conducted to determine the number of students absent from classes last Friday and Saturday, authoritative sources have roughly estimated absentee percentage to be between 25 and 30%.

Frankly, we are surprised the percentage was not greater. Nevertheless, the statistics are significant, considering that a good number of students, in effect, could not go home because of scheduled hour exams, ROTC drill and the traditional double-cut threat.

We are pleased to see that an effort was made to secure such statistics in the event that it might possibly result in changes in the new calendar.

Both faculty and administration have expressed the desire for an improvement in the calendar. One particular suggestion under consideration is that we begin the school year before Labor Day to insure Thanksgiving vacation and a full 16 week semester.

In analysing the situation, the faculty and administration, we assume, are open to suggestions from the student body. We urge UVM'ers to facilitate matters by communicating worthwhile ideas to their Deans and professors.

Letters To The Editor

The Heat's Up

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to all the students and instructors who, over the years, have fumed and fussed about Lafayette Hall, the renowned campus disaster.

On the morning of Thanksgiving Day I came in to my office to pick up some papers and, giving in to a long-pent-up curiosity, took temperature readings in the Lafayette classrooms that were open. Since on school days the readings are at least in the middle to upper seventies (except on those January days when the heat fails) I thought I might find out what each of the rooms was set at "normally."

Here are the degrees registered on the room thermometers (I do not call them thermostats since this implies a measure of heat control) at 9:30 AM Thanksgiving Day, doors and windows closed tight and outside temperature 54°:

103	92	204	100
104	76	205	98
105	96	206	102
201	76	302	92
202	80	303	94
203	93	304	98
		305	unreadable:
			mercury out of sight at top.

Questions: would it be possible to put up East Hall again and tear down Lafayette and sell it as junk? Is there a human agency behind the heating plant in this school or is it under divine (and therefore unchangeable) control? Does Blue Cross cover heat prostration? Isn't it at least possible to take the thermometers out of the classrooms so we don't know how miserable we are?

Sincerely,
H.H. Orth, English

Prof. Praises Augustine

To the Editor:

Since the members of the Art Department obstinately remain silent, let me take on myself the pleasure of praising Stort's Augustine. Last week's issue was like a setting without its jewel. One was reduced to reading "Mixes and Matches" and "Placement Barometer," those prosaic chronicles of present and future success.

Wily Women

To the Editor:

From her subterranean den she has emerged, prowling, club in hand, prepared to claw, scratch, and know through the cowering throngs of men to find the quintessence of the acquiescent male. The cry has rung forth, Sadie Hawkins has escaped and returned to suppression. But her siren-melodies still linger, and one can see troops of males, entranced, wagtail their way behind her, passing through green meadows into the forbidden depths of Redstone. Oh, where have they gone, poor creatures; even the reluctant ones, flouncing in air, held by their hair in the strong hands of laughing Sadie, are lost.

Now, the aftermath. Men's dormitories ring with strident screams of early-morning nightmares. Recollections of clanging telephones and quietly positive,

"Preach, my dear Sir, a crusade against ignorance."

Thomas Jefferson

A Church is usually a place to pray to a God, to go for spiritual meditation. Religion is a topic that this column has always felt is the business of the individual and thus we have never made any mention of it. However when a member of the clergy decided to "branch out" into non-clerical affairs, then he loses that privilege we would ordinarily respect. We already had a column written when we received word that a certain leader of one of the more prominent religions on campus, recently known for its liberal ecumenicalism, attacked a "magazine being liberally spread and read around campus."

By the time this column is published, Paul Krassner, the first editor of a magazine of "free thought criticism and satire," The Realist, will have come, spoken and gone. We do not know, at the time this column is being written, what Mr. Krassner has to say. But one thing we are aware of, he is not a creature of the devil. If the various religious leaders around campus are so afraid of losing the souls of their congregations then they must obviously have little faith in their religion and themselves.

We feel very strongly about this for if one clergyman or group of clergymen can damn a man and his magazine for their congregations, then he can surely damn this column and its writers just because the clergyman disagrees with it. During the last Ecumenical Session of the Roman Catholic Church, the various congregants failed to approve a doctrine of Freedom of Belief for all religions. We were very disappointed in the Ecumenical Council. A truly modern and liberal church, as well as a truly modern and liberal clergyman must recognize the right of all beliefs. If a church believes it is the right church and has faith in its own religion then surely men like Paul Krassner can hardly sway its believers. "Ye Shall Know the Truth and it Shall Make Ye Free."

This past week we stopped in for a talk with the Sceptic's "Prof of the Year," "Pop" Grosch. UVM's favorite Prof is enthusiastic about the recently proposed honor system.

"I think the system will turn this university into a real intellectual institution. Imagine everybody trusting everybody else!" he exclaimed to us. "It will turn the place into another Goddard," he added.

We wondered if "Pop" had ever had any experience with an honor system.

"Yes, many years ago," he told us, "About twenty years ago, before I published my definitive work on 'Don Quixote' and the Sociological Effects of the work on the politico-economic theories of Spain (published by East Tallahassee Tech Press) and before I was allowed to come to UVM, I taught at Mississippi State University (before all the problems began there). Well, the students at Ol' Miss State were much like these here at UVM today. The first day the University went on the honor system, I gave an exam. I gave out the papers, left the room and went to my office telling my students to bring the exam to class the next day. Well you'd never guess what happened. Everyone got a hundred except for a scrawny-looking guy with glasses and long hair who flunked miserably. So you can see why I would support an honor system. If the system will teach my students more, then it's worth it."

We asked the kindly old fellow what effect the honor system would have on the academic standing of the university.

"I'm not concerned with administrative procedures like that but let me tell you one thing. Not long after Miss. State adopted the honor system they decided to drop it. Ever since that momentous decision, the school has rapidly gone downhill and you know the reputation southern schools like Miss. State have."

Recognizing "Pop" Grosch's competence in the field we inquired what he thought of the marking system as it stands here at the University of Vermont.

"Well, at the beginning of each semester I tell my classes not to worry about grades. They are bothersome administrative procedures. All of you students are here for the express purpose of learning, gaining an education, as it were. If we must have a marking system, we should ignore it as much as possible," said Pop grudgingly.

We asked him about rumors that his class was revolting over the low grades he gave out. Mostly D's and F's, as word had it.

"Ah, but those grades are all irrelevant. Let me remind you of the parable, I'm sure you've heard, about the wolf who kept looking for a warm place to live and finally starved himself."

"Pop" enjoyed a good laugh and we thanked him for the fine interview. One thing the students at UVM surely realize, they certainly have a friend in "Pop" Grosch.

dominate voices. Exigent, grasping females reaching forth and plucking masculinity from what little there was. The slow advancing, the cool, confident smiles, the lethal omnipresence of the female forces; their... quick death.

Perhaps we shall not soon recover from the throes of the past, perverted week. We can only hide and rest, and insanely wail if a nurse should try and splice our frayed nerves. When we are once again sufficiently healthy, however, we might expose this fraud that works under the auspices of Man's Economic Recovery Plan for what it really is: MAN'S EXISTENCE RAVISHED PANHELLENISTICALLY.

Placement Barometer

by Douglas O. Hanau, Director of Placement

FEDERAL OPPORTUNITY DAYS POST-MORTEM. Two weeks ago November 17-18, the Women's Student Government Association in conjunction with the Placement Service sponsored a Federal Opportunity Days Program with thirteen representative governmental Agencies maintaining displays and discussing employment in the North Lounge of the Billings Center. Invitations were extended to all area colleges, university, and high school faculties, staff, and student bodies and the general public. Conservative estimates indicate that slightly under 2,000 people took part in the program. Special mention is in order to Janet Koch, President WSGA, and her council, the thirteen committee co-chairman and their committees, Saga Food Service, and the Billings Center custodians.

EFFECT OF DEFENSE CUTBACKS. The Defense Department's economy drive has continued to have a marked effect on the aerospace and electronics industries. Engineering Staffs have been severely shaken up, and many engineers are unemployed for the first time in their lives. Companies that had "stockpiled" engineers in anticipation of a steady flow of defense contracts are letting some go. The need for modernizing of an engineer's education has never been more crucial, for those marginal employees who haven't kept up with their field are the first to go. The impact of all this on the Placement field is reflected in reports that range from New Jersey to Texas to California. Many electrical students have left electronics for other phases of their field, and for the first time, a California college tells of engineering graduates still unemployed in July.

THE WEATHERVANE. The general feeling concerning the demand for college graduates is optimistic, equaling or exceeding that of 1964. But demand has yet to return to the level it enjoyed in the late '50s and early '60s. The favorable business atmosphere and the tax cut prompt this optimism, which is supported by a majority of economists. A report from the Midwest adds that "the upward trend in demand is coming prior to the time when the 'population explosion' of teenagers will be graduating from college -- 1969. Therefore, if the economy continues its upward spiral, there may be a relative shortage of college graduates in the next four years."

A decreasing number of graduates are entering sales careers, states another report from the Midwest. Possible reasons include: (1) the lack of professional status attached; (2) unwillingness to travel and relocate to the degree required; (3) an economic security which lessens the necessary "hunger;" (4) orientation of the marketing faculties in some schools toward market research, advertising, retailing, rather than sales; and (5) the current business trend toward emphasis on the marketing management concept and the hiring of M.B.A.s. to fill training staff requirements. This supply decrease is emphasized by reports of an increased demand for sales personnel in all areas of the country.

Placement officials and employers continue to be distressed over the growing number of graduates who go on to graduate school for no real reason...

News from the Midwest and West Coast indicates a lessening demand for accountants and a leveling-off of the top salaries offered them. In the Midwest, the demand for these had ranked just below that for engineers and scientists. In the West this is partially explained by aerospace cutbacks.

PROFESORES

BY Herbert McArthur
Assoc. Prof. of English

It may comfort no student to learn this, but proctoring an examination is a tedious, brainrotting occupation. All faculty members would gladly forgo the dubious pleasure. It is tempting to reflect that an academic honor system would relieve us of the chore, and it is tempting at the same time to imagine that an honor system would encourage our students to show forth their bright honor that now lies cowed and enervated.

With some diffidence, however, I shall maintain that an academic honor system is not desirable at the University of Vermont. There are, I think, both moral and practical reasons against such a system's being adopted here. I shall be happy if someone is moved to counter my arguments.

I first inquire: Why should the decent students be put to bear the burden of the cheaters? Shouldn't they be free to concentrate on their own work? Are the suspiciously darting eyes of the proctor to be resurrected in the suspiciously darting eyes of a hundred students? I have heard it plausibly said that the honor system works well only when there are already strong integrating forces, is an atmosphere of universal reserve and suspicion likely to unify our own heterogeneous student body?

Another question: What evidence is there to support the notion "that every student inherently has honor?" Is he so different from the larger society out of which he comes? Wouldn't it be more realistic to expect students to have the same corner-cutting consciences that are so generally evident in older people? Any practicable definition of conscience must allow that it is a culturally inculcated phenomenon, fully internalized by only a few.

In two matters that I know of appeals have already been made to the honor and greater self-interest of students. The first was the repeated destruction of the furniture in the old student lounge in Waterman. The second is the boorishness in Bailey Library--loudness, carelessness, vandalism, and theft. Wouldn't it be more constructive for the proponents of an honor system to put their energies together toward raising the tone of one particular place, such as Bailey Library, than to dissipate their idealism in vainly imagining that the University of Vermont can be made over into a campus of sternly self-punishing moralists?

Nothing under the present system prevents a student who has an honorable conscience from abiding by it. To say that the presence of a proctor is a challenge to cheat is to abandon the assumption that people are basically honest; to say that the proctor relieves the honorable student of the need to exercise his gift is to admit that conscience is a culturally conditioned phenomenon and not an inherent, personal possession.

A 196- graduate of the University of Vermont has been named executive director of the Empire State FM School of the Air at Syracuse University.

Charles A. Adams assumed his new position this month. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Adams of Middlebury.

The Empire State FM School of the Air produces educational programs for elementary schools throughout New York State.

Adams began his broadcasting career on the Vermont campus station, WRUV and during his senior year was announcer for the documentary "Spotlight UVM" series.

He holds his Master's degree from Syracuse. Recently, he has been associated with WJOY-FM in Burlington.

The mail sorting system utilized in the mailrooms of Marsh, Austin, Tupper and Chittenden, Buckham, Willis and Converse Halls is based upon the room number of the addressee. Up until now, both mailrooms have been flooded with mail from campus organizations with no room number on the address. Many extra hours of work have to be done to look up the student's name, to ascertain the correct room numbers.

In the future all mail addressed to students living in residence halls must have their room numbers placed upon it. Failure to do this will result in non-delivery of your mail to the students.

Hoop & Hockey Men Open Season

Sophomore Pucksters Await Season

Dorsey, Cook and Swett pose on the ice during a recent practice session. (Credit: Scott, SPS)

by Gordon Josephson

Daily, the UVM edition of the New York Rangers can be found working out at the Gutterson Memorial Field House. Flashing skates, the dull thud of colliding players, the whistle of a flying puck. These sights and sounds manifest the action, speed and excitement which only Joe Hockey could provide. On December 11th, the UVM Hockey team will engage Salem St. for the first game of the season, an away contest. The Cats fine coach, Bill Rufer, expressed confidence that our squad could take advantage of Salem St.'s inexperience and sweep to an opening game victory.

For almost a month now, the UVM hockey team has been practicing under the experienced auspices of their coach, Bill Rufer. "We have one basic problem", remarked Mr. Rufer, "Frankly, our small squad (only 15 men as compared to last year's team of 23) has left our team very shallow in many respects, particularly with our forwards. To begin with, the team has only 2 complete forward lines and part of a third. It is usual for a team to have 3 or more forward lines which continually alternate during a game. This shortage is likely to cause a tiring of our players around the third period of play, its really a problem." The tightness of this year's academic schedule, combined with an incessant wave of hour exams, has resulted in the practice being chronically short of men. (When this reporter attended practice, there were only 4 players in attendance.) One of the prime concerns of Mr. Rufer is that several of his excellent players are on a shaky academic standing. "Most athletic teams have an equal distribution of sophs, juniors and seniors with the seniors and juniors having the least academic difficulties," commented Coach Rufer. "Our squad is composed of 80% sophomores (12 of 15), and these boys are the most likely to be in academic trouble." Although 3 additional players are expected to become eligible next semester, it is the coach's hope that these boys will not merely replace others who are presently on the squad. Despite those obstacles, Mr. Rufer expressed genuine optimism for this season and commented that this year's team was "a positive improvement over last years." Coach Rufer made it quite clear to this reporter that on a given night he feels we are good enough to beat any team on our schedule.

The Cats hope to add offensive punch to this year's squad with five veterans in the first two lines.

The first line will consist of Paul Barrett of Greenfield, Mass., Ozro Swett of Sixfield, Maine and Captain Marshall Stevenson of Potsdam, N.Y. Stevenson was the top scorer on the Vermont squad last year.

On the second forward line will be veterans Henry Uihlein of Milwaukee, Wis. and Paul Dorsey of Belmont, Mass., along with newcomer Bill Mosenthal of Norwich, Vt.

Three veterans lead the defensive ranks Tony Rishe of Potsdam, N.Y., Bob Snyder of Glenview, Ill., and Tim Twomey of Lynn, Mass.; are the standards.

Twomey will also play forward and will join Orlin Svenson of Worcester, Mass., and Eben Clark of Dover, Mass., to form a third line.

Other defensemen will be Jim Klode of Milwaukee, Wis., and Claude Laperle of Barre, Vt.

In the nets for the second year will be sophomore goalie Bob Sausville of South Orange, N.J. He will be backed up by Clark Burrows of Crown Point, N.Y.

Vermont's home opener is Dec. 12, against New Hampshire in the Gutterson Field House.

FULL SCHEDULE

Nine home games, including the Yankee Conference Hockey Tournament, highlight a 16-game schedule for the University of Vermont hockey team for the 1964-65 season.

The Catamounts will be starting their second intercollegiate season after a 12-year layoff. Last year the predominately freshmen team, under the coaching of Bill Rufer, surprised with a 5-3-2 record. All three losses were to Yankee Conference champion New Hampshire.

The Catamounts face a much tougher schedule this season with the addition of Williams and state foes Middlebury and Norwich.

The opening game is set for Dec. 11 at Salem State while the home opener will be played the following evening against New Hampshire.

The schedule: Dec. 11, at Salem St.; 12, New Hampshire; 29-30, Yankee Conference Hockey Tournament at Burlington; Jan. 9, at Williams; 13 at MIT; 14, at AIC; 16, Connecticut; 23, Amherst; 30, Salem St.; Feb. 1, at Boston State; Feb. 10, at New Hampshire; 13, at Massachusetts; 17, Norwich; 19, Boston St.; 24 Middlebury.

Aquamen Debut Dec. 12

by Dick Frostig

The 1964 University of Vermont swimming team, which competed for the first time last year under the direction of Coach Les Leggett, will open their season December 12 against Plattsburgh. "Although this year's team will not set the world on fire," says Coach Leggett, "I expect that they should better last year's record of 3-4." Coach Leggett regards the following improvements as a base for predicting a better season: an increase in the number of meets, new strength and depth shown by the team, and many returning swimmers.

The year's varsity squad includes twelve sophomores and six returning lettermen: Trent Anderson, '66; Lynn Bicknell, '66; Dave Cheney, '66; Art Fornier, '65; Jim Nixon, '65; and led by Captain Jay Gloetznor, '65. Coach Leggett foresees some excellent performances from these men and a better showing in both relays, the 400 yard freestyle and the 400 yard medley.

Pete Fredericks, a sophomore, has shown some potential in the breast stroke early in the season. Pete Gross, also a sophomore, looks good for the individual medley or butterfly with Jay Gloetznor strong in just about every event. The influence of Lynn Bicknell, Tom Mills, Scott Davis and Dave Cheney is being felt significantly by the rest of the team.

Meets held at home will be open to spectators and the order of events in each meet include: 400 yard medley relay, 200 yard freestyle, 50 yard freestyle, 200 yard individual medley, Diving, 200 yard butterfly, 100 yard freestyle, 200 yard back stroke, 500 yard freestyle, 200 yard breast stroke and 400 yard freestyle relay.

ECAC Honors Rusty Brink

The University of Vermont's outstanding junior center, Rusty Brink, has been named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference's College Division North All-Star team for the 1964 season.

In addition to being named as the first team center, Brink was named as the top lineman on the All-Star squad. Brink made the ECAC team of the week three times this season and was nominated five times.

The captain-elect of the 1965 Catamount football team started reaping a harvest of post-season honors last week. Along with being named captain of next year's squad, Brink tied with George Oelze for leading defensive lineman on the Vermont squad after winning the award his sophomore year.

Of the first four all-opponent teams to be announced by Vermont's rivals, Brink has made three. He was honored by Massachusetts, Middlebury and AIC.

Brink was also named the outstanding collegiate player in Vermont as well as making the All-State team for the second straight year.

Another top honor received by Brink was being named first team center on the UPI Major College All New England team.

Fuzzy To Depend On Higgs And Goggans

Layne Higgs, junior hoopster from Barre, appears to be one of Coach Evans big guns this season. (Credit: H.B. Eldred, Audio-Visual)

The University of Vermont opens its 51st season of intercollegiate basketball, 23rd under John (Fuzzy) Evans, by traveling to Hanover, N.H., on Tuesday (Dec. 1) to face the Big Green of Dartmouth.

Evans has seven lettermen on hand from last season's squad that was 11-10, and included an 80-73 overtime decision over Dartmouth.

Height -- the lack of it -- is again one of the chief problems facing Evans as he faces a 20-game schedule that will find Vermont on the road for 12 of the contests. Most of the height Vermont will see this season will be in the uniform of the opposition. Tallest Catamount is Russ Boardman, a 6-5 sophomore from Mattapoisett, Mass.

Lettermen on hand are seniors Capt. Ralph D'Altillia, Union City, N.J.; Carl Frattini, Barre and Joe Gannon of Burlington, and juniors Milt Goggans, Hoboken, N.J.; Layne Higgs, Barre; Mike Karel, Yonkers, N.Y., and Ken Spalter, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Goggans stands 6-4 and last winter as a sophomore ranked 26th in the nation in rebounds. He was also third in scoring with a 13.9 per game norm. D'Altillia, averaged 14.1 points last year while Higgs chipped in with 13.5. Graduation took the leading scorer, Dave Strassburg who averaged 16.7.

Sophomores on this year's team are George Abbott of Hartford; Bruce Hanna of Union City, N.Y.; Tim Hayes of New York City; Don Longley of Burlington and Bill Schmidt of Palisade, N.J. Schmidt is suffering from a leg injury and will miss the Dartmouth encounter. Also on the squad is senior John Bossi of Montpelier.

Evans will probably have two seniors, two juniors and a sophomore in the starting lineup against the Big Green. Capt. Ralph D'Altillia and Joe Gannon are the two seniors who figure to start while the juniors are Milt Goggans and Layne Higgs. Sophomore Bruce Hanna appears to be the other starter. D'Altillia, Goggans and Higgs are scored in double figures last year.

Dartmouth coach Alvin (Doggie) Julian may carry as many as 10 sophomores on his squad this winter and several figure to start. Most likely would appear to be Jack Lockhart and Gunnar Malm, both 6-7. Julian also has his top scorer from last year, Dave Blaine, back. Blaine averaged 13.4 points a game.

Vermont turned back Dartmouth in overtime last year, 80-73.

The freshman squads of the two schools tangle at 6:30.

On Friday and Saturday, Vermont travels to Maine while the freshmen, under Ralph Lapointe, play at Middlebury on Saturday.

The frosh swimmers entertain Dartmouth on Friday afternoon.

Krassner Speaks His Mind In "Realist"-ic Style

by Robin Schore

Last week, Scope and the University of Vermont was host to that master of filth mongery and verbal degeneracy Paul Krassner, boy Realist. Krassner spoke for a good long time breaking all kinds of taboos and exposing America for a land where attention is given to all the wrong things-misplaced indignance. His lecture was entitled "Truth is Silly Putty" which set the tone for a most delightful lecture in the tradition of Lenny Bruce-obscenity law defier.

Krassner, a husky 5'4", began his incoherence by dropping out of college a short time before graduation. He started his "literary" career as an ideaman for Mad magazine. When Mad wouldn't publish his adult creations he started The Realist eventually supporting himself as a contributing editor for Playboy. When asked how much money he made from his moral selling-out to Playboy, he calmly answered "none of your  business." Krassner thinks that "America is insane." "It is a land of callousness and pretentiousness where we go nuts by not going nuts." "Instead of attacking the real evils, we attack symbols e.g. communism, a symbol of all that is bad.

His lecture ran from reading advertisements for artificial vaginas to displaying his famous " Communism" sign. When he was attacked on his disgustingness, he answered "filth flows from the eyes of the beholder."

Our good old University of Vermont audience really enjoyed the lecture learning many new words and remembering many old ones. Several people became indignant at Krassner's language and were countered by Krassner's sincere and basically idealistic defense. The conclusion reached from the talk was that Krassner was fighting for us the battle against hypocrisy and ignorance in spite of us.

There are objections to Krassner's speech as being too much like a Crusade or, on the opposite tack, being too much like a nightclub routine. Whatever the opinion, no one walked out revolted and offended. The next step the school to take is obviously to sell The Realist at the Book Store.

New Pinafore Bows On Saturday Night

by Betty Miller

Tyrone Guthrie's provocative new production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H. M. S. Pinafore" will be presented in Memorial Auditorium on Saturday night, Dec. 12, as the last of this season's Red Lane Concerts.

Featuring the Stratford Festival Company, this critically acclaimed production was called by the London critics "a rip-roaring new look at Gilbert and Sullivan" and one "that made a shambles of creaking tradition."

Mr. Guthrie's production of "H. M. S. Pinafore" disregards the old, staid traditions and styles of performance and presents the style and wit of Gilbert and Sullivan in terms of the modern musical theater.

Playing major roles in the Stratford Festival Company are Stephanie Augustine as Josephine, the Captain's daughter; William Greene as Ralph Rackstraw; Michael Bates as the lordly Sir Joseph; Graham Laver as the Captain of the Pinafore; Irene Byatt as Buttercup; and Howard Mawson as Dick Dead- Eye. Louis Applebaum is the musical director of the production. The sixteen piece orchestra is under the lively baton of Josef Stopak.

It was during the 1960 season of the Stratford Festival of Canada that Tyrone Guthrie assembled the sparkling cast of the Stratford Festival Company for the initial production of "H. M. S. Pinafore." The hit of the season, the company toured for a run in New York and then London. In London, that citadel of Gilbert and Sullivan memories and mores, the company received such great acclaim that the originally planned run of fifteen weeks was extended to a year.

It is no small coincidence that the three major architects of this production of "H. M. S. Pinafore" — William Gilbert, Arthur Sullivan, and Tyrone Guthrie — were granted knighthood by their respective queens. Queen Victoria, who knighted Gilbert & Sullivan, and Victoria's great, great grand-daughter, Queen Elizabeth, who knighted Dr. Guthrie, were recognizing the enormous contributions made to the theater by these men.

Tyrone Guthrie has devoted almost four decades of his life to the theater. From 1933, when he became producer and then administrator of the celebrated Old Vic/Sadler's Wells in London, not a year has passed without a Guthrie creation being staged somewhere in the world. The Metropolitan Opera, the Edinburgh Festival, the Phoenix Theater, and Broadway ("The Matchmaker," "Gideon," "The Tenth Man," etc.) have all felt the imaginative Guthrie touch. It was during his spectacular tenure as artistic director of the Stratford Festival of Canada that he staged the fresh and provocative productions of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Pirates," presented in Burlington on 1961, and "H. M. S. Pinafore."

The New York Times critic, Jack Gould, has described this production of the "Pinafore" as "A gay and impish joy... And what sparkle! A faultless performance... hilarious and charming." It is hoped that Robert Coleman's advice in the New York Times will be taken and Guthrie's production of "H. M. S. Pinafore" will be put on your "Don't Miss List."

EDITORIAL...

DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP!

Doubtless for many students the rapidity and pressure of this semester has proved seemingly disastrous. With the receipt of two or three warnings and the imminence of final exams, the picture may indeed appear bleak.

For those of you who are tempted to throw in the towel in weak submission to what seems a predestined fate, we are taking this opportunity to offer sage counsel.

Don't give up the ship! An all-out effort toward studying for final exams may well turn out to be your saving grace, changing that precarious D to a solid C. Besides, final exams are generally less difficult than hour exams. Hence, your chances of improving your final grades are increased considerably.

Rumors have reached our ears that various students have spontaneously and suddenly quit school, and even much worse. These are exaggerations, we are certain; nevertheless, they are indicative of a general air of uneasiness and frustration on campus.

Granted, racing through this semester may have been a bit arduous at times. But in all seriousness, it really hasn't been that unbearable.

In the final analysis, don't sell yourselves short. Don't panic. And, by the way, . . . GOOD LUCK.

1965 KAKE WALK POSTER RULES

The rules for the Poster Contest of the Sixty-Eighth Annual Kake Walk are as follows:

Posters are to conform to the measurements of 14 inches wide and 22 inches long. They are to consist of no more than three colors, and in this case black white are considered colors. They must be original and be constructed so as to leave adequate space for pertinent information such as where Kake Walk is held and at what time.

Posters must contain the words "68 (either written or in numerals), Kake Walk, University of Vermont."

Posters will not be accepted with personal or fraternity names or initials anywhere on the poster. The name and address of the artist should be attached on a separate piece of paper.

The poster contest is open to individuals representing fraternities or sororities as well as all members of the university. An individual may submit as many entries as desired. The posters will be judged on their artistic merit and ingenuity.

All entries are to be wrapped and submitted to the Kake Walk Office in Billings Center, and slid under the door. The deadline for submitting posters is December 22, 1964 at 5:00 P.M. No posters will be accepted after that time.

THE KAKE WALK DIRECTORS

Vermont Conference Topic:

CHEMISTRY AND ETHICS

Vermont Conference is fast becoming an established institution at the University of Vermont. Since its first appearance about ten years ago, it has continued to grow and is now one of the most controversial and stimulating highlights of the academic year.

Vermont Conference is a three-day conference to which noted authorities are invited to speak on a common topic and consists of formal speeches followed by panel discussions in which the students are invited to participate. The speakers are available for informal speeches and dinners at fraternities, sororities, clubs, etc. Invitations from any sources will be welcomed.

The topic for the conference is chosen by a planning committee composed of students and faculty advisors. As stated by Dan Newcomb, chairman of the VC Committee, the committee tries to "aim at a topic broad enough to encompass the entire university." The committee has four areas of concentration; the treasury, the secretarial branch that takes care of correspondence and recording, a public relations committee, and an arrangements committee. Students interested in learning more about VC are welcome to attend the meetings at Billings or to leave their names at Billings and a member of the committee will contact them.

The topic chosen for VC usually concerns an issue that would otherwise not be encountered by the student in his formal academic pursuits. The most recent success of Vermont Conference was last year's "Pride and Prejudice," a discussion of Civil Rights with such noted speakers as Louis Lomax and James Farmer. The topic of this year's conference, to be held in March, is concerned with the soon-to-be-shattered myth of man's ability to chemically create human life, and the implications of this ability in all its moral and social contents.

Vermont Conference is an ongoing institution, planned by the students, for the students, and supported by the students. It's interesting and informative; one can find this out by becoming a part of it.

ROTC Revised

To the Editor:

Would you be willing in the next issue of "The CYNIC" to publicize the following action of the Board of Trustees and the University Council so that there will be no misunderstanding regarding the change in status of Military Science.

The Board of Trustees have concurred with the recommendation that basic Military Science shall become elective and that this action goes into effect as of September 1965.

All freshman and sophomore students who are currently enrolled and attending the University must successfully complete the year of Military Science in which they are now or have been enrolled.

For the Class of 1968, the present freshmen, the second year of basic Military Science will be elective.

There will be further explanation of the manner in which advanced Military Science may be selected and of the scholarship features that will be available under the new four-year course, but the above should be thoroughly understood by all present freshman and sophomore men.

Round Of Applause For Players

by Betty Fuchs

Everyone connected with last week's production of "South Pacific" deserves at least one more round of applause. Opening night performances indicated that the play could have been a total sell-out for many more than the four nights it ran. From the first notes of the overture to the last curtain call, the audience was in perfect harmony with the players, sharing their fun and sorrows, even singing along to the well-known score.

No one could have been disappointed by the quality of the performances. Skitcs who knew that the leading man, Michael Woodward, had been suffering from laryngitis, were pleasantly surprised to hear him in good voice. The combination of Jean Connor and Errol Selsby as Nellie Forbush and Luther Billis was unbeatable and made the "Honeybun" scene a show-stopper. The secondary leads were well cast, too, with Bill Bosworth and Esther Sundell more than competent in their roles.

In a successful play it is hard to pick out any one scene that is better than the rest, for they are all of good quality. Personal favorites were the production numbers in which there were many people on stage, for example the Sea Bees' "There is Nothing Like a Dame," "I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy" by Nellie and the other nurses, and, of course, "Honeybun." The music and dancing put the finishing touches on the professionalism of the performances. Except for minor first night problems with scenery changes the play ran smoothly from its greatly appreciated prompt curtain to its finale.

To Director Edward J. Feidner, Musical Director Frank Lidral, Conductor James Keene and his orchestra, to the entire cast and all the crews, once again congratulations on an excellent presentation.

From Alum, With Thanks

To the Editor:

My faithful clipping service — my mother — has forwarded for my reading and pleasure, Sanford Plotkin's recent CYNIC article on the Lane Series. Every year the CYNIC remembers the role that I played in conceiving and launching the culture series and every year I am most appreciative for the continuing recognition. It obviously pays to have a seminal idea — and to work hard.

Once the reluctance of the administration was overcome, the first year's program was indeed an instant hit. Tickets for the full season were sold out two and one-half hours after they were placed on sale when the students returned to campus that September of '51. Today my parents, who still live in Burlington, see more theatre and ballet and drama than I do — and I live in mid-Manhattan, heartland of Culture U.S.A. Jack Trevithick is a wonderful man, and UVM and Burlington owe him much for his mighty and continuing efforts on their behalf. (Of course he enjoys the Lane Series events too.)

Permit me, in closing, to correct a slight error in Mr. Plotkin's article. Charles Laughton and Norman Thomas were not on the first series program. Charles Colburn was scheduled to appear; we got instead that refugee from Wales' heron-priested shores, Mr. Dylan Thomas. Thomas so enjoyed Burlington and UVM that he later returned without fee to visit new friends. The political figure the first year was Max Lerner, of Brandeis and the New York Post. The Series' very first event was Pearl Primus and her Dancers. I understand from Burlington friends that her beat can still be heard throughout the city. The evening, a cool October Saturday in 1951, was indeed unforgettable.

Sincerely,

Jerome B. Agel, UVM '52

Coeds In NYC

UVM was represented in New York on Saturday, Nov. 14th, at the Annual Career Conference staged by the ADVERTISING WOMEN OF NEW YORK by Fran Brickmen, Kathryn L. Warner, Audrie Scofield and Barbara M. Epstein. On a sunny day when football, shopping, or a city holiday might well have dissuaded them, they listened, asked questions and learned along with more than 300 young women like them, representing 65 Eastern colleges and universities, at the eighth yearly event of its kind. The day-long Conference, held at New York's Hotel Commodore, aims to help a student find the most suitable career niche, seeks the best young talent for the advertising field.

After early morning registration, the young women heard a panel of AWWNY experts take them through the major marketing and advertising steps in the introduction of a new product.

After the "product launching" session, the students were told of the training, background, qualifications or experience necessary for each of the areas that contributed to the product introduction.

After luncheon the students attended individual counseling sessions conducted by members of AWWNY, acting as advisors.

Providing power for every environment...

provides challenge for virtually every technical talent at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

Being a technically trained man... we assume you are looking ahead to a career of exciting growth and accomplishment and that you are looking for a company possessing these same qualities.

If our assumption is correct, we would like you to take a close look at us. For this Company, while solving the problems of the day, thrives on a sort of creative restlessness which anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. And more important to you, it recognizes its engineers and scientists as the master key to its present success and future progress.

From a solid foundation of basic and applied research, our Company has gained a firm foothold in the land, sea, air, and space programs that are helping to shape our nation's future. Our engineers and scientists are exploring ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment. Should you join them, you'll be assigned early responsibility... to apply your engineering talents to such areas as advanced gas turbines... rocket engines... fuel cells and nuclear power.

Such trail-blazing projects command the best of varied talent. That's why you'll find at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft men with college training as diverse as their responsibilities. You will also find that opportunities for professional growth are further enhanced by our corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

For further information concerning a career with Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, consult your college placement officer—or—write to Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford 8, Connecticut.

Letters To The Editor

Subject-Sceptic

To the Editor:

The frivol that flows from The Sceptic's pen is exceeded only by his inability to cope with the English language properly. If this column (November 13, 1964) is any indication, the University of Vermont rates much lower than any "third-rate institution" in the land.

The Vermont Cynic should be the voice of the student body. As a former member of that body (Class of 1940), I'd hate to think that UVM has sunk so low that The Sceptic has become its mouthpiece. I'm sure it has not!

I do not believe in censorship of a college newspaper by the administration. Neither do I believe that any self-respecting student body could swallow the tripe now being printed weekly in The Vermont CYNIC without gagging.

One would think that the various class honor societies, along with the interfraternity and intersorority councils, would be able to speak loudly for the student body in a common desire for more university news and less bile in The Vermont CYNIC columns.

Sincerely yours,
Charles W. Utter, UVM '40

THE SCEPTIC

By Robin Schore and Miles Wortman

Chameleon Charlie Bibble recently graduated from college. He had come to the university as a freshman with no talents and rather minimal school training. He was leaving much the same way he came in. I said he had no talents, but I must confess an unintentional lie was made. Chameleon Charlie had none of the commonly recognized talents but his nickname shows that there was something very special about him. It wasn't that he could change colors which gave him his name (though he did turn bright red when called upon in class) but he had another, more fantastic trait of the Old World reptile. The African chameleon can pick off an insect almost a foot away with its long sticky tongue. Chameleon Charlie had a tongue which extended four feet in any direction. This provided him with invaluable assistance in page turning, fly swatting, ice cream cone eating and long range kissing.

So Charlie went through school as a great novelty at fraternity parties, the freshman varieties show and any restaurant he picked to eat at. However Charlie was also a serious student and never let tongue-lashing get in the way of the schooling which was going to prepare him for a mature and well rounded existence in the modern world. Unfortunately, he had trouble in his courses. He was smarter than most of the students and many of the teachers and they bored and dismayed him. Eventually he stopped, handing in work on time and even cut out going to classes. He just sat in the student center sadly licking his ears.

Charlie's behavior was upsetting to all but his best friends. The university administration was sorry they had ever admitted him. They claimed that the university did not cater to students whose oral appendages were over 1/2 feet in length and that unless Charlie was more discreet, he would have to leave, indefinitely. Moreover, they recommended that he go to the infirmary for a tongue-ectomy which idea Charlie quickly rejected and he promised to be more careful in his public appearance.

Poor Chameleon Charlie, he didn't like school and it didn't like him. It looked like he was headed for the world of flunk-outs and a blue collar job in a time that requires a degree for success. But imminent tragedy was averted because one day Charlie met a girl. She was a wonderful little creature who had faith in the potential of Chameleon Charlie. She knew he would do great things with his mind and all he had to do was get the most out of college and the world would open its arms to him and welcome him as a messiah of sorts.

Encouraged, Charlie went to classes, wrote brilliant papers, made dean's list and graduated with honors. He rolled his tongue up into the mouth and set out into the world with the confidence of a man who knows he has gotten the most out of college. He wrote me a letter a while ago and said he was working for a reputable firm and living happily with that wonderful girl from school who knew he could make it.

Our story doesn't end here but several months later when I was at the side show of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus. Who should I see there on one of the platforms but old Chameleon Charlie Bibble surrounded by dozens of awe-struck spectators. There he was flicking pieces of bubble gum out of his wife's hand four feet away. I went back stage after the act to see Charlie and find out what happened. He told me that he was sitting in his office one day when . . . well, mere slip of the tongue. That's why he's now in show biz together with a parttime job at the university where he licks institutional seals and slaps them on diplomas, twenty of them per minute.

I didn't see Charlie again for quite some time, but the other day I ran into his wife and since we used to be pretty good friends I asked her why she had stuck with him after all her hopes for him hadn't materialized.

"Well," she said, "maybe he won't become all the things I'd hoped he'd be, but he sure can kiss."

Chorus Scores In Yule Concert

by Judy Beeber

Last Sunday, Dec. 6th, both UVM students and Burlington families served as spectators for the brilliantly executed Christmas Choral Concert given by the University Choir and Girl's Chorus. Much credit goes to director Francis Meinrich who spent a great deal of time in preparing this recital. A total of twenty four songs were sung including Christmas Carols, ballads and hymns. The Ira Allen Chapel reverberated with famous Christmas songs such as "The Little Drummer Boy," "What Child is This," "The Wise Men" and many others. Maryann Larson, Barbara Pack, Ruth Wilson, Laureen Countermarsh, William Besworth, Margaret Strait, David Bishop, Michael Woodward and George Bedell served as soloists at various times in the performance. Both the University Choir consisting of fifty students and the Girl's Chorus consisting of eighteen girls did a wonderful job.

The heavy snowstorm outside did not deter music lovers from attending the recital. Approximately one hundred and fifty people filled the Chapel to hear the concert.

Mr. Francis Weinrich, director of the UVM Choir and Chorus expressed his desire to see more males showing interest in the Choir. He mentioned that men with even a nominal amount of musical background are welcome to try out for the many singing groups.

"We Three Kings of Orient Are"

Alumnus Famed For Carol

by Robin Frost

For the first article in a series of short articles dealing with UVM traditions and history, a tale appropriate for the season has been chosen.

One of the little-known names in the list of UVM graduates is that of Reverend Doctor John Henry Hopkins, Jr., who graduated in 1839. One of the results of his labors, however, is very well-known; for Dr. Hopkins composed the Christmas carol "We Three Kings of Orient Are." Carol-writing had a late start in this country, due to the early Puritans who disapproved of Music other than that used in religious services. In the 1850's Dr. Hopkins wrote both the words and music for "We Three Kings," which was one of the first carols composed in the United States. It was published with many other well-known songs in "Book of Carols, Hymns, and Songs," released in 1860.

Members of a family which made contributions to the fields of music and theology, five of Dr. Hopkins' eight brothers also graduated from UVM, going on to make minor names for themselves in their respective fields.

As the Christmas season approaches, UVM can feel as though it has played a part in building its traditions; for Dr. Hopkins' "We Three Kings" has certainly become a part of that tradition.

LESSON IN MISSISSIPPI

There is a modestly promising note to be gleaned from an Associated Press account of the arraignment of 20 men in Mississippi suspected of involvement in the murder of three Civil Rights workers last summer.

The AP story notes that two of the 20 shielded their faces from press cameras during their arraignment, suggesting that at least two of those suspected of being involved may be presumed to be ashamed of being identified as suspects in the case. That is a hopeful sign for Mississippi.

Ultimately, law and order anywhere in a free society must rest on the integrity and dignity of each of us as individuals. We are only free, in short, by mutual consent.

It is easy to see how sorely a crime of the Mississippi nature erodes our integrity, individually and nationally. It is not always so well understood that individual disregard of laws, rules and regulations governing actions with lesser immediate consequences also subtly erodes our individual and collective integrity.

WHO'S PERFECT?

It is true that not all regulations, rules, laws are wise and fair; or that all remain so with passage of time.

But excesses like the Mississippi case remind us that it is costly for all of us when any one of us violates a regulation or rule or law simply because we find it distasteful, inconvenient or otherwise personally unsatisfactory.

It is true that the processes which provide us with an opportunity to change laws we do not like or which we believe to be unfair or unwise are long, complex and generally impersonal. They do not often give much vent to emotional involvement.

But they are consistent with the philosophy which holds that governments which govern by the consent of the governed are the best that man has yet devised.

The Mississippi case may serve to remind all who are reasonable that individual or collective contempt of the law, whether its immediate consequences are major or minor, is alien to and destructive of individual freedom.

Intramurals Led By The Psi Boys

by Bob Bloomenthal

The fall semester intramural program entered its final week with the all-campus basketball championships and the handball singles champion still undecided at press time. The following titles have already been decided:

BASKETBALL - Phi Mu Delta ended the domination of the larger houses in fraternity team competition by defeating Delta Psi, 42-22, for the fraternity championship. The Leftovers turned back the Chargers for the independent championship.

HANDBALL SINGLES - The handball single tournament has reached its final round with Paul Dorsey (SAE) slated to face Art Heistein for the championship.

BOWLING - Delta Psi edged Sigma Alpha Epsilon for the title by a 3 to 2 margin. Delta Psi lost two of the three match strings, but won by gaining two points for a greater total pinfall.

All-Sports Trophy Point Standings

(does not include basketball or handball singles)

1. Delta Psi - 297
2. Sigma Phi Epsilon - 243.3
3. Sigma Alpha Epsilon - 228.3
4. Sigma Nu - 197
5. Tau Epsilon Phi - 167.3
6. Sigma Phi - 147.5
7. Alpha Epsilon Pi - 143.3
8. Alpha Tau Omega - 132.3
9. Phi Sigma Delta - 111.8
10. Phi Sigma Delta - 111

Mr. Norm Strassburg, head of UVM's intramural program, also wishes to remind the students that entries for the indoor relays, the indoor track and field meet, and the paddleball doubles tournament will be open at the start of the second semester.

Debaters Set Fast Pace

The University's debate team won 15 out of 21 debates in three separate tournaments this past weekend.

Norman Snow a junior from Burlington and Carmen Wessner a senior from Manchester compiled an undefeated record at the University of Pittsburgh Cross-examination Debate Tournament. The team scored their 5 victories by upholding the affirmative of the national intercollegiate debate proposition: Resolved, that the federal government should establish a national program of public work. Snow and Wessner met and defeated Oneonta State University, Fairmont State College, Ohio Wesleyan University, Dayton University, and St. Vincent College.

Dr. Robert B. Huber, Chairman of the Speech Department took four debaters to the New York University Hall of Fame Debate Tournament where they compiled a 7-3 victory record. Sharon Call a senior from Springfield and Henry Wellman a sophomore from Brattleboro won 4 out of 5 affirmative debates, defeating Wilkes College, the University of Pennsylvania, City College of New York and Seton Hall University. Their sole loss was to Niagara University.

The negative unit of Craig Nelson a junior from Greenville, Me., and Barry Messinger a senior from New York City won 3 out of 5 debates. The team defeated Brooklyn College, Rutgers University and Wagner College, while losing to C.W. Post College and La Salle College.

Varsity Action During Recess

The University of Vermont's basketball and hockey teams will be very active during the winter recess both at home and away.

The basketball squad, which is presently 0-3 on the season, will be looking for their first victory this Friday evening at 8:00 against New Hampshire. On Jan. 8 and 9, they play away at Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively. The Catamount five will be at Middlebury on Jan. 18 and they will return home to play Norwich on the 20th of Jan. All games will begin at 8:00 P.M.

The Varsity Hockey team will participate in the Yankee Conference Tourney at home on Dec. 29 and 30. The pucksters will play Williams on Jan. 9, M.I.T. on Jan. 13, and against A.I.C. on Jan. 14. These three hockey games will be played on rival ice. January 16, the Cats will make their 1965 debut on home ice as they play Connecticut in a Yankee Conference contest.

The freshman squads (basketball and hockey) will spend the recess at home. Both will be in action on January 20th at home.

Miss America steps out on campus in the high-stepping Oldsmobile 442

If you can tear your eyes off pretty Vonda Kay Van Dyke for a moment, we'd like to tell you about the car: Oldsmobile's new 4-4-2. Earns its name from a 400-cu.-in., 345-bhp V-8... 4-barrel carb... and twin pipes. Red-line tires, heavy-duty suspension, three transmission availabilities liven up the package—no matter which F-85 V-8 coupe or convertible you pick for your 4-4-2 action! But the real clincher is price: 4-4-2 prices start lower than any other high-performance car in America designed for everyday driving! Vonda, by the way, is not included. LANE CHAMBER ARTS CONCERTS

Sabicas Performs Here

By Betty Miller

Sabicas, the great flamenco guitarist, will perform on Saturday, Feb. 6, at 8:30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel, as the first of this season's Lane Chamber Arts Concerts.

As the king of the Spanish guitar, Sabicas is a prime example of a musical phenomenon -- a natural artist, a master of his instrument, a man who became the world's foremost flamenco guitarist. Sabicas' only teachers are an ear with perfect pitch, an amazingly retentive mind, an innate rhythmic sense, the age-old traditions of his people, and a God given talent. For Sabicas is a Spanish gypsy and to the gypsy this spirit of music comes as naturally as eating or breathing.

Sabicas grew up in his native Andalusia among the music, dance, and colorful ways of his people, the Gitanos, as they are called in Spain. When he was five years old, Sabicas received his only lesson from an uncle who knew only two guitar chords. The boy played these two chords and soon began to learn more on his own. As a self-taught musician, Sabicas was able to retain that natural spark of the Gypsy, the fire and the exotic blending of beauty and savagery that is true of flamenco.

In concert, the flamenco guitar ceases to be an instrument of wood and gut. It now becomes an extension of the soul of the performer. Sabicas clasps it first gently like a beautiful woman, then suddenly strikes a thunderous roll in the bass which resolves to a dulcet tremolo. We hear chords of wild intervals punctuated by a nervous rhythmic tapping of the fingers against the sound board. His music is speaking to us telling of life's joys and sorrows as only the Spanish Gypsy can.

To attend this exciting concert by Sabicas, tickets may be obtained in 54 Wat. or at the Chapel the night of the performance. At that time, one may witness for himself what a critic in the New York Times has called "guitar playing of the very highest order."

CONCESSION BIDS

KAKE WALK KORNER

The Kake Walk Directors announce that concession bids for coat checking and selling programs are now being accepted by the Directors.

1. Coat concession - Those bidding for the coat checking concession must agree to use at least six people the night of the ball and both nights of the Walking. The maximum charge for coat checking will be 25 cents per coat. The bid which any group submits will be the amount that they will pay the Committee for receiving the privilege to run the coat checking concession. The group should also keep in mind that they are responsible for the renting and transporting of the coat racks to and from the Patrick Gymnasium.

2. Program Concession - Those bidding for the program concession must have a staff of workers that can cover the gymnasium (minimum of 6). The programs will sell for 50 cents.

All bids should be sent to the Kake Walk Directors in a sealed envelope to Billings Center, no later than February 10, 1965.

Bidding will close at 5:00 P.M. Applicants whose bids are accepted will be notified at once.

SNOW SCULPTURES

1. No colors may appear anywhere on the sculpture.
2. Supports and frames may be used on the sculpture, but they must not be visible at the judging.
3. The work area about the sculpture must be cleaned up.
4. The only stipulation concerning size or design is that the sculpture be related to some aspect of the Kake Walk.
5. Judging will begin at 10:00 AM on Saturday, February 27, 1965, at which time all work is to have been completed. No member of the participating organization should interfere by any means with the process of judging. Any infraction of these rules will result in immediate disqualification by the judges.

The judging will be based on the following:

1. Workmanship
2. Over-all effect
3. Originality

Emphasis will be placed on workmanship.

New Arts College Posts Given London, McArthur

By Judy Beeber

Faculty members, Dr. Norman London, Dr. Herbert McArthur and Dr. Malcolm Severance have been promoted recently to administrative positions.

Dr. Herbert McArthur is a native of Atlanta, Ga., and holds a B.A., M.A. and a Ph.D. degree from Harvard. He is now an associate professor of English and has been teaching English in UVM since 1950. His present duty is to assist Dean George Kidder in the area of curriculum development.

Acting Pres. Rowell will recommend at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees that a position of associate dean of Arts and Sciences be created and that Prof. McArthur be named to fill this position.

Dr. Norman London received his B.A., M.A. and Ed.D. Degree from New York University and joined the Vermont faculty in 1960. He is an Assistant Professor of Speech and served as co-director of the University's debate program. He also is president of the New England Speech Association. Dr. London has recently been appointed Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences where his responsibility will be in the field

Photos credit: Austin, S.P.S. of orientation and the standing of students.

Dr. Malcolm Severance, a professor in the Economics Department, has been appointed Assistant Dean of the Administration. He will be director of what is called "institutional research", which involves planning for future educational programs at UVM.

Dean George Kidder of the College of Arts and Sciences and Professor Edwin Schneider, chairman of the Policy Committee, both commented that the new promotions will provide a greater opportunity for future research and educational planning in the university.

Music Piped Into Billings

By Carolyn Seigel

A sound system has been installed in the Billings Student Center as a result of the efforts of the Billings Center Governing Board. The Board members feel that a sound system such as this will permit them to program background music and listening music, and to have a general public address system in various areas of the building.

The sound system, which has a total of 23 speakers throughout Billings, has its master control behind the main counter in the lobby of the building. A door is to be put on this machine, so that an all-call cannot be used. Also, it will prevent students who do not have any knowledge of the workings of the system from coming behind the counter and tampering with the controls. Although the door will be installed, the master machine will still be able to contact anyone in the building.

Various types of music will be played in the building; there will be music programmed for certain hours during one day that are different from the next. Any requests for specific types of music should be sent into the Billings Center Governing Board, WRUV is one of the stations that will be brought in by a telephone line.

Besides music piped into the Catamount Den, the Marsh and North Lounges, several of the conference rooms, the lower lobby, and the Kake Walk-CYNIC office area, there are four listening rooms in the North Lounge which are available for student use at all times. Each room is sound-proof, and if students wish to bring in their own records to listen to, there are four new Garrard phonographs which have stereo needles. Unfortunately, the rooms are small, and there is only one speaker in each.

Evans To Step Down At End Of Season

John C. (Fuzzy) Evans, head basketball coach at the University since 1940, will step down at his own request at the conclusion of the 1964-65 season.

The "dean" of New England coaches, Evans asked to be relieved of all coaching responsibilities at the end of the current athletic year. He will continue to teach in the department of men's physical education.

Lyman S. Rowell, acting president of the University, said that he had received and accepted

Evans' request reluctantly, saying that the University has been "well satisfied with the fine record achieved by Evans as a coach, a teacher and leader."

He said the University "is deeply appreciative of the many years of devoted service he has given. With a minimum of scholarship help he has nonetheless carved an outstanding record while competing against some of the strongest teams in New England."

Now in his 23rd campaign (Vermont did not field teams for two years during World War II), Evans has coached more consecutive years at one school than any other active coach in New England, and only one other coach is now active in New England.

Band At Fair

The UVM Band has been honored with an invitation to appear at the Opening Day of the 1965 New York World's Fair. The Band will present two concerts during the afternoon of April 21st, at the Tiparillo Band Pavilion.

The Fair appearance will be the first day of the Band's Annual Spring Tour which is slated April 21st-23rd. The Band is now receiving invitations for appearances at high schools and colleges enroute north from New York City.

Auditions are being held to fill several instrumental vacancies. A full complement of seventy pieces is planned for the trip. The Band is directed by Dr. Frank Siekmann of the Music Department. Clifton Mellen is Student President; Eugene Childers is Vice President.

(A Letter to the Editor appears in this issue on this topic.)

Lane Series Celebrates Tenth Year

By Betty Miller

The Lane Series Committee is proud to announce the fifth successive season of the Chamber Arts Series, presenting this year, in honor of the Lane Series' Tenth Anniversary, performances by major artists of the world.

Appearing on February 6th, to launch the Chamber Arts Series, will be the flamenco guitarist, Sabicas. Described by the N.Y. Herald Tribune as "The most extraordinary purveyor of this music now appearing before the public," Sabicas has not only broadened the range of flamenco from folk to classic proportions, but has also retained the natural spark, the fire, the exotic blending of beauty and savagery that is real flamenco. This combination, so rare on the concert stage today, has made Sabicas a universal favorite and the true king of the Spanish guitar.

On February 19th, the New Israel Quartet will be presented as the first chamber quartet from Israel to visit America. In a program of standard and Israeli compositions, the New Israel Quartet offers a unique combination of the old and the new, drawing on their international past as much as on their national present.

Shirley Verrett, the sensational young mezzo soprano, will appear on March 4th as the third of the Chamber Arts Concerts. Catapulted to international fame by her spoleto performance as Carmen, Miss Verrett launched a series of musical triumphs for which there has been no precedent within recent memory. She created a sensation singing the "Habanera" for her solo recital at Philharmonic Hall where she revealed her ability to probe the inner beauty of the art song and Lied, which held both audience and critics spellbound. Miss Verrett has now taken her place among that rare group of artists to whom critics ascribe the quality of greatness.

For the last concert, the Lane Chamber Arts Series is featuring an accomplished actor who has appeared previously as a guest of the regular Red & Blue Lane

Series, Emlyn Williams' performance of Charles Dickens, which he will act on March 20, is considered a great theatrical experience of our time. One of the most distinguished actors and writers of the English-speaking theatre and perhaps the first to bring magic to a one-man show, Mr. Williams, alone on the stage, conjures up a gallery of remarkable Dickens characters of moods and emotions that no one who cares for the real glories of the theatre, the art of acting, and the wonder of Dickens will miss.

The acting of Emlyn Williams, together with the singing of Shirley Verrett, and the playing of the New Israel Quartet, and Sabicas, promise to make this season's Lane Chamber Arts Series the most exciting in Lane history. All concerts will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel and season tickets or single admissions will be sold in the Lane Office in 54 Wat. or at the door the night of the performance.

ROTC Cadet Brigade Holds Annual Sr. Class Banquet

By David Mansfield

At the annual Senior Class Banquet of the ROTC Cadet Brigade conducted at the Lincoln Inn, Herbert D. Safford, A&S, '65, was appointed Cadet Colonel and commander of the Brigade by Colonel Leonard G. Robinson, Professor of Military Science.

Cadet Safford, president of the Ethan Allen Rifles Honor Society and host for the Senior Class Banquet, is a Dean's List philosophy major, Distinguished Military Student, and recipient of two consecutive Department of the Army Superior Cadet Awards. He is married to the former Deborah, who is a member of the Class of '64. They have one daughter, Cadet Safford is employed by the sports department of Gaynes Shopper's World.

Command of the UVM Cadet Brigade is the highest honor which is bestowed upon a ROTC Cadet. Selection is based upon excellence in leadership, management, academics, and other traits demanded of commissioned officers of the Armed Forces. Essential to selection is outstanding performance during the pre-senior year Summer Camp at Fort Devens, Mass.

Sharing the spotlight with Cadet Colonel Safford were the following Cadet Lieutenant Colonels: Brigade Executive Officer C. B. Eaton; Battalion Commanders K. D. Bailey, D. D. McKnight, R. S. Severance, and T. S. Whittaker.

Cadet Majors and principal staff officers are: F. G. Boese, A. H. Garvin, W. S. Hall, R. M. Knight, D. Linderman, and R. Rodbart.

Senior Banquet guests were President Lyman S. Rowell, Deans P. R. Miller, and R. D. Patzer, and Professors H. C. McArthur and R. V. Milbank.

Speaker for the event was Professor James W. Peterson, Chairman of the Department of Commerce and Economics.

Professor Peterson returned to UVM last Fall after some 10 years as a Senior Operations Analyst with the Rand Corporation at the Pentagon. He holds a reserve commission as a Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Air Force and is a member of the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board.

Dr. Peterson spoke of the passing of traditional battle formations and weapons systems which results from the technological revolution occurring at the present time. Typical of the familiar military items singled out for comment was the tank, the ultimate passing of which was likened to the passing of the armored knight of the middle ages.

Board Appoints Dowe As Dean

The director of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station will become the dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, effective July 1, 1965. The appointment of Dr. Thomas W. Dowe was approved by the University's Board of Trustees in December.

Dr. Dowe, who is also serving as coordinator of research for the University this year while Howard Smith is on leave, will succeed Paul R. Miller who retires in June after more than 30 years of service at the University.

Boulder Elects Three Seniors

In recognition of their outstanding character and participation in campus activities, Boulder Society has elected three new Senior men to membership. Those inducted were Ralph D'Altilla, Skip Laufer, and Dan Newcomb.

All three men have very respectable scholastic averages while remaining active in many student activities.

Ralph D'Altilla, while he captains the basketball team, is also Vice-President of his class and contributed to the 67th Kake Walk as an assistant director. Skip Laufer has been elected President of his class since freshman year, serves as a dorm counselor, and was chairman of the recent Kake Walk Evaluation Committee. Dan Newcomb is Chief Justice of the Student Court and presently serves as Chairman of Vermont Conference. Both Ralph and Dan are in the advanced Army ROTC program.

The members of Boulder feel there are many senior men deserving of membership in the Society and that during the year these men should be considered. Membership should not be unduly restricted to the original members.

Ralph, Skip, and Dan join Dick Badger, Carl Frattini, Ira Fierstein, Steve Slack, Cal Walker, and Steve Watson to make a total of nine men on the Boulder Society.

Summer Theatre Opens At Saratoga Springs

An unusual opportunity for undergraduates to be in on the very beginning of a unique new theatre venture has been offered in an announcement by Skidmore College. Skidmore has announced its sponsorship of the newly organized Comedy Arts Theatre company, which will open its first summer season July 1 in the historic New York resort city of Saratoga Springs.

The new company, unlike most summer theatres, has been organized for a specific purpose. As expressed by its founders, the long range aim of the Comedy Arts Theatre is "to build a repertory company specializing in the performance of the many different styles of comedy." The group hopes to create a theatre worthy of the rest of the ambitious performing arts program that will be a feature of the summer season at Saratoga beginning in 1966. At that time a lavish new concert and ballet theatre will open at the Saratoga Spa State Park with the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York City Ballet in residence. By that time, the Comedy Arts Theatre will be in its second season, with the best people from the 1965 season brought back as part of its expanded resident company.

The resident company for this first year will be a small nucleus of experienced players who will carry the most difficult roles in the season of four comedies; all supporting roles will be cast from among the group of undergraduates participating in the summer program, all of whom will be eligible to try out for every play.

For the undergraduates, the Skidmore College Drama Department is offering a training program of three college-credit courses: Acting, Technical Theatre, and Rehearsal and Production. Registration will be limited to assure ample opportunities for all to participate in the program. Interested students are urged to write promptly to: Comedy Arts Theatre, Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, New York. Representatives will be attending the Yale Festival of Undergraduate Drama at the end of March to interview interested undergraduates.

New Post For Eycke

In other personnel actions, the Board named Carl O. Eycke, assistant dean of men, to serve also as acting director of financial aids, replacing H. Reed Saunders who has given up the post to take up full-time teaching duties as an instructor in the department of commerce and economics.

Trustees Bestow Mantle

The mantle of Director of Drama, worn informally for the past three and a half years by Edward J. Feidner, has been officially bestowed upon Feidner by the University of Vermont Board of Trustees.

In Addition, Feidner - who has been the guiding force behind dramatic activities at Vermont since 1961-62 - becomes technical advisor to the George Bishop Lane Artists Series which he also serves as a member of the working committee of students and staff.

EVALUATING THE FALL SEMESTER

We had eagerly awaited the academic statistics of this past semester. Admittedly, we are surprised by actual results; nevertheless, we must congratulate the student body for having fared so well.

153 students flunked out following the fall semester. Although this number is greater than the previous two semesters, it is, however, identical to the number of several years ago, when the enrollment was less.

The University average rose .35 of a point from the Fall 1963 overall of 76.22 to 76.57 for Fall 1964. The senior, junior and sophomore averages fell only slightly.

Probably the most encouraging sign, and indeed the most important criterion for evaluation, is the undeniable success of the freshman class. Continuing a four-year trend in elevating the freshman average, the Class of '68 earned a 74.50 overall as compared with the Class of '67's fall semester average of 73.58.

What conclusions, if any, can be drawn from these statistics in relation to the new semester schedule? The panic, which generated with the announcement of the new calendar seems to have affected upperclassmen the most; and perhaps it was panic without any basis. Surely, the adjustment to college forced upon freshmen was greater than the adjustment necessitated by upperclassmen to the new schedule.

Thus, from all outward signs, the new calendar seems to be justifiable and beneficial. But, contrary to the penchant of modern methodologists, we cannot judge by statistics alone. The consensus of the student body still maintains, as we do, that a full Thanksgiving vacation would be desirable, even at the cost of commencing the semester several days earlier, or beginning exams later.

In any event, we trust you all enjoyed the month's vacation, utilized it to best advantage, and now feel refreshed and energetic in beginning anew.

Letters To The Editor Musical Messenger

To the Editor:

I have in my possession a petition of a sort signed by what appears to be 41 students of the University who feel it necessary to castigate "the administrators of Billings Center" for "foisting" upon them a system of "wired entertainment" and demanding the return of the juke box. As chairman of the Billings Center Governing Board I feel it necessary to let the student body know the purpose and scope of the Center's new sound system.

In regard to the removal of the juke box I should like to state that its position in the Den has been a much discussed and investigated topic with the Board. After a number of petitions asking for the juke box's removal were received by us last year, it was decided that with the installation of our sound system the juke box would be removed, and that radio, taped and album music would be substituted coinciding with the desires of the student body.

Upon the installation of the sound system over the inter-semester break the juke box was removed. Unfortunately, not all the component parts of the sound system have as yet been installed, making it difficult, if not impossible to broadcast generally pleasing entertainment at this time. When the system is completed, and when the desk clerks become more able to master the system's controls, entertainment (i.e. music) conforming to the majority desires will be broadcast. These circumstances do not, however, preclude the re-evaluation of the juke box "problem" and the Board will take up the matter again if there is sufficient interest.

The only thing we of the Board are asking is for patience on the part of the student body, and that hasty opinions are not made as to the sound system's relative merit.

Very truly yours,

Barry William Messinger
Chairman of the Board

THE ADVENTURES OF BAMES JOND, O68, MASTER OF VIOLENCE, SEX, AND HONESTY

Bames Jond emerged from his duplex, split-level, urban apartment house and proceeded toward his automobile. Jond's quick reflexes noticed that he was being followed by a short, blonde female with a noticeable bulge in her sweater. He slowed his pace and, as the blonde passed him by, belted her. The girl was laid out, Jond knelt down, kissing the girl on her luscious red lips, "Tell SCAT they'll have to think up some better weapon than what you have behind that sweater of yours, honey." The girl sighed, SCAT (Society of Criminals, Arsonists and other Traitorous fellows), as everyone knows, is Jond's and CRATCH's (Confraternity of Researches Against Traitors and other Carnivorous Hedonistic Sadists) chief enemy. Jond must, at all times, be on the lookout for these deceitful villains, while, at the same time, keeping a cool indifferent air about him.

Jond entered his car (A super-horsepower, Gran Turismo, Volkswagon) and drove down the Interstate Parkway. Jond's VW looked like any automobile but was, in actuality, an arsenal on wheels. Every possible weapon that could be found was fitted into the cramped vehicle by CRATCH's ingenious scientists. Jond cruised down the Interstate, doing his customary 95 MPH's, when he noticed in his carefully hidden rear-view mirror a police car, apparently (as Jond's over-sensitive ears picked up) sounding his siren. The squad car pulled parallel with Jond and the trooper inside the car waved our hero over.

"That's no state cop," said Jond to the redhead who happened to be at his side. "State cops don't have crew-cuts and this one does." Jond coolly opened his glove compartment and pushed the button marked "GRENADE-LAUNCHER," sending a grenade up the trooper's tail-pipe.

"That'll fix the b-----," said O68, indifferently.

"Ah," said the redhead.

GREENTHUMB

Jond drove up to the Waterman Administration building at the world renowned University of Vermont, having received a call on his wrist-watch radio from R, head of CRATCH. He entered R's office, greeted by "Ooo's" and "Ahhh's" from R's secretaries.

"Something's come up," said R, "the notorious Greenthumb has been seen on campus and we think we know what he's up to."

Jond was noticeably disinterested.

"We think," said R, "he plans to blow up the IBM machine."

Jond stared at R. "I don't see the point," said O68.

"The IBM machine, man."

"So what?"

"Don't fool with me O68," said R. "The IBM machine controls us and you know it. It is the symbol of all-controlled society. If Greenthumb and his oriental buddies succeed in their plot, our whole society, as we know it, will be destroyed. The University will lose its control over its students and all of our faculty will leave. And Jond..."

"Yes."

"If you fail, you will be replaced by O70 and you know what that means."

Jond was disinterested. He got up to leave.

"...O68," said R.

"Yes."

"Be careful."

Jond smiled indifferently. He left the office and walked into the anteroom.

"Oh, Jond," said the pert, cute brunette secretary at the door.

"Yes."

"Is there any hope for me?"

Jond reached for the secretary and carried her over her desk into his arms. He kissed her passionately. Shivers went up and down the girl's spine. "No," he said indifferently, dropping her to the floor.

BANANA PEEL

O68 strolled indifferently into the Catamount Den and noticed the slinky, black-haired girl sitting in the corner. "You must be Banana Peel," said Jond.

"How did you know?" the girl replied startled.

"I know," said Jond confidently. He took her in his arms.

"Oh, Jond," said Banana. "You're wonderful."

"Tell me about Greenthumb," commanded the CRATCH agent.

"Follow me," she moaned, leading him into the woman's lavatory. She walked over to a cleverly concealed water faucet and turned it. Jond fell through a trap door into a hidden dungeon cell. He was indifferently.

"I'm sorry about it, Jond," said Banana, "but you're fooling with the wrong girl."

Jond sat in his dungeon cell, apparently trapped. Suddenly a door swung open and in walked Greenthumb, a large jovial, balding, overweight, and fiendish man. "Welcome Mr. Jond to my humble surroundings," he said.

"Your numbers up, Greenthumb," said Jond indifferently. "We know about your plot to blow up the IBM machine and it won't work. If I don't stop you, O70 will."

Greenthumb smiled. "Idle threats Mr. Jond. You know and I know there is no such person as O70. He is a figment of your imagination. A plaything, as it were. By the way, Mr. Jond, I'd like you to meet my faithful oriental bodyguard Fey-Bay-Tecappa." Greenthumb grinned. "You can't stop us Jond," he said. "we shall destroy that machine and let anarchy rule once more in the fertile state of Vermont. You see Mr. Jond, once that machine is destroyed my oriental friends can move in and marry your women."

Jond rushed Greenthumb, but Tecappa (the faithful Oriental bodyguard) intercepted him, throwing the agent of goodness across the room.

"My bodyguard," said Greenthumb, "is very strong. Don't fool with him Jond, he's Oriental. In thirty minutes, O68, you and that machine will be completely annihilated." The fiendish villain and his bodyguard left the cell quickly, leaving Jond alone.

THE ESCAPE

Jond searched feverishly for a way to escape. No windows, no air ducts. Just the solid five-hundred pound door, bolted from the outside. All of a sudden the door swung open and in rushed Banana Peel.

"Come with me," said the buxom girl. "I've decided I love you and will help you. She kissed him passionately.

Jond rushed passed her and headed for the IVM room in Waterman. There was just fifteen minutes remaining before Greenthumb was to blow up the all-important machine. 068 ran into the room and there, guarding the bomb, was the overly strong Tecappa, startled by Jond's appearance. Greenthumb's stooge threw Jond to the ground and ran to the door, closing it electronically and permanently. Just 068, Tecappa, the machine and the bomb. Tecappa started coming at Jond, there was nothing the godly agent could do. Then Jond's quick reflexes noticed the fire-axe on the wall. In one deft motion he reached for it and threw it at the oriental, slicing off the fiend's head.

Just five minutes remained. Jond walked indifferently over to the bomb. "Obviously a timing device," thought Jond aloud, "but how do you turn it off?" He searched feverishly while the clock ticked off the precious seconds.

.... Four minutes

.... Three minutes

.... Two minutes

Jond groped at the mass of wires. It seemed hopeless. Suddenly, there was a banging on the room's lone window. It was R, Jond's boss and master of the intellect. He was shouting something. The room being perfectly soundproof and Jond being nearsighted, the agent of virtue could not make out his boss's message.

.... One minute

.... Thirty seconds

.... Fifteen seconds

.... Ten seconds

Then Jond noticed his boss pointing at something. That was it! The plug. "Pull the plug," that's what R was shouting.

.... Five seconds

Jond strolled indifferently to the plug. He reached down for the cord, but, as he did, tripped over Tecappa's decapitated head. It was too late.

EPILOGUE

The tragedy that hit the society was irreparable. Jond, the hope of all, had screwed things up. R was forced out of his job and is now teaching Zoology at Waterbury State. His faith in a controlled society destroyed, he must be constantly watched.

Banana Peel, having lost her lover, suffered an emotional collapse, can now be seen at the "Carousel Club," in Dallas.

SCAT, the fiendish organization was fought by Banana Peel's father, Joe Bananas, went into a serious decline and its operations are now limited to the United States Air Force Academy.

CRATCH, the agent of goodness and virtue also went into a serious decline. Its function now is "Security Policemen" at Oregon State University.

The University of Vermont, having lost all its faculty and students was forced to merge with the University of California at Berkeley, and the chancellor at U. of C., Mario Savio, appointed the fiendish Greenthumb as director of UVM.

Medical Assistant Dean Named

Dr. Stanley L. Burns, assistant professor of medicine in the University's College of Medicine, was named by the Board as assistant dean of the medical college, to replace Dr. John H. Bryant who was granted a leave of absence, beginning Jan., 1965. Dr. Burns' appointment is half-time as assistant dean, half-time as assistant professor in the department of medicine. He will continue to carry on his practice of medicine.

Remedies Proposed

By Peter B. Covette

There has been a great deal of controversy attached to last semester's schedule. Student reaction ranged from apathy to despair, from enthusiasm to indignation.

Most of the adverse criticism came from the sophomores, juniors, and seniors who have had experience with the longer semester. Many students felt that they didn't have a chance to breathe from one hour exam and term paper until the next. A good number of students also thought many teachers unfair when they attempted to squeeze in extra hour exams in the last week of the semester before finals. The lack of a chance to return home for a vacation for four months also helped lower morale greatly on campus. Unfortunately many of these conditions combined in some cases to drive several students out of school who ordinarily might have remained in. The feeling of hopelessness was prevalent among many who happened to fall a little behind in their work.

On the other hand however, students recognized advantages to the new semester schedule. It provides a strong study environment for students up until finals. It is not easy to re-adjust to a strict study schedule after spending two weeks on Christmas vacation. This new semester also seems to stimulate many students academically. The high freshman average last semester attests to this. There are several improvements that could be made in next semester's schedule however. A week vacation during Thanksgiving is one alteration which students feel would prove especially advantageous with respect to morale. Most important of all is the need for a period of time in which the student may have a chance to adequately review for final examinations. Many schools which operate on a tri-semester basis have instituted a reading period which lasts one week from the end of the semester until the beginning of finals. Since there are many finals which count up to half the semester grade, there should be a chance for the student to prepare so that he may perform more closely to his true ability, rather than as the result of a heavy concentrated crammed review.

Re: Kake Walk Weekend 1965

The following action is reported as a result of a recent meeting of the Student Personnel Staff:

As a special exception to the regulations as printed and distributed as part of the University Date Book, the following provisions shall apply for the weekend of February 25 - 27, 1965.

The closing hours for approved social events may be extended to not later than 1:30 a.m. on nights of Thursday, February 24; Friday, February 25; and Saturday, February 26. The closing hours for all women's residence units for the evenings of February 25, 26, and 27 shall be 2:00 a.m.

Groups planning activities must submit their request forms no later than 5:00 p.m. Tuesday, February 16, 1965!

Other than the above exceptions, all regulations for social events and student conduct will be defined in "Privileges and Regulations for Students: 1964-1965."

Fraternity Row

Editor's note: Fraternity Row will appear weekly in the CYNIC as a regular column representing IFC. Contributing writers will be drawn from the various members of the University's fraternities.

This year the Interfraternity Council has made major studies in many directions. Its principal achievements have been its Greek Week Program; its revised rushing system, formulated in such a manner as to better acquaint the freshmen with the fraternity men and vice-versa; a membership reorganization in which responsibility has been clearly defined and a community service committee which has worked with charitable organizations in local areas.

Last year an extensive self-study program was initiated - devised so that the Fraternity system may take an accurate, empirical look at itself. The self-study will investigate all aspects of fraternity life, its relationship to the University Community, and the attitude of Greeks as compared with that of non-Greeks on many issues. The results of this self-study, which will be available in spring, will help not only the fraternity system here at Vermont, but also many fraternity systems throughout the country.

This year the membership for regular meetings has undergone a radical change. Rather than have a group of forty-eight representatives (chapter Presidents, senior and junior representatives), sixteen chapter Presidents represent their houses at the weekly meetings. This gives us a smaller and more functional group. A House Committee comprised of one representative per chapter meets on Mondays. This group constitutes the many committees necessary for a successful IFC.

One of the most common problems of any student organization is inexperienced leadership. With the new membership system, each house is permitted to nominate an underclassman for one of the three vice-presidential positions. The three vice-presidents have the responsibility of leading the House Committee. They conduct the meetings, supervise the committee work and week to coordinate the junior body with its senior counterpart. One of these three students will be chosen in the spring to lead the IFC. This assures the system of experienced leadership and continuity.

The IFC has constantly tried to keep in tempo with the times. This can only be done by the one-hundred percent co-operation of the sixteen chapters. This year has been marked by many improvements and closer co-operation and coordination both between the fraternities and the University Community. The leadership in the chapters has been outstanding and because of this the IFC will continue to move forward.

Who Needs Thoreau?

By Lynn Householder

Editor's note: Lynn Householder is the CYNIC's SA representative. Her column will consist of a running commentary on issues and events emanating from weekly SA meetings.

Our "restful" vacation seems to have lulled us into deeper apathy than ever. Where is that spirit of destructive criticism? Although negativist, it is a type of interest. There exists an organization to hear your and its own complaints, that is the Student Association. Name sounds familiar? Perhaps because they're both common words.

The S.A. is not a mock government, not a training-ground; in that traditional phrase, it is a line of communication to and from the students. Few individuals try to suggest specific changes to the administration and faculty; moreover, administrative bodies (bureaucracy) have an antipathy to other than organized, recognized groups.

S.A. controls most extracurricular activities because it distributes all the money available from the university for these plans. Clubs present in detail their yearly financial desires, and assorted groups seek, (usually with success), monetary backing for enterprises said to benefit the students. That money is your money; and although compared to our amazingly low tuition rates it is a mere trifle, it is a trifle whose use can be watched and influenced.

Homecoming was largely an S.A. project. Several elections were run, or at any rate attempted. Those class officers selected were told to do something or get out. The junior class, for example, has come up with the idea of a pop concert to spend S.A. money at S.A. risk. The library noise was investigated and discussed from all angles; the situation didn't change much, but the students didn't change much either. The honor system presently giving the Air Force Academy such notoriety was pondered both philosophically and practically. Signs ordered for Billings have finally been put up. Buttons were distributed somewhere for the football games. South Pacific was presented with an S.A. underwrite. Organizations elsewhere unheard of were recognized. Sunday library hours started earlier. Dining halls were opened for study during exams.

Representatives from the library, the campus store, and the President selection committee have come to inform, evade, and occasionally be needed. President Rowell spoke at this semester's first meeting; he described his job, future plans for the university, and methods of achieving them. He established the necessity of a reflecting pool, as well as the impracticality and non-necessity of a 3-3 system with three terms between September and June.

The possibility of a professor evaluation program ("aha!" was my comment), and the problems of this semester system have been under consideration. Next meeting, S.A. will urge the administration to move the first day of school in the fall from Friday to Wednesday and add two days to the Thanksgiving "vacation." This is the only possible change for next year unless someone shifts the holidays.

I shall reply to or elaborate on old or new complaints and ideas I hear; I might even creatively contribute my own.

You Think We Have It Rough ?

By Robin Frost

One hundred and fifty years ago the typical UVM student, let's call him David Breckenridge, awoke long before daylight in one of the forty-six student rooms in a four-story brick building located approximately where Old Mill is now. The building, called University Hall, was constructed in 1801 for $35,000 and for many years it housed the entire University, having rooms for students and classes alike. The college was supported solely by the $200 entrance fee and $12 tuition paid by its fifty students.

David dressed, remembering to put on the shoes which he was required to wear to classes with severe penalties if he did not comply with the rule, and went to compulsory morning prayers in the Chapel. The Chapel was described by a contemporary as being "so cold that I like to have froze. The room was full of smoke and if I should shut my eyes to keep it out I should go to sleep and tumble off my seat like a boppy."

After services came a sumptuous breakfast of "milk with bread, rice, Indian mush, or apply pie, or ripe fruits of the season, American cheese with bread (salt meat, salt fish, should never be tasted at breakfast - they lead to thirst, too much wine or strong drink before dinner)."

At six he attended a lecture on "Logick" presented by Dr. Daniel C. Saunders, who received $600 a year for being president of the University and one of its three professors. Then David gave a Latin recitation which he had prepared the day before in the thirty-volume library. With his fellow students, David then had dinner consisting of "meat, fish, bread of wheat, rye, or Indian corn . . . Fresh meat as often as possible to make into soups or broths. Barley, any or all vegetables of the season. Pies, apple-dumplings, and puddings. Dring-beer, cyder, pomaceous wine, milk and water, or simple water."

Following a second prayer session, David returned to his room to contemplate the ideas presented in the day's lecture. During these study hours and after supper he was not allowed to make any noise, visit other students, or leave his room "unless absolutely necessary." In the instance of this absolute necessity, there is no record of an outhouse being built until 1810, which must have inconvenienced the students considerably.

After returning to class to present his ideas on the lecture, David attended a meeting of a speech organization. The topic for debate was "Whether polygamy be favorable to population." David had been uneasy all day, for the night before he had seen a comet which was, in his day, "a harbinger of war, no doubt, or some direful calamity." Sure enough, David was fined fifteen cents for making "subterranean noises." Fines were imposed for everything from throwing water to "playing bean porridge hot" and ranged from ten to fifty cents.

Supper was similar to breakfast. After eating David studied on his own until late at night.

The majority of his subjects were in the fields of Latin or Greek, although he also took such subjects as surveying, religion, and calculating eclipses.

Each day was alike with the exception of Sunday, when David attended two compulsory church services and was not permitted to do work or extra activities of any sort. His only diversion was an occasional trip down the hill to the "city" of Burlington. A citizen described the sounds of the students returning between midnight and daybreak as reminding him of "the howling of wolves." These forays were made at the risk of the student, who could be expelled all too easily.

Would any of you like to go back in time to the "good old days" of David Breckenridge?

Graduation was only the beginning of Jim Brown's education

Because he joined Western Electric

Jim Brown, Northwestern University, '62, came with Western Electric because he had heard about the Company's concern for the continued development of its engineers after college graduation.

Jim has his degree in industrial engineering and is continuing to learn and grow in professional stature through Western Electric's Graduate Engineering Training Program. The objectives and educational philosophy of this Program are in the best of academic traditions, designed for both experienced and new engineers.

Like other Western Electric engineers, Jim started out in this Program with a six-week course to help in the transition from the classroom to industry. Since then, Jim Brown has continued to take courses that will help him keep up with the newest engineering techniques in communications.

This training, together with formal college engineering studies, has given Jim the ability to develop his talents to the fullest extent. His present responsibilities include the solution of engineering problems in the manufacture of moly-permalloy core rings, a component used to improve the quality of voice transmission.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for - we want to talk to you! Opportunities exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Vt. Conference History

Remember Louis Lomax? He was one of three dynamic and renowned speakers who participated in one of the most powerful and controversial Vermont Conferences ever witnessed on this campus. The tenth Vermont Conference is swiftly approaching, and this year's topic and speakers promise to fully measure up to the stiff standards set by the excellence of past years.

Vermont Conference is, and has been, one of the highlights among the various programs presented by the University. Conference is arranged, promoted, and administered by students, with the aid and advice of interested faculty members and administrators. Its purpose, which has always been fulfilled, is to create an opportunity for outstanding persons in varied fields, such as politics, science, the humanities, etc., to share their knowledge and express their views concerning issues of current and widespread interest. It is a rare opportunity which enables the student body, the faculty, and any and all interested parties to digest and discuss these viewpoints fully.

The underlying philosophy of Vermont Conference is the belief in the value of examining new and varying, perhaps diverse, opinions which may extend beyond the boundaries of the undergraduate's often too limited perspective and lay a foundation for his own understanding and opinions of the issue at hand.

In living up to its purpose, and in abiding by its philosophy,

Canada Comes To UVM

The University is offering its third undergraduate program of Area Studies this fall and the newest offering has a distinct "north of the border flavor."

A Canadian Area Studies Program joins the other two programs already established at the University, one in the area of Latin America, the other in Russia and Eastern Europe.

The development of a Center for Area Studies was authorized by the Board of Trustees in 1962, the purposes of the Center being to encourage and coordinate interdisciplinary study of selected foreign areas, to promote research on foreign areas, and to stimulate general interest in these areas. A committee plans for and proposes course offerings on various areas under the respective departments. Prof. Robert Daniels, chairman of the history department, is director of the Center.

Each program is based on a combination of appropriate courses in foreign language, history, political science, economics, and sociology, and provides the concentration required of candidates for the A.B. degree.

Edward J. Miles, associate professor of geography at the University and a native of Canada, is chairman of the Canadian Area Studies Program.

"Our Canadian Studies Committee first met in March of 1963 and at that time began making plans for a program here at the University. We felt that in these days of multiplying programs in foreign areas at American uni-

Vermont Conference, since 1952, has become an important institution within the community of the University. Its worth as a tradition is based upon the success of the exhausting efforts of past Conference committees in bringing to the campus such notables as Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Peter Viereck, former Roosevelt "brain-truster" James Warburg, New Republic editor Michael Straight, New York Representative Adam Clayton Powell, "beat" poet Lawrence Ferlinghetti, cartoonist and satirist Jules Feiffer, anthropologist Oscar Lewis, and many others, all imminent in their respective fields. In 1953, the late Eleanor Roosevelt accepted a bid to speak at Vermont Conference, but later had to decline because of unforeseen events.

On March 23, 24, and 25, the University of Vermont will once again have the privilege of playing host to a handful of knowledgeable and respected experts in a surprising variety of fields, who will discuss what could be an issue of more than vital interest to everyone on the UVM campus.

Isaac Stern Delights All

Isaac Stern presented this season's Lane Series audiences with a superb tenth anniversary treat in his Saturday evening performance. The program was a varied and interesting one covering a wide range of composers and styles.

Mr. Stern opened his program with a warm and ingratiating sonata in the Italian manner by the 18th century composer, Francesco Geminiani. This charming work served as a good vehicle for exhibiting Mr. Stern's precision in execution and attack. The Beethoven "Krentler" sonata is one of the best-known masterpieces in the genre, on the other hand, and is one that requires the utmost delicacy and refinement in interpretation and balance. Both Mr. Stern and Mr. Zakin were at top form in this work and the performance was one of the highlights of the evening.

The Bach solo sonatas are among the most difficult in the literature since they require not only the sustaining of triple and quadruple stops but the simultaneous interweaving of several voices at once. Mr. Stern accomplished this feat of virtuosity with dexterity and conspicuous ease while preserving the inherent musical values. Another high point in the program was the Wallingford Riegger Sonata with its pungent sonorities. Riegger was one of the earliest American composers in the 12-tone style of Schoenberg and this work is a good example of his mature style in that idiom. A short group of works by Dvorak, Shostakovich, and Ravel closed the program with excellent contrast and breathtaking virtuosity in the Ravel Perpetuum Mobile.

Encores included works by Bartok and Fritz Kreisler.

The performance gave an impression of the highest quality of musicianship and craftsmanship coupled with sensitivity and taste. Mr. Stern performed solo music as a soloist but, what is more rare, Chamber Music as an equal partner with the excellent Mr. Zakin. It was a most enchanted evening of music-making.

The Helping Hand Of SPS

Imagine standing in the pouring rain on Centennial Field with a camera in your cold hands, trying to mentally work out a play before it takes place so that you can capture it on film. And rubbing elbows with first-class photographers from the AP and UPI news services while determining the best exposure to use in photographing President Johnson. And having $2000 worth of cameras, lights, dark room facilities, and other equipment available to you.

The Student Photography Service, one of the least known yet most widely used organizations on campus, embodies all three of these things and many more. Located in one of the cubbyholes downstairs in Billings, the staff's office is home base for the ten or so students who do most of UVM's photographing and developing of pictures. Under the direction of senior Chris Scott, the members receive assignments, gather up equipment, either their own or that owned by SPS, take the required pictures, and return the film to the office for developing.

SPS is no place for one who doesn't know what a light meter, 35 mm film, exposure indexes, and shutter speed are. Instead, it is "a group of amateur photographers doing professional work," to quote one of the members. The organization gives those students with definite interests in photography an opportunity to "talk shop" with others and to feel the enjoyment of seeing one of their pictures in the datebook, Ariel, or CYNIC.

To elaborate on this, all of the pictures in the datebook and the CYNIC and some of those in the Ariel are the result of SPS work. Taking last week as a fairly typical week, SPS assignments included photographing Senator Aiken, a WSGA meeting, dining hall pictures for Saga Food Service, and an IFC lecture. Looking at a broader scope, during the year SPS is not only in charge of pictures of Kake Walk, Jazz Festival, sports events, and Lane Series, but also photographs and develops portraits of student election candidates and the University Players.

The next time you see "(Credit Scott, SPS)" or something similar in very small type in the CYNIC, look at the datebook, or glance over the candidates for class elections, you will know a little about the behind-the-scenes work that went into the pictures which are generally excellent. As one SPS photographer said, "Maybe now at least some people on campus will know what the letters SPS stand for." They stand for a lot of work, a lot of planning, and a great deal of satisfaction for a job well done.

The Saga Of Saga

by Judy Beeber

How many of us, when eating our meals in UVM dining halls, give a second thought as to the establishment which provides us with three meals a day? Not many, I'm sure. Some facts about Saga should familiarize fond service.

Saga Food was founded by three college seniors who attended Hobart College in 1948. The company was named after an Indian chief who lived in the surrounding area, Geneva, N.Y. In 1956, UVM became the eleventh school with which Saga signed a contract with. Since then, Saga has expanded tremendously, since today it is currently serving 167 schools in 33 states in the country and several schools abroad such as the University of Hawaii and Beirut College in Lebanon.

One of the newer innovations on Redstone Campus is Wright Dining Hall which was completed last October. It seats 462 students and can serve 1,000 girls at each meal. To make meals more pleasant and relaxing, Saga has installed hi-fi music which is piped into the dining hall.

"I bet you can't eat just one corn chip!"

Jim Hagadome, food service director of Vermont, commented on the plans which Saga has for this year. Special events will be held each month as exemplified by the past Hobo Dinner in celebration of Halloween. A special Thanksgiving buffet was served on Thanksgiving day for those students who were not able to join their families. In the future, international nights will be held when food from specific countries will be served. There is a good possibility that live entertainment such as a three piece band, will be provided during some events. It was especially emphasized that students who have suggestions or ideas about improvements to be made should feel free to discuss them with any of the dining hall managers.

It looks as though Saga has gone all out for the students.

Let's appreciate it!

Independents

Make Bid

This year two additional Kake Walkers, Eric Anderson and Bill Dixon of the Independents, will try their luck in the bid for the Kake. For the past two years, there has been considerable discussion concerning the formation of an independent party. Instrumental in the establishment of the Independents were Howard Cyr, Helen Keith, and Skip Laufer, chairman of the Kake Walk Reevaluation Committee. The Independents plan a sculpture to go up in front of Tupper Hall and a party Saturday night in association with the men's residence hall association. The officers of the Independents are president, Dick Dally; treasurer, David Matte; publicity chairman, William Mangan; sculpture chairman, Phil Buttaravoli; and social chairman, Dave Zarling. Favors include a choice of either a teddy-bear or a gold-stained flask. As of now, the Independents number over 110.

Students entering these projects as Volunteers will be trained at an American university this summer for a ten- or twelve-week period.

Detailed announcements for be examined in Dr. Little's office. Registration forms and information on Peace Corps tests are also available. The office is located in Morrill Hall.

versities, the neglect of Canada was obvious and distressing. We further felt that UVM was in an uniquely advantageous position to remedy this lack by providing an area studies program of Canada," says Professor Miles.

Vermont is only the second university in the United States to offer such a program on Canada, the other being the University of Rochester.

"We want to offer an over-all picture of Canada and its culture, not just approach the study from the social sciences," says Miles.

Members of the studies committee are William Metcalfe of the history department, also a Canadian by birth, Betty Bandel of the English department, Malcolm Daggett, chairman of romance languages, William Haugen of the political science department, and Gordon Lewis of the sociology department.

Professor Bandel is exploring the possibility of a course on Canadian literature while Professor Daggett is investigating a course in French Canadian literature.

The committee also hopes to establish a faculty exchange and a "junior-year or semester in Canada." During the 1963-64 academic year, Miles and Metcalfe visited the Institute of Canadian Studies at Carleton University in Ottawa to discuss these possibilities and to get ideas for the program in general at Vermont.

In addition to the classroom portion of the Area Studies Program, a series of special lectures is planned throughout the year with the first scheduled for Nov. 12 when Robin Winks, professor of history at Yale, will speak on the topic "Controlling Factors in Canadian-American Relations."

Miles said he hopes to see the long tradition of UVM students going to Ottawa for several days to observe Parliament continued.

Although neighbors for hundreds of years, there are few programs at colleges and universities in either country to acquaint students with their "cross-border neighbor." The University of Vermont hopes to help change this.

CATAMOUNTS RECORD DISASTROUS WEEKEND

Five Drubbed By UCONN

By Gordon Josephson

The Catamounts of the University of Vermont, 1-6 in Conference play and 3-7 overall played host Saturday night to the conference leading Huskies from the University of Connecticut. Led by the aggressive rebounding of all Conference center Tony Kimball and the pinpoint shooting of sophomore Wes Bialosuknia, the UCONN's rolled to an easy victory 107-60. Although UVM played good ball, shooting for a credible 42% from the floor, the opposition was simply in a different league. The Huskies hit 57% from the floor, passed fast and accurately, maneuvered well and never lost their poise.

The Cats jumped out in front for the only time in the game when team captain Ralph D'Altilia hit for the games opening two points. UCONN came right back with some beautiful outside shooting to lead by twenty points 41-21 with 7:25 remaining in the first half. UCONN's all American candidate, 6'8" Tom Kimball from Sudbury, Mass., was replaced at the 5:00 mark after hauling down 7 rebounds and scoring 15 points. UVM drew to within 12 points of UCONN, 50-38, with 2 minutes remaining in the first half but two quick baskets by UCONN sent the Cats to the locker room trailing 76-16, 54-38.

The second half was all UCONN. After scoring eleven straight points to open the half, the Huskies settled down to lead at the half midway mark 78-47. At 4:20, the result of the game no longer in question, Coach Fuzzy Evans poured in his reserves. Replacing starters Lane Higgs, Milt Goggans, Ralph D'Altilia and Joe Gannon were John Bossi, Mike Karel, Russ Boardman and George Abbot. Two minutes later Donald Longley replaced sophomore Bruce Hanna who, incidentally, played a fine game. Hanna, known for his fine defensive play, held UCONN's high scoring Wes Bialosuknia to one point in the second half. (Bialosuknia lead the scoring at the half with 15 points). With 2:05 remaining in the half, UCONN's Robert Cote reached the century mark on a pair of foul shots as the Huskies lead 101-57. Out-scoring the Cats in the final 2 minutes 6-3, the Huskies registered a 107-60 win.

As a closing note to what otherwise might appear to be a dismal defeat, attention must be drawn to center Milt Goggans who, with his 22 point effort, lead the scoring and played his finest game this year. The Cats should not be ashamed of this loss. It's a credit to them that they put up such a fine effort and I'm sure that those who attended the game with me Saturday, will bear me out.

Honors For Donnelly

Puckmen Bow To Salem Six

By Alan Rice

A hustling UVM hockey team matched an experienced and undefeated Salem State team for a period and 17 minutes, before running out of gas and losing 6-3. Playing before an enthusiastic UVM crowd, the Cats made an impressive showing, considering that the team was just rebuilt after losing seven of its starters due to scholastic reasons.

Young Tom Gregg, brought up recently from the freshman team, made several good saves, especially one made on a breakaway by Salem's top puckster Stan Driscoll. Also impressive for Vermont was the play by their first line, headed by center Chip Uihlein, Capt. Marshall Stevenson, and Ozzie Swett. Vermont's Frosh line, comprised of Curt Tobey, John Semler, and Lee Roy, showed a great deal of hustle and should, with experience develop into a great line for Coach Ruffer. On defense Tony Rishe did a good job clearing the puck out of the Vermont zone time and again, while the Catamounts were shorthanded, and, thus, helped prevent any goals from being scored at times when Salem State enjoyed a man advantage.

The Salem State Vikings appeared to be a little too strong for our Catamounts. Stan Driscoll opened the scoring for Salem State in the first period, when the Vermont defense failed to clear a loose puck in front of its net. Driscoll flipped it home past goalie Tom Gregg for the score. Vermont was shorthanded at the time as Joe Gibbs was in the penalty box serving a two minute penalty for tripping. The Cats tied the game just before the buzzer went off at 19:59 of the first period. Chip Uihlein scrapped for the puck in the corner, then back-handed the puck out in front to Ozzie Swett, who shot it passed a surprised Glen Benevento, the Salem goalie, just as the period ended. In the second stanza, Salem went ahead at 10:08, when Orland Wilgo deflected in Pete Grogan's shot from the right face-off circle.

Vermont's Frosh line with a man advantage put the pressure on the Salem goalie, and finally scored when Jon Wort shot the puck in front to John Semler, who flipped the puck past Benevento for the goal. Unfortunately for Vermont, Orland Wilgo finished off a hat trick, scoring two goals in the last three minutes of the period to put Salem ahead 4-2. Action slowed down considerably in the third period, as both teams played sloppy. The period was highlighted by a flight between Vermont's Lee Roy and Salem State's Gordie Partridge. Within a few seconds there were three fights going on as the ice became littered with sticks and gloves. Five minute penalties were handed out to Partridge and to Lee Roy, who threw the best punches.

Although the Cats played sloppy at times, they showed by their hustle and determination that with a little experience and a lot of hard work, a brighter future is in store for them. The Catamounts, who now stand at three wins against seven defeats, go on the road for the remainder of the season. They next play at the Boston Arena against Boston State College. They are expected to improve their record against their coming opponents in the closing weeks of the season.

ROWELL HAS PRAISE

land who has more wins than Evans and that is his well-respected old rival, Dartmouth's Doggie Julian.

"I have enjoyed the many years of competition, particularly with our state teams and in the Yankee Conference, and the fine associations with all those connected with the game, especially the players themselves. It is the kids who actually give your your greatest rewards and in the many years here at Vermont I have been privileged to have some wonderful young men," says Evans.

Although always lacking the "big man" necessary to compete in basketball, Evans has compiled a rather remarkable record over the years and entered Tuesday's game against Clarkson with a 257-189, won-lost record.

Against state rivals Middlebury, Norwich and St. Michael's, Evans' log shows 91 victories and only 43 losses. His clubs won eight state crowns (seven in a row and all outright) and shared two others.

Milestones in Evans' distinguished career include his 100th win, a 58-47 triumph over Maine in 1950, and a 61-61 nod over Connecticut on Feb. 7, 1959, a victory that stopped a long UConn Conference streak. Fuzzy notched his 250th win last winter when the Catamounts bested St. Lawrence.

Affectionately known as the "Senator" and "Fuzzy," Evans' best year was in 1946-47 when the Catamounts posted a 19-3 mark, including wins over Yale and Manhattan.

A 1932 graduate of Illinois where he was a halfback for three seasons, Evans joined the Vermont staff in 1937, becoming head basketball coach in 1940. That same year he also assumed the role as head football coach, a position he held through the 1951 season. His 27 wins as a football coach equal the most games won by any coach of a Catamount eleven.

Evans holds honorary life membership in the Basketball Officials Association. He was named New England All-Star Basketball Coach in 1959.

Trackmen Drop Opener To Bates College 87-26

by Dick Frostig

The University of Vermont trackmen opened their season Saturday at Lewiston, Maine, with an 87-26 loss to Bates College. It was a tough day for the Vermont runners as a strong Bates squad took a first place in every event. The running events told the story as the Vermont thinclads managed to garner only 16 points to Bates' total of 43.

Two meet records were broken and two were tied by members of the Bates team. Bill Pangburn heaved the 35 pound weight 53 feet 2 inches to break a meet record and Mike Fauer broke the record in the shotput with a 45 foot 2 inches heave. Al Harvie and Tom Bowditch tied meet records in the high hurdles and high jump respectively.

Don Mayland, the New England Indoor A.A.V. champion in the pole vault, made the best performance for Vermont with a jump of 13 feet in the pole vault event. He took a second place but only because the Bates vaulter had fewer misses. Mayland had previously done only 11 and a half feet in practice this winter.

The Vermont freshmen, by taking a total of seven first places, rolled to a 59-27 win over the Bates J.V.'s. Jimmy Dedman led the frosh with first place wins in the 45 yard dash and the 600 yard run. Pete Jones, Jack Farley, Rick Howard, Paul Ardell, and Herman Hoops had wins in the mile, the broad jump, the 1000 yard run, the shotput and the high jump, respectively.

The Vermont varsity runners will run Bowdoin at home this coming Saturday afternoon.

Fifty-one University of Vermont athletes have been awarded varsity letters by the University's athletic council for participating in fall sports.

Thirty of the letters were won by members of the football team, 15 for soccer and six in cross country. In addition three managers received letters or numerals.

Letter recipients are:

Cross country - Richard Ashton, Lyndon Center; Douglas Kibbe, Saxtons River; John Morse IV, Bath, Me.; H. Frank Pitaniello Jr., Rutland; Walter Stowell, Townshend; Sidney Young, Lyndonville; and David Mount, Burlington; manager.

Football - Joseph Albanese, Palisades, N.J.; Kenneth Andrade, Falmouth, Mass.; Harvey Bazarian, Watertown, Mass.; Denis Black, Hackensack, N.J.; David Busick, Slingerlands, N.Y.; Frederick Boese, Union City, N.J.; James Brennan, Teaneck, N.J.; Arthur Brink, Methuen, Mass.; Michael Burke, Rutland; William Dorozenski, New Britain, Conn.; Carl Ettlinger, Staten Island, N.Y.; W. Scott Fitz, Nashua, N.H.; Frank Foerster, Union City, N.J.; Charles Foster, North Andover, Mass.; Also, Edward Fugit, Rutherford, N.J.; Paul Giarfi, East Hartford, Conn.; Richard Hebert, St. Albans; Ronald Hertel, Union City, N.J.; Laurell Husband, Windsor; Keith Keiderling, Flemington, N.J.; Deane Kent, Rutland; William Leete, Williamstown, Mass.; Thomas Mongeon, St. Albans; George Oelze, Union City, N.J.; Richard Reynolds, West New York, N.J.; Lawrence Rice, Saxtons River; Jack Schweberger, Weehawken, N.J.; Joseph Soldano, West New York, N.J.; John Sullivan, Quincy Mass.; William Van Bennekum, Hoboken, N.J.; and Robert Clifford Jr., Shelburne, manager.

Soccer - William Burling, Toronto; Donald Carlson, Essex Junction; Robert Cronin, Richmond; James Cunningham, Burlington; John Edbrooke, Montreal; William Lansing, Essex Junction; Dennis Linnehan, Upper Derby, Penn.; Timothy Madison, Windsor, Conn.; Theodore Manning, Westfield, N.J.; John Neftzer, Hackensack, N.J.; George Noyes, Branford, Conn.; Phillip Russell, Hinesburg; Thurston Sumner, Milford, Conn.; William Willey, Essex Junction; George Wolf, Lakeville, Conn.; and J. VT Conference Topic Raises Moral Issues

"BUT WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?"

When the tenth Vermont Conference opens on Tuesday, March 23, three experts in as many different fields will have their hands full of a potentially explosive topic, "Genesis Revisited: The Scientific, Social, and Ethical Implications of Man-Made Men."

In recent years, there has been a great amount of work done in the area of the DNA molecule and its breakdown. Man is in the throes of a genetic revolution, and some scientists predict that within ten years, we will be able to create men in test tubes.

Science fiction? Certainly not. Some of the greatest minds in biochemistry in the country, one of whom will speak on the topic at Vermont Conference in March, are saying it can be done. Their only question is "when?"

Obviously, there are other questions to be answered, however. The advent of man-made men will create social, legal, and moral problems for all of us. This is Huxley's Brave New World come true, no longer the annual lectures Dr. Torch gives on the origins of life in Zoology 1. The atom bomb came upon us too rapidly for us to be prepared for its widespread and frightening implications. This time, we are given ample warning and time to prepare ourselves in advance for the acceptance into our society of a different breed of men.

Man has become master of the methods of destruction of his own kind. Is it now feasible for him to master his own creation? What is left to God? This question weighs heavily on the minds of all men, be they devoutly religious, agnostic, or atheistic.

In a similar vein, we must ask what kind of havoc test-tube men will play with the already out-of-hand problem of birth control. The Roman Catholic Church is notably concerned with the moral and ethical implications of birth control. What will be its stand on this issue?

And how will society, as such, be affected? What kind of people will we create? Should we produce a generation of geniuses or varied intellects? Should we give life to a social stratum of supermen or slaves? What percentage should be female? How many Negro? Are these beings to be humans or mere devices? Will we allow our own children to intermarry with them? Can they legally be called citizens? Might one of them be President some day? And once they have been created, will it be possible for them to die?

These, and many more questions, lead up to the one big question - WHO will do the actual creating? And WHO will be given the authority to decide the answers to all those questions? Isn't it possible that instead of mastering the art of creation, we may simply be creating another tool of destruction - our own?

Each of us, probably, can conjure up a picture of a man-made man, and probably every conception is different. But one of those conceptions will very soon come to life and walk the streets among us. Will we be ready to say "How do you do?"

New Face For Walkers; Entertainers Announced

THE KAKE WALK BALL

In an effort to bring the Kake Walk Ball to the students this year, the Kake Walk Directors are presenting "The Kingsmen" plus Dick Madison and his orchestra for your dancing enjoyment.

"The Kingsmen" feature five young men from Portland, Oregon. "Louie, Louie" brought the Kingsmen from relative obscurity into national prominence. Since then they have made two albums and recorded other singles such as "Little Latin Lupe Lu". The Kingsmen currently have a best seller on the national scene, "The Jolly Green Giant."

Besides "The Kingsmen", Dick Madison and his orchestra will play at the Ball. This twelve piece band is a perennial favorite with Eastern colleges and is sure to please those who enjoy the best in dance music.

A NEW FACE

The teams that walk for the cake in this year's annual Kake Walk at UVM will don a new face. The color of the face this year will be dark green and gold, the school colors.

After much discussion the black face was discontinued last year. In its place was substituted a light green face. However, this light green face was met with much disappointment by the audience.

With a dark green and gold, however, the identity of the walkers will again be masked. To top it off, the walkers will be wearing a straight hair wig.

KAKE WALK JAZZ CONCERT

The Jazz Concert this year will feature "The Lettermen". This young trio has a most magnificent vocal blend which has brought them instantaneous success. Their albums sell in the millions, their coast-to-coast concerts are complete sell-outs, their night club appearances break records everywhere and their college dates draw larger crowds than any other vocal attraction.

Performing on such television shows as Ed Sullivan, Jack

The Lettermen

Benny, and Red Skelton, the boys sing folk songs, old songs, new songs, but always in their style. Their current hit single of "Where or When" is just another reason why everyone is saying, "The Lettermen" are great.

Along with "The Lettermen" will be the exciting folk singing group, "The Phoenix Singers". Formerly a part of the Belafonte singers, these three young singers have appeared on "Hootenanny". The "Phoenix Singers" hold the attendance record for the "Shadows" in Washington, D.C.

"Evening In Wales" Presented Tonight

By Betty Miller

Direct from Wales, the world famous Royal Welsh Male Choir will present an "Evening in Wales" on February 12th for the guests of the Blue Lane Series Concerts. At 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium, a company of forty-five with vocal soloists, instrumentalists, narrator and costumes will bring to life the legendary past with true celtic flavor.

The Royal Welsh Male Choir, now on its first cross-country tour of the U.S. and Canada, hails from a land where fine singing is a tradition. The Choir is centered in the Rhondda Valley, home of Wales' coal industry. It was founded in 1883 and the main body of singers was drawn from the mines. Welsh miners are known for their beautiful voices, and, from the beginning, the members of the choir were outstanding. Their standards of perfection have not altered in the 70 years of their existence. In fact, the Choir's reputation is so extraordinary, that alone among all the choirs in Wales, it has been granted the permission to be called "Royal." Royalty's sanction has also been expressed in many requests for command performances. In addition to traveling throughout the world, the Royal Welsh Male Choir has kept step with the changing pace of the time by making numerous guest appearances on television and radio.

"An Evening in Wales" contains a liberal sampling of the traditional airs that have given Welsh music a warm place in the heart of the world. In addition, the religious music for which the country is noted and a selection of spirituals are included. The choir will present this program, for which it is famed on four continents, under the direction of John Samuel and aided by the renowned soloists, soprano, Anita Williams and harpist, Eleanor Dwyrdd. "An Evening in Wales" will be enhanced by appearances of the soloists in national costumes of the country and by Narrator Barry Ashton, who will read from some of the descriptive works of Dylan Thomas to set the scene for this thrilling musical journey.

ROTC Honors 84

Col. L.G. Robinson, Professor of Military Science presents first ROTC Basic Course Achievement Ribbons to Cadet S/Sgt. C.E. Moxhay, A&S, '67, and Cadet W.G. Conrad, A&S, '68.

During the formations of the University's ROTC Cadet Brigade held last Friday, the Military Science Department presented 84 new Basic Course Achievement Ribbons to freshmen and sophomores. Those honored had maintained a 1st semester average of 85 or better with a balance of 3 merits at semester's end. The criteria were sufficiently stringent to limit the awards to 9% of the combined freshmen-sophomore enrollment.

Selected to represent the Brigade in a formal presentation ceremony in the office of Colonel L. G. Robinson, Professor of Military Science, were Cadet

S/Sgt. Charles E. Moxhay, A & S '67, of Port Chester, New York, and Cadet William G. Conrad, A & S '68, of Rochester, New Hampshire. Cadet Moxhay completed the Fall Semester with a 99 average and 14 merits. He is an applicant for the Advanced Course. During the same time period, Cadet Conrad maintained a 98 average with 13 merits.

Providing power for every environment . . .

provides challenge for virtually every technical talent at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

Being a technically trained man . . . we assume you are looking ahead to a career of exciting growth and accomplishment and that you are looking for a company possessing these same qualities.

If our assumption is correct, we would like you to take a close look at us. For this Company, while solving the problems of the day, thrives on a sort of creative restlessness which anticipates the challenges of tomorrow. And more important to you, it recognizes its engineers and scientists as the master key to its present success and future progress.

From a solid foundation of basic and applied research, our Company has gained a firm foothold in the land, sea, air, and space programs that are helping to shape our nation's future. Our engineers and scientists are exploring ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment. Should you join them, you'll be assigned early responsibility . . . to apply your engineering talents to such areas as advanced gas turbines . . . rocket engines . . . fuel cells and nuclear power.

Such trail-blazing projects command the best of varied talent. That's why you'll find at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft men with college training as diverse as their responsibilities. You will also find that opportunities for professional growth are further enhanced by our corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree? It can be a B.S., M.S. or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL and NUCLEAR ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE or APPLIED MECHANICS.

BOSTON U BOYCOTT

The demands were submitted to the Administration Jan. 11 following a letter published in the News Jan. 6. They were denied and called "impossible" by Executive Asst. to the President Dr. Margaret Merry.

Since then, meetings have been held between Administration and Ad Hoc members and with Ad Hoc, Student Congress, and Faculty Senate representatives.

At a meeting held last week, the Faculty Senate and Student Congress joined with the Ad Hoc Committee in recommending a five per cent text discount and further study of possibilities of a 10 per cent markdown. The five per cent offer was referred to the Trustees following an Executive Council meeting of administrators Thursday.

Following the suspension, the Ad Hoc Committee issued a statement that the "power of a united student body is at last being felt."

"The most significant achievement by organized student action thus far is an alliance with the faculty," the statement continued. The Ad Hoc Committee's "student faculty coalition has forced the Administration to pass on our recommendation of a five per cent discount to the Feb. 12 meeting of the Board of Trustees," it said.

The Ad Hoc statement goes on to state "the University is undemocratic if the entire community does not make the decisions which affect its life," and concludes that "now is the time to push on . . . Feb. 12 will determine the course of our actions."

Concert, Stage Bands To Perform For KW

Two of the University's musical organizations have been rehearsing mightily in preparation for the 1965 Kake Walk. Playing the traditional "Cotton Babes" will be the Concert Band. This group will also present concert selections for the enjoyment of the audience immediately before the actual "Walking for the Kake." Among the selections scheduled are "Selections from the Broadway Show, Oliver," "Thunder Song," a march written by Burlington-born composer of re-known, Walter Finlyson, as well as an original composition by the band's director, Dr. Frank H. Siekmann. This selection, entitled "Reflections," is a light, modern piece featuring an instrument rarely used for this type of music, the baritone horn. Allen

Irwin will be soloist.

During the intermission of Kake Walk, another organization will hold forth, the UVM Stage Band. The "Stage Band" is reminiscent of the large dance band, made popular during the days of the "big bands" in the 40's. Today's stage bands don't necessarily play for dances but more often present modern, popular music in concert. The group includes 5 saxes, 4 trumpets, 3 trombones, as well as string bass, tuba, drums, piano and vibes. The vibes are featured on such selections as "It Might as Well be Spring." Also in the stage band's repertoire are such favorites as "Tonight" from West Side Story, and "Summer Time in Venice"

DISTANT... BUT DANGEROUS

Although many thousands of miles distant from Vermont, it may well be that the perilous situation in Vietnam presents for us a more accurate picture of reality than does a rather sheltered existence of a small New England university.

The shock of the past week's events in Southeast Asia has abruptly awakened us from peaceful doldrums and, at most, the minor events of Kake Walk, skiing, the new calendar, and the like. Forced to take a long, hard look at the world around us, we see ourselves not only as UVM'ers, but much more fundamentally, as citizens of a country with a nebulous foreign policy; individuals whose lives have become dearer to us with a new crisis threatening the terrible ultimate.

What is particularly frustrating is any attempt to intelligently analyze the situation and its ramifications. When we seek to define U.S. foreign policy, we are met by a barrage of contradictions, a mass of double-thinking; but, we cannot find a true, clear line of thought. The sole truths we can discern are cleverly disguised and extremely disillusioning.

It seems to us that the United States wants to prevent South Vietnam from falling to the Communists not to maintain democracy in South Vietnam (because, in effect, there is none), nor to help the masses there (who still live in substandard, feudal conditions, and pay rent to their landlords), but rather, to prolong the cold war game wherein Vietnam represents a mere pawn.

The side-stepping, sometimes escalating, sometimes halting, policy, ostensibly has been getting us nowhere. All we have appeared to accomplish is the costly expenditure of money, and the destruction of bases and weapons, compounded by humiliating defeats in guerrilla warfare with the consequential loss of hundreds of American lives.

Judging from progress not made, in addition to a scattering of half-truthful reports from Washington and Saigon, the war in Vietnam can drag on for several years. Let us suppose it does, and, barring a major world catastrophe, the U.S. succeeds in holding off the Communists. What then? Do we stay on in Vietnam remaining instrumental in government, or do we quietly recede, holding our breath lest the government falls, the communists take up arms again and once more chaos reigns?

Regarding the situation from another angle, we perceive any continuation whatsoever of the war as a total waste. Perhaps it is inevitable that the will of Red China's 700 million will prevail, that South Vietnam will be incorporated within the sphere of communist domination. And, in reference to this notion, is it much too evil or unpatriotic of us to think that an economically communistic way of life could actually benefit the peoples of Vietnam who, by no means, are equipped as yet to live under an economically capitalistic way of life?

And then, far off in the distance, we recall an ideal deeply inscribed into the exterior wall of the United Nations, a world organization supposedly founded to prevent any nation from taking up arms against another, to resolve differences by the most peaceful, and least expensive, means - diplomacy. Have so many forgotten this age-old art with its oh-so-simple language of peace and the brotherhood of mankind?

Letters To The Editor

(Editor's note: The following is the text of a letter sent to President Rowell which contains S.A.'s recommendations for modifying the new calendar.)

Dear President Rowell:

I am writing this letter on behalf of the Student Association Senate to bring to the administration's attention a recommendation concerning the university's fall calendar. As you can see from the enclosed copy of the minutes of the February 3 meeting of the Senate, it is proposed that the fall semester begin on a Wednesday rather than a Friday as the present calendar dictates in order to provide for a three day Thanksgiving vacation beginning after classes on the day before Thanksgiving.

To fully understand the importance of this decision by the Senate, I believe that you should be aware of several factors. This was indeed no snap decision. The original motion to change the calendar was made last semester and referred to the Orientation Committee at that time. The committee considered the entire impact of the calendar on students, faculty and administration alike. Final deliberation was tabled until such time as the academic outcome of the semester was available. The following considerations lie behind the Senate's decision to support the committee's report:

- 1) In general, the averages for the semester point out that students are indeed capable of mastering the knowledge presented to them in the slightly shorter semester. The freshmen grades are particularly encouraging in this area.
 - 2) Students appreciate the Christmas vacation which bears no burden of study or spectre of pending final exams.
 - 3) The prospects for early exams in the spring and a jump on other students in the summer job market also meet with general student approval.
 - 4) A longer Thanksgiving vacation under the Senate proposal would provide a needed break in the semester and an opportunity for those who will take advantage of it to prepare more intensely for exams and papers.
 - 5) By starting on a Wednesday, the Labor Day weekend and the resort jobs which are associated with it will not be affected.
- Clearly, then, the Senate has tried to analyze the two alternatives open to students: An additional two days on the end of the summer vacation or a longer Thanksgiving break during the semester. In selecting the latter, the Senate realizes that the issue is not closed, and that student comment on the calendar will continue. It also realizes that other considerations and standpoints are necessary in making a university calendar. Certainly the faculty and the administration have definite interests in this area. Realization of this, however, does not and should not deter the student body in pressing for what it feels is in the best interest of itself and the university.
- In the final analysis, student government on any level is based on the premise that students have more to offer than complaints regarding the institutions which they attend. It was in the light of this that the calendar proposal was made and, I think, it is in this light that the decision-making levels of the University of Vermont should give it thorough consideration.

Sincerely,

Richard Badger

ANNALS OF MEDICINE - Part II

Charlie Demerp emerged from Williams Science Hall and was hit by the blinding June sunlight. It was finally time for Charlie to get his B.S. and go to medical school. For the last four years he had been cramped up, in a cave-like room, on the fourth floor of Williams, constantly studying his Chemistry and Zoological texts. Charlie had the highest average of everyone. He was to be adjudged, according to the Graduation Day program, the smartest boy in the school. His intelligence amazed even his professors, who were astonished to see how scientifically Charlie worked. The secret to our hero's success, known up until now by no one (for he had no friends), was that he never slept. He constantly read, over and over, the same formulas, theories and reactions. He could recite them backwards, forwards and sideways. He understood them completely, in every sense of the word. But, as he emerged from his scientific sanctuary, he could not comprehend why the sun blinded him as it did. Charlie Demerp had always had perfect eyes (his mother had seen to that) and he was in perfect health. Yet, he could not perceive anything, just vague shadow and moving forms. He was dazed. What, after all these years of hard work, could be the matter with him? He staggered back into the confines of the warmish, dark building, where he regained his senses.

DOCTOR FIERY

Our boy Charlie ran to see his advisor Doctor Fiery, and explained to him the phenomenon. The kindly doctor, a humorous balding man, had advised his pupil for the last four years. "I can't understand it," chuckled the grinning teacher, "but that's the breaks. Don't worry about it, everything will work out." "Don't you have some cure?" questioned our hero. "Why no," answered the doctor, smiling, "that's not our field. Why don't you go over to the Chemistry department? They may be able to work out something for you."

Poor, blind, Charlie. He didn't understand Fiery's humor and ran immediately to the Chemistry Department where he met kindly Professor Grogg.

PROFESSOR GROGG

"Oh, Professor Grogg," shouted our still-dazed hero, "will you help me, I have been blinded by the sun and the only place I can see in the world is this building. Am I fated to live my life in this old building?" "Calm down m' boy," Doctor Grogg replied, "take it easy, life isn't so bad." "It isn't?" asked Charlie. "No, not at all. I thought we taught you that. Now let me look into your eyes. Hmm, they seem all right to me." "But I can't see outside," said our hero, "DO SOMETHING. You know everything." "Calm down boy," Grogg ordered, "why don't you run outside and see if you can see, you see?" "All right," said Charlie, "I'll be right back." Charlie briskly ran down the Science Hall stairs to see if he could see. He opened the doors and was once again hit by the sunlight and the blindness that accompanied it. "Oh my God," said Charlie scientifically. He ran back upstairs and saw that Doctor Grogg was no longer there. He ran to the Zoology Office and Doctor Fiery was also gone. Charlie Demerp stood there, abandoned, trapped for life in the confines of Williams Science Hall. He stood there alone in his little world. There was no one except little Charlie Demerp who had worked for four years to get a diploma, to get into medical school and to make a lot of money.

THE FUTURE

The future of Charlie Demerp will turn out quite rosy (in his blind eyes). There are many Charlie Demerps (unknown to him), and they are all fairly blind. Charlie met a girl who took him by the hand and who will lead him through medical school and through life. Charlie will be very successful. He shall establish a successful and thriving medical practice. He will specialize in whatever specialists specialize in and shall charge exorbitant fees to patients who will be extravagantly rich. Charles Demerp shall become the head of his local American Medical Association chapter. He shall be one of the leading foes of free medical aid to deprived families. "If they're stupid enough to be poor, they deserve to die," he shall maintain. Charles Demerp shall be cited many times for being a fine, upstanding member of his community. In short, he shall be a success. There will be only one small medical defect in Mr. Demerp's life and this shall be an incurable eye ailment which causes haziness of the vision. When Dr. Demerp reaches a good, conservative age, he shall go completely blind and shall become the "dean of specialists." He shall be wine and dined, all the time speaking against aid to the "stupid" poor. Charles Demerp shall die happy, wealthy and content, with knowledge that he has lived a full life.

CREATIVITY INVOLVES CONFLICT

By Hans H. Penner

When you are asked to write on any subject you desire the freedom of that situation is like the beginning of many cosmogonies -- it is that momentary chaos before creation. I hope I shall be able to pass through the moment of chaos. What makes matters worse however, is the present conflict of being caught between "I wanna be your man", which is coming through my window as the young men are busily engaged in the rituals of Kake Walk (sculpture), and, "Dio m'esaudi! Dio m'esaudi!" which is penetrating the door as the Saturday opera weaves its way to a climactic ending.

I suppose this is as good a setting as any for a historian of religions to attempt any kind of writing. For, you see, it brings into focus the contrasts and conflicts which continually face me. Outside of the study of religions, the problem has been described in many ways. For some it is ideological; for others it is the dialectic between the sacred and the profane. Others experience it as humanities vs. science, or as faith vs. reason, or perhaps as religion in conflict with secularization.

Now, there is always some attempt at solving these contrasts and conflicts. In fact, there are people who think that the only way to live with some semblance of sanity is to explain one side of the contrast or conflict by means of the other, thus collapsing any tension. This happens, of course, when, for example, religions are explained as "pseudo-science", or when faith is explained as "belief in the unknown". In some cases, however, the rational becomes overwhelming and we move to the non-rational as the basic explanation for man's mode of being in the world. One of the best examples I know of which indicates the end of one conflict (but the beginning of a new one) is the oft quoted phrase "god is dead". Now, I must admit that as a historian of religions I am caught on this one, both in terms of what it ended and what it began. However, as a historian of religions I am not swept off my feet by its proclamation, nor am I lulled to sleep by its incantation. The student of religions knows full well that Nietzsche and Sartre are neither the first nor the last to pronounce the death or disappearance of God. The death, sacrifice, or disappearance of the Gods has always been an event providing conditions for re-birth of the cosmos and existence in relation to man's freedom. I can imagine, furthermore, that at the time of the discovery of agriculture there were many who spoke of the death of God, as well as religion vs. agriculture. Both Gods and men must have chosen sides. Some opted for a kind of Dionysiac solution; others I am sure headed for the coolness of Mt. Olympus. We know also, however, that there were some who dared not decide in terms of "either/or", placing themselves in the middle of the conflict, creating new meanings and modes of existence because of the conflict, not in spite of it.

The study of religions is a study of man's creativity, of man in the making. Where there is creativity there is conflict. This process, it seems to me, entails the continual loss of some structures of meaning so that NEW structures and values may be born. This is the greatness of man and the tragedy of life as expressed in the history of religions. In that history both men and Gods have always known this. They have also experienced and known the resistance to this creative conflict and the turn to radical solutions resulting in destruction. And then there were those who transcended it all because of exhaustion or boredom and they too disappeared, but not without consequences.

I see the history of religions as the beginning of a new humanism. It is more realistic than its parent, but this is to be expected. It offers no paradise as an end of conflict within creativity, but it does understand the meaning of those great myths. It can offer no panacea for the present conflict and terror of history, but it can show an epoch where the cosmos was the arena of struggle and terror. Both took place as the results of man's creativity, not in spite of it. Our problems are certainly different than archaic and traditional man, but we remain engaged in a world that has been made and is in the making.

It seems to me that our immediate world, The University of Vermont, participates in that self-same process. Given that world, some of us will head for the fields where Dionysos roams, some will try the climb for the top of Mt. Olympus, and others will become exhausted of both or choose boredom. I am certain, however, that there are those who will continue to create, dancing quietly as Shiva, or thundering loudly as Indra, knowing the risks as well as the inevitable losses involved. The history of religions knows of no cosmogony without that conflict. It is at the center of freedom and the matrix for the creation of all value.

BOOKSTORE BOYCOTT, RALLY AFFECT POSSIBLE 5 PER CENT DISCOUNT AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY

After a half-day of picketing, protest, and politicking and a thronged noontime rally, the Ad Hoc Committee for University Reform suspended its bookstore boycott.

The temporary halt to protest was called as evidence of "good faith" until the University Trustees meet on Feb. 12 to consider the Committee's demands, according to Ad Hoc leader Julian Houston (DGE '67).

Houston's Committee members lined up in front of the Union about 8 am Monday and picketed with signs reading "A Free University in a Free Society" and decrying the University's profit-making bookstore policies.

The Committee's grievance centers around the fact that the bookstores make profit on text sales, and requests also that an administrative - faculty - student committee be organized to study the problem. The Ad Hoc members also demanded an immediate 10 per cent discount, eventually to be equal to the bookstore's total profit on non-educational materials.

Who Needs Thoreau?

By Lynn Householder

What kind of an atmosphere do you prefer for studying? Can you find it here? Periodically students ask for additional study areas. The problems in granting such requests are more than infinitesimal; moreover, many of those involved with the situation through S.A. are unconvinced of the necessity. I would be in favor of another area if and only if it had certain characteristics without which I see little chance of successful use. Many of us might prefer that available areas be less crowded, but would many be willing to forsake favorite nooks and crannies for unexplored territory? If you are one who would like fewer compatriots in your study spots, and if S.A. tries opening another room, remember that you cannot depend upon everyone else to improve your situation by their moving.

Billings Center was actually not remodeled to be a study hall, but an activities center, although actual recreational facilities are not there centralized. It was just last week that I learned that there are bowling alleys and pool tables in Waterman. The male population is surely aware of them, but there is no reason why these and the televisions and games in Billings could not add to campus social life. Recreational use of Billings would be easier if a number of students could and did adopt another study home.

When President Rowell spoke to S.A. two weeks ago, he covered a variety of information that I, at least, had not known in any useful detail. For the future, the university is to expand from the present 4,176 to around 5,000 students in the next few years. There will continue to be a minimum of thirty per cent of us foreigners (in Vermont). To house the increase, new dorms will be built soon; and as you probably have heard, a coed dorm is likely. In some cases, such dorms are very little different from total separation, but I have never heard any serious objections or dissatisfactions. After all, every contact helps to promote human understanding, especially between members of opposite sexes, since the two sexes so often confuse each other.

In chronological order, the third medical building, a life-science building (by Hills), a science annex to Science Hall, the renovation of Waterman and of the old medical college -- then probably to be used for nursing and dental hygiene and a fine arts center, are planned. There are other such facts and statistical comparisons of this university which need to be noted before making generalized criticisms -- or praises -- of the far too common sort.

V.P. - I.F.C.

Fraternities are important to the campus because they develop in the individual a sense of responsibility and a chance to cultivate leadership abilities, as well as being conducive to development of strong scholarship. These functions are a large part of running a fraternity, for a fraternity is like a home and most of the pleasures and headaches of running a home are present in any fraternity house.

One of the reasons for the existence of a fraternity is to impart each member with a feeling of responsibility. The fraternity, being like a home, has many rules which its members must obey if the fraternity is to remain strong. Every member is expected to do a couple of hours of work around the house every week, so that the physical plant will be kept in good condition. Members realize that their fraternity must be kept in good condition, and present a favorable impression, or else the fraternity system won't continue to attract new pledges.

Another aspect of responsibility is that a fraternity house controls its entire financial structure. One could indeed consider a fraternity a small business, for in a thirty member house, there is an average annual income of $15,000.00. The fraternity also owes a responsibility to the community in which it exists. In this respect, there are joint fraternity efforts; such as the Muscular Dystrophy drive last fall. Individual fraternities generally have a day or a number of days set aside so that the fraternity can show, as a group, its appreciation to the town in which it exists, by performing community service projects.

Another purpose of the fraternity system is to give almost everybody a chance at developing leadership ability. Being a comparatively small organization the possibilities for a position of leadership, financial, and plant management, are high, especially for those who show initiative. These leaders formulate most of the rules under which house life is conducted. Once these rules are made, they must be strictly enforced if the fraternity is to function properly. Especially in scholarship, which is very important in fraternity life, as it is the student's primary purpose for being in college. For at least the past four years, the fraternity average has consistently been higher than the all-mens average.

In essence, fraternities help the individual to acquire most of the qualities expected in a college graduate. The responsibilities and leadership opportunities cannot be found to such an extent in any other campus organization. Until the fraternity ceases to serve in the above stated manner, it will be a definite asset on every campus on which it exists.

Sound System

To the Editor:

I quote Mr. Messenger's letter in last week's CYNIC "a number of petitions asking for the juke box's removal were received by us last year." How many petitions? How many names? Who authorized removal of the juke box? Did the Student Association have anything to do with its removal and the installation of the sound system? Did it even know?

The answers to these questions are all "No." Actually, I am not so much in favor of a juke box as I am in favor of a satisfactory answer. Unless the majority of the student body favored its removal, it should not have been done. But, to the crux of the matter -- "Somebody" went ahead and spent what must amount to several thousand dollars (student money) on an elaborate sound system which does all kinds of terrific things. Not only is it capable of reproducing such esthetic sounds as Merle Wood, the "Genesecret," and other assorted static, but it can and does, in fact, contain microphones in every room in Billings Center. If Mr. Spies suspects a plot against his regime, all he needs do is plug himself into any room and overhear all that transpires. Shades of "Big Brother."

"Juke Box" sounds very high school and juvenile. It does do one thing, however. Besides still costing only a nickel (a rarity, to be sure), it provides one with freedom of choice. If people object to rock 'n' roll, why not vary the songs -- have some of each? But, now -- what to do with the sound system?

Guess.

Sincerely,

Aaron Schildhaus

THE PROBLEM OF CHURCH AND STATE IN FRENCH CANADA

On Campus with Max Shulman

(By the author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!", "Dobie Gillis," etc.)

THE BEARD OF AVON

Topic for today is that perennial favorite of English majors, that ever-popular crowd pleaser, that good sport and great American—William Shakespeare (or "The Swedish Nightingale" as he is better known as).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Pacific" as he is jocularly called) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply "Faugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented. It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all—waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but everyone else in town sniggered derisively, made coarse gestures, and pelted the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous moment came when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted "Europa!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

Figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger.

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades. Shave with a Personna. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and facial felicity. Why such a happy reaction? Because you have started with the sharpest, most durable blade ever honed—a blade that gives you more shaves, closer shaves, comfortabler shaves than any other brand on the market. If, by chance, you don't agree, simply return your unused Personnas to the manufacturer and he will send you absolutely free a package of Beep-Beep or any other blade you think is better.)

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was ribaldly appellated).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or, as it is frequently called, Macbeth). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees; I have a first folio that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing this ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Brer Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the king, who hollers, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beanery!" Ophelia is so cross that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for cussing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with kissing games and a pie-eating contest. Everybody has a perfectly splendid time until Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so unhinges Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Mahmsey. This leads to a lively discussion, during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Our hero now has croaked,
And so's our prima donna.
But be of cheer, my friends.
You'll always have Personna.

Yea and verily. And when next thou buyest Personna! buyest also some new Burma Shave! regular or menthol, which soaks eth rings around any other lather. Get thee to a pharmacy!

Champlain Downs Kittens In Eighth Game Of Season

By Dick Polish

The University of Vermont's freshman basketball team, under the direction of Ralph Lapointe currently hold a 3-5 record with three games remaining. The Kittens have lost twice each to strong St. Michael's and Dartmouth teams and also their lone encounter with Champlain College. The victories have been against Norwich, Middlebury and St. Albans radar base.

In their last contest the frosh gave a good effort before succumbing to Champlain. Good hustle and board work, and improved defensive play enabled the kittens to slow down Champlain's fast break attack and play even with them until the final minutes, when Champlain spurted to their winning margin. Although they lost, the team played well and showed much improvement over their lethargic play of recent games. Especially effective against Champlain was 6'4" Sandy McLeod who did a good rebounding job against Champlain's springy center and led the team in scoring. McLeod has been scoring about 12 points a game and with his hustle and strength off the boards could be a helpful addition to next year's varsity in the rebounding department.

Bill Liberra, 6'2", has been another team mainstay. Liberra has averaged close to 15 points a ball game and showed good ball handling ability in the backcourt against Champlain. He also showed good rebounding ability from his backcourt spot and could help the varsity at either forward or guard. Don Goendek also gave a good defensive performance against the Champlain center. He has been scoring about 10 points a game throughout the season. Backcourtmen Don Schneider and Bruce Lombard, and 6'3" Don Katz round out the starting lineup. Schneider has a good outside touch and has been scoring around 10 a game, as has Lombard. Katz has helped the team in the rebounding department. Bob Hilton, Don Fitts, Bob Bloomenthal, Mike Leonard, Dave Allen and Bob Merrian complete the squad. Hilton at 6'5" is the biggest man on the team.

It is hopeful that many of the players will show continued improvement in the remaining games for some of them will be needed to fill the vacancies left by graduating senior hoopsters.

Ski Team Travels

By Gordon Josephson

Despite the fact that skiing conditions in New England have been below par this season, the University of Vermont ski team, under the experienced coaching of Mr. Richard Stone, has accumulated a fine record for itself in both individual and team events.

Starting off the season, the Nordic squad (Cross Country and Jumping) competed at Lyndonville in a Cross Country race. The highest position any member of the squad was able to obtain was 45th in a field of 77. This performance was turned in by Freshman Gregg Galager. The remainder of the Nordic squad, Dave Hosmer, Scott Heake, Steve Hogen, Alan Goedecke, David Crane and Mason Bryant placed 47th, 49th, 55th, 63rd, 72nd and 74th respectively.

Following this intersession event, the team drilled, practiced and worked out at Kimball Union Academy in Maridan, N.H. On Jan. 16-17, immediately following this training, the squad traveled to Hanover, Mass., for the 4 x 10 relays and jumping. The fruition of the teams efforts really paid off as they placed 7th in a field of 29 teams. The next meet was the Putney Relays in which the team placed 6th in a field of competition similar to that of the Hanover 4 x 10s. Last week the boys once again took to the road, this time to Augusta, Maine, for the Abnaki Relays. Team Co-captain and Senior Steve Hogen from Rutland, Vt., was victorious in the Class B Cross Country Events.

Switching our attention to the other half of the ski teams activities, the Alpine events (Slalom and Downhill racing), the team, as well as individuals, have turned in some very credible performances. The first Alpine meet of the season, following several canceled affairs at Orvis Bromley and Mt. Snow, was the Oneida Silver Smith Trophy at Snow Ridge. The team did not manage to win a trophy, but in the estimation of Coach Stone, the boys turned in a "good" job. The latest Alpine Meet took place this past weekend in the competition for the Stowe Cup. UVM's Jim Dwinell, also a Co-captain, placed 11th in the slalom and 4th in the giant slalom in a field of 55 elite A skiers. Rod Carnie, also competing for the Green and Gold, took a bad spill on a turn and wrenched his knee. Rounding out the Alpine squad are Ken Austin, Pete Donaghy, Nash Lamb, Don Miller and Pete Sargent.

In the coming weeks, the team is looking forward to the "cream of the season", the Winter Carnival. First on the calendar is the 55th annual Dartmouth Carnival, which will take place this weekend in Hanover, N.H. Following the Dartmouth Carnival is the Williams Carnival, the weekend of Feb. 19-20. Shortly after is the Middlebury Carnival, Feb. 26-27 and the EISA at St. Lawrence the weekend of March 6th. In the estimation of Coach Stone, we should fair pretty well at these carnivals.

Debaters Win

Ten UVM debaters argued themselves to three team trophies and two speaker's cups while competing in tournaments at King's College (Pa.), St. John Fisher (N.Y.), and Harvard. The debaters compiled a record of twenty-four wins, twelve losses against colleges and universities from across the nation.

Debating both sides of the proposition, "Resolved, that the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed," Henry Wellman, Brattleboro, and Craig Nelson, Greenville, Maine, advanced to the final round of the King's meet, losing to Seton Hall. The UVM team was undefeated in six preliminary rounds of debate, winning decisions over American University, Seton Hall, University of Illinois, Villanova, St. Joseph's, and St. John's. The University of Delaware bowed to the UVM debaters in the semi-finals. In addition to earning the Second Place Trophy among the forty participating teams, Wellman was awarded the fifth speaker's cup.

The top affirmative team trophy and the second place two team trophy were earned by the UVM debating foursome at the St. John Fisher tournament. Robin Frost, Haydenville, Mass., and Michael Schonfeld, New York City, defeated West Virginia, Canisius, Case Institute, Buffalo, and LaMoyné. The team was declared the top affirmative unit, qualifying for a tape recorded radio debate with Bellarmine (Ky.). Schonfeld earned the second place affirmative speaker's award.

Track Team Loses Squeaker

By Dick Frostig

Four meet records and three cage records were broken as the Bowdoin College track team defeated the University of Vermont runners 67 1/2' to 54 1/2' last Saturday in the Gardner Collins cage.

Going into the low hurdle event the meet was very close with Bowdoin leading by only one point. Vermont managed to stake only a third place in the low hurdles and unfortunately, the mile relay team of Nolan, Frattini, Haskins, and Decesaris was disqualified.

One of the outstanding performers for Vermont Saturday was Tom Stickney who broke a cage record in the shot put with a heave of 46' 7 3/4". Don Mayland had a busy day for himself with a first place in the pole vault, a second in the high hurdles and the high jump, and a third in the low hurdles. Other winners for Vermont were Walt Stowell in the mile run, Kent Haskins in the 100-yard run, and Carl Frattini in the broad jump.

Alex Schulten of Bowdoin, the N.C.A.A. hammer throw champion and a finalist in the Olympic trials, broke two meet and cage records in the discus and the 35 pound weight. Ted Boal and Andy Seager set new meet records in the 2 mile run and high jump respectively. Boal had a time of 10:19 and Seager had a jump of 5'11 3/4".

Next meet for the Postmen will be on February 20 at Union College.

Discus - won by Schulten (B); 2) Murray (V); 3) McCutcheon (B). D-154'4" (new meet and cage record.)

35 pound weight - won by Schulten (B); 2) Willscher (B); 3) Coggins (B). 1-62' 3/3" (new meet and cage record) Broad jump - won by Frattini (V); 2) Nolan (V); 3) Perlmutter tied (V). D-20'2" Mile run - won by Stowell (V); 2) Kibbe (V); 3) Pitaniello (V). Time of - 4:39.

Pole vault - won by Mayland (V); 2) Ekdahl (B); 3) Fyles (V). Height of 13 feet.

50 yard dash - won by Tarbell (B); 2) Mathews (V); 3) Perlmutter (V). Time of 5.6.

600 yard run - won by Allen (B); 2) DeCesaris (V); 3) Beaver

(B). Time of 1:18.1

16 pound shot - won by Stickney (V); 2) Coggins (B); 3) Willscher (B). (new cage record) 55 yard H.H. - won by Tarbell (B); 2) Mayland (V); 3) Bud (B). Time of 7.3.

2 mile run - won by Boal (B); 2) Kibbe (V); 3) Ashton (V). Time of 10:19 (new meet record).

High jump - won by Seager (B); 2) Mayland (V); 3) Bird (B). height of 5'11 3/4" (new meet record) 1000 yard run - won by Haskin (V); 2) Bird (B); 3) Allen (B). Time of 2:24.2.

Relay - won by Bowdoin - Vermont disqualified.

Swimmers Boast Of 4-1 Record

By Ted Rowen

UVM's two year old swimming team has thus far compiled an impressive 4-1 record under the leadership of Les Leggatt. The entire season has been a very rewarding one according to Coach Leggatt. The coach feels that his team works as hard as any squad on campus. Swimming and wrestling are the two sports that really build the body. The proof of it can be clearly seen by examining one of Coach Leggatt's typical Wednesday workouts. The team starts to assemble around the pool at promptly 4:10. By 4:20 each finds a seat and they go over what has to be done and any material that might need to be explained (strokes, terms). At 4:25 they start their 1000 yard warm up, which is followed at 4:35 by 400 yards of kicking exercises. The next ten minutes of practice is reserved for starts and turns, stretch stroking at first. Then starts and turns for speed. This is followed by starts and turns doing butterfly and pull outs. The butterfly and pull outs are used to develop strength in the arms. At 4:45-5:10 the members engage in two full races of maximum distance plus 25 yards. At 5:10-5:25, they swim 100's (probably 6 or 7). At 5:25 the relay work begins for take off and to break up practice. At 5:40-6:10 the team does the 50's (approximately 10 to 15). The total sprinting distance compiled for each day's practice is one mile.

Coach Leggatt says that the only thing these boys lack are spectators. "All success in sport is dedication and this group sure has it," says Coach Les Leggatt. They have the motivation to perform at their best at all times, but of course there is nothing greater than an enthusiastic audience cheering you on. Most of the members of the swimming team were chosen from the physical education classes. For the most part, they come from a non-competitive swimming background, but they are hard workers. They respect him and the job which he has done.

Captain Jay Gloetznier is a prime example of what Coach Leggatt can and strives to do with each boy which he comes into contact with. When Jay first started swimming, he could break a minute for a particular stretch. Now he can do that same stretch in 53 seconds. This goes to show that good training pays off, and anyone who has ever had swimming with Coach Leggatt knows that he really pushed hard.

The UVM swimming team's prospects look very good for the 1965 spring semester. We are only losing one boy who is graduating and possibly two because of transfers.

On the negative side of the question Barry Messinger, New York City, and Nicholas Danigelis, Burlington, compiled a five win, one loss record. While defeating Brockport (N.Y.), LeMoyne, Canisius, Norwich, and Rochester, the debaters dropped a decision to another Rochester team. The combined record of the two UVM teams ranked them second among participating schools.

The Harvard Invitational Tournament was attended by two UVM teams. David Webster, Burlington, and David Waite, Springfield, won four decisions, while dropping four. They defeated Holy Cross, Arizona State, Macalester (Minn.), and Western Reserve; the losses came at the hands of Marquette, Georgetown, Bates, and Pennsylvania. Carl Lisman, Burlington, and Sharon Call, Springfield, defeated Detroit, Oneonta (N.Y.), and Eastern Nazarene; losing to MacMurray (Ill.), Columbia, Mt. St. Vincent, George Washington, and Carnegie Tech.

Meet a group of young Boston bankers. They are executives of The First National Bank of Boston, New England's oldest and largest. They're men on the move... sharp, talented, aggressive and making a dent in the business.

A short time ago they were doing some soul-searching, too. "Graduation, and then what?"

Quite honestly a few of these men never thought about banking. One of them majored in Spanish - he's now a credit man with our South American operation where the language comes in handy. Another studied Geography and Geology; today, he's an Operations Officer in our highly specialized electronic data processing complex.

At The First, we look for diverse educational backgrounds. Specifically, we want men with flexibility who can meet the demands of unusual and challenging situations.

If you are looking toward a career in a growth business, take a good hard look at The First. We have the opportunities... we'll even make a position for the right man.

One of our Personnel Officers will be on campus Friday, February 12th. We suggest that you contact your Placement Bureau to set up an interview. If you'd like to jump the gun, write to our Mr. Emory Mower, The First National Bank of Boston, 67 Milk Street, Boston. He'll be glad to send you a special booklet about working at The First.

'BOOKS'—It's a Newspaper

There is something new under the sun. It is BOOKS, a rousing monthly newspaper now in its second year of publication. BOOKS believes that you are better educated and no longer slavishly follow the best-seller lists. BOOKS believes you want to know everything that's published, especially by the university presses. Thoroughly covering the book beat, BOOKS treats books, authors, and their seminal ideas as news. BOOKS is the one newspaper people who really care about books say they can't get along without.

BOOKS makes books come alive. It has reported on Salinger's new novel; what happened when Velikovsky published the earth-shaking "Worlds in Collision"; what's happened to Norman O. Brown and "Life Against Death"; the smoldering old volcano, Ezra Pound; Merle Miller's story of how people really act toward each other in the 20th century; Joan Baez' battles; the LSD books; the new Edward Lewis Wallant Award; 13 profiles of notable suicides; Paul Weiss' 27 proofs of God's existence; the distinct and indispensable contributions of Jewish-American writers; the big book on campus, "The Reasonable Adventurer," about Princeton's class of '54; Shel Silverstein's fantastic children's book, which took four years to get published; etc., etc.

Regular columns include the two-page "Cocktail Party," dazzling, inside talk of books and publishing; "Critics' Scoreboard," what book reviewers coast-to-coast are saying; "The Local Scene," reports on literary activities in communities around the country. Plus a summary of almost every hardcover and paperback book published—in your fields of interest—in the month they are published. NO OTHER PUBLICATION DOES THIS.

James Purdy says: "BOOKS has shown very unusual methods . . . you actually mention authors whose books do not sell 1000 copies an hour . . . How can you last? Isn't America already beautiful enough without you?"

Read our mail: BOOKS is truly original . . . A newspaper that's informative and entertaining—a great idea . . . the most exciting publication I've ever read . . . Marvelous and quick reading . . . Lively, sophisticated, erudite, swinging . . . Very witty illustrations . . . Gives me lots to talk about . . . You must be having fun! We are—and you can too. Since BOOKS is not available at newsstands, why live without us. Send us the coupon today.

Rehearsals
In Progress
For "Yerma"

The University Players' Studio Production of Yerma, directed by Ernest Cabrera, is in full production at the Fleming Museum's Arena Theater. Mr. Cabrera told this reporter that he expects an early ticket sell-out for this tragedy by Federico Garcia Lorca. The play is centered about a barren woman and the insensitiveness of her husband. The play is likely to arouse interest, according to Mr. Cabrera, for all those concerned with modern drama in addition to those who are interested in Spanish Literature. It will be produced only two nights, March 4th and 5th.

The cast of the play is marked by an unusual amount of experience. The female lead, Elizabeth Ingoldsby, is a UVM freshman who has had considerable experience in high school productions. The male lead, played by M. David Storti, is well-known for his leading roles in "Macbeth," "The Zoo Story," and "Ghosts," in addition to appearing for two seasons in the University Shakespeare Festival.

The play is certain to be a sell-out. Director Cabrera suggests that all who intend to go secure their tickets immediately.

Tom Thomsen wanted challenging work

He found it at Western Electric

T. R. Thomsen, B.S.M.E., University of Nebraska, '58, came to Western Electric for several reasons. Important to him was the fact that our young engineers play vital roles right from the start, working on exciting engineering projects in communications including: electronic switching, thin film circuitry, microwave systems and optical masers.

Western Electric's wide variety of challenging assignments appealed to Tom, as did the idea of advanced study through full-time graduate engineering training, numerous management courses and a company-paid Tuition Refund Plan.

Tom knows, too, that we'll need thousands of experienced engineers for supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience necessary to qualify. Right now,

Tom is developing new and improved inspection and process control techniques to reduce manufacturing costs of telephone switching equipment. Tom is sure that Western Electric is the right place for him. What about you?

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for — we want to talk to you! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

UVM Suffers Disastrous Weekend

UMass Buries Vermont

MASSACHUSETTS

Displaying a tenacious defense, the University of Massachusetts Redmen toppled the UVM Catamounts 96-58, last Saturday night at the Patrick Gymnasium. Massachusetts' tight zone defense, throttled the Vermont offense, and forced numerous bad passes, which resulted in Mass. baskets. Led by Clarence Hill and company, the Redmen jumped in front early and never were threatened as they rolled along to an easy victory.

The Cats jumped out to an early lead when Milt Goggins tapped in a rebound. Then "Jumpin" Joe Gannon put in a jumper from the corner to put Vermont out in front 4-0. However, Mel O'Rourke sank two free throws, and Clarence Hill, the Yankee Conference leading scorer, followed up with two jumpers to put Mass. ahead to stay. After Mass. went ahead 17-8, Ralph D'Altilia, the Catamount's captain, got hot and closed the gap to 17-14. The Catamounts managed to stay within 10 points of Mass. for most of the first half, and showed spurts of coming to life with some great plays, including a swinging over the shoulder layup by Layne Higgs. However, Mass. put on a full court press near the end of the half, and stole three Catamount passes in a row, which led to Mass. baskets. By the time the buzzer, ending the 1st half, went off, the score was Mass. 50 and Vermont 33; by now it was no longer a question of who but by how much.

The Catamounts came onto the floor for the second half, determined to make a comeback, but the Mass. defense was too tough for the Cats and Mass. went on to win 96-58.

For Vermont, Ralph D'Altilia played a fine game, as he once again managed to break the magic 20 mark.

Layne Higgs, the Cats junior guard from Barre, made some of the prettiest plays of the season, but was hampered in his outside shooting by a tight Massachusetts defense. Johnny "Red" Orr's Redmen displayed a well balanced attack. Outstanding for his team was the rebounding and shooting of agile Mel O'Rourke and the shooting and defensive work of slender Clarence Hill.

Thursday, the Cats played their arch rivals from across the Winoski River, the St. Michael's Knights. The Knight's led by Richie Tarrant, were heavily favored to whip the Cats. However, in a game like this anything can happen, and I'm predicting that the Cats pulled the biggest upset of the year.

KING'S COURT BALL HERALDS OPENING OF 68th KAKE WALK

Watson, Slack, Walker Engineer Festivities

Steve Watson
Financial Director

STEPHEN J. WATSON, from Lyndonville, Vermont, is this year's Financial Director. Besides the year-round job of handling the multitude of monetary matters, Steve has the critical task of engineering the seating and ticket distribution. Steve is a brother of Lambda Iota fraternity where he has served as the representative to the Interfraternity Council as well as holding several house offices. He also serves on the Kake Walk Disposition Committee. Steve was a member of Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and is now a member of Boulder Society. Steve is a chemistry major and is the recipient of a National Science Foundation Fellowship. He has been on the Dean's List for all of his seven semesters in school. Steve's plans after graduation are undecided at the present time.

Steve Slack
Production Director

STEVEN C. SLACK, from Washington, D.C., is this year's Production Director. Steve coordinates the work of the other directors as well as fulfilling the requirements of his own position. He is responsible for the coordination of the skits and walking as well as securing the orchestra for the ball and the jazz groups for the Jazz Concert. Steve is a brother of Sigma Phi fraternity where he has served as secretary and treasurer. Steve has been a member of the swim team, Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and is presently the captain of the golf team and president of Boulder Society. He also is a representative of the Athletic Council. Steve, who is a Commerce and Economics major, plans to do work in Industrial Sales upon completion of school.

Cal Walker
Publicity Director

CALVIN WALKER, from Underhill, Vermont, is this year's Publicity Director. Cal's main responsibility centers around preparing press releases for local coverage of Kake Walk festivities and arranging for national coverage also. Cal is a brother of Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity where he has served as Rushing Chairman and Pledge-master. Cal was a member of Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and he now holds membership in Boulder Society where he serves as Secretary-Treasurer. He is also a member of Alpha Zeta honorary. Cal is an Animal and Dairy Science major and he plans to go to Graduate School at the end of this year.

VINCENT DE CESARIS, a native of North Reading, Mass., is this year's Assistant Production Director in charge of skits. Vinnie, a junior math major, is a member of Delta Psi Fraternity. He is a member of Key and Serpent Honorary as well as a member of the Varsity Track Team. Last Homecoming, he was in charge of the Poster Contest. Vinnie intends to go on to Medical School upon graduation.

JOHN BRADLEY is this year's Assistant Finance Director. John, a history and classics major, is a native of Mountainside, N.J. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, Newman Club, and the Outing Club. John is a member of the Student Association where he is sub-treasurer and chairman of S.A. films. He is also a member of Key and Serpent where he serves as treasurer. John plans to go on to graduate school when he graduates from UVM.

SUSAN MONTI, from New Britain, Conn., is this year's Kake Walk Secretary. Sue, a senior Business Education major, is a member of Pi Beta Phi where she has served as corresponding secretary. Sue has also been a W.S.G.A. House President. She has also been on the Dean's List. Sue's post-graduate plans are undecided at this time.

Susan Monti
Secretary

DAVID COHEN, a junior psychology major, is this year's Assistant Publicity Director. Dave, a native of Burlington, Vt., is a member of Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity where he serves as treasurer. He was the co-chairman and co-editor of the Freshman Book for the last two years. Dave has also had a variety of experience working on the Vermont CYNIC. He is also a member of Billings Governing Board and Key and Serpent Honorary. Upon graduation, Dave intends to go to Medical School.

ROBERT OSTROM, from Florham Park, N.J., is this year's Assistant Production Director in charge of walking and the royalty campaign. Bob is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon where he has served as Interfraternity Council Representative. He also served as Publicity Chairman of Greek Week in 1964. Bob intends to go to Law School upon graduation.

IKWA Thanks Its Directors

All 119 members of the Independent Kake Walk Association would like to express our appreciation to this year's leaders. In particular we'd like to give our thanks to Dick Dailey, the director and co-ordinator of the Independents' activities, Art Aronson, Dick's indefatigable assistant, IFC Representative Roger Jackson, the Committee Chairmen, including Financial Director Dave Matte, Publicity Director Bill Mangan, Sculpture Chairmen Phil Buttarovoli, Social Chairman Dave Zarling and Secretarial Chairwomen Betty Miller and Sheila Gorbis. Next year's Independent leaders will assume office the week after Kake Walk. President Richard Langs, Vice President John Bickford, Treasurer Robert Jensen and Secretary George Shapiro will compose the Executive Committee of the IKWA.

All one hundred and nineteen of us will be there screaming our guts out for this year's precedent-setters, those lion-hearted, high-kicking Kake Walkers, Eric Anderson and Bill Dixon!

A Walk Around The Green

Many of the buildings surrounding the quad, or Main Campus proper have interesting histories. In this article the reader will "walk" around the quad. The route will be east on Main Street, north on University Place, west on Pearl Street, and south on South Prospect.

Profs' Houses

John H. Converse, Class of 1861, gave two houses to the University to be used as homes for professors. At present one is a private home and the other is an office for the Vermont Department of Agriculture.

Pomeroy Hall

The second oldest building on campus is Pomeroy Hall, which was built in 1829. It was named for Dr. John Pomeroy, a lecturer in chirurgery (surgery) and anatomy. Originally it was two stories high and housed the medical college.

In 1858 a third story was added and a square tower was constructed in front containing a staircase with a cupola on top. The cupola, which was 71 feet off the ground, was later removed.

Morrill Hall

Morrill Hall, which now has administrative offices for the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, was built in 1907. It was named for Vermont Senator Justin S. Morrill, father of the land grant act. It was the first building to be provided for, by appropriation from the state of Vermont.

Old Mill

On June 29, 1825, General Lafayette laid the corner-stone for Old Mill. It was originally built in three sections as a fire prevention measure and was made into one unit in 1846. In 1883 it was modernized and has been renovated in recent years. It is the second building to be built on the site. Its predecessor, University Hall, burned in 1824.

Science Hall

Williams Science Hall was given by Dr. and Mrs. Edward Higgenson Williams and was completed in 1896. It was one of the first completely fireproof buildings, being constructed of granite, steel, brick, and artificial stone. The profiles of three American scientists - Agassiz, Henry, and Morse - are carved over the door. What were originally the basement and attic have been converted into labs, small lecture rooms, and offices.

Billings

In 1898 Billings Library, named for the Honorable Frederick Billings. It was designed by the American architect Henry Hobson Richardson and is considered to be one of his finest works. It is constructed of Long Meadow sandstone, oak, and Georgia pine. Recently converted into a student center, Billings now serves as a focal point for many campus activities.

Ira Allen Chapel

Ira Allen Memorial Chapel was the gift of James B. Wilbur. Of Georgian architecture, the building was completed in 1927. A 64-bell carillon was installed in the bell tower in 1955. It was dedicated to all UVM men and women who served in the armed forces.

College of Medicine

From 1829 to 1884 Pomeroy Hall housed the medical college. In 1884 a medical building was built on Pearl Street, but burned in 1903. The present building, completed in 1905, was built on the same site.

Waterman

In 1941 the Waterman Building was dedicated. It was the gift of Charles W. Waterman, Class of 1885, and Anna R. Waterman. At present the building contains classrooms, the University Store, a language laboratory, dining hall, recreational facilities, and administrative offices.

If you are bored in class someday (Heaven forbid!), look out the window and see if you can see the hoist behind Pomeroy by which the cadavers were taken to third floor, or where the three sections of Old Mill were joined, or the profiles of the scientists over the door of Science Hall. On second thought, the writer will advocate that investigations be undertaken between classes. Even history professors might disapprove of the aforementioned suggestion.

are available at the University Store, Bailey's Music Shop and at the Fleming Museum.

The cast is noted for its seasoned veterans. The lead, Elizabeth Ingoldsby, has played in many High School productions and is making her UVM debut. David Storti has been in many "Player" productions. has starred in "Macbeth," "Ghosts," and the "American Dream," and is a three year veteran of the Summer Shakespeare Festival. The supporting cast also has many seasoned actors, some, whose college acting experience dates back three years. Included in the cast are Lynn Householder, Emil DiDonato, Marilyn Deutsch, Judith Leach, Ann Abbott, Carolyn Jerard, Laurelee Allen, Marjorie Adams, Sandra Bartholomew, Mikell Beckley, Donna Kristensen, Douglas Hall, Richard Donn, Andy Simon, Joanne Napoli, Sarah Dobbs and also Miles Wortman.

All signs point to an outstanding theatrical success. Tickets are selling quickly and it looks like another University Players sellout. The play is recommended not only for Spanish and English students but for all those who seek a fine evening of theatre entertainment at a professional level.

Sophomores...

Here's what the new 2-year Army ROTC program means to you

A new Reserve Officer Training Corps program permits selected college sophomores to be commissioned as Army Second Lieutenants in two years. You can do this by:

1. Completing a special 6-week summer camp between your sophomore and junior years.
2. Completing the 2-year Advanced Course at any school offering the ROTC program.

What are the benefits of Army ROTC training?

- Management training for success in civilian or military life.
- $40 per month pay while attending the Advanced Course, plus uniforms; pay and paid travel for summer camps.
- Eligibility for free flight instruction at selected schools leading to a private pilot's license.
- A commission as an Army officer, with all of its accompanying benefits, including higher income, greater opportunity for advancement and officer status.
- The personal satisfaction that comes from knowing you're trained to assume leadership responsibilities.

These benefits will put you a step ahead of other college graduates and will pay off for the rest of your life. You owe it to yourself to investigate these new opportunities.

For complete information, see the Professor of Military Science at your school, or send the coupon below.

J.B. - The Man Behind The Cover

John R. Bergemann (Photograph by Bergemann)

A welcome addition to the CYNIC staff this semester is the creative personality of John Bergemann, a special student hailing from Valley Stream, New York.

Matriculating ordinarily at N.Y.U. as a graphics major, John has studied intensively fashion illustration, graphic and industrial design.

Some students may recall the excellent covers for the CYNIC's Greek Week and Homecoming issues. These were designed by John.

When asked about his motivations for spending a semester at UVM, John mentioned the desire to get a taste of campus life and to study under Prof. Aschenbach.

Having studied at various city schools (F.I.T., Pratt, Queens College and Parsons School of Design), John has consequently come in contact with individuals of expansive interests and experience. When queried for his opinion of UVM'ers, he is candid and perceptive.

Finding college life here to be a "Semi-fantasy", an "over-protected unreality", John does not consider UVM conducive toward preparing for life students who may eventually live in a more urban, fast-living environment (e.g. New York City).

Conscious of human "role-playing", John finds that, although their thoughts are the same as those of city students, UVM'ers present themselves differently. "People here seem cautious about engaging in conversations of depth and gravity," he asserts; and ordinary table-talk skirts the more pertinent issues of life.

As a direct consequence, John observes a drastic separation between social life and academic courses. Students appear hesitant, even fearful, of relating classroom knowledge and experience; hence, there seems to be no medium, i.e., reality between learning and self-actualization.

His own philosophy of life? Such a question will draw a dissertation from him. In a nutshell, however, "I favor to coat my lense with such filters as intensiveness, flexibility, appreciation, empathy and faith; and to see through and into many of life's flavors, tasting and gathering more ingredients for my own blend of existence."

Ingoldsby, M. D. Storti, Head Cast Of "Yerma"

The art of Federico Garcia Lorca comes to the University this coming Friday and Saturday, March 5th and 6th when the University Players present, under the direction of Ernest Cabrera, "Yerma." The tragedy is the story of a barren woman, her insensitive husband and the effects of her barrenness on the marriage. Elizabeth Ingoldsby and M. David Storti play the leads.

The poetry and music of Lorca is evidenced throughout the entire length of this infrequently produced play. Director Cabrera has done extensive research into the music of Lorca and his time to use with this production. Guitar music flourishes in the background while other, more exuberant music is used more apparently. Dancing, choreographed by Susan Bowman also adds to the music-like quality of the tragedy.

Students can view the artistic talent of Lorca on posters around the University (see picture). The sketch on the poster was done by Lorca himself and the signature was also done by the playwright.

This talented Spaniard lived a very active life. In the late 1920's he visited the United States. In 1936 he died mysteriously in Fascist-held Barcelona during the Spanish Civil War.

"Yerma" is being produced at the Arena Theatre at the bottom of the Fleming Museum. Tickets

Skits Further Campaigns

By Judi Weintraub

At 8:00 Saturday the 20th of February the preliminary activities for Kake Walk took place. It was Pops Night at the Memorial Auditorium, which was packed. The sororities and fraternities which are presenting candidates for Kake Walk King and Queen put on very funny skits and introduced their candidates. They are: for Queen - Mary Jeffery of Alpha Chi; Colleen Denny of Tri Delta; and Shelia Cronin of Gamma; for King -

Spencer Baker of Lambda Iota; Rusty Brink of Kappa Sig; and Mike Crane of Sig Nu. All candidates looked their very best.

The audience, which was packed like sardines in a tin can, was assailed from the balconies with pictures, lollipops, buttons, airplanes, and anything else imaginable sponsoring the people trying for royalty. For a freshman going to Pops Night for the first time it was very exciting and built up the Kake Walk spirit greatly.

Kake Walk weekend itself begins this Thursday night, with the Ball featuring the Kingsmen. On Friday afternoon is the Jazz Concert with the Lettermen and the Phoenix singers. Both Friday and Saturday nights will be the walking and the skits. Added to all this are parties, banquets, suppers and everything needed to make this the biggest and best weekend of the year.

History of Independent KW

By Judi Weintraub

The nation's oldest college winter carnival, Kake Walk, was first started in 1897. At that time it consisted of a Grand March, called the Peerade, in which everybody with a costume participated in, a number of specialties or skits which made fun of teachers, local officials, etc., walking, and a glee club recital.

From the beginning year and in through the very early 1900's the Independents took most of the kakes given as prizes for walking, and they also won first place in most of the specialties. There were usually four skits given and three of four couples competed in the walking. Along with the Independents students from the medical school competed. Kake

Walk sought to unify these two sections of the University.

The year 1905 was a big one for fraternities; for the first time they tied for first place with the Independents. From then on the Independents won less frequently as Kake Walk gained more prominence. In 1909 a trophy the Briggs Cup, was first given out as a prize and in 1924 Kake Walk was held for two consecutive nights for the first time.

Fraternities took over most of Kake Walk from snow sculptures to walking to the skits and the independents dropped out gradually from the Kake Walk festivities until 1944. Because of the war going on, therefore causing a severe shortage in the student body, the Independents tied for first place once again with a fraternity. The case was the same in 1945 and in this year Independents were allowed to be in the skits put on by the fraternities. Kake Walk was broadcast on short wave radio to the students overseas in this year.

After 1945, however, the Independents again dropped out of the picture. This year has been the first time since then that they are competing with the fraternities. They had planned to have a snow sculpture, they are entering two walkers and there will be an Independent party. Since they have a much larger group of students to choose from for walkers and many more to help with sculptures and a skit it is possible that, with time, the Independents may again rule over Kake Walk.

T.S. Eliot, "The Hollow Men"

Although T.S. Eliot may have intended a profound thought in the above lines of verse, we have found a significance in these lines which, oddly enough, capture the essence of Kake Walk as it is today.

Witness, if you will, the brief moment when, with a sole spotlight on the walkers, the white handkerchief flutters to the floor and simultaneously the band strikes up "Cotton Babes." The walkers assume their primary position and we see it reflected in a shadow casted over the expanse of the arena.

It may be the first time or the seventeenth that this scene recurs as each set of walkers commences its routines. But who does not feel with each succeeding drop of the handkerchief a wonderful exhilaration?

A NEW LOOK

We have given the cover a new look this year, not simply for the sake of originality, but more so because we conceive KW as something greater than can be symbolized by the walkers themselves.

Occurring for 68 years, KW is more than an annual event, more than a tradition. It is ritual, and it is fantasia.

Why, we ask ourselves, does KW take place year after year? "As a tradition" alone does not suffice in response. To us, Kake Walk and the few preceding weeks provide a unique opportunity for reaffirming the existence of fraternal spirit. Laboring at 2 a.m. to complete a snow sculpture, singing praises of royalty candidates, cheering madly for one's own walkers, or performing a skit with all its precise intricacies -- all these activities have one thing in common, namely that all concerned are laboring, singing, cheering and performing together as a unit.

If the omnipresent critics choose to malign Kake Walk, there are undeniably many shortcomings to pick upon. We choose to see it, however, above the superficial, as tradition, yes, but also as a manifestation of the desire to hold onto what is fulfilling and meaningful in an age of creeping depersonalization.

THE

wortman

Once again, it is Kake Walk, a time of gaiety, happiness and other assorted unprintable pleasures. In honor of the occasion, The Sceptic is happy to introduce a new feature to these pages.

Along with an intelligent SPS photographer we travelled all over the campus selecting interesting personages so we could present to you:

THE INQUIRING SCEPTOGRAPHER

The Question of the Week: The University is celebrating its sixty-eighth annual Kake Walk. In view of the holiday, how do you see the University of Vermont?

Ryman S. Jowell

J. Alfred Trafman

Professor Sabiticle

Claude Posenicker

M. W. Sceptic

Ryman S. Jowell, experienced professional administrator: "I am very happy to see the University in such fine shape this Kake Walk. The University is an expanding institution. You might notice that this year's Kake Walk can accomodate a greater amount of spectators because of our brand-new physical plant. We have made other similar important advances outside the building field. The advanced use of IBM machines has made this institution more efficient; faculty salaries are on the rise and more and more Deans are accounting for more and more people. And, oh yes, our students and education are good."

J. Alfred Trafman, member Alpha Sigma Sigma fraternity and a kake walker this year: "Yes, the university is getting better and better. The Kake Walk holiday sure has become good. That band, a couple of nights ago, the Queensmen, they sure could swing, and that jazz, sure was good jazz. Those Phoenix Singers sure swung and so did those Numbermen, or whatever they're called: real cool. Yeah, K.W. sure is good. After I get done walking, I'll hop into my Vette with my broad and will head for the house for some smoochum. This place sure is tops."

Professor Alfred J. ("Smiley") Sabiticle, Department of Scatology: "The University, in this, heh heh, the sixty-eighth anniversary of this, heh-heh, yearly orgy, is in a state of flux. More and more faculty members will be departing from these, heh-heh, hallow grounds, because the school refuses to pay more money. If you're in the business of education, you've got to afford to "meet the bill," chuckle-chuckle, so to speak. If you can't pay up, ya got to get out, as it were, yuck-yuck. I think I can speak for the remainder of the academic community when I say, to us, teaching is the most important thing, but, heh-heh, ya gotta look out for your old bankrollaz-zoonie. One more thing, I'd like to wish all my students a very happy Kake Walk, and remind them that, come next week, I'll get my turn and then we'll see how the little b-----ds do.

Claude Posenicker, independent student, College of Agriculture, "I sure do like the University and Kake Walk and all the goings on. I brought my girl up from East Bradford to see Burlington and those good groups that make the purty music. We danced so much it really hurt and the walkin' sure is something we're goin' to enjoy. Next year, when I marry and me and Lullubelle go back to East Bradford, we sure are goin' to remember this. I bet we'll remember it for the rest of our lives."

M.W. Septic, beatnick, pinko, rabble-rouser, bolshevik and President, UVM W.E.B. DuBois Fan Club: "I love to see all the pretty little boys and girls play their games on this weekend. While the capitalists are making all their money off of these dumb, bourgeois kids, the imperialists in Vietnam are bombing the hell out of the poor yellow fisherman. The university is run by a bunch of ignorant administrating idiots whose purpose is to deceive the poor infantile student and to collect loads of American greenbacks. The whole system up here is class-based and discriminatory against minority groups. How many Puerto Ricans are there up here? In the end the bourgeois imperialistic warmongers will be overthrown and we shall win. French House- A Reality

Several articles have already appeared in this year's CYNIC regarding the many activities of the French Cultural Center. In the course of the year, there have been lectures, films and the weekly activity of a French table in Simpson.

Many young women have expressed to Mrs. Swift, the Director, and to others, a desire to have Robinson Hall designated as a French House beginning next September. The office of the Dean of Women is enthusiastic about the possibility of a French House and is co-operating in every way. However, it will be necessary, in order to ensure the success of this project, to have in Dean Wing's office by March first the names of at least thirty-five women students who will agree to live in Robinson Hall next year.

The fact that Mrs. Swift will continue her interests in and direction of the Center's activities should bring about a student response large enough to make the French House a reality.

From The President

It is always a pleasure to welcome alumni, parents, and friends to the campus for the Kake Walk Weekend. You will each have many different reasons for coming, but I am sure there is one basic reason underlying all of them -- a genuine interest in the progress of the educational programs at Vermont.

By the time you arrive on campus, the classroom activities will have given way to the holiday spirit of the weekend. I hope that in conversation with faculty and students you will be able to catch the spirit of enthusiasm and vitality in the research and teaching programs that is evident in all parts of the colleges.

Each step in our building program has provided facilities which have helped to better the educational offerings. Some of the newly planned buildings will provide for added numbers of qualified Vermont high school graduates and excellent out-of-state students who seek to come here. Our planning looks ahead for ten years in an attempt to keep pace with these demands.

Right now your plans are intent on having a grand weekend of Kake Walk events. Mrs. Rowell joins me in wishing all of you that great thrill felt at the first note of "Cotton Babes" and the prospect of sharing a bite of "kake" with a winning group.

Lyman S. Rowell
Acting President

PROFESORES

"Why tell the truth when lies are so much more interesting?"

By Prof. J.D. O'Hara

Mr. Penner has already discussed some of the feelings that arise in a person honored by a request that he write for the CYNIC. Let me say amen to his words, and add only a brief comment on my own problem. My readers, I know, are bubbling over (already I hear them) with the gaiety of our winter festival. But I -- alas! -- am plunged into gloom by my assignment. For I have been asked, begged, beseeched, even implored, to make a last-ditch defense of that noble festival, soon to be attacked by that most hostile of all opponents, Apathy.

'Kake Walk, we call it now. It began, however, during the Civil War, when inflation was widespread, sugar was scarce; flour was $20 the sack; you will not be surprised, then, to hear that the festival's full name is in fact Kupkakewalk.

In its origins, of course, Kupkakewalk was negroid. There's no blinking the fact. It was not, however, as some misguided people have thought, a satire on Negroes. What would be the point of satirizing them when -- thanks to the admissions office -- none of them was around to feel the criticism? In fact, Kupkakewalk merely paid tribute to those lovable folk, so quaint, so musical, so child-like, and so incorrigibly shiftless.

To say that the Kupkakewalkers tried to imitate Negroes, however, is absurd. The Negro cake walk of Civil War times was a naive, spontaneous, cheerfully pompous parade: gaudy costumes and the impromptu strutting of young men and their girls made up all the show. Such a display would not suit UVM, then or now.

Recognizing, even then, the dangers of such nonconformity and the horrors of unbridled individuality, the founders of Kupkakewalk -- now known as the Original Krums -- made substantial changes in the affair. Foreshadowing the Rockettes, they saw to it that individuality was eliminated, spontaneity crushed, and gaiety unplugged. Where the Negroes improvised, Kupkakewalkers follow a routine whose strictness and mindlessness are the envy even of the Pershing Rifles. Where the Negroes sang and called out to their friends, the Kupkakewalkers only mutter 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 4.

(Approach a Kupkakewalker, if you dare, some months after the affair, and whisper in his ear 1 2 3 4 1 2 3 4. Like a child's toy, wound up and forgotten and suddenly set off in the attic, late one night, by a careless mouse, he will spasmodically jerk through a minute or two of his routine before spectators, fearing epilepsy, seize him and sit on his head.)

Most important of all, among these manifold differences between the Negro cake walk and the UVM Kupkakewalk, is -- no, not the spelling. Kupkakewalk is spelled that way because it was named by an editor of the CYNIC. . . . The most important change is of course the elimination of the girls. It's true that some nervous wench, bedaubed with makeup and made more ridiculous by an ill-fitting coronet, pretends to preside over Kupkakewalk Weekend, but into the main event no female can intrude. Frat Klub standards prevail, and the couple is exclusively, intensively male.

The training, the rehearsing, and the psychology of these Vermont ballet dancers would apply repay study, but we have no time. We must, instead, go on to remind skeptics of the spectators' part in Kupkakewalk. Too many sports, you know, are dangerous to life and limb, and even the milder ones tax the heart and the brain. Kupkakewalk offers no such dangers. The spectators sit quietly. The crowded conditions ensure a warm and cozy womb-like atmosphere. The interminable repetition of "Cotton Babes" induces a drugged state. The activity out on the floor may be frenzied, but you -- like everyone else -- can sit quietly, cradling your stomach on your lap, breathing shallowly through your mouth, and perfecting the stylish glaze of your eyeballs. If that isn't good, clean, safe American fun, what is?

Most of you will agree with me that it's a crying shame, the recent nasty attitude toward Kupkakewalk. Back in good King John's golden days, when the king himself announced that "fraternities are in integral part of a UVM education," Kupkakewalk was rightly understood as the peak of college experience.

Only grinds and independents thought of formal education as the purpose of college. Dependents and other good guys -- if there are any others -- knew that learning must be related to life. What's the good of reading "Hamlet," they asked, if you don't apply it to your own life? So during Kupkakewalk they did, and the campus shook as cannons were fired off whenever they drank.

Now, unhappily, things are different. Kampus -- oops -- Campus police will be posted at the gymnasium doors this year with breathometers, and young gentlemen, who have tossed back a few against the evening chill, may find themselves in the old gym instead of the new. Meanwhile, housemothers who formerly busied themselves with the customary weekend issue of chastity belts will, this year, also smell the perfume bottles that the girls carry. Things have changed.

Surely some protest should be made. At a time like this, when Negroes are being jailed and tortured throughout the South, when the United States sponsors that same torture in Vietnam, when poverty fills the abundant world, when Asian and African conflicts threaten at every moment to become world-wide wars, when ignorance is more dangerous than ever, when the existence of the human race itself is problematical -- at a time like this, what's a person to do if he's not allowed to get drunk and peacefully watch boys dance with each other?

Q - Is it necessary to attend all the classes of this Lab. course.
A - No. But if you can arrange to be present at odd, off hours it gives the impression that you are doing extra work.

There was also a section giving sample interviews dealing with special cases.

"Sic - I am three points short of the average required of my fraternity." - "Can you help me out?"

But most arresting were the slogans running around the top of the wall incised and in gold.

Remember - You have paid your tuition the university owes you an education.

Remember - The faculty is hired to teach, you are not payed to learn.

Remember - A credit con'ed is a credit earned.

Remember - Get the answer. Cheating is the overcoming of what really are artificial barriers.

Remember - You are just as graduated with an easy credit.

Remember - Good guys never win.

The skit was beginning to crumble. I felt confused, values were spinning around me, perhaps I was to reactionary for this forward look. Everything went dark. In the darkness there was the thud of many muffled feet, whispered commands, a bump, a low curse and the release of tense long suppressed coughing. The props were being removed.

When light returned the mountains were purple, the sun was lower; cold forced my collar up and my head down, I returned to reality and went down off the hill.

The fantasy had left me but the problem remained. How had the green stamps gotten to be more important than the food they go with? What was the relationship between the credits and the ideas they stood for?

Perhaps the credits are part of a method, a structure necessary to sustain the less rigid fabric of ideas. Perhaps the credits are part of a machine which grinds on sustaining motion between the moments of idea spontaneity. Perhaps as the spaces between the live interplay of ideas become great the machine must of necessity loom large. There must be some method for maintaining continuity and congruity. Close up the spaces between real happenings and this structure will take its proper place.

For the teacher the university is not just a clean way of making a living. For the student is is not just four years to be gotten through University is for all of us a part of our life. Each experience is a thing to be met and enjoyed for its own intrinsic values, not labored through because it produces credits, money, or because green stamps come with it. I felt we needed another wall with other slogans.

Remember - You have paid your tuition so get your money's worth.
Remember - A course is not taught to make money. A course is not taken to get credits.

Remember - A credit con'ed is no credit at all. An easy credit is an empty cornflake box with a hundred green stamps, not very nourishing.

Remember - You are the only one it is possible for you to cheat.
Remember - Perhaps good guys don't need so desperately to win.

A letter is more fun to make for the serif. A building is more a building for the joy of doing which it expresses. An idea is a thing of magic and beauty not just something to be responsible for. If we let the spaces between spontaneity grow to great; if we ride the machine and just get through we are in great danger of being very dead before our time.

I went back to my office. Put my last book of green stamps in an envelope addressed it S.E.C.B. Development Fund and mailed it. I don't really need the stamps anyway. I get all the joy I need from my work - I guess.

Lane Series Presents

Joan Baez

By Betty Miller

The Lane Series Committee is proud to present as the last concert of its tenth anniversary season the folksinging of Joan Baez. On Wed. evening, March 3 at 8:30 in Memorial Auditorium, guests of the Blue Concerts will have the privilege of witnessing the talents of Miss Baez, described by critics as, "...not just a singer, but a charismatic youth figure. Her stage performances, like those of the greatest artists of our times, are not performances in the sense of acts at all, but extensions of her private life personality. . . . She is natural and real."

The private life of Joan Baez began twenty-four years ago when she was born of Mexican-Irish parentage. Her father is a physics professor who has taken positions all over the world, resulting in Joan's being raised and schooled in diverse places such as Baghdad, New York, Palo Alto, Redlands and Boston. She began to sing and play guitar in her early teens but has never taken any formal music lessons. Nevertheless, all critics have agreed that her guitar work is exceptionally competent and her voice has quality and control such as years of training cannot bring to most professionals.

Joan Baez came to folk music in early 1958 when her family moved to Boston. She started to meet some of the college student enthusiasts who filled the local coffee shops. Before leaving the Boston area, she'd been performing at the Club 47 in Cambridge where she sang to "troubled intellectuals" and packed the house twice weekly. In 1959, Miss Baez made a startling debut, unannounced, at the first Newport Folk Festival. Bob Shelton of the New York Times said of it, "A star was born . . . a young soprano with a thrilling, lush vibrato and fervid and well-controlled projection." Her voice has been described by Harry Harris in the Philadelphia Inquirer, "As for the Baez voice, it's liquid, limpid, lovely, equally effective in protest songs. . . in songs of unrequited love."

Critic Ralph Gleason attributes Miss Baez's popular appeal to her "utter reality, plus the glowing humanity of her personality and the remarkable gift for vocal communication that she possesses. . . . Her audience for the most part digs her all the way and, in a very real manner, seems to feel that her concerts are more than recitals, they are religious experiences." This remains to be seen on March 3, when the opportunity to witness a live Baez performance will be given us. I am sure we will not be disappointed.

Graduate College Offers Scholarships

By Richard Berk

Many students are unaware of just what graduate education can do for them and the opportunities it offers. The Graduate College has recently received information on several new scholarships in various fields on the graduate level. Seniors, and other students who wish to look ahead, will be particularly interested in these fellowships, the more prominent of which are as follows:

Five new traineeships have been added to the seven previously existing ones offered by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). These are awarded in the space-related sciences and carry a stipend plus tuition and an additional allowance for dependents.

In an effort to increase the number of teachers who have their doctorates, the National Defense Education Act (NDEA) offers doctoral support in a variety of fields, the newest opportunities being in the field of botany.

The National Science Foundation (NSF) offers traineeships for M.A. and Ph.D. candidates in the physical sciences, math, and engineering. These involve annual appointments with a strong chance of reappointment. The University competes nationally for most of these scholarships and then awards the ones it receives to deserving students within the University. The individual student competes for others on a national basis. These are all evidences of further Federal effort to promote advanced study.

In addition to these national scholarships the University of Vermont offers fellowships for Ph.D. and Masters degrees in some 25 to 30 of its departments. These are usually for approximately $2,200 for the first year, $2,300 the second, and $2,400 the third year. The University's stipend levels are competitive with those of other institutions. Among the other graduate study opportunities offered by the University are 48 graduate teaching fellowships and 30 graduate research fellowships. These offer $2,640 a year plus tuition on a twelve month basis. Also offered are 4 Graduate College fellowships involving a stipend of $1,000 plus tuition.

Dean MacMillan of the Graduate College, in commenting on graduate education at the University of Vermont, said, "The Graduate College is developing faster than any other level of the University. However, a good university expands at a judicious rate since no change in the undergraduate program can avoid influencing the graduate program and vice versa. Since the University of Vermont's primary responsibility is undergraduate education the Graduate College cannot expand too rapidly. When graduate expansion weakens the undergraduate program then it is time for me to resign."

Students interested in investigating these and other graduate study opportunities should contact the office of the Graduate College.

Past Winners

As in all hard fought competition everyone tries to do their very best but only one team can be first. A combination of skill, dedication, and extra hard work has produced these past winners. Let's hope that the best team comes out on top this year.

Exhaustive Preparation- A Behind The Scenes View

By Judy Beeber

Soon, the moment we have all been waiting for will arrive, when the lights will dim in Patrick Gymnasium and the multicolored kakewalkers will do their annual routines. The moment when the white handkerchief is dropped culminates the months of time, effort, and sweat which the walkers have devoted to perfecting their performance.

For a two and one half minute performance, one may wonder how much went into the preparation for this short exercise of skillfulness. Most of the walkers started practicing in September or October. An hour or more a day is devoted to exercising in order to condition the muscles of the legs and arms to endure the strenuous activity involved in walking. Endurance is built up by running, walking and stretching.

During the months previous to Kake Walk, certain restrictions are placed on the walkers. Of course, any sport such as skiing, which enhances the possibility of breaking a limb or a bone, is prohibited. Smoking is out of the question since it shortens one's endurance.

Two boys from each fraternity, are selected on the basis of height, weight and agility. The emphasis in the performance is the exactness of timing and the perfectability of the various motions involved. The kicks and hand motions must exactly follow the legal requirements. A good performance is exemplified by two walkers whose timing is so perfect that they look like one.

As in any competition, a winner must be chosen. So it's fitting that the Kake Walk committee has set up a system of scoring the essentials of walking. Those who adhere to the requirements score the highest. The position of the head and shoulders counts twenty five points. The exactness of the kick is worth thirty points and overall smoothness and teamwork, which is all important merits forty points.

Standing on the sidelines during the walker's performance is the coach who, often does not receive the credit he deserves. The coach is usually a former walker or either has acquired his knowledge of the skills involved from friends and relatives who have walked sometime in the past. In the past months, he has devoted much time and effort drilling his walkers so that each movement is precise. During the routine, on the night of Kake Walk, he provides the spirit and encouragement needed under the tremendous stress.

The kake walkers on February 26th and 27th will try their best to make Kake Walk 1965 an exciting and thrilling experience. May the best men win!

Essentials Of Walking

1. Head and Shoulders (one judge)
 - a. Head should be to rear forming arch with shoulders.
2. Kick (one judge)
 - a. Thighs should be brought up parallel to the ground before rest of leg is extended.
 - b. Leg should be straight.
 - c. Toes should be pointed.
3. Teamwork and Smoothness (two judges)
 - a. Walkers should display high degree of coordination.
 - b. Rapidity of movement ought not necessarily be considered desirable over less rapid and more decisive actions.
 - c. Hands when raised in air above head should have fingers extended and separated.

Kake Walk Scoring

- | | |
|--|-----------|
| 1. Position of head and shoulders | 25 points |
| 2. Kick | 30 points |
| 3. Teamwork and smoothness | 40 points |
| 4. The peerade of walkers will not count in the judging. | |
| | 95 points |

A NEW JUDGING SYSTEM

This year each of the four judges will be responsible for the major areas of judging. In this way, the judges will be able to more critically evaluate the performances of each team.

ATTENTION: FINANCIAL AID APPLICANTS

All perspective financial aid applicants are asked to attend one of the two meetings concerning financial aid for next year. The Director of Financial Aid will speak and questions from the floor will be answered.

OUR ADVISOR

L. E. VAN BENTHUYSEN

By Larry Van Benthuyesen

KAKE WALKS I HAVE KNOWN

One of the first things I heard when I arrived on the Vermont campus as a new student back at the end of the 1940's was "wait until you see Kake Walk."

In response to the outlandishly ignorant question of "What's Kake Walk," my green colleagues and I were knowingly advised that if I did no good to talk about Kake Walk, we'd have to see it for ourselves.

After a long nocturnal vigil for tickets (the line stretched from what is now the Placement Office back past the bookstore, up the stairs and out the main entrance of Waterman and about 100 feet north toward what was then the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital), this reporter did see it for himself, and those sumg upperclassmen were right. That's the only way to appreciate it.

When all's said and done, there is nothing quite like the impact of that first pair of walkers strutting out to the brassy invitations of the Cotton Babe.

KAKE WALK UBER ALLES

The University of Vermont may count a history rich with the accomplishments of teachers and alumni. It enjoys a quiet and special reputation as one of the nation's old and fine small universities.

Yet this writer suspects that the affection and pride Vermont sons and daughters hold for Kake Walk transcends the delight and pride they place in the gift of the rich academic tradition they are privileged to share.

The point of this column is not to suggest anything wrong with the loyalty and affection Kake Walk commands in those it has infected.

Rather, it is to suggest that Kake Walk may be considered an annual and delightful sign that The University of Vermont, as typified by its students, continues to be a lively, vital institution.

If it were not, its student body could not every year produce the festively spontaneous, imaginative and creative extravaganza which is Kake Walk.

ALL WORK AND NO PLAY, ETC.

Any student body which can keep pace with the demanding academic standards of this University (the committee which studied our grading system can tell you the University's standards are demanding) and still find time to produce Kake Walk and a continuing variety of extracurricular activities, needn't apologize for itself or for its chosen institution.

And I might add that a faculty and administration which can enter into the spirit of a college carnival the way Vermont's faculty and administration have entered into the spirit of Kake Walk, cannot be considered to be entirely humorless or unsympathetic.

To be sure, there are those who would count the February madness as so much immature nonsense, a nuisance and a foe of scholarship.

But to the great majority, Kake Walk is an entirely useful luxury, like the Mardi Gras, which provides for all its patrons an opportunity to take a moment out of the academic calendar, dress it alternately in formal gowns and gaudy costumes, orchestrate it with a big brass band, script it with ribald pokes at parking, drinking and other regulations, sculpture it in snow, and enjoy the heck out of it.

BOOLAH, BOOLAH!

Like Christmas and Commencement, Kake Walk only comes once a year, and it's gone too soon. And it provides an entirely happy reminder to those of you who occasionally sell yourselves or your institution short, that you are both rather special.

But if you haven't already seen Kake Walk, there's no use talking about it.

Who Needs Thoreau?

By Lynn Householder

The new dormitory now being planned seems likely to be co-ed, as herein previously mentioned. Even in Vermont the idea, which means separate wings instead of separate dorms, is hardly radical; and, in fact, it has provoked little controversy. The surprising thing is that -- among the girls -- much of the opinion is negative.

The ensuing inconvenience of perhaps having fewer opportunities for sloppy appearance seems slight; our deans have left us few times and places anyway. I have several friends in co-ed dorms at my "home" campus Indiana University, and it never occurs to them (or me) that the disadvantages are worth considering. Never before or after college will most of us live in segregation by sexes. Why now?

Enlarging opportunities for social relationships -- meeting, knowing, and understanding people promotes mutual comprehension and consideration among mankind in a tiny way. Promoting friendships of various sorts would pleasantly help many students. Social activities would find success easier to assure, with members of both sexes easily available. And, assuming a joint dining hall, I'm willing to admit that the male mind adds to a conversation and could stimulate discussion at the table.

Surely the administration would not assume a need for still stricter rules. The "ways for those with a will" would not increase. Moreover, maturity and responsibility cannot be developed without at least occasional necessity for these. If we do not have to make decisions involving real problems, we will depend on outside sources which prevent what age says should be prevented. By such enclosure and limitation are the American curses (e.g. lack of independent thought, lack of decisiveness, and dullness from absence of the calculated risk) promulgated. I'm hinting at curfews, apartment limits, closed dorm policies.

How much interest do we have in specifics rather than vague complaints? Enough for monthly or biennial open forms to grill (and hopefully stimulate) University faculty and staff of any current interest? S.A. should not and does not want to be the only simple avenue of information and suggestion. S.A. might itself be

Henry Mandel

By Sanford Plotkin

This year SCOPE has presented seventeen programs and plans to present thirteen more before the end of the semester. The person behind this activity is SCOPE's dynamic President, Henry Mandel. Though SCOPE is four years old, it has never presented a program comparable to this year's. Henry can proudly point to an organization which is building up a name, which is respected for, itself as a drawing feature. Henry has pointed out "Momentum is building up... in the programs since November, six out of nine have been attended by two or more hundred people."

In speaking with Henry, I mentioned that the faculty seem conspicuous by their absence. Support is a problem. At the Mark Lane Lecture which dealt with the mysteries surrounding the President's assassination, to the best of my knowledge, only Mr. Molho and Mr. Hand of the History Department were present. Other members of the faculty, especially the Political Science Dept., who could have intelligently questioned the remarkable evidence presented by Mr. Lane, were not there.

For the future, SCOPE again plans to increase its budget while improving and maintaining the quality of its presentations. SCOPE, actually a subcommittee of the Student Association, plans a full spring calendar. In the coming semester, Louis Untermeyer, whose correspondence with Robert Frost is being published, will appear as part of the Robert Frost Week. Plans are also being made to bring to the University a film critic (who may be Stanley Kaufman of the New Republic) to discuss avant-garde films as part of the Fine Arts Festival. These plans are tentative. Others scheduled for this spring are: Dr. Rhine, an expert in the field of E.S.P., Dr. Weil who has visited Russia three times who will discuss contemporary life and literature, and a representative of World Federalism who will present the case for World Government are scheduled for the coming semester.

The problem that Mr. Mandel faces is getting through to the students (which Mr. Van Benthuyesen and I have discussed in earlier issues.) Student support to work for SCOPE is enough, though there is room for freshmen to join. SCOPE is, in the final analysis, an organization that is "doing" something to make U.V.M. a better school.

more effective if its elections were more efficient and if someone (or two, or three) checked to see whether things are getting done and who does them, and see to it that those elected into S.A. have ideas and drive. Leaders especially need to both inspire and accomplish plans, and offices supposed to be for leaders are soon to be filled.

ONE MAN SKIT

By Prof. Paul Aschenbach

A while ago on a walkable day I found myself strolling across the campus looking at the buildings. I was looking especially at the detailing of the older buildings. My eyes groped into a burst of stone vegetation too high for my hands to reach. Visually I ran my fingers over a terracotta frieze clinging above long narrow windows like a crust of well ordered lichen. I took delight in these useless scrifs to the basic structure and I found a joy in the compulsion of the builder which caused them to happen. They seemed to speak of a joy in things which reaches beyond the blantly practical.

My thoughts, wandering as random as my feet, turned on the practical, the impractical to learning, teaching and the joy and excitement of ideas which reach beyond their immediate application. I wondered again how to answer the student question "What good will this do me anyway?" I thought again of the war that has grown up between student and teacher, each somehow trying to get something from the other, while giving as little as possible in return. It would seem that initially both were interested in the same pursuit, the exploration and evaluation of man's ideas; the development of disciplines and skills on which to base the building of new ideas. After all, when we stop fearing we will be corny or stuffy, this is not a dull adventure to find ourselves involved in. Have we lost sight of the objectives in the welter of methods? Student and teacher walk opposite sides of the street going through the motions but each seeming to forget the reasons which brought them together in the first place.

While all this was leading my mind nowhere, my legs had carried me to the top of the campus somewhere near the water tower. I looked out to the mountains, my eyes full of distance, blue sky and golden winter sun. I found myself in a fantasy, for where else could this sort of thinking lead.

I was in a plaza of the future in the center of which stood a large statue. It was the figure of a young woman, a great fifteen foot, gatefold, semi-nude babe, aggressively mammalian, rendered in tru-kolor-texturized-neophrène. On her head she wore an unattractive bunny had and in her hand she held a multi-nippled plastic box which extruded from a slot, graceful coils of green stamps, the symbol of the great American illusion, something for nothing. In my imagination the plaza and this beautiful, easy-to-understand allegory stood before the Student Easy Credit Bureau. The most imposing on the campus, this futuristic building was devoted to the pursuit of credits. It seems that long ago it had become obvious to many that the major objective of "University" (any number can play) was to obtain in four years a number of credits in the cheapest, least fatiguing and least time consuming manner. The student who gets the most while giving the least, wins, and goes on to greater and easier things in life. The S.E.C.B. was conceived to help the student towards this goal.

The staute, the plaza, and the building had the air of a large, very expensive, set for a Kake Walk skit. With the courage of a science fiction who, driven to probe all things and push all available buttons, I entered the building. Inside I found chrome and plastic, deep piles on the floor, and plush furniture where students lounged to discuss plans for the evening while waiting answers from the Credit Master. The magic light besprinkled panels of this great computer, which dealt with all questions pertaining to credit collecting, took up one whole wall of the room. The opposite wall was lined with dating booths for couples wishing to discuss plans in private.

Trying to look as though I belonged, I relaxed into a sort of coffee shop slouch which conveys the idea that I had expected to meet someone I know here, but if not its ok, I'd rather be alone anyway. I sauntered over to the Credit Master panel and looked with wonder at the lights, keys, buttons and whirling tapes set behind glass. Hoping that there would be no demand for my lost I.D. card I took a sampling of the questions and answers.

Q - Does professor "A" expect us to be responsible for the stuff in the text book?

A - In general no, but concentrate on chapters 5-8-14 he is partial to these.

Q - Does professor "B" expect us to write on the stuff in the book?

A - Yes, but a quick reading of all the picture captions should give you an adequate grasp of the material.

21 Seniors Achieve DMS Badges

Brig. General Dayton W. Eddy pins D.M.S. badges on Cadet James D. Foley. Colonel Leonard G. Robinson and Cadet Colonel Herbert D. Safford look on.

During the visit of Brigadier General Dayton Eddy, UVM '37, to the University of Vermont today, nine recently-appointed ROTC Distinguished Military Students were presented the distinctive badges symbolic of their new status. Those appointed bring the University's DMS total to twenty-one cadets.

Distinguished Military Students are Seniors who are appointed by the Professor of Military Science with the concurrence of the President of the University on the basis of their outstanding qualities of leadership, initiative, and high moral character; aptitude and interest for the military services; standing in the upper-third of their military science class; and above average performance in their University class. If these high standards are maintained through the balance of their Senior year, DMS's are appointed Distinguished Military Graduates and are offered a commission in the Regular Army.

Those appointed were: Roger F. Ames, Middleburgh, N.Y.; Kenneth S. Austin, Woodstock, Vt.; John W. Bossi, Montpelier, Vt.; Nels L. Christenson, Northampton, Mass.; James D. Foley, Burlington, Vt.; Warren P. Giddings, Meriden, Conn.; David J. Goode, Ithaca, N.Y.; Martin H. Heck, Green-Bush, N.Y.; and Gerald J. Smith, Rockville, N.Y.

Second Lieutenant Rick Hubbard, Middlebury, Vt., University of Vermont, Class of 1963, former captain of the UVM Varsity Ski Team and member of the ROTC Cadet Brigade, is presently competing for one of the berths on the United States team that will participate in the 10th Conseil International du Sport Militaire (CISM) Skiing Championships March 2-6 at Andermatt, Switzerland.

Numbered among the 17 aspirants for the team are three Olympians of a year ago and another from 1960. Three skiers were members of last year's CISM Team.

Three events make up the CISM Skiing Championships. First is the military patrol race, followed by the individual cross country race, and the Alpine combined, featuring slalom and giant slalom racing.

Lieutenant Hubbard, an ROTC Cadet Captain and rifle team member at UVM, is a member of the Army's Infantry branch assigned to the U.S. Army Europe.

NOTICE

All Student Organization Treasurers who plan to apply to the Student Association for the 1965-66 school year must pick up their budget request forms at the S.A. office between Feb. 22 and March 12. Failure to abide by the preceding instructions will prevent any recognized organization from obtaining Student Association funds for the 1965-66 school year.

History Recaptures KW Tradition

One of UVM's oldest and best-loved traditions is here again! Like any other tradition, Kake Walk has had many things happen to it, to make it the event we know today.

Our first "winter carnival" was held in 1893, when the Military Ball was cancelled. Instead, skits were held which were considered both amusing and financially successful (net profit: $165!).

In 1894, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" was initiated. This old Southern harvest dance featured a pair of plantation workers competing for a cake.

Kake Walk was considered to be too wild by the administration (they seem to have been conditioned by now,) and the event was not repeated until 1897, when it was used to raise funds for the football team.

By 1900, a new feature had been added to Kake Walk. This was a parade, participated in by most students at the University, and characterized by a vast array of colorful costumes.

Kake Walk was already firmly established in 1901, when there was a record turn-out - 800 people. As was to be the custom for many years to come, Sherman's Band played. Five couples "walked fo' de kake."

In 1903, instead of holding the holiday in the fall or winter, it was moved up to the closest weekend to Washington's birthday. Kake Walk was then held in Cotton Babes is the theme tune of Kake Walk. It was written in 1904 by Percy Wenrich. This familiar song almost lost its claim to fame when every copy was destroyed by fire in the same year as it was written. From memory, however, Dr. Joseph Lechnyr rewrote the entire score for every instrument. In memory of his contribution to Kake Walk, the Joseph E. Lechnyr Memorial Award is presented to the fraternity "which most nearly approaches the spirit and devotion of Kake Walk, exemplified by Joe Lechnyr."

It is odd, but in the early years of Kake Walk, the actual walking was not the highlight of the holiday. In fact, in 1904, only two couples participated in the walking; one was from the Medical School, the other was from the academic section.

By 1910, up to six couples walked. As a novelty, the walkers had bales of cotton in their paths. At an appointed time, pickaninies jumped out from behind the bales and joined in the dance. Apparently, it was not too successful.

In 1934, the first king and queen elections were held, but, at that time, they were somewhat different than they are now. The candidates belonged to political parties and had to electioneer. Once the king was elected he could choose his queen by dice rolling. This was rather an un-queenlike procedure, so in 1936, the queens were also elected.

Despite the fact that Kake Walk was very firmly established and accepted by 1952, in that year, disputes over the blackening of the Walkers' faces caused some action to be taken. Charley Johnson, who introduced "Kake Walk", was invited to attend our Kake Walk in order to settle the dispute over whether or not to blacken the faces of the walkers. Unfortunately, he was unable to come because he had cataracts on both eyes, but it was inferred by his letter, that he found nothing wrong with the practice.

Kake Walk has come a long way since its uncertain beginning. We have seen the impromptu stage where most festivities were private, the Armory Days (when Kake Walk was held on the present site of the Fletcher Library), the Stage where the fraternities put on stunts for which there was generally little preparation, from these stages, we have arrived at our present level of careful planning and elaborate execution of plans.

After almost fading out in its early days because of lack of interest, Kake Walk is now the highlight of the UVM year. Walking fo' de Kake has developed from just one small event of a one night winter carnival to a highly competitive and important event of the weekend.

FRATERNITY SKITS VIE FOR BORGMAN TROPHY

Although hotly contested, the skits have usually been able to be considered the lighter side of Kake Walk. The short comedy sketches hit at some aspect of university life. This year the fraternities will be trying to break the domination of Phi Sigma Delta and Tau Epsilon Phi who have captured the Borgman Trophy for four straight years.

Walkers are known by the colors of their silks. (Credit: Adess, S.P.S.)

Being one of the top college weekends in the country, the University of Vermont's Kake Walk must have something to offer. Although the jazz concert, the ball, and the skits are all an important part, nothing has been able to match the excitement of "Walkin' Fo De Kake". The competition of the fraternities for the coveted Kake, denoting excellence in performing the intricate and precise routines of Walking, is a tradition that no other college can boast of.

Kake Walk number 67 will be no different from the other 66 except for the elimination of the controversial "Blackface". Otherwise the drama, action, and costumes are all the same. The walkers all wear silks and satins of different colors to identify them with their respective fraternities. The following list should be of great help to you both Friday and Saturday nights in determining who is who.

Acacia - black vests with gold lapels, black trousers with gold stripe down side.

Alpha Epsilon Pi - gold pants with blue stripes, gold vest and tails with blue trimming.

Alpha Gamma Rho - they will wear green and gold.

Alpha Tau Omega - blue costume with gold trim and gold buttons.

Delta Psi - black and white vertical stripes.
Kappa Sigma - green pants and tails with red vest.
Lambda Iota - white pants, red vest, red and white stripe vest.

Phi Delta Theta - blue costume with silver trim.

Phi Mu Delta - orange and black.
Independents - green and yellow

Phi Sigma Delta - violet costume with white lapels and white stripe down side.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon - kelly green costume with silver sequins.

Sigma Nu - pink and white costume without tails.

Sigma Phi - blue and white.

Sigma Phi Epsilon - red and purple.

Tau Epsilon Phi - blue tails, white trousers with blue stripes down sides.

Theta Chi - red and white.

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH

Today I begin my eleventh year of writing this column in your campus newspaper.

I wasn't sure I'd be coming back this year. After a decade of doing this column, I had retreated to my country seat, tired but happy, to enjoy a nice long rest. But last night as I sat on my verandah, peaceful and serene, humming the largo from A Long Day's Night and worming my dog, a stranger suddenly appeared before me.

He was a tall, clean-limbed man, crinkly-eyed and crooked-grinned, stalwart and virile. "How do you do," he said. "My name is Stalwart Virile and I am with the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade people."

"Enchanted," I said. "Take off your homburg and sit down." I clapped my hands sharply. "Norman!" I called. "Another chair for Mr. Virile!"

Obediently my dog trotted away and returned directly with a fanback chair of Malayan rattan. He is the smartest dog in our block.

"I suppose you're wondering why I am here," said Mr. Virile, seating himself.

"Well, sir," I replied, my old eyes twinkling roguishly, "I'll wager you didn't come to read my meter."

You can imagine how we howled at that one!

"That's a doozy!" cried Mr. Virile, finally catching his breath. "I must remember to tell it to Alice when I get home."

"Your wife?" I said.

"My father," he said.

"Oh," I said.

"But enough of wit and humor," he said. "Let us get down to business. How would you like to write a campus column for Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?"

"For money?" I said.

"Yes," he said.

"My hand, sir," I said and clasped his. Warmly he returned the pressure, and soft smiles played upon our lips, and our eyes were moist with the hint of tears, and we were silent, not trusting ourselves to speak.

"What will you write about in your campus column?" asked Mr. Virile when he was able to talk again.

"I will take up the burning issues that vex the American undergraduate!" I cried, bounding to my feet. "I will explore, without fear or favor, such explosive questions as 'Are roommates sanitary?' and 'Should proctors be given a saliva test?' and 'Should capital punishment for pledges be abolished?' and 'Can a student of 19 find happiness with an economics professor of 80?'"

"And will you also say a pleasant word from time to time about Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?" asked Mr. Virile.

"Sir," I said simply, "what other kind of word except pleasant could I possibly say about Personna Blades, which give me more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other blade I might name?"

"Another of my products is Burma Shave," said Mr. Virile. "Can you find it in your heart to mention Burma Shave occasionally?"

"But of course!" I declared. "For is not Burma Shave the whisker-wiltingest lather in the land?"

"Yes," he admitted.

And then he shook my hand again and smiled bravely and was gone—a tall silhouette moving erectly into the setting sun.

"Farewell, good tonsorialist!" I cried after him. "Aloha!"

And turned with a will to my typewriter.

Swimmers Float To 6-2 Season

One of the newest intercollegiate sports at Vermont is swimming but it has been the most successful of the winter sports with the Catamounts coming home winners in six of the first eight meets. Coach Les Leggett confers with Capt. Jay Gloetzner.

With one meet remaining on this season's schedule, coach Les Leggett's swimmers have attained a 6-2 won-lost mark. The team has made tremendous progress in this second year of intercollegiate competition and has shown steady improvement in beating Norwich, Loyola of Montreal, Sir George Williams, and strong Plattsburg, Union and Connecticut squads. The two defeats have been to Mass. and a powerful McGill team.

The development of this winning team is due largely to the excellent conditioning attained through coach Leggett's vigorous training program. In swimming, conditioning is as important as natural ability, if not more so, but can only be achieved if the individual is dedicated to hard work and improvement. The spirit and dedication of the Catamount swimmers has been generated by the inspirational leadership and enthusiasm of coach Leggett and senior captain John Gloetzner. Gloetzner, who swims the 100 and 200 yard freestyle and a leg in the 400 yd. freestyle relay, has shown tremendous improvement in his two years of varsity competition, and will probably compete in the New England meet.

Another outstanding and promising member of the squad is soph Pete Gross, who swims the 200 yd. butterfly, a leg of the 400 yd. freestyle, and the grueling individual medley, a race in which the swimmer must do a leg of freestyle, butterfly, back and breaststroke. Gross achieved his best time of 2:21.6 in the Cat's latest victory, a 51-44 thriller over Conn.

Soph Tom Mills has also been a standout in the 50 yd. freestyle and 400 yd. freestyle relay, and who, like Gross will probably compete in the New England's. Excellent efforts have also been turned in consistently by junior backstroke Dave Cheney in the medley relay, breaststroke Jim Nixon in the 100 and 200 individual, and also the 400 yd. medley relay, breaststroke Pete Fredericks, Lynn Bichnell in the 200 yd. butterfly and 500 yd. freestyle, soph freestyler Scott Davis in the 400 yd. freestyle relay, Jeff Fitton in the butterfly and senior Dave Corliss. The outstanding diving of junior Trent Anderson and rapidly improving soph John Pastore has also been instrumental in compiling the team's outstanding record.

The tremendous improvement this season and the fact that only two men will be lost through graduation make the future appear extremely bright. Additional power is expected from many members of the fine frosh squad; the most promising of which are John Raiter, who has excelled in the freestyle and butterfly, improving freestyler Jay Weintraub, individual medel-est Jim Hared, Chuck Wirdess, Paul Ryan, breaststroke Phil Canfield and diver Chuck Daily.

It is truly a credit to coach Lettett that he has been able to develop a winning team within two years despite the absence of scholarships. With the best record to date of any UVM team in winter competition it appears that swimming is well on the way to becoming a successful and major sport at UVM.

Report On Intramural Standings

By Bob Bloomenthal

Second semester intramural activities are now in full swing with the indoor track meet completed and the indoor relays and paddleball tournament still in process. Intramural director Mr. Strassburg expressed great pleasure in the amount of participants and scorers in this year's track meet which was won by Sigma Nu. The total almost doubled the number of entries of past years.

Three records were broken in the meet. Sigma Nu's Jim Dedman set a new record in the 300 yard run with a time of 34.3 seconds. Two SAE men also set new marks. George Oelze bettered Dave Strassburg's old record in the 28 pound weight throw with a toss of 53 1/2 feet. The other record came in the high jump when Ed Childs leaped 6' 1/2" to top the previous mark of 6' set by Lee Pantas of Sig Ep.

On Thursday the finals of the one mile relay will be held. The preliminaries were held last week on a time basis. The four best times were turned in by Sigma Nu, Sig Ep, Sigma Phi, and Delta Psi, in that order. These four teams will compete in the finals.

Other events which are still in process are the paddleball and squash tournaments. These tourneys will end on March 17 and 13, respectively.

Vermont Nips Union 48-46

By Dick Frostig

The University of Vermont track team recorded their first win of the season against Union College a week ago Wednesday by a score of 48-46. Don Mayland led the team with wins in the high jump, high hurdles, and pole vault. Also recording wins for Vermont were Kent Haskin in the 1000 yard run, Terry Mathews in the 50 yard dash and Rich Dombal in the 600 yard run.

The Postmen now stand 1-2 being lost to both Bates and Bowdoin earlier in the season. Their next meet is scheduled at home in March against the University of New Hampshire.

The freshmen runners came through with another good performance as they trounced the Union freshmen 59 to 16. The frosh took a first in every event and now stand 2-0 on the season.

The results:

- High jump: 1. Mayland (V), 2. Morris (U) Height - 5'8".
Shot Put: 1. Woodell (U), 2. Stickney (V), 3. Wilcox (U), D-47'
Mile: 1. Ring (U), 2. Ashton (V), 3. Beevers (U) T-4:39.7
Broad Jump: 1. Cassidy (U), 2. Nolan (V), 3. Ratner (U) D-18'10.5"
600 yd. run: 1. Dombal (V), 2. De Cesaris (V), 3. Schoenfeld (U) T-1:20.4
50 yd. dash: 1. Mathews (V), 2. Peters (U), 3. De Cesaris (V), T-6.0
H.H.: 1. Mayland (V), 2. Economou (V), 3. Damiento (U) T-7.9
2 mile: 1. Ring (U), 2. Beevers (U), 3. Kimbbs (V) T-10:32
1000 yd. run: 1. Haskin (V), 2. Campman (U), 3. Damiento (U)
Pole vault: 1. Mayland (V), 2. Newberger (U), 3. Fyles (V) Height - 2'6"
Relay: won by Union T-3:43.3

A veteran and a recordbreaker -- that's the combination of track coach Archie Post and Don Mayland. Post, a 1927 Vermont graduate, is in his 36th season at his alma mater and Mayland has to rank as one of the University's all-time track standouts. A junior who sets pole vaulting marks as often as the Yankees win pennants, Mayland is also a hurdler and high jumper.

Second row, Carl Frattini, Mike Karel, Tim Hayes, Don Longley, Bruce Hanna, Trainer Bob Grant. Third row, Bob Barnaba, Manager, Mike Bossi, Russ Boardman, George Abbott, and Allen Webster, manager.

Cagers Sport 5-11 Season

The 1964-1965 basketball season has been a disappointing one for the University of Vermont. The Catamounts, who have an overall 5-11 record, stand only 1-9 in Yankee Conference Play. The problem has been that their Yankee Conference opponents have far superior teams; containing a well balanced offense and a tall man in the pivot, who gets all the rebounds. Unfortunately for Vermont, their offense has been inconsistent all year, and although Milt Gaggans and Ralph D'Altilla have done a commendable job all year, they still need a 6'7" or 6'8" man in the pivot to help control the boards.

However, the season has not been as bad as the basketball team's record might indicate. The first home game of the season showed, that if nothing else, this was going to be a strange and exciting season. In this game against the University of New Hampshire, team captain, Ralph D'Altilla scored 42 points on sixteen field goals, and ten free throws, to break the school scoring record of 38 points held previously by Benny Becton. On that night D'Altilla couldn't miss from anywhere. He hit jumpers from outside, and when he missed he'd follow up his rebounds for two more points. Ralph D'Altilla's great effort of 42 points lifted Vermont to an 81-76 win over M.N.H. (Vermont's only Conference win of the season), and placed him number 9 in the nation in scoring.

Then came Christmas vacation and the Cats went on the road where they fell heavily to Massachusetts and to an NCAA tourney headed University of Connecticut team. Vermont then came back to the Green Mountain State to begin their state series-play and whipped Middlebury 93-77, and Norwich 89-77.

In the Norwich game, Milt Gaggans pulled down 25 rebounds, a high for any Catamount this season.

Now that things were looking up for Vermont, the Cats hoped for a better second half of the season. However, they once again met some strong Yankee Conference opponents and dropped four of their next five games, winning only over Clarkson, 87-62.

Vermont's next game was against their arch rival, the St. Michael's Knights. Everyone predicted that the Knights would beat the Catamounts by at least 20 points; everyone, that is, except the CYNIC, which predicted Vermont to pull the upset of the season, and that is just what they did. The Cats played by far their best and most inspiring game of the season and salvaged what had been a most disappointing season. The game was close all the way as the score was tied 11 times. Vermont displayed an all around team effort, as they continuously broke up St. Mike's plays and turned them into Catamount baskets.

Ralph D'Altilla played an excellent game off the boards as he pulled down 22 rebounds. However, the man who won the game for Vermont was junior Layne Higgs. Higgs, who hadn't been able to get hot all season, all of a sudden found his range in the second half with Vermont trailing 63-55. In a span of 4 minutes, Higgs popped in 12 straight Vermont points to deadlock the score at 67-67. On the next play, D'Altilla got fouled and put in both of his free throws to put Vermont ahead to stay 69-67. When the final buzzer sounded, the score board read Vermont 75 and St. Michael's 72. The Vermont students went wild at this point, as this was the most exciting game ever played by a Catamount basketball team. Capt. Ralph D'Altilla and Layne Higgs were carried off the floor, as this win made everyone forget about all the games the Cats had lost.

Unfortunately, the rainbow did not last long as Vermont dropped their next two games to Yankee Conference opponents Rhode Island, and New Hampshire. However, the Cats still have important games to be played, including Wednesday night's game against St. Michael's. In that game the Cats are out to prove that their win in the first meeting between the two teams was no fluke. Also, by beating St. Michael's, the Cats could win the state series.

In Saturday's game the Catamounts play a lowly Branders team and hope to put on an impressive show for their "Kake Walk" guests against the Judges from Waltham, Massachusetts.

This season is the last for Coach "Fuzzy" Evans, who has served as basketball coach longer than any other New England coach except for one. "Fuzzy" has enjoyed some great seasons, especially in the late forties, when he had one of the top teams in New England for a few years. Although this has been a disappointing season for him, it has had some bright points, especially the big win over St. Michael's. Everyone will miss seeing "Fuzzy" getting red-faced on the bench, but the veterans have to step down and new faces must come into the spotlight. Here's hoping that the UVM administration can get a young coach who can be as successful in rebuilding the basketball team as Bob Clifford was in rebuilding the football team. Perhaps once again, Vermont can be a New England powerhouse in basketball.

The biggest blow to the Kittens came with still over five minutes remaining in the game when the team's mainstay, Bill Librera, was called for his fifth foul. The 6-2 guard had scored 12 points and had been a steadying hand with his backcourt ball-handling and rebounding work. From this point, although UVM stayed with their taller opponents, Champlain was able to get that vital second shot and held on for the win.

In the first half, the hot shooting of Bruce Lombard kept the frosh in the game as the Kittens fell behind by three, 47-44. UVM rolled off six straight points to start the second half, but Champlain came back to take the lead and the game remained nip and tuck until the end.

Lombard ended the night as high scorer with 23 points on eleven field goals. The team's center Sandy McLeod added 15 points and an aggressive game on the boards. Don Pitts was also in double figures with 11.

The next time the Kittens will be seeing action is against Middlebury on March 3. The game is a six o'clock starter, immediately preceding the varsity encounter with Middlebury.

Stone Coaches Skiers To A Fine Season

Ski co-captains Jim Dwinell (left) and Steve Lozen flank ski coach Bob Stone, the University's first full-time ski coach. Dwinell has been posting near winning times in alpine events while Lozen has been among the leaders in cross country.

By Gordon Josephson and Ira Kotler

Despite the fact that skiing conditions in New England have been below par this season, the University of Vermont ski team, under the experienced coaching of Mr. Richard Stone, has accumulated a fine record for itself in both individual and team events.

As most people at Vermont know, skiing is a grueling competitive sport, which requires guts, desire, excellent equipment, and ability of expectations of victory is to be achieved. The team, which has an 'A' rating by the Eastern Intercollegiate Skiing Association (EISA), is fully outfitted with the ever so popular Head competition skis. We will be competing in both Nordic and Alpine events this winter against schools like New Hampshire, Dartmouth, St. Lawrence, Williams, Maine, Norwich, and Middlebury.

The Alpine events are subdivided into two skiing categories; downhill and slalom. The downhill competition is a race against the time-clock, as the skiers try with all their practiced ability to reach the finish line at the bottom of the mountain with the best time. There are no control gates set up, as specified by the Federal International Skiing Association, unless hazardous conditions deem it necessary. In the slalom events there are control gates set up at specific intervals. The object is to ski between pairs of gates at a top speed in order to reach the bottom with a winning time. This year's alpine skiers are Ken Austin, Rod Carnie, Peter Donaghy, James Dwinell, Nash Lamb, Carson Loomis, Buck Love, Douglas Peterson, Jonathan Teuscher, Peter Van Alstine, and Steve Phillips. Of these fine athletes only James Dwinell, '65, Nash Lamb, '65, and Steve Phillips, '65, are presently rated as 'A' skiers. Mr. Stone stresses the fact that all of the Alpine skiers can compete in both the slalom and downhill races this season.

Cross country and jumping are the two different types of competition in the Nordic events. The jumping is done on a large hill with an inclined slope, from which the skiers sail through the air, striving for large distances. The jumping is usually done on a 40 meter hill which has a maximum jumping potential between 140-150 feet. The Vermont squad is only equipped with a 15 meter hill, so they are forced to practice on the 200 foot jump at Middlebury. The judges watch for both form and distance counting only the best 2 or 3 total jumps. A perfect score according to revised scoring rules is 240 points. The cross country race is skied on a tough nine mile hard track which is ideally 3 miles up, 3 miles level, and the final one third of the race downhill. Special cross country skis are used which are light, and tougher than ordinary competition skis. In the Nordic as well as the Alpine events, four men are entered in each division, and the scores of the top three finishes (in each division) are recorded. The Nordic skiers are Mason Bryant, Alan Goedecke, Dave Hosmer, A. Scott Leake, and Steve Lozen, all of which have 'B' ratings.

Last year the ski team finished eighth in the N.C.A.A., however this season appears to be the strongest team in many years. The team, led by juniors and seniors, have seven returning lettermen. Thus, the nucleus of the team will form around Ken Austin, Rod Carnie, Jim Dwinell, Alan Goedecker, Dave Hosmer, Nash Lamb, and Steve Logen. Experience and leadership should prove to be the deciding factor in many of the meets this winter. Mr. Stone has confidence in his squad and his co-captains Dwinell and Lozen.

Having concluded a very successful season in the individual Alpine and Nordic events, the squad is really anxious about the winter carnivals. To date, the skiers have completed in two carnivals. February 12-13 they skied at the Dartmouth Winter Carnival and placed 5th behind Middlebury, Dartmouth, Williams and St. Lawrence in a field of eight teams.

This weekend UVM will compete at the Middlebury Carnival. The following weekend the Cats will travel to St. Lawrence College for the EISA. Lets all wish Coach Stone and his boys the best of luck.

Kittens Defeated

By Bob Bloomenthal

Ralph Lapointe's scrapping Kittens made a gallant attempt at pulling an upset before losing to a favored Champlain College five, 86-82, at Memorial Auditorium last week. The frosh were in the game until the final horn despite losing three starters via the five foul limit.

Vermont Excels In Football

The UVM football team under the outstanding coaching of Bob Clifford has turned in an outstanding year with a fabulous over-all record of 7-1. The Catamounts opened the season with AIC and defeated them 14-6. The first half of the game was dominated by the Aces with a 6-0 lead. The Cats made frequent mistakes, and Alan Lussier, the Aces quarterback, vitalized one of these mistakes for an early score. It looked as if our team was really hurting, until the second half began. Coach Bob Clifford must have fired up his team because the Catamounts looked like a different team. Richie Reynolds and Ken Andrade carried the ball to the AIC 34 yard line. Bill Leete then fired a brilliant pass to tight end Paul Giardi. Ken Andrade then kicked successfully for the extra point, and UVM copped the lead, 7-6. Our electric team then really started pressing. Ron Hertel recovered an AIC fumble for the final score. Quarterback Scott Fitz then moved the Cats by way of the ground to the seven yard line. Frank Foerster then carried it over for a touchdown on the next play. Andrade kicked again. Of course, it was good, for the final score of 14-6.

The following week UVM came face to face with Tech's Bears and gave them a crushing defeat 41-6. Frank Foerster and Ken Andrade led the charge of the Catamounts to the 44th yard line. Reynolds then picked up the slack and pushed to the 14th within two plays. Scott Fitz then took the option and ran on the left for the first touchdown of the afternoon. Andrade automatically then kicked for the extra point, 7-0. At that time Ken Andrade did not know that he would wind up the day with four brilliant conversions. With two minutes gone in the second period, UVM blocked a Worcester punt on their own 25 yard line. This set us up for our second score of the day. Jim Brennan then gave the football to Foerster who surged for a slant off tackle for a gain of 13 yards and another UVM T.D. In the closing seconds of the first half, the Cats scored again. The play was put into motion, when we took over the ball on downs on Worcester's own 29. Dean Kent on his 3rd play from scrimmage waltzed over for our third touchdown. Andrade then completed another place kick. Charlie Foster with an exceptional run returned a punt for 40 yards. Vermont was unbelievably strong throughout the game. Our outstanding players were Joe Soldano, Pete Ambrose, Bill Dorozenski, Harvey Bazarian, Mike Burke, Ed Kiniry, Jim Brennan, and John Korzich. Brennan could have easily played the best game of his college career. George Oelze and "Big" Rusty Brink as usual were outstanding. Both are easily the two finest players on our team.

UVM defeated the University of Maine 14-7. This was the first time in forty-one years that the Catamounts have defeated Maine. History was also made today when Vermont won the first three games of the season. This had not been achieved since 1899. The first touchdown was created when Fitz clicked with an unparalleled 72 yard pass to end Paul Giardi. The Cats dominated the entire first half of the game. The Cats were led by Brink, Giardi, Fitz, Foerster, Kent and Andrade.

The Cats then romped over New Hampshire 40-0. This humiliating defeat extended our winning streak to five. The Cats opened the game with Reynolds returning a boot from the 16th yard line to the UVM 34. UVM then surged ahead for four consecutive first downs culminated with a five yard drive by Frank Foerster. Andrade then converted for a UVM 7-0 lead. We then recovered a kick on New Hampshire's 30 yard line. Reynolds then powered his way into pay dirt from the one yard line. Naturally Andrade's kick was good, 14-0. Brennan then intercepted a pass on Vermont's 30 and ran it back for 18 yards. Fitz then gracefully strutted for an eleven yard touchdown. The Cats were destined to score one more time before the half ended. Paul Giardi was their man. He recovered a UNH fumble on the Wildcat 38. Mike Burke then scored, 27-0. The Cats were held scoreless for the third period. However, Fitz still wanted to score. He led Foster beautifully for a 32 yard pass. This set up a 54 yard drive which gave the Cats a 33-0 lead. Ken Andrade then brilliantly intercepted a pass on the 47 yard line to set up the final touchdown. Leete ran the final 13 yards for the score. UVM rolled 530 yards on offense which surpassed the 522 yard mark set against R.P.I.

A large pile up on this play, with the UVM defense holding strong and recovering an enemy's fumble.

Jack Schweberger leaps high to make circus catch.

The Cats then continued to make history when they edged out Norwich and won their sixth consecutive history. We tripped the Cadets of Norwich 21-17. The Cats had a hard fight, but they were really up for the game. Norwich took the kickoff for a long drive. With six minutes gone, Norwich scored, 7-0. The Cadets later pushed for another T.D. in the second period. However, they did not know that they were through scoring touchdowns, at least for that day. Scott Fitz led the UVM machinery in the second quarter. He brilliantly ran on the ground with hand-offs, pitch-outs and fakes. The scoring play then came from Norwich's 34 yard line when Fitz pitched out to Foerster. The score was now 14-7. Scott Fitz plunged over the center of the line on a quarterback sneak. Andrade then came through in the clutch, as usual with a conversion. The score 17-14. The final scoring play of the afternoon came with less than two minutes left in the game. Foerster following Fitz's excellent fake ran up the middle. The run was good for 16 yards and a Vermont touchdown. Final score 21-17.

For the final game of the season, UVM was destined to come before the mighty Redmen of Massachusetts. The Redmen just overpowered us. Dave Busich, an outstanding sophomore prospect picked up nine yards. Larry Rice then caught a magnificent pass. Brennan then fired to Andrade, and he came up with the best catch of his career. He leaned between two defenders to pick off the spiral on his fingertips. Brennan then found a hole in Massachusetts's right. Reynolds penetrated by bulling his way through. This set up the scoring play which was followed by Andrade's conversion. That ended UVM's scoring for the day and for the season. Our Cats were unable to pull this one out of the fire. However, their playing really sparkled. Mass. had a superior ground game. They totaled 19 first downs and 292 yards rushing to 87 for Vermont. The Cats threw for 114 yards with Mass. only going for 52. However, this could not make up the difference.

George Oelze was selected for the Guard of the Week on the ECAC (All East Team). Oelze was rewarded with a berth on the New England team, when he picked up 25 defensive points for his play in the Catamount's 16-8 victory over Rhode Island. Rusty Brink had been twice selected for the team. Rusty now a junior will definitely look forward to the best season of his career. It should really be great to watch Rusty, as he copes the number one position in the Yankee Conference next year.

In closing, I personally salute the coaching staff of our football

Statistics Show UVM Pitching Good In 1964

The 1965 NCAA baseball guide proves something that University of Vermont opponents suspected all last spring the Catamounts had outstanding standing pitching.

This year's guide, just off the presses, discloses that Coach Ralph Lapointe's pitching staff compiled the sixth best earned run average in the country (among major colleges) while Carl Martin posted the 11th best ERA for individual pitching.

Vermont also ranked sixth in the nation in team fielding with a .960 mark. UCLA had the best team fielding average, .996. In making a total of 462 putouts, Catamount fielders booted the ball only 11 times.

As a team, the Vermont pitching staff — led by the junior trio of Martin, Charlie Foster and Bill Christie — allowed only 30 earned runs in 154 innings for an ERA of 1.74. Missouli led the country with the almost phenomenal figure of 0.65.

Martin, a southpaw with a 5-2 record, allowed only nine earned runs in 63 1-3 innings for an ERA of 1.27. Best was an 0.26 figure by Long Island University's Campisi.

Vermont had an 11-6 record last year and finished second in the Yankee Conference behind Maine which went on to take third place in the college world series.

Sportitorials

The University of Vermont has never been famed as a so-called "big time" athletic institution. In fact, very seldom is a UVM ball player ever heard of outside of New England area. Yet, in spite of Vermont's habitually mediocre showings, the spirited crowds continue to pack Centennial Field and the Patrick Gymnasium and adjoining fieldhouse.

This year Vermont was blessed with an experienced football squad, which fell just one game short of the Yankee Conference Championship. Every Saturday Centennial Field had standing-room only crowds. The masses came to see men like Reynolds, Brink, Oelze, Fitz and Foerster perform as Coach Clifford and his assistants had expertly instructed. Charlie Catamount was a joyous cat throughout the 1964 fall football campaign, but he suddenly took up sick with the start of winter competition.

UVM has had little success thus far both on the ice, on the basketball court, and in track and field events. The hockey team was hurt considerably when it lost several starters this semester, due to scholastic reasons. The basketball team has lost games by as many as 40 points. And the track men have yet to emerge victorious in major competition. Yet, the student and town folk have flocked to these sporting events time and again with vigor and determination. Always the underdog, Vermont has hundreds of faithful rooters who finally got what they were waiting for on February 11. It was on that occasion that the Cats defeated the highly ranked squad from St. Michael's in Winooski, 75-72. If it were possible to single out one specific group for their spirited backing, my choice would be the boys from Kappa Sigma. Whether playing or speculating, these "gentlemen" always have plenty to say, and they usually know what they are talking about.

The University of Vermont is a small institution of learning with similar athletic potential. The athletes would never be famous, the teams never national champions, nor the coaches ever celebrated or duly honored. Yet, one thing is for certain. The spirited S.R.O. crowds will continue to fill the stands, giving the athletes support and confidence.

Time present and time past
Are both perhaps present in time future,
And time future contained in time past.

VOL. 82 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, BURLINGTON, VERMONT MARCH 5, 1965 NO. 25

Trustees Announce McCune's Presidency

The Board of Trustees has given written formality to a policy governing visiting speakers.

The policy, approved Feb. 27, allows visiting speakers sponsored by a recognized campus organization. It also provides that the president of the University may require any or all of the following when he considers it appropriate:

That the meeting be chaired by a tenure member of the faculty; that the speaker be available for questioning by the audience; that the opportunity be offered to balance the speaker with a person of a differing opinion.

Acting President Lyman S. Rowell told the Board that the policy was basically that which had been used. He said that, "in light of the California experience," it "seemed well to have our policy in writing and approved by the Board." He noted that the University's policy committee, faculty Senate, and the Council had all reviewed the policy in recommending it to the Trustees.

The Board of Trustees formally named Dr. Shannon McCune, Feb. 27, as the 18th president of Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning.

The 51-year-old McCune, currently assistant to the president of the University of Illinois, will assume his new duties on July 1, replacing Lyman S. Rowell who has served as acting president since the resignation of Dr. John T. Fey last summer. Dr. Fey resigned to assume the presidency of the University of Wyoming.

Dr. McCune is the third generation in his family to serve as a college president. His father, George Shannon McCune, was president of Huron (S.D.) College and Union Christian College in Korea, while his maternal grandfather, John A. McAfee, was the founder and first president of Park (Mo.) College. A cousin, Mildred Helen McAfee Horton, served as president of Wellesley College.

Born in Korea

Born in Korea where his parents were Presbyterian missionaries, the new Vermont president received part of his elementary education and all of his high school training in that country.

He attended college in the United States, receiving his B.A. degree with honors in geography from the College of Wooster (Ohio) in 1935, his master's degree from Syracuse University in 1937, and his Ph.D. degree from Clark University in 1939. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and Phi Kappa Phi, as well as many professional organizations, Dr. McCune has been awarded honorary degrees by Clark and the University of Massachusetts, where he served as provost from 1955 until 1961.

Specializes in Asian Research

A geographer, specializing in teaching and research on Asia, Dr. McCune has written more than 100 articles dealing with Asian geography, economic and political geography, international affairs, Asian studies, and higher education.

His Korea's Heritage, published in 1955, is considered a basic geography of Korea. A general book on Korea is to be published by the Van Nostrand Co. this fall.

Dr. McCune taught at Ohio State University from 1939 to 1947, on leave during the war years, and at Colgate University from 1947 to 1955. He was Visiting Fulbright Professor at the University of Tokyo in 1953-54.

Worked for Intelligence in WW II

During World War II, Dr. McCune was in economic intelligence work for the U.S. Board of Economic Warfare and the Foreign Economic Administration, serving much of the time in the Far East. During the final six months of the war he was on the Intelligence Staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. For his work in China, he was awarded a Presidential decoration. The Medal of Freedom, in 1946. From June of 1950 until September of 1951, he was Deputy Director of the Far East Program of the Economic Cooperation Administration and for six months of that time served as Acting Chief of the ECA Mission in Indonesia.

Directed UNESCO

In recent years, Dr. McCune has held important posts overseas. For 18 months in 1961-62, he was Director, Department of Education, United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in Paris. In July of 1962, he was appointed the first civilian to be United States Civil Administrator of the Ryukyu Islands. While on a visit to Korea during this time, he was presented with the Medal of the National Foundation by the Prime Minister, posthumously awarded to his father.

Serving at Illinois since Feb. of 1964, Dr. McCune has been working in areas of university administration and contributing to various committees. He was chairman of a group studying the relations of the Cooperative Extension Service and farm organizations in Illinois.

He and Mrs. McCune, the former Edith Blair, were married in 1936 and have two married daughters, Mrs. Kieran Kennedy of Port Washington, N.Y., and Mrs. Jonathan Wagner of Madison, Wis., and a son, George B., a freshman at Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y.

Mrs. McCune's parents were also Presbyterian missionaries to Korea. She is a graduate of College of Wooster and studied at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music. She has served as the musical director for a number of churches.

Dr. McCune is the second University of Vermont president born outside the United States. Matthew Henry Buckham, president from 1871 to 1910, was born in England, the son of a Congregational minister. Buckham's wife was also the daughter of missionary parents.

To Daniel Clarke Sanders, its first president, was assigned the task of building the University of Vermont, literally from the ground up.

Born in Sturbridge, Mass., before the American Revolution, he graduated from Harvard in 1788 to become a preacher, theologian, educator, historian, and above all a builder.

Resigning his pastorate in Vergennes, he moved to Burlington in 1800 where its citizens had provided a home for the University's president, but where no college building stood or curriculum existed.

The home stood on campus land given by Ira Allen, in the midst of the pine grove which President Sanders himself helped to fell, in order to make a clearing and provide lumber for the first college edifice.

Educationally, he took his first students on a preparatory school basis, holding classes in his own home. One of these students, Cassius F. Pomeroy, graduated from the University in 1806.

As a result of President Sanders' educational labors, four young men graduated in 1804, three in 1805, six in 1806.

In the meantime, the University's president was granted the privilege of farming 20 or more acres of land near his home. He also set out by horse and sleigh in January weather to try to collect University land rentals from residents of towns nearby, and from many too far away for comfort.

He was, it is reported, a man of unusual physical strength who could cut timbers and lay bricks - as well as the cornerstone of the first college edifice.

He could fight off the encroachments of educational rivals, provide for his family as a preacher, supplementing the nearly empty educational purse, and almost single handed ensure education for 78 graduates and 40 non-graduates before the War of 1812 put a temporary stop to all education at the University of Vermont.

UNIVERSITY PLAYERS PRESENT "YERMA"

The University shall be given a rare treat when, this Friday and Saturday, March 5 and 6, the University Player's presents Federico Garcia Lorca's great tragedy, Yerma. The play has as its leads M. David Storti and Elizabeth Ingoldby and is directed by Ernest Cabrera.

Yerma was written two years before Lorca's death in the Spanish Civil War in 1936, and reflects the playwrights interest in Spain's culture and traditions. The play is the tragedy of a Spanish peasant woman who desperately longs for motherhood, the role which custom has dictated for her. The lack of communication between Yerma and her shepherd husband is complicated by the rigid code of honor which they live and the demands and conventions of their society.

"Yerma," according to director Cabrera, "affords playgoer and performer an opportunity for contact with literature, culture and unique tradition of another land. The play takes us to another time and place, to another code of conduct and morality, to the sights and sounds of a different world, but its common denominator is humanity, and its voice is the lyrical poetry which speaks to all."

Subtitled "A Tragic Poem in Three Acts and Six Scenes," Yerma makes use of poetry, music and the dance as part of its theatrical effect. A platform stage with various levels has been constructed in the Arena Theatre, and special lighting effects will be used. Cabrera says, "The play combines many art forms into an integrated whole and these create needs for special staging."

Tickets will be available at Bailey's Music Room, and at the University Store until Thursday and at the Arena Theatre until the performances are sold out.

The supporting cast includes Emil DiDonato, Marilyn Deutsch, Lynn Householder, Ann Abbott and Donna Kristiansen. Susan Bowman is the choreographer.

Others in the cast are Judith Leach, Carolyn Jerard, Laurelee Allen, Marjorie Adams, Sandra Bartholomew, Mikell Beckley, Douglas Hall, Elizabeth Bradspies, Sue Bowman, Sarah Dopp, Richard Donn, Andy Simon, Joanne Napoli and Miles Wortman.

"Lorca's works are studied in Spanish literature classes and modern drama courses," says Cabrera. "We think that it's important that people be given the opportunity to see an actual production of one of his plays, for their performance has been rare in Vermont." The writings of Federico Garcia Lorca are some of the finest to ever come out of Spain. All who enjoy fine theatre should not fail to miss this rare opportunity.

A new idea in the Kake Walk Ball took over last Thursday night and proved to be a huge success. Under an elegant setting, the Kingmen provided some rousing entertainment before a sizable turnout.

In the past, the dance band had been of a different character. The Kingmen are more attuned to a collegiate audience than a Count Basie or a Sy Zentner. For those who enjoy the latter type music an auxiliary dance band was provided.

The high point of the evening came with the crowning of the King and Queen of Kake Walk. Colleen Denny of Tri Delt was the stunning Queen, Kappa Sigmas Rusty Brink was the King.

Most everyone involved agreed that the 68th annual Kake Walk Ball was the best in recent memory. A combination of beautiful women, expert planning, and exciting entertainment made it an enjoyable evening for all.

THE NEW PRESIDENT: A PREVISION

We extend our sincerest congratulations to Dr. Shannon McCune upon his appointment to the presidency of UVM.

Dr. McCune appears to be a man of broad experience, administratively and academically. With the knowledge of his extensive background, we are assured that Dr. McCune is highly qualified for the job and will be as dynamic and forward-looking as our past president John T. Fey.

This is probably as good a time as any to note the progress made by acting president Rowell in fostering harmony among students, faculty and administration. Since last semester, Pres. Rowell has provided these three areas of the university community with opportunities for meeting together to discuss certain issues - e.g. the library, an honor system, the CYNIC - and to air, candidly, any differences or conflicts of opinion.

So successfully begun by Pres. Rowell, we feel these meetings should be traditionalized by the incoming President McCune.

KAKE WALK: IN RETROSPECT

Kake Walk was superb. Walking and skit competition was of the finest quality, an achievement unrealized for many years.

There were two events, however, which marred the two and one half days of festivity.

First, we were honestly shocked by the sloppy handling of publicity concerning the announcement of the University's new president, Dr. Shannon McCune. When the Board of Trustees formally declared their decision Saturday morning, what should have been exciting was, in truth, anti-climactic. For three days prior to the Saturday meeting news media had reported sporadically "rumors" and "unconfirmed notices" of who was to be the new UVM president.

That publicity was handled this way was no crime; it was just a shame.

The second disturbing event was the disappointing judging of walkers and skits both nights. Granted, there will always be differences of opinion where evaluation is involved. Nevertheless, it seems to us that there must be a more systematic way of judging; or perhaps a brief orientation for judges should be requisite.

We urge the KW Directors, in writing up their reports, to scrutinize the judging processes, which surely will reveal, upon examination, a definite overdue need for improvement.

Mention of color face is in order: Forest green and gold appears to be a healthy resolution to the moral-aesthetic conflict. How do YOU feel about it?

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I have been sitting at my desk, ladies and gentlemen, for the past hour just listening to the wind howl by my window. It is a very vain sound. Why does the wind make all that noise? I also have been wondering during this hour if I will sound just as vain as the wind howling by an apathetic window. I wonder if I should bother to write this letter. However, as you can see, I did spend my time to write it, and now that I did, I want you to read it because this concerns you.

Most people have heard that man profits by his mistakes, or the best way to learn is by trial and error. These are classical statements. They describe the humanness of people in a two-fold manner. First, everybody can and does make mistakes. Second, man has sufficient intelligence to see what he has done wrong and not to do the same thing again. College students have the ability to adhere to these maxims. We wee students doing better and more efficient work after their freshman year. Instructors manage to constantly improve their courses and departments. Now, let us consider another aspect of this University.

Shall we start with Sci. Hall. Here we see a beautiful stairway leading to a brick wall. Continuing over towards the men's dorms we see Lafayette hall where it is 95 degrees cool. Entering the dorms, we notice that we can see right through the 4" walls. Who forgot to alternate the seams on the bricks? Splendid cracks all the way from the ceiling to the floor. I wish my neighbor's electric clock wouldn't tick so loudly. Let's proceed down stairs for dinner. My, my, the floor must have settled two feet to cause the ceiling to leak like this. Heyyou, in the kitchen, don't fill that sink up. Can't you see that the overflow drain empties on the floor?

Heard enough? Well, I have just one more to tell you about. It starts with a 'p', has a 'k' in the middle, ends in 'g', and the second word is problem. You do agree that we do have a parking problem at UVM. Don't you? And for you without cars, let me tell you why this is your business too. If you have ever rode to class in a friend's car, tried to cross the street where a student has blocked the cross walk in a last effort to get to class, seen a fire hydrant blocked by another student's car, had a class disrupted by students who are late because they couldn't find a parking space, or have spent money to send your son or daughter to a university with such a problem, then... then, ladies and gentlemen, you are involved!

Now that you are involved, please don't get too depressed. As the Old Philosopher says, "Lift your head up high, Sparky, and never give up the ship." Let us all go over to the Bailey Library, kneel down, and pray to our Tree of Knowledge to impart some of its wisdom on the right people so they use our good money and excellent area (between the freshman dorms and Science Hall) to build a PARKING LOT and not a REFLECTING POOL!

Thank you,
Tom Spector

Now that the annual eroticism has terminated we can finally settle down to another full year of blandness, mediocrity and sterility. We welcome our future president to our midsts and hope that his varied and diversified background will give him insight in matters beyond administration which his predecessors have so obviously lacked. We hope that Dr. McCune realizes, unlike Messrs. Fey, Rowell or Kerr, that a university is not buildings to build, Kake Walk skits, Football schedules or Faculty research grants. It is (as we hear it) a place where students come to learn. But these things lie in the past and the future, and today we must deal with the present.

MIDDLECLASSMANIA

Last night, those of us who had Lane Series' tickets viewed Miss Joan Baez for the second time in three years. Last week those of us who attended the Kake Walk festivities saw the performances of groups called (in alphabetical order rather than order of excellence) The Kingsmen, The Lettermen and The Phoenix Singers. It seems, as we hear it, that in both cases (Lane Series' and KW) they "gave the public exactly what they wanted." The masses must be served, be it medium rare or well done. The blind taste of the populace must dictate all that occurs, a policy of consensus, as it were. Thus we have the situation in which the Lane Series, which was founded to provide tasteful, sophisticated entertainment, appeals to the masses and the Kake Walk "Jazz Concert" gives us (as the public demands) Folk singers who do not live up to the term "Jazz," and don't even bother to sing of the folk (e.g. The Lettermen).

The possibilities which can be derived from "dictatorship by the masses" are horrendous. Indeed, we can see it today. Constantly the music in the "Catamount Den" blares out such favorite melodies as "Hello Dolly," "I Could Have Danced All Night," and "Over and Over Again." (When the perfectly engineered speaker system was installed the melodies of Beethoven, Mozart, etc., could be heard. But this too, has passed.)

In the future we can see all sorts of developments. Throughout the dormitory sound systems, music shall play all night. The melodies of "Hello Dolly," as sung by Jack Jones, Robert Goulet or Tex Beneke shall be repeated constantly, drummed into the ear drums of the little ones who are nestled like sugar plums fast in their beds. Soon a sound system will be installed in every classroom and while teacher talks on totems, tenses or totalitarians, the student will be able to hum along with Andre Kostelanetz, Percy Faith or Arthur Fiedler. The Lane Series will have an "all-star" program in order to sell its tickets ($ comes first). The season will highlight "Dick Clark and his all-star Rock and Roll Show." The rest of the season will include such personages as Harry Belafonte (for the ninth time in eight years), the Beatles and the Barry Sisters (with maybe some Boston Pops thrown in for the long hairs). The Kake Walk Jazz Concert (and, we suspect, it will eternally be called that) will feature the Chipmunks (singing their new hit record, "Help Smokey the fire-fighting bear"), and, for the more folkish set, Robert Goulet will appear. People will flock in their tuxedos and gowns to the Kake Walk Ball to dance to, that great old-time favorite of yesteryear, Dwayne Eddy and his twangy guitars.

The Pop Culture, we fear, shall infiltrate all aspects of the University. The University Players, instead of producing Federico Garcia Lorca, shall produce old Doris Day favorites (Lover Come Back), old time Broadway hits (Mary, Mary), and, for diversification, a whole splattering of Irving Berlin musicals. The Paul Aschenback "Tree" sculpture (in front of Bailey Library) shall be razed for being pornographic and, instead a Norman Rockwell sculpture shall replace it showing "a boy and a girl, each with plenty of freckles, smiling, holding hands."

Yes, we all love Percy Faith, The Chipmunks, Irving Berlin ("It's a Grand Old Flag") and Norman Rockwell and, in that great American tradition, we must serve the masses, the masses muckish taste, so that the masses will pay (and, we know, in the end we all will pay.)

We suppose when we return as an alumnus, nineteen years from now, we shall see a fantastically large loudspeaker (with little microphones in it) standing in the quadrangle with the University President, in a nice, neatly pressed suit, sitting on top of it. He shall be baring his gleaming freshly brushed teeth and smiling, with all his underlings surrounding him (as in a ward for catatonic schizophrenics) eternally happy. It will be Sunday mass for the mass.

NOTE - That was very nice makeup we saw on those Walkers last week. If they hadn't told us, we could have sworn it was blackface. Ah, a return to the good old days. BLACKFACE HAS RETURNED (in a slight greenish tint).

VERMONT CONFERENCE

GENESIS REVISITED

One of the three exciting speakers at this year's Vermont Conference will be a professor of religion at Ontario, Canada's McMaster University. Dr. George Parkin Grant, Dr. Grant, 45, received his B.A. from Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, in 1939. The same year, he won first class honors in history, and he was awarded a Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford, where he subsequently worked for his B.A. in jurisprudence at Balliol College.

From 1944 to 1945, Dr. Grant served as Secretary to the Canadian Association for adult Education, then began work on his doctorate in the philosophy of religion from Oxford, which degree was granted in 1950.

He served as head of the philosophy department at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia until 1960, at which time he became Consultant to the Institute of Philosophical Research in San Francisco. Since 1961, Dr. Grant has taught religion at McMaster, a professor since 1962.

Dr. Grant has been publishing books, articles, and pamphlets since 1944. He is also an accomplished radio and television speaker, and frequently appears on coast-to-coast Canadian network broadcasts. One of his most outstanding works is a book entitled Philosophy in the Mass Age, containing a series of eight lectures given over the CBC. The book deals with the complex fabric of Western culture and the need for a new moral philosophy.

Vermont Conference Committee, '65, considers it a great privilege and a pleasure to have as one of its keynote speakers a man of such high calibre to discuss "Genesis Revisited: The Social, Moral, and Ethical Implications of Man-Made Men."

IN THIS CORNER

OUR ADVISOR

When The Rutland, Vt., Herald broke the story on the selection of Dr. Shanon McCune as the choice of the University's selection committee for the presidency of Vermont's oldest institution of higher learning, it was one of Vermont's newest graduates, Steve Terry of the Class of '64, who turned the trick.

Mr. Terry is a member of the Herald's Vermont Press Bureau staff in Montpelier. As a student here, he did occasional news and feature stories for the Public Relations Office.

When the Board of Trustees approved a written policy governing visiting speakers on the Vermont campus, they formalized the unwritten policy which had been applied.

Basically, the policy provides a forum for exchange of ideas which recognizes that an academic community must be free from pressures and restraints in its approach to communication and exchange of ideas.

The policy provides that any speaker who is sponsored by a duly recognized campus organization may be accorded the privilege of the University forum. It also provides that the President of the University may, at his discretion, require that a tenured faculty member chair the proceedings; that the speaker agree to answer questions, and that the sponsoring group be willing to present a speaker offering an alternate view. The policy was recommended to the Board by the University Senate and by the Council.

AMBITIOUS STUDENT PROJECT

The Outing Club will soon embark on a rather major fund campaign for construction of a ski lodge on property at Jeffersonville which the Club has already purchased and turned over to the University.

With any encouragement from the snow department, there will be a gala kickoff dinner at Madonna Mountain at Jeffersonville on Saturday, March 20. So student and staff ski bugs - particularly those with a yen for worthy causes - may wish to mark the date.

A couple of other March dates worth marking are Wednesday and Thursday, March 17 and 18. These will be the occasion for the annual spring blood drawing sponsored by the Ethan Allen Rifles. Last fall, students and faculty contributed over 300 pints of blood in a two-day drawing which came at a time when reserves at the Vermont - New Hampshire Blood Center here on Mansfield Avenue were at a rather critical low.

PREPARE FOR PARENTS

Looking ahead to April (not really the cruelest month of all), there will be the semi-annual invasion of parents, encouraged by the Family Associates who'll be sponsoring a spring weekend on the 24th. A dinner is planned, with other evening entertainment, with a view to providing the kind of program which will make it possible for student sons and daughters to go their own ways if they wish. The Associates are hopeful that students with Saga meal contracts may want to make arrangements for their parents to have lunch with them in the dining halls that Saturday. A home baseball game with Massachusetts, an afternoon tea at Fleming Museum, a dinner and speaker and a movie are being planned by the Associates as events parents may want to take in. That date again, April 24.

A mailing will be going to all parents shortly, but students may also want to call the date to the attention of their parents.

University Spirit ---64 years Ago?

In the past, a great deal has been said about "college spirit" in the University of Vermont. The CYNIC from time to time has used it as a text. It has been referred to in college meetings, and the impression has often been conveyed that undergraduates and alumni of this college are lacking in this important characteristic.

Is this true? We believe not. We believe that the misapprehension arises from a wrong interpretation of the phrase, "college spirit," and from a failure to understand the character of the typical Vermont college man.

With many, "college spirit" is synonymous with enthusiasm. Must we then conclude that love for one's college home is inseparable from bonfires and college yells and that loyalty to Alma Mater is to be measured by noise? Is not the spirit of a college rather that which gives it its individuality, a subtle influence that works upon those who work within its doors, and sends them out with certain marks upon their characters that time may strive in vain to wholly erase?

It may be that Vermont students are less enthusiastic than those of some institutions; if so, may it not be because they have a truer sense of proportion - a clearer recognition of what it is worth while to be enthusiastic about? It may be that Vermont alumni say less about college loyalty than do some others; might it not be because they think more? Ask a Vermont graduate why he did not go to any of the other New England universities, and the chances are that he will not argue the question with you, but somehow you will fail to move him to any expression of regret.

Vermont is not lacking in that individuality which constitutes the real college spirit; and if that spirit was to be summed up in a word, we should say that our University stood for self-reliance. Men who hold the making of their own lives; who are forced by circumstances to take life seriously, who weigh matters carefully, may well lack somewhat in enthusiasm; but there are qualities that lie deeper and rest on a firmer basis than enthusiasm. What the results of this spirit have been, the records of our alumni show; they have not - most of them - been men who have shone with a dazzling brilliancy, but they have held positions far above the average, men by whom many an undertaking in the realms of statesmanship, business, science, and abstract thought, has been carefully and steadily carried to success.

Peace Corps

An opportunity for students to test their aptitudes for Peace Corps service will come at 8:30 A.M., Saturday, March 13, in Waterman.

The opportunity is the Peace Corps Placement Test. It is not passed or failed, but simply indicates where your greatest potential lies. The Peace Corps Questionnaire, which must be filled out and brought to the exam unless previously submitted, tells what an applicant has done in the past. But the placement test is aimed at showing what he or she can do in the future. Applicants do not have to register for the test ahead of time.

The Peace Corps Questionnaire can be obtained from Jack Little Morrill Hall.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Professor Paul W. Aschenbach will give a lecture, illustrated with slides, on the Chagall Windows. After the lecture, there will be a discussion and coffee hour. The date: Sunday, March 7th. The time: 7:00 P.M. The place: Hillel House, 389 College St.

Mark Lane--Two Sides Of The Coin

By Ken Klonsky

"Those who would suppress the facts do not have faith in democracy."

John Fitzgerald Kennedy

That most citizens of the United States would claim this country of ours to be free is a generally accepted fact. It is ironic that on the night of Washington's birthday Scope presented a speaker who openly contested this fact. The speaker was Mark Lane, a lawyer hired by the mother of Lee Harvey Oswald to represent her son before the Warren Commission.

The major contention of Mr. Lane is that the Warren Commission both distorted and suppressed pertinent evidence concerning the death of Kennedy. Any facts that questioned the "preconceived verdict" of Oswald's guilt were disregarded. The truth is that not one major or minor conclusion was reached by examination of testimony. Furthermore the commission "refused to call the vast majority of eye-witnesses." The speaker emphasized repeatedly that the Warren Commission Report is a fraudulent document and that only this country has not taken the time to question it.

Mr. Lane proceeded to pick apart certain evidence. All autopsies immediately following the assassination revealed that Kennedy's fatal gunshot wound was inflicted from the front. The bullet entered his throat and every doctor at the scene corroborated this fact. If Oswald had shot Kennedy from the book depository which the motorcade had already passed, and he was the only assassin, how does that explain the front wound? Furthermore, 94% of 270 eye witnesses interrogated by Lane stated that the shots came from behind a fence on a grassy knoll. Many of these people saw smoke rise from that area. This knoll was directly in front of the President. Moreover, the parafin test, to determine whether Oswald had fired a gun or not was negative. Lastly there is not one reliable eye-witness who saw Oswald shoot Ptl. J.D. Tippett. These are only a small part of flaws discovered by Lane.

Mr. Lane said some things that were upsetting and disturbing. In the National Archives there exists evidence that will not be exposed until 75 years have elapsed. The lawyer naturally is upset that relevant evidence cannot be exposed now. "We must secure that to which we are entitled." But then we must ask the questions: Why are these facts being withheld? Why hasn't radio and television publicized the obvious flaws of the Report? Could the answer be, in the words of Mark Lane, that "1984 has arrived?" Are we losing contact with a government that we supposedly control? The prestige of the Warren Commission members does not make their conclusions unalterable. In fact, we should be more inclined to question than to accept the findings of this group blindly. Are we too complacent to investigate those "comfortable solutions?"

A young President with a fresh and youthful family was robbed of his life some 15 months ago. Mark Lane tours the country because not only is he not satisfied with the reasons given for this tragic event, but he also has genuine feelings for the people who were implicated falsely. One bald fact remains to haunt the observant man: There never has been any reason to believe that Lee Harvey Oswald did in fact kill John F. Kennedy. The United States has been responsible for the lynching, both physically and posthumously, of a man who must be considered innocent in the eyes of the law. We must not sit idly by and permit this hoax to become history.

By Miles Wortman

"Americans are easily-fooled: they accept just about anything at faith." So said Mark Lane, Monday, February 22, "In front of an audience of almost two hundred Americans. His thesis was soon proved correct as most of his audience accepted Mark Lane, hook, line and sinker. It was Mr. Lane's thesis that Lee Harvey Oswald did not kill President Kennedy, but, more important, it was his implication that the murder was carried out by a vast conspiracy. Throughout the entire evening, the audience sat spell bound, unwilling to question the experienced demagogue, ready to accept anything he fed them.

Mr. Lane rolled off the quotations and statistics in quick fire order. "94% of the 270 eyewitnesses heard the shots come from the grassy knoll across the way from the Federal Depository Building," Lane extorted. He added that some witnesses even saw the rifle's white smoke come from the grassy knoll from as much as two blocks away and that no one ever questioned the "mysterious" railroad employee who was on the knoll.

The audience remained silent. No one bothered to question the white smoke (perhaps no one in the audience knew that the insignificant amount of white smoke which comes from a rifle can hardly be seen by even the rifleman). The audience was ignorant to the fact that, contrary to ex-Assemblyman Lane's statement there was not one, but FIFTEEN men on the railroad bridge and grassy knoll who were questioned and all of whom heard the shots come from the Book Depository Building. (See page 7, The Warren Report, N.Y. Times, 9/28/64) The Warren Commission heard experts testify that "the muzzle blast, shock wave and impact could all sound like shots and tall buildings could further distort sounds," a statement, that Mr. Lane (who told us he read all the testimony) failed to relay to the innocent ears in front of him.

Mr. Lane continued on, quoting direct quotes from his "extremely efficient memory." He would not give any credence to the fact that during any time of intense emotion, people become confused and their recollections become foggy.

Lane's implications at conspiracy included a vast cross-section of American life. The New York Times, Time Inc., The United States journalistic establishment, The President of the United States (who, according to M.L., appointed nothing but "Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans, but not one Liberal Democrat."), The C.I.A., The F.B.I., The U.S. Immigration Service and lastly, The Warren Commission, itself. "Why," asked Lane, "Isn't evidence being exposed until 75 years from now?" Why? Maybe, and all anyone can do is conjecture, it is testimony concerning the private lives of Mr. Oswald and Mr. Ruby which could affect the people with whom they interacted (Mrs. Oswald, some of Mr. Ruby's girls, etc.)

Other questions were asked by Mr. Lane, but the inconsistencies of the New York attorney were not picked up by the audience.

Lane's appearance on the UVM campus points up one important fact: there is a tendency among intelligent people to avoid what they scorn. The absence or silence of those who dislike the aims of Mr. Lane added to his case and increased the following of his gullible disciples.

This writer shall not call down the memory of a dead President to enforce the argument against Mr. Lane. The SCOPE - sponsored performance by the New York attorney was of great value to those who were interested in the antics of an attorney, Assemblyman, and crowd-pleaser. One fact remains clear, there was no intelligent argument available last Monday night, either from the audience or at the podium.

Debate Team

By Robin Frost

Four trophies have been added to the collection of the Lawrence Debate and Discussion Club as a result of excellent argumentation. The national debate topic this year is Resolved: that the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed.

At the University of Buffalo, the affirmative team of Michael Schoenfeld, New York City, and Bob Bullard, Barre, won all five rounds of debate. They defeated Clarion, Canisius, LeMoyne, and two Rochester teams. A trophy for best affirmative team was awarded to them for their excellent debating.

In addition, Schoenfeld was presented with a trophy for best affirmative speaker, scoring 123 points from a possible 150, Bullard received second affirmative speaker trophy with 120 points.

The negative team, Steve Adler of Arverne, New York, and Bob Brooks, Trumbull, Connecticut, also won all five of their debates. Mount Union, Cornell, Gannon, Brockport, and Cortland bowed before the two negative debaters.

The combined 10-0 record plus 428 points from a possible 600 resulted in the fourth and most important trophy, that for first place four-man team. The four debaters appeared on a half-hour locally-broadcast television program, presenting a round-table discussion of the unemployment problem. This was certainly a well-deserved honor.

Debating switch-sides, or both sides of the question at Bowling Green were Puffer Wellman, Brattleboro, and Craig Nelson, Greenville, Maine. With two judges for each round, Wellman and Nelson had split decisions against Merchant Marine Academy, Navy, and Illinois State. They won over Wisconsin, Ohio Wesleyan, and Illinois in Chicago. With a 9-3 record, they captured fifth place.

1. Boy, are the University Players a bunch of idiots or what!

2. Have you heard about the new play they're doing? It's called Yerma. No student could possibly be interested.

3. It's about a barren wife whose husband is turned off just looking at her.

4. What kind of play is that for a college audience?

ROTC Ball

The Annual Military Ball will be held on March 19, 1965, at the Hotel Vermont. The affair, which is open to all members of the University community, is sponsored jointly by Ethan Allen Rifles and Pershing Rifles Military Societies. The ball will feature Bert Orr and His Band from 8 until 12 P.M. The highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the Queen by Miss Barbara Campbell, last year's Queen. Each dorm floor and sorority on campus has chosen a candidate to be its representative as a candidate. These candidates for the 1965 Military Ball Queen will be presented at the Middlebury basketball game on March 5, and the Cadets of the ROTC Brigade will choose five finalists in voting the 8th and 9th of March. The new Queen will be chosen by a panel of judges from the faculty and administration at a tea on March 14. Tickets are available from any member of Ethan Allen Rifles or at the Military Science Department.

"Perception"--A One-Act Play

By David St. John

Location - University of Verdvallée
 Scene - approaching Blottermann building
 Time - First day of school

First girl - freshman (bubblegummer), approx. 100 lbs., natural hair, no cigarette, purse weight approx. 30 lbs., carrying 9 books.

Second girl - also freshman (young sophisticate), also approx. 100 lbs., bleached hair, with cigarette, purse weight approx. 25 lbs., carrying 7 books.

Opening, as our two young friends journey down South Frostbit St. on the first of their tri-daily trips, a four mile hike from Red-Rock Candy Campus to co-ed class grounds (where the boys are).

First girl - Gee, it's nice to be at college and all grown up.

Second girl - I can't wait to go to a fraternity party, my Dad was president of his fraternity and my Mom was head of her sorority and I'm going to join the best sorority on campus so the biggest men on campus will ask me out.

First girl - Let's stop at rest cabin no. 4 just ahead, I'm cold and my big sister said there was a kindly old Indian there named Shaga Joe who gives away cups of hot coffee.

Second girl - Big sister, big blister, let's hurry up and get to co-ed campus where the boys are, its only another six blocks.

First girl - How come so many sharp cars go zooming by at this hour?

Second girl - Oh, those are just the upperclass boys trying to impress us, don't look at them.

First girl - I'm anxious to become a college graduate so I'll be smart.

Second girl - I'm anxious to find a rich guy so I'll be rich. My family is already rich, but I want to be independent of them. We have three cars and four homes and two boats... blah, blah... and my father is the... blah... (cut off by exclamation from First girl).

- What is that majestic, Capital-type, building ahead?

Second girl - That is our destination, the Blottermann building, where the school's bosses, Daddy's friends, are.

First girl - What a huge, beautiful, impressive front door.

Second girl - You should see the front door on our house. It's really... UGGH... Hey the door won't open!

First girl - Perhaps the school isn't open yet.

Second girl - Of course it is open, I just saw some boys go through it.

First girl - Here let me try the door... UGH... Let's both pull on it.

Second girl - Pull harder. Look, we have it open an inch, pull, pull.

First girl - It's hopeless, the door just won't open. Maybe it is a timed door that only opens at class time.

Second girl - Oh, don't be silly, Daddy would have warned me about it.

First girl - Let's set down our books and purses and pull on the door.

Second girl - Hey, let's set our things down and pull on the door.

First girl - O.K.

And they do. Exerting full strength, the girls force the door open about eighteen inches and Second girl jumps into the building, the door closing immediately. The girls both recognized the problem. Second girl felt permanently trapped in and First girl felt permanently left out of college - so the two worked feverishly to open the door again.

This time they successfully opened it about twenty inches. Then, unfortunately, Second girl tried to rush out while First girl tried to rush in. Now two more names have been added to the Heroic Bronze Blot List in the Blottermann Building Basement.

NOTICE

Election of Student Association Senate Officers and Sophomore and Junior Representatives to the Student Court will be on Friday, March 12, 1965.

Voting hours are as follows:

Lower Billings	- 9:00-4:00

Marsh Dining Hall	- 4:30-6:30
Simpson	- 4:30-6:30
Wright	- 4:30-6:30

Are you still wearing those creasy kld slacks?

Get into some wisd-up Post-Grads that know where a crease should always be and where it should never be, and how to keep things that way. The reason is the Koratron fabric of 65% Dacron*/35% cotton. No matter how many times you wash and wear these trimly tapered Post-Grad slacks, they'll stay completely neat and make the iron obsolete. In tan, clay, black, navy or loden, $6.98 in poplin or gabardine, $7.98 in oxford. At swinging stores.
